Pretrial Proceedings and Defendant's Attached Memo Filed October 25, 1948

3316 STATEMENT OF NATURE OF CASE:

Action under Section 9 of the Trading with the Enemy Act to recover certain property originally belonging to plaintiff and which was seized by the Alien Property Custodian.

The Supreme Court has held that the plaintiff may maintain this action under Section 2, 332 U. S. 480 (1947). The plaintiff is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of Switzerland.

Defendant contends that the stock of the corporation is held or that the corporation is controlled by enemy aliens. Defendant admits that the property referred to in the complaint was seized by the Alien Property Custodian and at the time of the seizure it was the property of the plaintiff.

The only issue of fact in the case is whether the stock of the plaintiff is owned by or the plaintiff is otherwise controlled by enemy aliens.

Defendant further claims and presents an additional issue that the plaintiff corporation was doing business in a country with which the United States was at war and is therefore itself an enemy.

Defendant claims that plaintiff corporation was doing business in an enemy country i.e. Hungary from the middle 1930s to 1942.

Specifically defendant claims that plaintiff operated mines in Hungary either directly or through others.

It is stipulated that the defendant will furnish plaintiff's counsel with those portions of the hearing before the Alien Enemy Hearing Board which relates to the operation of the mines.

Defendant's contentions are set forth in greater detail in the attached memorandum which is made a part of this memorandum.

3317 It is stipulated that Exhibit 17, attached to defendant's notice to admit, a folder consisting of five pages, is a photostat of a document in the files of the City Bank Farmers Trust Company.

That the document heretofore identified as Exhibit 17, a folder consisting of five pages, was kept by the City Bank Farmers Trust Company in the regular course of business and that it was the regular course of business of the City Bank Farmers Trust Company to keep such document.

That pages 2 and 5 of such document were signed by Fritz von Opel.

STIPULATIONS: By agreement of counsel for the respective parties, present in Court, it is ordered that the subsequent course of this action shall be governed by the following stipulations unless modified by the Court to prevent manifest injustice:

The plaintiff stipulates that the translations furnished by the defendant of exhibits that were identified at the taking of depositions is an accurate translation.

Defendant admits that the plaintiff is a Swiss corporation.

It is stipulated that each party may call two expert witnesses as to German law and one witness as to Swiss law.

It is stipulated that in November 1939 Fritz Von Opel became a citizen of the principality of Lichtenstein. Defendant contends however that under German law he did not thereby lose German citizenship.

It is stipulated that photostats may be produced in evidence at the trial in lieu of original documents subject to correction.

It is stipulated that the agreement bearing date of Oct. 5, 1931 was signed by the parties whose signatures it purports to bear. The agreement is being marked. It is further stipulated that document was executed sometime prior to Jan. 1, 1932. It is further stipulated that a photostatic copy may be substituted for the original.

Defendant's Contentions

3318 1. Under Section 2 of the Trading with the Enemy Act and the decision of the Supreme Court in Uebersee v. Clark, 332 U. S. 480 (1947) plaintiff corporation is enemy tainted and may therefore not recover, if it is owned or controlled by enemies. It is undisputed that all of the stock of plaintiff corporation was acquired by Fritz von Opel solely with the proceeds of an alleged gift agreement of October 5, 1931 between Wilhelm and Marta von Opel and Fritz von Opel. Defendant contends that the plaintiff's enemy taint exists by reason of any one of the following grounds:

1. The alleged gift agreement of October 5, 1931 was sham and fictitious, and did not operate to pass title from Wilhelm and Marta von Opel to Fritz von Opel. The stock of plaintiff, therefore, was at the time of vesting, owned by Wilhelm and Marta von Opel, residents and nationals of Germany, and enemies under the Act.

2. The usufruct provided for in the alleged gift agreement of October 5, 1931 was never validly created under German law; said usufruct was an essential part of the agreement; since the usufruct was invalid, the entire agreement was invalid, and therefore did not pass title from Wilhelm and Marta von Opel to Fritz von Opel. The stock of plaintiff, therefore, was at the time of vesting owned by Wilhelm and Marta von Opel, residents and nationals of Germany, and enemies under the Act.

3319 3. If the entire gift agreement of October 5, 1931 be considered valid, the stock of plaintiff was, by reason of the usufruct provision, owned or controlled by, or was held on behalf of Wilhelm and Marta von Opel, residents and nationals of Germany, and enemies under the Act.

4. Even if it be assumed that Fritz von Opel was plaintiff's sole stockholder, as plaintiff alleges, Fritz von Opel was an agent of the German government or was acting on behalf of that government while the United States was at war with Germany, and is, therefore, an enemy under Section 2 of the Trading with the Enemy Act. Consequently, plaintiff is owned or controlled by an enemy under the Act.

5. If it be assumed that the stock of plaintiff is owned by Fritz von Opel, as plaintiff alleges, Fritz von Opel is a national of Germany and plaintiff is owned or controlled by a national of Germany and may not recover under the provisions of Sections 2 and 39 of the Trading with the Enemy Act.

II. Plaintiff was doing business in a country with which the United States was at war and is therefore itself an enemy under the provisions of Section 2 of the Trading with the Enemy Act and may not recover.

Defendant's Answer to Plaintiff's Interrogatories Filed November 12, 1948

3353 Defendant makes the following answers to plaintiff's interrogatories dated October 27, 1948:

1. In using the word "sham" in Paragraph 1 of the document entitled 'Defendant's Contentions", defendant ascribes to that word the meaning given to it in Webster's New International Dictionary, Second Edition (1948) viz.: "false; counterfeit; pretended; feigned" and in Black's Law Dictionary, Third Edition (1933) viz/: "false".

(d) Evidence to be obtained through cross-examination of Fritz von Opel and Daniel Gros.

Defendant cannot state what plaintiff's understanding is as to what evidence defendant would supply to the plaintiff on the issue of whether plaintiff was doing business in a country with which the United States was at war. The Court, however, at the pre-trial hearing directed the defendant to furnish "plaintiff's counsel with those portions of the hearing before the Alien Enemy Hearing Board which relates to the operation of the mines." Defendant complied on October 29, 1948.

6. Plaintiff objects to interrogatory No. 6 as the same calls for an opinion on matters of law and fact.

7. Fritz von Opel acquired 97 out of 100 shares of the Overseas Finance Corporation in the winter of 1932. Payment was made on February 2, 1932. The other three shares were in the hands of members of the Administrative Council as required by Swiss Corporation law. The members during the entire period in question were Dr. Hans Frankenburg, Dr. Eugene Meier and Dr. Joseph Henggeler, who were within the year replaced as members of the Administrative Council and shareholders by Adolf Gaeng. The remaining 97 shares were held by Fritz von Opel and 3363 transferred to the possession of Frima in 1935 or 1936. It is impossible for the plaintiff to give a more definite date at this time inasmuch as the books of Frima which reflect the correct date are, at the time of the preparation of these answers to the defendant's interrogatories, still in the possession of the defendant. On July 22, 1936 these 97 shares were delivered to the Bankgesellschaft and returned by the Bankgesellschaft into the possession of Frima on November 4, 1941. In the meantime these 97 shares were in the possession of the following clients of the Bankgesellschaft:

From the date of return up to date they are again in the possession of Frima.

Fritz von Opel purchased the shares in 1932 through Adler & Company as Agent for the former owners who are unknown to him.

8. The names of the beneficial owners of the stock of plaintiff corporation from October 5, 19[illegible] to June 1942 are the same as enumerated under Section 7 above, with the exception of the three shares held by the three members of the Administrative Council, who are holding these shares on behalf of Fritz von Opel.

9. No one else but the share-holders had any beneficial interest in the assets of the plaintiff corporation between the beginning of 1932 and June 1942.

10. Frima Verwaltungsanstalt organized under the law of the principality of Liechtenstein has been and is an incorporated trust. Liechtenstein law knows this institution for many years. It is best described as "incorporated trust", such a trust on behalf of Fritz von Opel.

3364 11. Frima was founded in May 1934 by "Declaration of Foundation" by Adolf Gaeng as stipulated. The purpose for which it was organized was to give better protection to the interests of Mr. Fritz von Opel.

12. The books of Frima Verwaltungsanstalt for the period from 1933 to 1948 were submitted. They answer exactly what assets were held by Frima Verwaltungsanstalt.

13. Between the years from 1933 to June 1942, Fritz von Opel was the beneficial owner of Frima Verwaltungsanstalt.

14. Frima acquired the 97 shares of plaintiff corporation from Fritz von Opel. As mentioned above, Frima is a trust and keeps the 97 shares on behalf of Fritz von Opel as beneficiary. There was certainly no price paid.

15. Yes.

16. Yes. The answer to the first part of this question is shown under Section 7. The price and names of purchasers are shown below:

The purchase price was paid to Frima in the regular way.

17. The certificates of the 97 shares of plaintiff corporation transferred from Frima Verwaltungsanstalt to the purchasers referred to in question 16 above from the time of the sale until the shares were reacquired by Frima Verwaltungsanstalt were handed over to the Schweizerische Bankgesellschaft on June 22, 1936. It is to be assumed that this title remained with the bank. The certificates were returned by the Schweizerische Bankesellschaft to Adler & Company on behalf of Frima on November 4, 1941.

3365 18. The only agreement between Frima and Schweizerische (Not Union Bank of Switzerland) relating to the aforesaid sale of 97 shares of plaintiff corporation, is the contract of June 1936, in pursuance to which Frima gives to the bank 97 shares of Overseas Finance Corporation, with an order to sell these securities for account of Frima to friends of the bank. The sales contract to be made by the bank with these friends of the bank shall provide for the purchase price of $1,666.66 per share. The bank on behalf of Frima was given the right to repurchase the shares for the same price of $1,666.66 per share. The bank guarantees on account of Frima, annual interest of 6% to be paid to the purchasers. Frima pledged to the bank in America obligations or preferred shares with a market value of $161,666.02.

19. There was no direct agreement between Frima and the purchasers of the 97 shares of plaintiff corporation. (Purchasers listed under Sec. 16.) The only agreement which existed between these purchasers was an agreement with the Schweizerische Bankgesellschaft containing nothing else but the purchase of the shares, the guarantee of 6% interest and the obligation to resell on request of the Bankgesellschaft.

20. This is answered by Section 18 hereof.

21. The best possible answer is reference to the books of the Frima Verwaltungsanstalt which are in the possession of the defendant at this time and the books of the plaintiff corporation.

22. Same as No. 21.

23. Yes. The shares were reacquired on the basis of the repurchase agreement described above. In regard to the funds used for the payment of the repurchase price, reference is made to No. 18 above. The transfer took place on November 4, 1941.

24. During the winter of 1932 until this date Dr. Meier of Liestal and Dr. Hans Frankenburg of New York remained directors. Dr. J. Henggeler was director between 1932 and 1943, at which time his place was taken by Adolf Gaeng.

25. In the books and correspondence open to the defendant for inspection there are lists of the participants in stockholders' meetings.

26. The names and addresses of the witnesses
3366 whom plaintiff now intends to call are as follows:

Fritz von Opel, Carlton Hotel, Washington, D. C.

Wilhelm von Opel, Wiesbaden, Germany
Mrs. Wilhelmina Dern nee Uebel, Frankfurt, Germany
Edith Esklony, Wiesbaden, Germany
Marta von Opel, Wiesbaden, Germany
Daniel Gros, Wiesbaden, Germany

Dr. Heinrich Kronstein, 4616 Fessenden St., N. W., Wash., D. C.

Dr. Otto K. Kaufmann, Yale University, New Haven, Conn.

27. The plaintiff had no interest in bauxite mines or bauxite mining rights in Hungary at any time.

28. The plaintiff had no interest in any corporation holding or owning bauxite mines or mining rights in Hungary from October 5, 1931 to June, 1942.

29. Answered as to plaintiff in responses to interrogatories 27 and 28. However, Fritz von Opel organized the Transdanubia Bauxite A. G. having a capital of 300,000 pengoes partly paid in. This corporation owned bauxite mining rights in Hungary. No money was paid into or loaned to this corporation by Fritz von Opel or plaintiff after 1940, and to the best of Fritz von Opel's knowledge the Transdanubia Corporation ceased all mining operations in the winter of 1940-1941. Fritz von Opel has no knowledge of any operations by Transdanubia Corporation after the spring of 1941. The same is true of the plaintiff.

30. The documents described in paragraphs (a) and (b) of defendant's interrogatory No. 30 are not in the plaintiff's custody or control nor does the plaintiff know where they are at the present time.

Plaintiff's Motion for New Trial on Newly Discovered Evidence, Filed May 5, 1949 and Affidavit of Eleonore Firnhammer Sworn to on April 27, 1949

3369 The Plaintiff moves for new trial on newly discovered evidence on the following grounds:

The newly discovered evidence will prove that on repeated occasions Wilhelm von Opel and his wife stated to the affiant, Eleonore Firnhammer their intention in having incorporated in a deed of gift of October 5, 1931, Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, a so-called "right of usufruct"; that on other occasions, particularly in the Summer of 1937 Wilhelm von Opel advised the affiant Eleonore Firnhammer that at long last his lawyer has succeeded in bringing negotiations with the German authorities to a favorable conclusion and that he no longer had any claim against his son; that in August of 1947 he, Wilhelm von Opel, told the affiant repeatedly that he could not understand the action taken by the American authorities in this matter in view of the fact that even the Nazis had recognized the fact that he had abandoned all claims against his son. Said evidence is not cumulative nor corroborative of evidence introduced in the trial in that it is affirmative proof in contradiction of Finding 51 in this matter, wherein the Court said:

> "In 1935 Wilhelm von Opel discussed the waiver of his right to a usufruct but it was never after its creation waived or abandoned by any statement or act of Wilhelm or Marta von Opel.".

and would lead to a change in the outcome of the trial as follows:

Said evidence would prove by a preponderance of evidence that a waiver was in fact made by Wilhelm and Marta von Opel of any claims which they had against 3379 their son, Fritz von Opel and/or plaintiff corporation resulting fron the gift agreement of October 5,

1931, and would result in a finding that Wilhelm and Marta von Opel had no interest in plaintiff corporation or any stock thereof at the time of vesting, and would, therefore, compel this court to render judgment in favor of plaintiff.

The said newly-discovered evidence will be given by Eleonore Firnhammer, as appears more fully from her affidavit sworn to on April 27th, 1949, and hereto annexed.

The said evidence was discovered subsequent to the trial of this matter in the following manner:

Mr. Fritz von Opel advised counsel for the plaintiff corporation, Mr. Walter E. Gallagher and Mr. Christopher T. Boland, that after the opinion of the Court was rendered, Eleonore Firnhammer had a conversation with Mrs. Margot von Opel, the wife of Mr. Fritz von Opel, with respect to the opinion of this Court, at which time she stated to Mrs. von Opel the facts set forth in her affidavit annexed hereto, and stated further that in the light of those facts she was unable to understand the Court's opinion.

The said evidence could not be obtained and introduced by the plaintiff at the trial with the exercise of due diligence, for the following reasons:

Mr. Fritz von Opel states that his relations with Eleonore Firnhammer have been very strained for many years. He had no knowledge that Eleonore Firnhammer knew any facts related in the attached affidavit. Neither plaintiff corporation nor its counsel were aware of the fact that Eleonore Firnhammer had any knowledge of the facts related in the affidavit and the exercise of due diligence would not have caused the plaintiff corporation or its counsel in endeavoring to ascertain all evidence which would be material in the trial of the issues in this case to have discovered this evidence in advance of the 3371 close of trial.

AFFIDAVIT

3373 STATE OF NEW YORK,
COUNTY OF NEW YORK, ss.:

ELEONORE FIRNBERGER, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

I was born in the year 1897 in Frankfurt on Main Germany. I am an Austrian by marriage. I was imprisoned by the Nazi Secret Police during the war for Anti-Nazi activities. Before leaving Austria I was employed by the American Occupation Army in their so-called special service. I was permitted to emigrate to this country under the provision for so-called politically persecuted people. My emigration to the United States was sponsored by my lifelong friend, Mrs. Blanche Goldmark of New York City. I am now employed in New York City as a saleslady in the department store of McCreary & Company.

My mother and Wilhelm von Opel are cousins and as a child I very often came to the house of Mr. von Opel's mother, as well as his own. As Wilhelm von Opel was considerably older than I, I used to address him and his wife as uncle and aunt. As I had studied music for many years and Wilhelm von Opel was a great lover of music, I was a frequent companion of Wilhelm von Opel and his wife whenever they went to musical or theatrical event. Around 1930 when both of his children began to live abroad I saw Wilhelm and his wife very frequently and I became a close confident of Wilhelm von Opel. After the sale of the factory around 1930 he spent much time in Berlin where I lived and which was then, before the Nazis came into power, one of the musical centers of Europe. As I took over the years more and more their daughter's place with whom they had fallen out in the early 30's, both Wilhelm and Marta von Opel, and particularly Wilhelm, frequently discussed with me their many problems, not only family questions but also political questions connected with the seizure of power by the Nazis in 1933.

3374 At this time, 1933 or 1934, Wilhelm von Opel told me about his troubles with the Nazis and how they were looking for an excuse to persecute him, because he had always slighted them before 1933. He told me that the Nazis accused him of "economic treason" because he had sold a German factory to what they called the "Jewish General Motors." He was at that time very much upset, the reason being, as he told me, that the Nazis had threatened him to put him before the peoples' court because he had not delivered to the Nazis some part of his son's income, an income which he said he had not received and which he did not want.

About a year later, in 1934 or 1935, Wilhelm von Opel told me that this matter had been temporarily settled after payment of a very heavy fine of several million marks, but that he was afraid that the Nazis might use what he called the niessbrauch provision of the gift agreement to jump on him anew year after year. He told me that he didn't need, nor desire, any income from his son, that this provision had been merely put in to educate his newly married son to live well within his means and that this niessbrauch was now hanging over his head like the sword of Damocles. He said he could hardly sleep for fear the Nazis might persecute him again and that the best way out was to explain to the authorities what his intentions had been from the beginning, namely that he had only wanted a protection in case of need and that he did not want to have any claims against his son because they would involve him in the strict regulations in regard to foreign currency. He told me that he had taken a lawyer, Dr. Gros, to represent him in this matter and he often complained about the great difficulties encountered and the slow progress made. All through the middle 30's he was very much worried about this matter.

In summer, 1937, however, before I left for a long visit with friends in the United States, I said good-bye to Wilhelm von Opel. At this time he was very jubilant and told me that at long last his lawyer had succeeded in bringing his negotiations with the German authorities to a favorable conclusion and that he now felt much relieved and free from the pressure which had darkened his life for so many years.

3375 After the end of the war I saw Wilhelm von Opel and his wife repeatedly, the last time in August 1947 shortly before I emigrated to the United States. At this time an investigation by some American authorities was under way and he told me repeatedly that he could not understand what it was all about. He said that even the Nazis had recognized the fact that he had abandoned all claims against his son and that he hoped that all documents from the files of the German authorities would be given to the Americans to enable them to get a complete picture of the matter.

Filed February 21, 1949

3376 This suit was brought by plaintiff, a corporation of Switzerland, the controlling stock of which is claimed to be beneficially owned by Fritz von Opel, a citizen of Liechtenstein, to recover shares of stock of American corporations vested by the Alien Property Custodian as enemy owned property. The principal issue is whether as of the time of vesting in June and July 1942, the stock was owned or controlled by Fritz von Opel, a neutral, or by his parents, Wilhelm and Marta von Opel, citizens of Germany and "enemies" within the provisions of the Trading with the Enemy Act.[1]

It is agreed that on and before October 5, 1931, Wilhelm and Marta von Opel owned 600 shares of stock of Adam Opel, A.G., a German Corporation, and that since 1929 such shares were deposited in the United States subject to an option agreement providing for their sale to General Motors Corporation for a specified sum in German reichsmarks.

Plaintiff claims that by a gift agreement executed on October 5, 1931, Wilhelm and Marta von Opel transferred their ownership in the shares of stock of Adam Opel, A.G., to their son, Fritz von Opel, and that in November, 1931, Fritz von Opel sold the stock to General Motors Corporation pursuant to the option. In the transaction he arranged to be paid in American rather than German currency. From the funds received, Fritz von Opel acquired plaintiff corporation. Later the American securities now held by defendant were purchased by plaintiff corporation. From 1932 until the time the American securities were vested pursuant to provisions of the Trading with the

Enemy Act, it is claimed Fritz von Opel owned 97 per 3377 cent of the shares of plaintiff corporation and through this ownership exercised control over the American securities. On November 21, 1939, Fritz von Opel became a citizen of Liechtenstein, which at all times during World War II was a neutral country. Any ownership or control of the American securities or any interest in them by Wilhelm or Marta von Opel as to the time the securities were vested, is denied. The agreement of October 5, 1931, indicated retention by the Opel parents of an interest in the Opel stock and any securities purchased by funds received from its sale, by way of what is known as a usufruct or "niessbranch" under German law. However, plaintiff claims such interest did not legally arise because of omission of words of assignment in the agreement and failure to deliver possession or co-possession to his parents of the property covered by the agreement. Moreover, it is plaintiff's claim that in 1935, a discussion was had by Wilhelm and Marta von Opel with their then attorney, Dr. Gros, with regard to any possible interest they might have in the property referred to in the agreement of October 5, 1931, and at that time Wilhelm and Marta von Opel orally waived such interest. Plaintiff, therefore, claims that if the Court should find any interest in the American securities existed in favor of Wilhelm or Marta von Opel previous to and at this time in 1935, it was effectively relinquished and surrendered, according to the laws of Germany, by the oral waiver.

The defendant makes a number of alternative claims in opposition to the return of the vested securities. First, it maintains the agreement dated October 5, 1931, relied on by plaintiff as having divested Wilhelm and Marta von Opel of their interest in the Opel stock and properties realized from any sale of the stock, was void because it was not executed on the date it bore, but at a time in November, 1931, following sale of the Opel stock in the United States for American currency. It is contended the plan of Wilhelm von Opel was to make it appear that Fritz von Opel, who for several years had been a non-resident of Germany, known in German as a "devisen auslander", was the owner of the stock at the time it was sold in the United States, in which event it would be permissible, under Germany's foreign exchange laws, to receive payment in American currency, instead of in German reichsmarks. If the property was owned by Wilhelm von Opel or his wife, citizens and residents of Germany, known in that country as "devisen inlanders", the sale would be subject to Germany's foreign exchange laws. Passage of more stringent laws and regulations restricting sales of German property for foreign exchange were con-3378 sidered imminent in Germany about this time. That there was not believed to be sufficient time on or about October 5, 1931, to complete a satisfactory agreement transferring title to Fritz von Opel before new laws and regulations were adopted. For this reason only a preliminary draft of the gift agreement was made at or about October 5, 1931, the actual execution of the agreement having occurred in November 1931, after the sale of the Adam Opel, A. G., stock in America and Fritz von Opel's return to Germany. To make the sale of stock in America for American currency appear to have been made by Fritz von Opel, a devisen auslander, the gift agreement was predated October 5, 1931.

Defendant maintains further, that regardless of whether the agreement was executed in October or November, 1931, it was not a bona fide transaction, but was in all respects a sham adopted by the parents as a means of making it possible, from a sale of assets outside of Germany, to obtain gold or American securities without apparently violating the exchange laws and regulations of Germany. By reason of such a sham transaction, defendant claims the agreement was void and Wilhelm and Marta von Opel continued to have complete ownership and control of the American securities sought to be recovered by this suit.

If the Court does not accept the claim of complete ownership by Wilhelm and Marta von Opel in the vested American securities, defendant contends the evidence establishes at the least that they held a substantial part ownership in the securities. It is conceded that the gift agreement itself, if found to be valid, did not effectually create in favor of Wilhelm and Marta von Opel a usufructuary interest in the property mentioned. However, defendant asserts such an interest came into existence at a later time, when delivery was made of the controlling shares of stock of plaintiff corporation to one Hans Frankenberg, who was then acting as agent for Wilhelm and Marta von Opel. It is maintained this was an in rem interest, according to the laws of Germany. Defendant makes an alternative claim of limited ownership, to the effect that if the Court should find a usufructuary interest in the property did not arise in favor of Wilhelm and Marta von Opel, as last hereinbefore asserted, nevertheless Wilhelm and Marta von Opel by the agreement dated October 5, 1931, obtained a right at any time to assert a claim in personam against Fritz von Opel for the creation of an in rem interest in the property mentioned in the gift agreement.

3379 Defendant's position with respect to any type of ownership the Court may find Wilhelm and Marta von Opel held in the American securities is that the evidence establishes there was not in fact a waiver or surrender of such ownership in 1933, or at any other time, but that their ownership continued in full effect until the Alien Property Custodian vested the American securities. The defendant also maintains that under German law a waiver of ownership in the property, if made, would be void unless a license was obtained and one was not obtained.

In the event the Court does not agree with any of the foregoing defenses, defendant makes two other points which it submits should result in judgment against plaintiff. First, that the plaintiff corporation itself is an "enemy", within the definition of Section 2 of the Trading with the Enemy Act, in that it is incorporated within a country other than the United States and during the time the United States was at war, was doing business within the territory of a nation with which the United States was at war. Second, defendant maintains that while it concedes Fritz von Opel is a naturalized citizen of a neutral country of Liechtenstein, nevertheless he still is a German national, within the meaning of Section 39 of the Trading with the Enemy Act and is not entitled to obtain return of the vested property.

The evidence presented in this case has extended to many disputed items of fact, but it develops that upon reaching findings as to a limited number of them, this suit may be decided.

I find the agreement dated October 5, 1931, between Wilhelm and Marta von Opel, as donors, and their son Fritz von Opel, as donee, was made for the primary purpose of obtaining realization in the form of gold or American securities from the sale of the 600 shares of Opel Works stock, but there was also a purpose to make financial provision for Fritz von Opel. In the transaction, Wilhelm and Marta von Opel intended to retain a usufructuary interest, according to the laws of Germany, in any property which might be obtained from funds resulting from the sale in the United States of the Opel Works stock, and it was only by inadvertence this was not accomplished by the agreement itself. However, at a time between 1932 and 1934, following the sale of the Opel Works stock in the United States and a purchase of American securities from the funds received, there was a delivery of the stock of plaintiff corporation, which had acquired the American securities, to one Hans Frankenberg, who, the evidence compels me to find was acting in the transaction as agent for Wilhelm and Marta von

Opel. According to the laws of Germany, the 3380 delivery to Frankenberg resulted in the establishment of a usufructuary interest in favor of Wilhelm and Marta von Opel in plaintiff corporation and all of its assets. In 1935, a waiver of this interest was discussed by Wilhelm von Opel with his then attorney, Dr. Gros, but I find that a waiver was not in fact made. I further find that at the time the Alien Property Custodian vested the American securities which are the subject of this suit, Wilhelm and Marta von Opel continued to hold, without impairment, their usufructuary interest in said stock of plaintiff corporation and the American securities.

A right of usufruct, once established, is under German law an in rem right in property. A person having a usufruct in property has a right:

(a) to the enjoyment of the property or, in the case of money or securities, to the income from the securities;

(b) to co-possession of the property together with the person holding legal title to the property;

(c) to a voice in the management of the property insofar as the maintenance and preservation of the usufructuary's rights under subsection (a) above are concerned;

(d) to prevent the sale or disposition of the property as a result of his right to co-possession;

(e) the German Civil Code does not mention whether the usufructuary, for the protection of his income, has any voting rights. In the absence of a decided case the legal commentaries speculate in three different directions. One position is that the title owner has all voting rights and the usufructuary no voting rights whatsoever. The second position is that the title owner has a voting right for all measures which have nothing to do with income while the usufructuary can vote in regard to income. The third position is that the usufructuary has all the voting rights.

Other rights created by the terms of the agreement dated October 5, 1931, were (a) the right of Wilhelm and Marta von Opel to receive 80% of the income from the American securities; (b) if Fritz von Opel should predecease his parents, or one of them, without leaving legitimate issue, the complete ownership of the securities will revert to Wilhelm and Marta von Opel, or the survivor; and (c) if the parents, Wilhelm and Marta von Opel, should predecease Fritz von Opel, the gift made by the agreement dated October 5, 1931, will be considered as an advancement and be deducted from his share in such property as might be inherited by him or his sister, Mrs. Elinor Sachs, nee von Opel, or in case of her prior death, by her issue.

At all times involved in this suit, Wilhelm and Marta von Opel were citizens of Germany and "enemies", as defined by the Trading with the Enemy Act. Their 3381 daughter, Mrs. Elinor Sachs, is a native of Germany presently residing in Switzerland. In November, 1939, Fritz von Opel, formerly a German citizen, became naturalized under the laws of the principality of Liechtenstein, a neutral country during World War II.

In my opinion, the usufructuary and other interests of Wilhelm and Marta von Opel in the stock of plaintiff corporation and the securities vested by the Alien Property Custodian in June and July 1942 compel in law a decision against plaintiff's claim in this suit. By section 32(a) 2E of the Trading with the Enemy Act, an interest in property vested by the Alien Property Custodian will not be returned where the owner is a foreign corporation which at any time after December 7, 1941, was controlled, or 50 per centum or more of the stock was owned, by any person ineligible to receive return of the vested property. The purpose of the Trading with the Enemy Act was to reach enemy interests which masqueraded under innocent fronts and where securities or other interests are found to be held by a neutral but under circumstances constituting enemy taint, return of the property after vesting by the Alien Property Custodian will be barred.[2] What is necessary to be proved to constitute enemy taint was left undecided by the Supreme Court. We are called upon to decide this question in the present case.

In reaching a determination of enemy taint, the Court will look not only to circumstances which indicate enemy ownership or control, but also to connections or associations with enemy interests. It seems to me the usufructuary interests of Wilhelm and Marta von Opel and the contingent interests which they, their daughter or her issue, owned in the vested securities pursuant to the provisions of the agreement of October 5, 1931, and the delivery of the stock of plaintiff to Wilhelm and Marta von Opel's agent, constitute such substantial enemy taint as to bar recovery by plaintiff. But there is further evidence of enemy taint. The circumstances surrounding the Liechtensteinean citizenshp of Fritz von Opel, the sole remaining owner of interest in the vested property, are not without significance. It is conceded Fritz von Opel has technical status as a citizen of Liechtenstein, and for the purposes of this suit, it may be conceded his citizenship in that country is not open to collateral attack. But 3382 where, as in the case, the vested property is found to be owned by different parties, some of whom clearly are enemies and the sole remaining one of whom is a neutral, it seems proper in a determination of enemy taint of the property, to inquire into possible enemy tendencies of the neutral.

2 Clark v. Uebersee Finanz Korporation, 332 U. S. 480, 485.

Fritz von Opel was born in Germany in 1899 and until 1929 lived in that country, together with his family, who were prominent industrialists known not only in Germany but in other parts of the world. Fritz von Opel achieved widespread distinction in sports in Germany and participated in its behalf in international events. While after 1929 he spent a large part of his time out of Germany, his roots remained firmly planted in that country. It was not until November of 1939, after World War II had begun, that Fritz von Opel took any steps to change his citizenship. At that time, he went through proceedings to become a naturalized citizen of the principality of Liechtenstein. He paid $10,000 to obtain this citizenship and signed certain formal documents. However, he never has been in Liechtenstein more than a few hours at any one time; his visits have been few and in each instance of short duration; and he has never established a place of abode there. He never has taken an oath of allegiance to Liechtenstein or formally renounced citizenship in Germany. In technical form Fritz von Opel is a citizen of a neutral country, but I find beyond doubt that between 1939, when he became a naturalized citizen of Liechtenstein, and 1941, when war was declared by the United States, he had a continued interest in the welfare of and sympathy for Germany.

There is an additional circumstance in this case which of itself perhaps would not prevent recovery by plaintiff in this suit, but which with the other facts of the case tends to indicate enemy taint. The evidence shows that plaintiff at all material times in this suit owned complete stock interest in Transdanubia Bauxite, A. G., a mining corperation in Hungary. On December 13, 1941, Hungary formally became an enemy of the United States. Transdanubia Bauxite, A. G., mined bauxite, an essential ingredient in the production of aluminum. Before the war, it is clear that part of the output was shipped to Germany. There is evidence tending to show also that Transdanubia shipped bauxite to Germany during December, 1941, at or about the time of the declaration of war between Hungary and the United States. In November, 1939, Fritz von Opel, in response to a letter from Giulini Brothers, of Germany, requesting his service in getting the production in the mines resumed, went to 3383 Hungary "to speed up production in the bauxite mine". The letter to Fritz von Opel stated in part, "you would do meritorious service for the raw material supply of the German aluminum industry and the entire war economy of Germany if you would tackle with all your energy the resumption of production in the mines". In addition, during 1939 plaintiff guaranteed a loan of 32,000 Swiss Francs ($7,000) to Transdanubia Bauxite, A. G., which loan was extended at quarterly periods until November 17, 1942, when plaintiff was advised that its collateral had been released. While it is true there is no showing that plaintiff executed any control over its subsidiary after December 1941, it appears plaintiff never took affirmative steps to sever its relations with Transdanubia. Thus plaintiff had an interest in and an association with an enemy corporation during World War II which apparently supplied war materials to the enemies of the United States.

From what has been stated, it would be difficult in my opinion to find a stronger case of enemy taint in vested property short of full ownership by an enemy than exists in this case. The neutral aspect of ownership in the property is insignificant and it seems to me the plain intent of the Trading with the Enemy Act would be defeated by ordering a return of the vested securities.

During the oral argument of this case, while counsel for the defendant was presenting his contentions with regard to the claim of existence in favor of Wilhelm and Marta von Opel of a usufructuary interest in the vested properties, plaintiff's counsel interrupted to suggest that granting the Court should find such interest existed at the time of vesting, nevertheless since Fritz von Opel, a neutral, had a well defined separate interest which might be determined by the Court, he would be entitled to recover to the extent of such interest. This point was enlarged by one of plaintiff's counsel in his rebuttal argument. No such claim is made by the pleadings. This suit was not brought by Fritz von Opel upon a claim of division of interests which he held together with his parents, but was brought by a corporation of Switzerland which claimed to be entitled to a return of the vested American securities, based upon a claim that Wilhelm and Marta von Opel held no interest "directly or indirectly, in whole or in part", in the properties. At the time the case was pretried, when the parties were called upon to state the issues to be litigated and to make any amendments of the pleadings necessary to present new issues, it was agreed the action was to recover property belonging to plaintiff corporation in which there was no enemy interest. Without consent of the defendant, the Court should not at this late time adjudicate an issue where the interest 3384 sought to be established is different from that set forth in the pleadings and where the party plaintiff also is different. Defendant well may desire to present other factual information and develop legal arguments which only partially have been made in this case.

Judgment will be entered in favor of the defendant.

Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law
Filed May 6, 1949

3385 1. Plaintiff, Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, is a corporation organized under the laws of Switzerland, with its principal office and main place of business in Switzerland.

2. Plaintiff owned and held stock of certain corporations located in the United States; these assets were vested by the Alien Property Custodian in June and July of 1942 pursuant to the Trading with the Enemy Act.

3. 97 per cent of the stock of plaintiff corporation is held by Fritz von Opel.

4. Wilhelm and Marta von Opel are the parents of Fritz von Opel and at all relevant times they were nationals and residents of Germany. Mrs. Elinor Sachs, nee von Opel, is the sister of Fritz von Opel and is a resident of Switzerland.

5. Fritz von Opel was a citizen of Germany from birth until November 21, 1939, and as a result of his engaging in competitive activities in Germany his name had, by 1929, become a household word and he enjoyed a prominent position in the esteem of the public.

6. After December, 1929, Fritz von Opel never resided in Germany, but lived successively in the United States, Belgium and Switzerland, where in 1934 he became a Swiss Domicilliary. Between December 1930 and August, 1939 he went to Germany for short visits, totalling about ten per cent of the time.

7. On November 21, 1939 Fritz von Opel was naturalized as a citizen of Liechtenstein; however, the only times he was ever in Liechtenstein was when he was traveling through it. He has been in the United States since May, 1940. The Liechtenstein naturalization law expressly permits the principality under extraordinary circumstances to waive the condition of residence.

8. Fritz von Opel's naturalization in Liechtenstein was accomplished under a waivef of the usual Liechtensteinean naturalization laws which provide for extensive residence. In connection with obtaining his citizenship, Fritz von Opel paid approximately $10,000, two-thirds to a community and one-third to the principality. The 3386 naturalization laws of Liechtenstein require some payment for acquisition of citizenship by naturalization.

9. Fritz von Opel never took an oath of allegiance to the principality of Liechtenstein and he states as his reason for this that he was too sick to travel at the time he was to take his oath. Under the laws of Liechtenstein, it is within the jurisdiction of the executive or an authority empowered by him to administer the citizenship oath after the state citizenship has been granted. The citizenship oath has only to be taken by male persons of full age.

10. Statements made and acts performed by Fritz von Opel between the time in 1939, when he became a naturalized citizen of Liechtenstein, and 1941, when war was declared by the United States, indicate a continued interest in the welfare of and sympathy for Germany.

11. Both Switzerland and the principality of Liechtenstein were and have remained since December 7, 1941, neutral countries.

12. In 1929 General Motors Corporation purchased 80% of the outstanding stock of Adam Opel A. G., a German corporation engaged principally in the manufacture of automobiles; 10% of the remaining stock, 600 shares, were owned by Wilhelm and Marta von Opel subject to an escrow agreement with General Motors.

13. In 1931, the economic situation in Germany became very serious and Foreign Currency Controls were becoming more restrictive every day.

14. Both Fritz and Wilhelm von Opel were greatly worried during the late summer of 1931 over the possibility of a financial collapse in Germany and a repetition of the inflation of a decade earlier and both had discussions with associates concerning means of avoiding the danger.

15. On October 2, 1931, Fritz and Wilhelm von Opel were advised by Dr. Hachenburg, one of Germany's leading lawyers, that a valid gift could be made by Wilhelm to Fritz von Opel of the 600 shares of Adam Opel, A. G., stock without violating existing Foreign Currency restrictions.

16. This gift would be valid because Fritz von Opel was at the time a devisen auslander, the term applied by German law to a person not residing in Germany and hence not subject to the German foreign exchange control legislation.

17. Thereafter on October 5, 1931, Wilhelm and Marta von Opel by a deed of gift gave Fritz von Opel, their only son, the remaining ten per cent of the Adam Opel A. G. stock.

18. This was intended to be a gift of part interest of the owners and was not intended to be a sham transaction; however, the primary object of the transaction was to obtain payment upon sale of the Opel shares in the form of gold or American currency, instead of German 3387 reichsmarks. A second purpose of the gift was to make financial provision for Fritz von Opel. Legal title to the 600 Opel shares passed to Fritz von Opel by the agreement of October 5, 1931.

19. On October 17, 1931, Fritz von Opel, pursuant to the provisions of the escrow agreement of 1929, sold General Motors Corporation the 600 Opel shares which were the object of the gift for American currency and securities.

20. After various intermediate financial transactions, all of the proceeds from the sale of the Opel shares were transferred into Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, plaintiff herein, which is a Swiss holding company acquired for the purpose of holding the proceeds of the sale of the Opel shares.

21. Thereafter, these funds were invested in various corporations and other assets in the United States and elsewhere, including the property vested by the Alien Property Custodian. Subsequently, prior to 1936, these assets were transferred to plaintiff.

22. Since 1935 and at the time of vesting plaintiff corporation owned one hundred per cent stock interest in Transdanubia Bauxite, A. G., a mining corporation in Hungary.

23. During the year 1939 a loan was made by a Hungarian Bank to Transdanubia Bauxite, A. G., said loan being guaranteed by a Swiss Bank.

24. In 1940 the said loan was increased by the Swiss Bank to a total amount of 32,000 Swiss Francs ($7,000).

25. As security for this guarantee, plaintiff corporation had caused the Adler Bank, a Swiss Corporation, to place with the Swiss Bank, 32,000 francs as collateral for the guarantee.

26. At quarterly periods the guarantee was extended by plaintiff corporation through its agent, the Adler Bank. In March, June and September of 1942, Dr. Joseph Henggeler, a director of plaintiff corporation, requested the Adler Bank to cause the Swiss Bank Corporation to extend its guarantee to the Hungarian Bank. On each occasion the requested extension was made.

27. Transdanubia Bauxite A. G. repayed the loan and on November 17, 1942, plaintiff corporation was advised that its collateral had been released.

28. Throughout the war the shares of the Transdanubia Bauxite A. G. were held by plaintiff corporation.

29. The record is bare of any evidence as to whether the shares of Transdanubia Bauxite, A. G., from 1940 through 1945, inclusive, were voted, or, if so, who voted them.

30. After December 7, 1941 plaintiff corporation never took any affirmative steps to sever its relations with Transdanubia Bauxite, A. G.

3388 31. From December 13, 1941, until the end of the war, a state of war existed between Hungary and the United States. During October, November and December, 1941, Transdanubia Bauxite, A. G. shipped bauxite to Germany. By contract executed in March, 1940. Transdanubia Bauxite, A. G. agreed to ship bauxite to Germany until the end of 1942. However, in the spring of 1941 Fritz von Opel refused requests from the officers of Transdanubia Bauxite, A. G. for additional funds in order that mining operations could be continued and he suggested that the mines be sold or leased. The record does not reflect that the plaintiff corporation or Fritz von Opel received any income from Transdanubia Bauxite, A. G. at any time.

32. Under the terms of the gift agreement dated October 5, 1931, it was agreed that Wilhelm and Marta von Opel should have a usufruct established in their favor.

33. According to the laws of Germany the instrument of October 5, 1931, did not immediately create in Wilhelm and Marta von Opel a usufruct in the property which was the subject of the gift because of the omission in the instrument to provide for an immediate delivery of possession or co-possession of the property to Wilhelm and Marta von Opel and because no such delivery of the property was then made.

34. A valid and complete usufruct is created under German law when (a) the person holding the legal title and the usufructuary agree that a usufruct shall be created and (b) when the person holding the legal title delivers to the usufructuary possession or co-possession of the property.

35. Under German law, valid delivery sufficient to create a usufruct may be brought about by symbolic delivery, as in the case of securities, by the delivery of the key to a safe deposit box in which the securities are placed to the usufructuary or his agent.

36. A usufructuary may follow the ascertainable proceeds of the original property subjected to the usufruct.

37. On or before June 7, 1935, Fritz von Opel placed all but three of the shares of Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, A. G. in box 1917 at the Schweizerische Kreditanstalt in Zurich and thereafter delivered the key to Dr. Hans Frankenberg.

38. Hans Frankenberg received the key as agent for Wilhelm von Opel and it was delivered to him by Fritz von Opel who understood that Hans Frankenberg represented his father.

39. Hans Frankenberg was made managing director of Uebersee Finanz-Korporation in the spring of 1932 at the request of Wilhelm von Opel, in the form of a suggestion.

40. Thereafter Hans Frankenberg continued to be at all times and still is managing director of Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, and there is abundant evidence 3389 establishing that up to and including 1940 he exercised control over the major policies of the corporation. From 1932 until the date of vesting, Dr. Eugene Meier was President and chief officer of plaintiff corporation. Dr. Meier testified that in the year 1940 plaintiff corporation was without connection with Fritz von Opel or with Hans Frankenberg and that it became necessary for Dr. Meier to have a direct hand in the management of the affairs of the corporation. The Court is not able to find from this testimony the extent to which, if any, Dr. Meier, after 1940, participated in the management of the corporation. The record is bare of evidence that after 1940 Frankenberg exercised control over plaintiff, but the record is also bare of any evidence of a termination of such control. From all of the evidence, including the evidence establishing that Frankenberg did exercise control during the years 1932 to 1940 inclusive, and establishing motive and intent for such exercise of control, and in the absence of any evidence that Frankenberg ceased to exercise such control, the Court draws the inference and finds as a fact that Frankenberg continued to exercise control over plaintiff corporation until the date of vesting.

41. Hans Frankenberg acted at all relevant times as managing director of Uebersee Finanz-Korporation as agent for Wilhelm von Opel.

42. The delivery of the key constituted valid delivery of possession of the res subject to the usufruct and the usufruct contemplated in the gift of October 5, 1931 there and then came into existence in accordance with the terms of the instrument.

43. Hans Frankenberg, as such agent; from the spring of 1932 until the date of vesting, exercised control over the investments and activities of Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, A. G.

44. Fritz von Opel from time to time, from the spring of 1932 until the date of vesting, engaged in activities in behalf of Uebersee Finanz-Korporation and gave instructions concerning its investments.

45. The activities of Fritz von Opel to a large decree were carried on with the guidance and direction of Wilhelm von Opel, or his agent, Hans Frankenberg.

46. All the vested property, which is the subject of this litigation and which is named in the complaint herein, was, at the date of vesting, owned by Uebersee Finanz-Korporation and had been acquired with funds which had originally been derived from the sale of the 600 shares of Adam Opel, A. G. originally owned by Wilhelm von Opel as hereinbefore found.

47. In March of 1933, Uebersee Finanz-Korporation sought to remove to Switzerland $1,250,000 in gold pieces purchased in New York, but was prevented from doing so by order of an agency of the United States Government.

48. Thereafter, from time to time, until May 25, 1936 when certiorari was denied by the Supreme Court, 3390 Uebersee Finanz-Korporation sought by administrative and judicial means to obtain permission to remove the same gold from the United States.

49. In support of an application for a license to remove the gold an affidavit was filed by Fritz von Opel in which he stated that a usufruct had been created pursuant to the gift agreement of October 5, 1931, that the Uebersee shares had been placed in a safe deposit box and that the key to the box was in the possession of Hans Frankenberg as his father's agent, and he further stated he had bare legal title, plus 20% of the income.

50. This affidavit was a part of the record in later legal proceedings before the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, and the Supreme Court of the United States.

51. In 1935 Wilhelm von Opel discussed the waiver of his right to a usufruct but it was never after its creation waived or abandoned by any statement or act of Wilhelm or Marta von Opel.

52. A right of usufruct, once established, is under German law an in rem right in property. A person having a usufruct in property has a right:

(a) to the enjoyment of the property or, in the case of money or securities, to the income from the securities;

(b) to co-possession of the property together with the person holding legal title to the property;

(c) to a voice in the management of the property insofar as the maintenance and preservation of the usufructuary's rights under subsection (a) above are concerned;

(d) to prevent the sale or disposition of the property as a result of his right to co-possession;

(e) the German Civil Code does not mention whether the usufructuary, for the protection of his income, has any voting rights. In the absence of a decided case the legal commentaries speculate in three different directions. One position is that the title owner has all voting rights and the usufructuary no voting rights whatsoever. The second position is that the title owner has a voting right for all measures which have nothing to do with income while the usufructuary can vote in regard to income. The third position is that the usufructuary has all the voting rights.

53. Under the laws of Germany at the date of vesting Wilhelm and Marta von Opel had a usufruct in the property and therefore had the usufructuary rights hereinbefore described. Neither Wilhelm nor Marta von Opel ever demanded or received any income of any nature from the usufruct. After the usufructuary agreement was made on October 5, 1931, plaintiff corporation paid the expenses of a trip to South America and a trip to Hungary made by Wilhelm von Opel, said expenses being charged on the books of plaintiff corporation to Fritz von Opel.

54. The gift agreement of October 5, 1931 also provided that if the parents Opel should predecease Fritz von Opel, the gift should be considered an advancement and be deducted from his share in such property as might be inherited by him or his sister, Mrs. Elinor Sachs, 3391 nee von Opel, nor, in case of her prior death, by her issue.

55. The gift agreement also provided that in the event Fritz von Opel predeceased his parents without leaving legitimate issue, the gift would become void. The stocks or the property substituted for the gift including the income accrued but not drawn would under this condition revert to the parents Opel or the surviving parent.

56. Fritz von Opel is now fifty years old and does not have issue. Wilhelm von Opel died in May, 1948. Marta von Opel is now seventy-four years of age. Elinor Sachs, nee von Opel, is now alive.

Conclusions of Law.

1. Plaintiff is a corporation organized under the laws of Switzerland.

2. Plaintiff is indirectly owned and controlled by enemies within the meaning of the Trading with the Enemy Act.

3. Subsequent to the gift agreement of October 5, 1931 between Wilhelm and Marta von Opel and Fritz von Opel, a valid usufruct was created in Wilhelm and Marta von Opel giving them in rem rights in the proceeds of the property transferred, and said usufruct existed in Wilhelm and Marta von Opel at the date of vesting.

4. The circumstances of the ownership and control of plaintiff corporation and the assets vested by the Alien Property Custodian constitute enemy taint of plaintiff, and plaintiff is therefore barred from recovery under Sections 2 and 9(a) of the Trading with the Enemy Act, as amended, as interpreted by the Supreme Court of the United States.

5. The circumstances of the acquisition of Fritz von Opel's Liechtenstein citizenship and his attachment to and sympathy for Germany and plaintiff's ownership of Transdanubia Bauxite, A. G., which mined bauxite for the benefit of Germany are further evidence of enemy taint within the meaning of Section 2 of the Trading with the Enemy Act and taken in conjunction with the finding of ownership and control as aforesaid of the vested securities by Wilhelm and Marta von Opel, alien enemies, bar recovery of said vested securities.

6. Judgment must be rendered in favor of defendant.

Defendant's Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Opposition to Plaintiff's Motion for a New Trial Filed May 11, 1949

3393 The plaintiff herein has filed a motion for a new trial on the basis of allegedly newly discovered evidence, which evidence is in the form of an affidavit by one Eleonore Firnhammer. The defendant opposes this motion upon the following grounds:

1. The purported evidence contained in the affidavit, if offered as testimony, would be inadmissible as hearsay.

2. The moving papers do not establish that the purported evidence is newly discovered.

3. The purported evidence is purely cumulative and corroborative.

4. Plaintiff has failed to exercise due diligence in obtaining this purported evidence and in filing this motion.

5. The purported evidence, even if admissible, is not direct proof of a waiver of the usufruct by Wilhelm and Marta von Opel.

POINT I

The purported evidence contained in the affidavit, if offered as testimony, would be inadmissible as hearsay.

The purported evidence which forms the basis for the motion now before this Court is contained in the affidavit of Eleonore Firnhammer, annexed to the moving papers.

It may be presumed from this affidavit that Mrs. 3394 Firnhammer, if called as a witness, would testify to the statements of Wilhelm von Opel, attributed to him in her affidavit. These statements of Wilhelm von Opel, if presented to the Court in the form of testimony by Mrs. Firnhammer, are clearly hearsay evidence.

In order for the plaintiff to succeed in changing the Court's finding as to waiver in this action, the plaintiff must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that Wilhelm von Opel and Marta von Opel in fact waived their usufruct which they acquired pursuant to the gift agreement of October 5, 1931. The testimony of Mrs. Firnhammer as to statements made by Wilhelm von Opel is only admissible at best to prove the fact that such statements were made and is in no way probative of the truth of those statements or of the fact that a waiver was or was not made. The mere fact that Wilhelm von Opel may or may not have made such statements is not in itself sufficient to prove that Wilhelm von Opel and Marta von Opel in fact waived their usufruct. That such purported evidence as the plaintiff now proffers is hearsay, is shown by V Wigmore on Evidence (3rd ed., 1940) section 1361, in which it is said:

> "The only question, then, can be whether this assertion of B, reported by A, is admissible as evidence of the event X, asserted by B to have occurred. It is clear that what we are now attempting to do is to prove event X by B's assertion; * * * It is these extra-judicial testimonial assertions which the Hearsay rule prohibits.'" (Italic as in original text.)

Adopting Professor Wigmore's statement of the hearsay rule, it is apparent that plaintiff may not prove an event, namely the waiver, by the testimony of Mrs. Firnhammer as to what was said by Wilhelm von Opel. It is, of course, significant in this connection that there is absolutely no testimony in the record of this case by Wilhelm or Marta von Opel that they ever waived their usufruct under the gift agreement.

The purpose of the hearsay rule is, of course, to prevent the admission in evidence of extra-judicial statements of a person who is not before the court, whose demeanor and credibility are not subject to observation by the court, and who is not subject to cross-examination. The plaintiff now seeks to accomplish, by the evidence proffered, the precise result which the hearsay rule is designed to 3395 prohibit. It seeks to place before the Court extra-judicial statements of Wilhelm von Opel, who cannot testify in person and is not subject to cross-examination and who, when he did testify in this action, uttered not one single word about a waiver of his usufruct.

Nor would such testimony be admissible under any of the recognized exceptions to the hearsay rule. Not only is the proffered testimony hearsay, but in addition, it is also subject to the objection that the declarations sought to be proved are purely self-serving. The affidavit of Mrs. Firnhammer states several times that Wilhelm von Opel told her that he was involved in criminal proceedings brought by the German government involving the usufruct which he and his wife held and that "he was afraid that the Nazis might use what he called the niessebrauch provision of the gift agreement to jump on him anew year after year." It is clear from this statement that if Wilhelm von Opel ever made any statements such as are attributed to him by Mrs. Firnhammer, which the defendant does not concede, the only purpose which Wilhelm von Opel could have had in making such statements was to prevent the German authorities from jumping "on him anew year after year," and were not designed to relinquish the property rights which Wilhelm von Opel had. Under these circumstances, the proffered evidence by Mrs. Firnhammer is also inadmissible upon the ground that it is evidence only of self-serving declarations.

The statements allegedly made in August, 1947 by Wilhelm von Opel are further objectionable upon the ground that they were made pendente lite. While statements made ante litem motam may, under certain circumstances be admissible, statements made during the course of litigation in which the declarant is interested are not admissible and are self-serving. The interest of Wilhelm von Opel, living in post-war Germany, in seeking to assist in securing the return of the vested property from the United States is so apparent that it needs no further elaboration.

The purported evidence contained in the affidavit of Mrs. Firnhammer, if offered as testimony, would there-3396 fore be inadmissible as hearsay evidence and as evidence of self-serving declarations. In order for plaintiff to prevail upon this motion there must be a showing that the plaintiff has new evidence which was not available at the time of the trial. Evidence which is inadmissible as hearsay and self-serving is, of course, no evidence at all, and, consequently, no ground exists upon which the Court could properly grant this motion for a new trial.

POINT II

The moving papers do not establish that the purported evidence is newly discovered.

Even if it be assumed for the purpose of argument that the testimony of Mrs. Firnhammer would be admissible, which of course defendant does not concede, defendant submits that it has not been established that the evidence proffered is newly discovered within the meaning of Rules 59 and 60(b), of the Rules of Civil Procedure. The courts have held that five requirements must be met by a moving party before a court will exercise its discretion in allowing a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence. These requirements are: that the evidence be discovered after the end of the trial; that facts are alleged which show due diligence in attempting to discover such evidence; that the new evidence is not merely cumulative or corroborative or for the purpose of impeaching; that the evidence is material; and that there is a probability that the evidence, if admitted, would lead to a different result.

Marshall's U. S. Auto Supply Inc. v. Cashman, 111 F. (2d) 140 (C. C. A. 10, 1940) cert. den. 311 U. S. 667 (1940);
Prisament v. United States, 96 F. (2d) 865 (C. C. A. 5, 1938).

Defendant contends that the first requirement set forth above, namely, that the evidence be newly discovered has not been met. Upon reading Mrs. Firnhammer's affidavit, the Court will note that there is absolutely no statement by her as to when she first reported the alleged statements of Wilhelm von Opel to either Fritz von Opel or 3397 Margot von Opel. This omission might not be so glaring if the moving papers contained an affidavit by either Fritz von Opel or Margot von Opel, or both, as to when these alleged statements were first reported. It is further extremely striking and interesting to note the manner in which plaintiff attempts to show that these alleged statements by Wilhelm von Opel were not known until after the trial of this action. The motion signed by plaintiff's attorneys states that Fritz von Opel, who has had a strained relationship with Mrs. Firnhammer, told plaintiff's attorneys that Margot von Opel had been told of these alleged statements by Mrs. Firnhammer. Thus, the moving papers are in fact based upon a double hearsay assertion by plaintiff's attorneys that Margot von Opel told Fritz von Opel who told plaintiff's counsel of the existence of this purported evidence after the trial. Defendant submits that the Court is entitled to give considerable weight to the manner in which plaintiff seeks to establish that the purported evidence is newly discovered and, particularly, to the absence in the moving papers of any statement of the witness herself as to when she informed the interested parties. Plaintiff seeks to have this Court grant a new trial in an important and involved matter which took several weeks of testimony of witnesses, based upon little more than the hearsay declarations of Fritz von Opel, who, in the light of the Court's findings, must be deemed a witness of at least questionable credibility. Such a showing in defendant's view is hardly sufficient to justify the extraordinary relief which plaintiff seeks.

Defendant, however, does not merely rely on the insufficiency of the moving papers as outlined above. Defendant respectfully calls the Court's attention to the signed statement of Mrs. Firnhammer, annexed hereto as Appendix A, which statement was obtained by a Special Agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. In that statement, Mrs. Firnhammer asserts that she came to the United States in November, 1947; that she renewed her acquaintance with Fritz and Margot von Opel during 1948 and saw those persons several times; and that this case was discussed by Fritz and Margot von Opel and others in her presence. She further asserts that, in March 3398 or April, 1949, Fritz von Opel came to her and asked her whether she had any knowledge of facts which might make her useful as a witness in this action. She further states, "From the manner in which Fritz von Opel asked me questions, I was aware that he knew that I was aware of the general nature of the case, but he did not know the details of my knowledge of the case." She then made certain statements to Fritz von Opel who prepared the affidavit filed as part of the moving papers. Thus, according to Mrs. Firnhammer, the statement in the moving papers that her knowledge of the case was first discovered in the course of a conversation with Margot von Opel is not correct. To the contrary, Fritz von Opel sought her out as a possible witness after the Court had rendered its opinion. It is clear from this statement by Mrs. Firnhammer (Appendix A) that Fritz von Opel at least knew that Mrs. Firnhammer did have some knowledge of this case, but he did not attempt to learn the extent of such knowledge until after the Court rendered judgment for defendant. Certainly the plaintiff, or its representative Fritz von Opel, cannot be permitted to proceed to trial on certain evidence and then after the Court has determined that such evidence is insufficient, seek out additional evidence which was available and which was known to be available all the time.

Nor is that all which in defendant's opinion shows a failure to establish that the evidence is newly discovered. The Court's attention is respectfully directed to the second paragraph of Mrs. Firnhammer's affidavit in which she states that over the years she took the place of a daughter, vis-a-vis Wilhelm and Marta von Opel and to her statements in the balance of the affidavit that she saw Wilhelm von Opel repeatedly after 1939 and particularly after the end of the war. Plaintiff now asks this Court to believe that the parties concerned with the prosecution of this action never had any idea that Mrs. Firnhammer, who was on such intimate terms with Wilhelm von Opel, had any knowledge of facts which might be relevant in this controversy. Mrs. Firnhammer states that she saw brought to this country by plaintiff at the beginning of the trial. Yet, according to plaintiff, none of these persons had any idea that Mrs. Firnhammer had any knowledge of facts which might be relevant to this action.
3399. Wilhelm von Opel in August, 1947; the record shows that Fritz von Opel was in communication with his father immediately after the end of hostilities in 1945 (Defendant's Exhibit 36); Wilhelm von Opel's deposition was taken in Germany in the first week of September, 1947 and at that time Wilhelm von Opel of course had an opportunity to confer with counsel for the plaintiff. At the same time the deposition of Daniel Gros, who on various occasions had acted as attorney for Wilhelm von Opel, was also taken, and Daniel Gros was subsequently

Although plaintiff's attorneys state that Fritz von Opel told them that his relations with Mrs. Firnhammer have been very strained, there is no similar statement with respect to Margot von Opel, his wife, and it is apparent that no strained relations existed with respect to Margot von Opel. Yet, here again, the Court is asked to believe that Margot von Opel, who as late as 1946 was well aware of the difficulties which this usufruct was creating and might create with respect to this very case (R. 2518-2522), never had any idea that Mrs. Firnhammer knew anything about this matter and never reported it to Fritz von Opel or his attorneys, who are also the attorneys for the plaintiff in this action.

On the basis of the foregoing, defendant submits that the plaintiff has wholly failed to establish that the evidence is newly discovered or could not reasonably have been discovered prior to the conclusion of the trial of this action. Having failed to establish that the evidence is newly discovered, the motion should be denied.

POINT III

The purported evidence is purely cumulative and corroborative.

In Point II, supra, there has been set forth the five requirements which must be met before a court will exercise its discretion to grant a new trial. The third 3400 of these requirements is that the alleged new evidence is not merely cumulative or corroborative. This requirement has likewise not been met on the instant motion.

The purported evidence proffered by the plaintiff relates solely and exclusively to the issue as to whether Wilhelm von Opel in fact waived the usufruct which he acquired pursuant to the gift agreement of October 5, 1931. This is not a new issue in this case. On the contrary, it has been one of the most important issues since the beginning of the trial, and the Court specifically requested counsel to discuss this point in their final arguments. On this issue, the plaintiff adduced testimony by Fritz von Opel and by Daniel Gros which sought to show that the usufruct had been waived. The defendant adduced testimony of J. Mason Houghland, Butler P. Crittenden and Rudolf Deku with respect to certain admissions by Wilhelm von Opel and Fritz von Opel which were totally inconsistent with the waiver of a usufruct. In addition, there was received in evidence Defendant's Exhibit 25, a letter from Fritz von Opel to his father, dated December 21, 1936, in which Fritz states that he had been discussing the usufruct for several days and that he had learned that Wilhelm von Opel had been discussing the usufruct with Dr. Frankenberg.

The purported new evidence which forms the basis of plaintiff's motion is nothing more, if admissible at all, than additional testimony on the same issue which has been fully litigated and is therefore merely cumulative and corroborative of testimony previously offered by the plaintiff. It is well settled that a motion for a new trial may not be granted for the purpose of admitting such cumulative and corroborative evidence.

F. W. Woolworth Co. v. Seckinger, 125 F. (2d) 97 (C. C. A. 5, 1942);
Prisament v. United States, 96 F. (2d) 865 (C. C. A. 5, 1938).

In the Woolworth case, supra, one of the issues on trial below was the identity of the shoes worn by the plaintiff at the time of the accident. After judgment for plaintiff, defendant moved for a new trial on the ground of 3401 newly discovered evidence. The evidence offered by this motion concerned the identity of the shoes worn by the plaintiff at the time of the accident. The identity of the shoes was one of the major issues at the trial. The motion was denied and on appeal the court held that the denial of the motion was proper and said, at p. 98:

> "One of the principal issues in the case concerned the identity of the shoes Mrs. Seckinger was wearing when the accident occurred. The evidence offered in support of the motion for a new trial likewise dealt with this issue. Construed to its best advantage for the movants, it is clear that this was corroborative of earlier witnesses and designed to impeach the testimony of the plaintiffs. It is well settled that motions for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence must do more than merely seek to relitigate old issues, and cannot be allowed where the new evidence is merely for the purpose of corroboration or impeachment."

In the Prisament case, supra, a criminal prosecution, a motion for a new trial was filed after judgment on the basis of newly discovered evidence that the defendants had been seen in New York at the time of the robbery in Georgia. The presence of the defendants in New York at the time of the offense had been testified to at the trial through several witnesses. The court denied the motion for a new trial upon the ground that additional evidence tending to show that the defendants were in New York at the time of the robbery was merely cumulative and its denial was sustained on appeal.

The evidence here offered falls precisely within the rule stated in the cases cited. The purported evidence is merely cumulative and corroborative on an issue on which there has been an abundance of testimony and the motion seeks only to "relitigate old issues." Plaintiff recognizes that it must show that the new evidence proffered is not merely cumulative or corroborative. It seeks to meet this burden, however, by a mere statement of a conclusion to that effect. This is wholly insufficient. Plaintiff also seeks to meet this burden by stating that the alleged new evidence contradicts Finding of Fact No. 51. This on its face shows that plaintiff is merely attempting to "relitigate old issues."

On the basis of the authorities cited, therefore, 3402 even if the testimony of Mrs. Firnhammer were admissible, there would be no proper ground for granting a motion for a new trial and the motion should be denied.

POINT IV

Plaintiff has failed to exercise due diligence in obtaining this purported evidence and in filing this motion.

Of the five requirements which must be met for the granting of a motion for a new trial, stated in Point II, supra, the second is that facts must be alleged that show the exercise of due diligence in seeking to discover such evidence. Defendant submits that even if the evidence were admissible there has been no showing of due diligence in seeking to discover the evidence.

The statement of Mrs. Firnhammer, annexed hereto (Appendix A) shows that she had discussed this case with Wilhelm von Opel in Europe as late as 1947, and that this case was discussed in her presence by Fritz and Margot von Opel in 1948. Her statement further shows that immediately after the Court had filed its opinion awarding judgment to the defendant, Fritz von Opel went to Mrs. Firnhammer and asked her whether she had knowledge of any facts which might be relevant. It is thus apparent that Fritz von Opel at least knew all along or had an idea that Mrs. Firnhammer might have knowledge of circumstances which could be relevant in this matter. Whether or not he advised counsel of the existence of this witness is not stated, but certainly he, who to say the least has a substantial interest in this controversy, cannot now be permitted on behalf of the plaintiff to seek to bolster the case after the cause has been lost. These facts certainly demonstrate that there has been no showing of due diligence to discover material evidence.

The defendant, however, does not rely on these facts alone. The Court is respectfully referred to the statements under Point II appearing on pages 6 and 7 of this memorandum which will be restated briefly here. In the affidavit made a part of the moving papers, Mrs. Firnhammer states that she took the place of Wilhelm von Opel's daughter and that she saw him repeatedly in the 1930's 3403 and after the end of the war. Her affidavit itself discloses that there were discussions with Wilhelm von Opel concerning the usufruct. Fritz von Opel was frequently in Germany before the war and in fact was there almost every year. He was also in communication with his father after the end of hostilities in 1945. Wilhelm von Opel's deposition was taken in September, 1947, and counsel for the plaintiff were, of course, present. In the light of all these facts, the Court is now asked to find that neither the plaintiff or its representatives, nor Wilhelm nor Fritz von Opel, nor plaintiff's counsel, had any idea that Mrs. Firnhammer might be used as a witness in this matter.

Whether or not they were actually aware of Mrs. Firnhammer's knowledge in this action is of course immaterial; the issue on this motion is whether by the exercise of due diligence they should have known of this purported evidence. The exercise of due diligence requires that every effort be made to discover available evidence. To say that in the course of preparation for trial neither plaintiff nor its counsel could, by the exercise of due diligence, have discovered this purported evidence taxes credulity. The plaintiff and its representatives and counsel cannot sit back and ignore the plain facts which are apparent, including the close relationship between Wilhelm von Opel and Mrs. Firnhammer, and then say that due diligence would not have resulted in the discovery of this evidence. It is incumbent upon parties to litigation and their counsel to explore all possibilities of obtaining evidence and to question all persons who might conceivably have knowledge of the facts. This would certainly include a person sufficiently intimate with Wilhelm von Opel to take the place of his daughter in his affections.

It is particularly significant in this connection to note the statement of the Court on March 16, 1949 when advised of the intention to file this motion on newly discovered evidence. The Court said to counsel for the plaintiff (R. 3178), "You had better labor pretty hard as to why you could not get it before you tried the case." It is apparent that the Court was well aware of the heavy burden of due diligence imposed upon a person seeking a new trial.

3404 There is a further lack of due diligence present here, namely, the failure of plaintiff to use due diligence in filing this motion. The Court's Opinion was filed on February 21, 1949. At that time the Court issued tentative Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law. On March 16, 1949 a hearing was held before this Court with respect to amendments requested by the plaintiff with respect to such findings and conclusions. During that hearing, at two separate points in the record, Mr. Gallagher, of counsel for the plaintiff, stated to the Court that he was going to file a motion for a new trial on the basis of newly discovered evidence (R. pages 3164, 3178). Obviously, Mr. Gallagher at that time had an idea as to what the newly discovered evidence was, and in fact he stated that he was not yet prepared to file a motion because he did not have the necessary affidavit. Subsequently, on April 29, 1949, a further hearing was held with respect to proposed amendments of the findings and conclusions and the Opinion of the Court. At this hearing, no one on behalf of plaintiff made any statement to the Court of an intention to file a motion for a new trial. At the conclusion of this last hearing, the findings, conclusions and opinion were finally settled, counsel for the defendant was instructed to have the necessary documents rewritten and the Court stated (R. 3245), "We can try to get it out next week, about Wednesday.", meaning May 4, 1949. Finally, on May 5, 1949 the instant motion was served and filed.

It thus appears that counsel for the plaintiff knew of the existence of this purported evidence at least on March 16, 1949, and yet they permitted more than seven weeks to elapse before filing such a motion. Certainly, a party moving for a new trial has a duty to the Court to file such a motion as soon as the evidence is known. It could hardly have taken seven weeks to obtain an affidavit from a witness who states she is employed in New York City and to prepare a two page motion to accompany such affidavit. This motion for a new trial is addressed to the discretion of the Court. It would seem that the Court should not reasonably be expected to exercise its discretion in 3405 favor of a party who has not exercised due diligence and reasonable speed in bringing allegedly new evidence to the attention of the Court.

On the basis of all of these facts, plaintiff has wholly failed to show that the evidence could not have been discovered with the exercise of due diligence or that in filing this motion they exercised due diligence. For these reasons the motion should be denied.

POINT V

The purported evidence, even if admissible, is not direct proof of a waiver of the usufruct by Wilhelm and Marta von Opel.

The fifth requirement, set forth in Point II, supra, which must be met for the granting of a motion for a new trial is that there is a probability that the evidence if admitted would lead to a different result. The purported evidence submitted by the plaintiff, if it were admissible in this action, does not meet this requirement.

First, any evidence as to a waiver of the usufruct by Wilhelm von Opel given by Mrs. Firnhammer is subject to two deficiencies. The testimony in the record of this action shows that even if Wilhelm von Opel and Marta von Opel had sought to waive their usufruct, the usufruct was a right to foreign exchange, the waiver of which required a license under the German foreign exchange laws. Those laws further provided that the absence of such a license rendered any transaction subject thereto null and void. Plaintiff has offered no proof that a license was ever obtained from the foreign exchange authorities, and consequently, the Court would be constrained to hold that a valid waiver was never made.

The second deficiency is that the affidavit of Mrs. Firnhammer deals only with alleged declarations of Wilhelm von Opel. Nowhere in her affidavit is it stated that she knows of any declarations by Marta von Opel, the wife of Wilhelm von Opel. The Court will recall that the evidence established that the gift agreement related to a gift of property held as community property by Wilhelm and Marta von Opel, and that the usufruct ran to both Wilhelm and Marta von Opel. Therefore, the testimony by 3406 Mrs. Firnhammer as to declarations by Wilhelm von Opel would not dispose of the usufruct, since even on the basis of this motion, there is no new evidence that

Marta von Opel ever made any attempt to waive, or made any declarations concerning, a waiver of the usufruct. Consequently, the purported evidence is totally insufficient and could not lead to a different result in this action.

Second, an examination of Mrs. Firnhammer's affidavit attached to the moving papers, discloses that nowhere does she state that Wilhelm von Opel ever said that he had waived the usufruct. The first alleged conversation is said to have taken place in 1934 or 1935 and that Wilhelm von Opel at that time said that "he didn't need, nor desire, any income from his son." This is not a statement of waiver. It is further significant to note that this statement is followed by a further purported declaration of Wilhelm von Opel that the purpose of the usufruct had been "to educate his newly married son to live well within his means." This last alleged declaration clearly shows that Wilhelm von Opel intended to and did retain legal control over the property and the actions of his son relating thereto. The next alleged declaration of Wilhelm von Opel is stated to have been made in the summer of 1937 at which time Wilhelm told Mrs. Firnhammer that "his lawyer had succeeded in bringing his negotiations with the German authorities to a favorable conclusion." This statement may be entirely disregarded since it in nowise indicates what negotiations with the German authorities were being discussed and is certainly no proof that a usufruct was waived, in view of the fact the usufruct is not even mentioned. The Court will recall that this record contains several instances in which Wilhelm von Opel was involved with the German authorities, and it can hardly be determined to what this alleged statement refers.

The last alleged statement contained in Mrs. Firnhammer's affidavit is a purported statement by Wilhelm von Opel in August, 1947 at which time he is supposed to have said that the German authorities had recognized that he had abandoned all claims against his son. This 3407 again is no proof of a waiver of the usufruct for again neither "waiver" nor "usufruct" are mentioned. Furthermore, this alleged statement, if it was in truth made, would be entitled to no weight whatsoever and could not change the result of this action, since less than a month thereafter Wilhelm von Opel testified in this action by deposition, at which time he made no statement whatsoever that he had ever waived a usufruct. Certainly, Wilhelm von Opel's own testimony under oath is the best evidence of what he did or did not do, and his failure to state in his deposition that he had ever waived his usufruct must necessarily be deemed controlling.

In any event, even if the reported statements of Wilhelm von Opel were made, there is no declaration imputed to him that he had in fact waived his usufruct. Consequently, since there is no direct proof of a waiver in the affidavit and since there is a complete failure of proof as to any waiver by Marta von Opel or as to any license from the German foreign exchange authorities approving such waiver, the testimony of Mrs. Firnhammer, even if it could be admitted in evidence, could not lead to a change in the result of this action. Plaintiff has therefore failed to meet this requirement for a motion for a new trial and the motion should be denied.

Conclusion

On the basis of the foregoing, it has been demonstrated that the alleged newly discovered evidence is not evidence at all since it is inadmissible as hearsay and self-serving. Further, even if the evidence could be deemed admissible, the plaintiff has wholly failed to fulfill the requirements prerequisite for the granting of a motion for a new trial in that the evidence is not newly discovered; the evidence is merely cumulative or corroborative; no facts are alleged which show due diligence in attempting to discover this evidence or in filing this motion; and there is no probability that the evidence, if admissible, would lead 3408 to a different result. Upon all these grounds, therefore, defendant respectfully requests that the motion be denied in all respects.

I, Eleonore Dorothea Firnhammer-Hoch, make the following voluntary statement to Harry Kiefer and Michael T. Geary who have identified themselves to me as Special Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. No threats or promises have been made to me and I realize that I have the right to consult an attorney prior to making this statement. I also realize that I do not have to make any statement and that it can be used in a court of law against me and/or others. (E. F.-H.)

I came to the United States on or about November 10, 1947 and entered through the Port of New York.

While I was in Europe, I learned from Geheimrat Wilhelm Von Opel that his son Fritz was involved in a court case in the United States.

About December, 1947, I met Fritz and Margot Von Opel at their home in New York City. This was entirely a social visit. The court case was not discussed.

Thereafter in the spring of 1948, I met Fritz Von Opel (E. F.-H.) on a few occasions. I also met Margot Von Opel late in 1948 when she returned from Switzerland. During these meetings, the court case was mentioned by some of the people present but I never discussed it with either Fritz or Margot Von Opel. They were not interested in my opinion because they thought it was too complicated for me to understand.

About the end of February, 1949, I learned that Fritz Von Opel had lost his court case. I learned this from Margot Von Opel.

In March or April, 1949, Fritz Von Opel called me and asked to see me. I had not seen Fritz for nearly a year. He asked me to come to his apartment in order to speak to me about several things.

At first there was some family conversation. Then Fritz asked me about what his father had said to me in detail. He said that perhaps he could use me as a witness but wasn't sure.

From the manner in which Fritz Von Opel asked me questions, I was aware that he knew that I was aware of the general nature of the case, but he did not know the details of my knowledge of the case.

I then told Fritz Von Opel what I knew about the case. He took notes during the conversation. Sometime later, Fritz Von Opel telephoned me and asked me to come to his place of residence. Fritz Von Opel gave me a typewritten affidavit to read. I would have preferred to typewrite my own affidavit but because I am an inefficient typist and have no typewriter, we had decided that Fritz Von Opel was to have the affidavit prepared elsewhere.

I read the affidavit which Fritz Von Opel gave me. I returned it to Fritz Von Opel and told him that it was correct. At Fritz Von Opel's suggestion we went to a Notary Public, where I signed the affidavit. Fritz Von Opel then took my affidavit with him.

3410 I have read the above statement consisting of this page and one other page. I now sign this statement to indicate that it is true.

Plaintiff's Memorandum of Points and Authorities and Additional Affidavits in Support of Plaintiff's Motion for a New Trial, Filed May 23, 1949

The defendant herein has opposed the motion hereinbefore filed by the plaintiff for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence and predicates its opposition on several grounds. In answer thereto and for the convenience of the Court, plaintiff will answer the defenses raised by the defendant in the order in which they are set forth in its memorandum.

1. The purported evidence contained in the affidavit of Eleanore Firnhammer, if offered as testimony, is admissible as an exception to the hearsay rule. This exception provides that declarations of deceased persons made while the declarants were in a position to know of the matters stated and which are against pecuniary or proprietary interest are admissible. This rule of law is so well recognized that it needs little if any citation. Case books are replete with statements of the courts supporting this principle. The most pertinent qualification is that the declarant be deceased at the time the statements made by the declarant are to be introduced. In the present matter, as the court well knows, Wilhelm von Opel died in the Spring of 1948, prior to this trial. A further requisite is that statements be made prior to a time when there was any contemplation that they would be subsequently used as evidence. Statements such as Miss Firnhammer's affidavit discloses were made during the middle 30's, particularly in the years 1934, 1935 and 1937, long prior to any time when it was contemplated that the Trading with the Enemy Act would again come into effect by virtue of a war between Germany and the United States. The statements made by Wilhelm von Opel were definitely against his pecuniary and pro-

3412 prietary interests in that Miss Firnhammer states that he considered all claims which he might have had against his son, Fritz von Opel, were gone. For the convenience of the Court, for a very clear enunciation of the rule that testimony of the type contained in Miss Firnhammer's affidavit is admissible as an exception to the hearsay rule, the Court's attention is directed to McKelvey on Evidence, 5th Ed., Sections 251 to 259.

2. The moving papers do establish that the purported evidence is newly discovered. Contrary to the statements of the defendant that in Miss Firnhammer's affidavit there is no statement from her as to when she first reported the alleged statement of Wilhelm von Opel to either Fritz or Margot von Opel, the Court's attention is directed to the affidavit of Miss Firnhammer taken on May 9, 1949 by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and attached to Defendant's Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Opposition to Plaintiff's Motion for a New Trial and marked Appendix A. It is quite clear from a reading of that affidavit that the first time she told any one about her knowledge of the case was subsequent to February, 1949. Plaintiff submits that the defendant is straining the language of Miss Firnhammer's affidavits to endeavor to draw its conclusion that there is nothing to indicate when her statements with respect to her knowledge of the facts of waiver were first brought to the attention of Fritz or Margot von Opel.

3. The testimony sought to be introduced is not purely cumulative and corroborative. The testimony sought to be introduced is, as set forth under point 1, supra, a declaration against interest by Wilhelm von Opel. The witness is a party who has no interest in the proceeding, whose testimony it is submitted must be given serious consideration. It is particularly important in the light of the fact that the court has stated in its opinion that there was no act or statement by Wilhelm von Opel to support a finding that a waiver had in fact taken place. While the testimony

3413 in some respects is cumulative it is nevertheless submitted that this court in the exercise of its discretion can consider such testimony, for when added to the testimony of Dr. Daniel Gros and the testimony of Director Wilhelm of the Reichbank and also plaintiff's exhibits 96, 97, 98, 99 and 101 it would constitute a preponderance of evidence in favor of a conclusion that a waiver had in fact been made. It would accordingly lead to a different result on that basis and plaintiff requests the court to hear such testimony.

4. Plaintiff has exercised due diligence in obtaining the testimony of Miss Firnhammer. Counsel for the plaintiff, Mr. Walter E. Gallagher, has filed herewith an affidavit setting forth the fact that it was only recently that Miss Firnhammer's evidence or the nature of her testimony was brought to his attention and contrary to the defendant's inference this is not the witness whose testimony was being considered when Mr. Gallagher stated to the Court in March that he intended to file a motion for a new trial predicated on newly discovered evidence. This Court is well aware of the norm in business and personal relationships and that when there are strained family circumstances, such circumstances pose tremendous difficulties even in ordinary situations let alone when exercising due diligence in seeking evidence. This is very politely put by Miss Firnhammer when she states in reference to Fritz and Margot von Opel (Appendix A) "They were not interested in my statement because they thought it was too complicated for me to understand." It is further submitted that prior to and during the time of the trial the documents, plaintiff's Exhibits 96, 97, 98, 99 and 101, together with the testimony of Director Wilhelm and Dr. Daniel Gros concerning said documents, would lead counsel and it is submitted any other party exercising due diligence to the conclusion that a waiver had been clearly shown and no other evidence would be needed. However, the Court having apparently, because of other circumstances, some doubt in this regard, 3414 found to the contrary. It is believed that the testimony of Miss Firnhammer would dispel any doubts in the Court's mind and affirm the testimony hereinbefore elicited thereby adding up to a preponderance of evidence for the plaintiff on this issue.

5. The proposed evidence is direct proof of a waiver by Wilhelm or Marta von Opel. Under the converse of this point the defendant breaks down its argument into two points: 1. That a license was required under German law. Without arguing this point again, inasmuch as the plaintiff through its experts has shown to the contrary, it is suggested that if the Court were to grant the motion for a new trial and arrived at a finding that a waiver had in fact been made, it would then be apropos for the Court to hear further from plaintiff's and defendant's experts with regard to the applicability of Swiss law and not German law to this situation. 2. That the affidavit of Miss Firnhammer relates only to the declarations of Wilhelm von Opel and not Marta. This Court is well aware of the fact, as evidenced by all of the testimony appearing in this case, that Wilhelm von Opel was the party making all of the decisions for both he and his wife Marta even though they held property on a community basis. In this respect, however, it is suggested to the Court that in addition, if it grants plaintiff's motion for a new trial for the purpose of taking the testimony of Miss Firnhammer, that the Court hear the testimony of Marta von Opel with respect to this waiver. The defendant's endeavor to distort Miss Firnhammer's affidavit on the ground that Wilhelm von Opel had several matters with the German Government is hardly worthy of comment. A reading of her affidavit clearly shows that the problem Wilhelm von Opel was discussing with her was the problem of the niessbrauch and that is the reason he had retained an attorney, Dr. Gros, and it was Dr. Gros who had succeeded in bringing negotiations with the German authorities to a favorable conclusion, namely affirmation of his position that he no longer had any claim against his son. The defendant further endeavors to make a point of the fact that at the time his deposition was taken 3415 Wilhelm von Opel was not questioned with respect to the waiver of the usufruct. The Court will recall that Mr. Burling endeavored to make much of this point during argument and went so far as to deliberately state that the entire story was made up by Fritz von Opel shortly before the trial. The absurdity of that statement and the failure of counsel for the defendant to thoroughly question Wilhelm von Opel as to any phases of this case as to which they took a different position from the plaintiff and now seek to place the burden of their shortcomings on the plaintiff is clearly manifest from a reading of the affidavits of Dr. Heinrich Kronstein and Mr. Richard J. Connor, which are attached hereto and which contain therein excerpts from statements of Fritz von Opel and Dr. Hans Frankenberg taken under oath by the Alien Property Custodian during 1946, long prior to the taking of the depositions in Wiesbaden.

Conclusion

On the basis of all the foregoing, it is submitted that this Court acting in equity should exercise its discretion and grant the plaintiff's motion for a new trial, hear the testimony of Miss Firnhammer and if the Court so desires, the testimony of Marta von Opel and thereafter, if the Court feels the plaintiff has by a preponderance of evidence shown a waiver, hear further testimony from the experts with respect to the applicability of foreign law, namely Swiss, to this issue.

AFFIDAVIT

I, WALTER E. GALLAGHER, having been first duly sworn do on oath depose and say:

In Point 4 of the Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Opposition to Plaintiff's Motion for a New Trial, the defendant page 12 of said memorandum makes reference to a statement that I made to the Court at pages 3164, 3178, to the effect that I intended to file a motion for new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence. The defendant infers from this statement that the evidence to which I referred was the testimony of Eleonore Firnhammer-Hoch whose affidavit was filed in support of our Motion for New Trial.

I state quite categorically that this witness and her testimony is not the newly discovered evidence to which I made reference during the course of my previous appearances in this matter. That testimony was testimony of an entirely different person. After investigation I concluded that the evidence to be elicited would not add any material element to the plaintiff's proof and accordingly determined not to use this testimony as a predicate for a motion for new trial.

The existence of Miss Firnhammer-Hoch and the nature of her testimony was not brought to my attention until very recently, and as soon as I had an opportunity to check into the contents of that testimony I requested that an affidavit be obtained from her and filed it with this court in support of our Motion for New Trial, acting with full diligence to the best of my ability.

Accordingly, I wish to point out that the inference 3417 that the Defendant endeavors to draw as to laches on my part with respect to this witness' testimony is completely unfounded.

AFFIDAVIT

I, RICHARD J. CONNOR, having been first duly sworn do on oath depose and say:

As an associate of the law offices of Gallagher, Osheroff, Connor and Butler, 821 Fifteenth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., I have acted as attorney for the Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, A. G., since the year 1945. In 1946, in cooperation with the office of the Alien Property Custodian, I agreed to the taking of the testimony of Mr. Fritz von Opel under oath in New York City on October 17, 1946 without the formality of subpoena or deposition provided for.

At that time during the course of the taking of the testimony of said Fritz von Opel and one Dr. Hans Frankenberg, the following testimony was elicited:

By Mr. von Opel—pages 56-60 of official transcript:

"Q. Well, as I understand it, according to your view, your father retained nothing. Why didn't he just give you the shares outright, rather than have this agreement? A. He wanted, so to say, protection in case, if he would get what we call—How do you say it?—if he would become destitute, he then wanted a legal claim on me.

Q. Now, however, as you point out, he actually had no claim because he had not pursued his rights under the agreement? A. Yes, sir; there never was any "niessbrauch" established. All my father had was a claim against me personally; and this claim he renounced in the middle thirties.

Q. Can you fix it any better than that; that is, as to the year? A. In 1935 I offered my father to establish the "niessbrauch" right. That would have meant that I had to transfer to him the 100 shares of Uebersee stock, and also, my claim against the Uebersee amounting to about 11,000,000 Swiss francs.

My father refused to have anything to do with it for various reasons, the main reason being that there was a very strict Foreign Exchange Law in Germany, and my father thought he should not have any dealings under those Foreign Exchange Regulations.

3419 The breach of some of them was punishable by death.

It was a very strict and ruthlessly-enforced law. That is the reason that he gave up not only the "niessbrauch", which he never possessed, but also any claim he might have had against me.

Q. Now, did he ever write to you outlining this release? A. He went even further than that; he went to the German Government.

Q. Now, do you know which particular Department? A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. All right. A. He first wrote to the local branch of the Foreign Exchange Control Office in Wiesbaden.

Mr. Worthington: Was it Devisen-Stelle?

The Witness: Yes; a branch of the Devisen-Stelle. I think it was called the Collector of Internal Revenue who was in charge of those local offices.

By Mr. Looney:

Q. Was he located in Frankfort, or Wiesbaden? A. Wiesbaden; from there his request was given to the superiors in Kassel.

From there it was forwarded to the highest authority in Berlin, a man by the name of Reichbank Direktor Wilhelm.

Q. Do you know his first name? Wilhelm's first name? A. No; Wilhelm was his last name.

Q. Do you happen to know the address, by any chance? A. No, sir. He was the head of the Reichbank in Berlin or let us rather say, he was head of the Foreign Exchange Division of the Reichbank. They had several Direktors.

Q. What happened when it got there? A. They, after long and thorough discussion, admitted to my father's lawyer that no "niessbrauch" existed; that my father had no claim against me, but that he had a patriotic duty to get Foreign Exchange for Germany and that they would put him under so-called "political pressure".

Q. Who was your father's lawyer at that time? A. My father's lawyer at the time was Dr. Daniel Gros.

Q. Do you know where he resided, or where he had his office in Berlin? A. His office was in Berlin. It was Budapest Strasse. I guess it was 35, if I remember 3420 correctly.

Q. Do you happen to know his home address? Sometimes they are bombed out and you might find one and not the other. A. He is now living in Wiesbaden, Germany, in the American Zone. He left Berlin.

Q. Did you participate in any of these conferences with the Reichbank? A. No; I only was, of course, in touch with Dr. Gros.

Q. Now, what happened after they suggested to your father that he would produce some foreign exchange. A. They applied political pressure to the person of the local Gauleiter Strenger, in Frankfort.

Q. Do you happen to know his first name? A. No, sir.

Q. Some of them we still have in custody. A. I hope so.

Anyhow, Dr. Gros and I anticipated such moves, and to delay any action, I had offered to have a public accountant firm, like Haskins & Sells, check into my financial situation.

I was sure I had no liquid assets, but the obligations; but I tried to forestall any tough actions by way of the local Gauleiter. But the Reichbank did not accept the offer, and nothing came out of it.

Q. Now this letter which your father wrote, which originated at Wiesbaden, did he ever receive any answer from the Reichbank. A. Dr. Gros was ordered to appear in Dr. Wilhelm's office in the summer of 1937; and there Mr. Wilhelm told him that they had no legal rights, but that they would apply political pressure. They did not give that in writing to Dr. Gros, but Dr. Gros in turn, confirmed the contents of the discussion in a letter to Mr. Wilhelm.

Q. Did anything further happen after that, in connection with this request? A. No.

Q. Did your father ever have to pay anything to the Reichbank? A. No; they were after foreign exchange. My father had no foreign exchange, and he could not pay and he did not pay anything."

By Dr. Frankenberg, pages 41 to 43 of official tran-3421 script:

Q. And you say that somebody imposed a fine on Wilhelm because of his interest in the usufruct, just so much as you remember of it? A. I do not know whether the fine was in connection with the usufruct, or much more with the fact that the Nazis minded very much that he turned over such a large amount of foreign funds to his son; and they wanted him to recuperate part of it, or whatever it was, or to cause or induce his son to give some part of it back, or something like that. That I would not remember; but Fritz would remember that better than I, I guess. What I do know is finally he received the permission of the Reichbank to renounce the gift, this usufruct agreement; and that was very hard to get, and he got it.

Q. Now, do you know, would that Reichbank be some special branch? A. At Berlin.

Q. At Berlin? A. In charge was—Fritz tried to trace it already—in charge was Mr. Wilhelm of the Reichbank.

Q. Mr. Wilhelm? A. Wilhelm, who unfortunately died. But furthermore, there was in charge his lawyer, who still is alive, and who can testify to this effect.

Q. Who is that? A. That is Mr. Daniel Gros.

Q. Where does Mr. Daniel Gros live, as you knew it last? A. I think he is in Berlin.

Q. In Berlin? A. Yes.

Q. You think I will be able to locate all these people after I get over there. A. Sure.

Q. But if I know the names and the people and the events, it is much easier to find them? A. I am sure everybody will be delighted if you could do so.

Q. So that the records of the Reichbank in Berlin for 1936 should reflect this transaction. A. It was not any transaction, I mean, you see, they just gave an opinion I would say, an opinion to the effect that he has no—they permitted him to state that he has no income out of the gift agreement whatsoever, and so on and so forth.

Q. Now, in order to get that, he had to pay some-3422 body something? A. Well, maybe it has to have been done in this particular instance. That I do not recall. But anyhow, I think this man Gros, he can produce some facts regarding negotiations with the Reichbank.

Q. Do you remember his first name—Mr. Wilhelm? A. No, Wilhelm is the last name of the Reichbank man who died.

Q. Daniel? A. Daniel Gros.

Q. Have you any idea where he lives, or his place of business? A. Fritz will know that."

The portions of the statements taken on October 17, 1946 by the Office of the Alien Property Custodian which are set forth above show clearly that the Department of Justice was on full notice that the Uebersee Finanz-Korporation would take the position that Wilhelm and Marta von Opel had waived and terminated all of their rights in connection with a certain gift agreement dated October 5, 1931 between Wilhelm and Marta von Opel on the one hand and Fritz von Opel their son, on the other.

During the course of the taking of the depositions at Wiesbaden, Germany in September, 1947 Dr. Daniel Gros, an attorney representing Mr. Wilhelm von Opel, testified in connection with the waiver of Wilhelm and Marta von Opel of their interest in the proceeds of the gift of October 5, 1931. Dr. Gros testified concerning Plaintiff's Exhibits Nos. 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101. These exhibits clearly establish the steps taken by Wilhelm and Marta von Opel through their attorney Dr. Daniel Gros to effectuate a waiver of their interest in the proceeds of the gift. Depositions of Wilhelm and Marta von Opel, among others, were also taken in Wiesbaden on or about September 5, 1947. I believe Wilhelm von Opel was present at all times during the taking of depositions in Wiesbaden in connection with the present case. The Department of Justice was represented by Mr. Myron C. Baum and Mr. Joseph Laufer who cross-examined both Wilhelm and Marta von Opel as well as Dr. Daniel Gros.

The circumstances and conditions under which the 3423 Wiesbaden depositions were taken were extremely difficult from the standpoint of accommodations, transportation, court reporting, etc. Many documents were identified during the course of these depositions. I did not believe it necessary to review the testimony of Mr. Fritz von Opel or Dr. Hans Frankenberg for there was no doubt in my mind as counsel, that the Government had been clearly apprised of the fact that a renunciation or waiver of all the rights of Wilhelm and Marta von Opel was an issue which would be raised by Uebersee in the trial of the matter. The Department of Justice representatives had ample opportunity to interrogate both Wilhelm and Marta von Opel in this respect. If there was any doubt in their minds as to the facts set forth in the transcript of September, 1946 hereinbefore referred to or as to the facts set forth in Plaintiff's Exhibits 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, either Mr. Laufer or Mr. Baum had ample opportunity to interrogate Wilhelm or Marta von Opel. Both parties were available at all times for such interrogation and as previously stated I believe Mr. Wilhelm von Opel was present at all times during the taking of the testimony in Wiesbaden. I know that Wilhelm von Opel was present during the taking of the testimony of Dr. Gros with respect to Exhibits 96 through 101 above mentioned.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, ss.:

AFFIDAVIT

I, Dr. Heinrich Kronstein, having been first duly sworn do on oath depose and say:

I was retained by the Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, A. G. in the year 1947 to serve as an interpreter, translator and German law expert. As part of my services I traveled to Germany in the company of Mr. Richard J. Connor, Counsel for the Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, A. G., and participated in the taking of depositions in Wiesbaden, Germany on September 5, 1947, et seq.

Prior to my trip in the company of Mr. Connor to Germany, statements had been taken under oath by the Office of the Alien Property Custodian from Mr. Fritz von Opel and Dr. Hans Frankenberg, in New York City on October 17, 1946. I was familiar with the transcript of the statements given by Mr. Fritz von Opel, having read a copy of said transcript. In the course of that proceeding as the transcript reflects, there appears the following language:

"Q. Well, as I understand it, according to your view, your father retained nothing. Why didn't he just give you the shares outright, rather than have this agreement?

A. He wanted, so to say, protection in case, if he would get what we call—How do you say it?—if he would become destitute, he then wanted a legal claim on me.

As advisor to Mr. Connor I did not think it necessary to suggest to him that he repeat the same or similar questions to each and every witness. However, it cannot be doubted that the issue of the waiver had been raised or that the Department of Justice had been on notice that such an issue was in the case. It appeared to me that there was no reason why the Department of Justice representatives could not have interrogated both Wilhelm and Marta von Opel in this respect. They were available for such an interrogation at all times.

Defendant's Additional Memorandum in Opposition to Plaintiff's Motion for a New Trial, Filed May 26, 1949

3430 The plaintiff, on May 23, 1949, has filed a memorandum and additional affidavits in support of its motion for a new trial. Defendant respectfully submits the following in reply thereto:

1. Plaintiff states that the proffered testimony would be admissible as a declaration against interest by Wilhelm von Opel. As stated in defendant's original memorandum, an examination of Mrs. Firnhammer's affidavit clearly demonstrates that these purported statements were made in the context of proceedings against Wilhelm von Opel by the German government authorities, and were thus an attempt by Wilhelm von Opel to relieve himself of any form of liability in such proceedings. As such, statements were clearly self-serving and in no way declarations against interest.

2. The plaintiff still has not established that the purported evidence is newly discovered. Mrs. Firnhammer's statement (Appendix A to defendant's original memorandum) shows that Fritz von Opel, at least, had an idea that the witness might have knowledge of the relevant facts. This statement still stands. Plaintiff now files an affidavit by Mr. Gallagher, its attorney, who says he filed the motion as soon as he knew of the evidence.

3431 Plaintiff continues wholly to ignore the fact that the burden of due diligence is on the plaintiff and its representatives and not only on its attorneys. Consequently, any statement by Mr. Gallagher that he exercised due diligence falls far short of a showing that the evidence is newly discovered or that there was due diligence by the plaintiff.

3. Plaintiff admits that the testimony sought to be offered is cumulative and does not deny that it is corroborative of previous testimony (page 3 of plaintiff's memorandum). This, in and of itself, should be sufficient ground for a denial of this motion, since the cases cited in defendant's original memorandum show that one of the requirements which must be met before a motion for a new trial may properly be granted is that the proffered evidence is not corroborative or cumulative.

4. Plaintiff seeks to excuse its lack of due diligence by referring to plaintiff's exhibits 96, 97, 98, 99 and 101 as leading anyone to the conclusion that a waiver had been clearly shown. Exhibits 96, 98 and 101 do not speak of a waiver at all, but refer to arguments which had been advanced that no usufruct had ever been created and that the usufruct was therefore legally invalid. Exhibit 97, dated October 8, 1935, states that the parties "intend to take action" and "to declare explicitly, in a supplement to be drawn up to the deed of gift" that the usufruct was void, but nowhere states that a waiver had been made. Exhibit 99 cited by the plaintiff states as a fact, "The parents have an in personam claim to the establishment of a usufruct." This document is dated February 8, 1936, considerably after any waiver is alleged to have taken place. All these documents were executed while the gold case was pending in this country, in which case plaintiff represented that a usufruct was in existence. Plaintiff can hardly be permitted to be relieved of its failure to use due diligence in the face of such adverse evidence.

5. Defendant, in his original memorandum, pointed out that the purported evidence, even if admissible, would not show a waiver by Marta von Opel, since the alleged new witness does not claim to know of any declara-
3432 tions as to waiver by Marta. Plaintiff seeks to meet this by stating that from all of the testimony in this case, the Court is well aware that Wilhelm von

Opel made all the decisions for his wife. There is no such testimony in this record, nor is there any testimony that, under German law or any other law, Wilhelm von Opel could have waived property rights belonging to his wife.

Retreating to a secondary position, plaintiff then states that if this motion is granted, the Court should also hear the testimony of Marta von Opel on this matter. Marta von Opel has testified in this action by deposition, which has been read into the record, and her testimony contains no statement whatsoever as to waiver. Is the plaintiff now seeking to claim that testimony from Marta von Opel as to waiver is newly discovered evidence which would justify a new trial?

6. Defendant in its original memorandum and at the trial pointed out to the Court that neither Wilhelm nor Marta von Opel gave any testimony whatsoever as to a waiver having been made. Plaintiff now makes the disingenuous argument that its failure to elicit such testimony is excused by the fact that the defendant's counsel should have elicited such testimony. Plaintiff is thus asserting that defendant's attorneys should have elicited testimony to attempt to support plaintiff's case. Such a proposition is sufficiently transparent as to require no further comment.

Plaintiff further submits an affidavit by Heinrich Kronstein who states that he acted as advisor to Mr. Connor in taking depositions of Wilhelm and Marta von Opel in Germany. Referring to the absence of testimony from Wilhelm and Marta von Opel as to waiver, Mr. Kronstein makes the following justification, "As advisor to Mr. Connor I did not think it necessary to suggest to him that he repeat the same or similar questions to each and every witness." In other words, plaintiff's advisor is now making the almost incredible assertion that he did not think it necessary to ask Wilhelm and Marta von Opel, the holders of the usufruct, whether they had waived their usufruct. This is an interesting proposition since 3433 the plaintiff itself had asserted in the Gold case that the usufruct was in existence as late as May 25, 1936. Again, plaintiff is complaining that defendant's attorneys did not attempt to support plaintiff's case, when plaintiff itself failed to do so.

Plaintiff, in its memorandum, has seen fit to go outside the record in this case and to quote at length certain passages from an interrogation of Fritz von Opel conducted informally in 1946. The purpose of this is to show that defendant had knowledge that waiver was an issue in this case. Defendant's previous knowledge as to the issues is, of course, immaterial. In any event, the testimony quoted out of the mouth of Fritz von Opel states that Wilhelm von Opel refused to have anything to do with a usufruct and that a usufruct never existed. Plaintiff also refers to the testimony by deposition of Dr. Gros in Germany which is also not in evidence. If the Court wishes to examine such testimony, it will find that at no place in that testimony did Dr. Gros state that Wilhelm von Opel had waived a usufruct, but referred only to arguments that the usufruct was allegedly invalid. His subsequent actions on this matter, purportedly evidenced by plaintiff's exhibits 96, 97, 98, 99, 100 and 101, which were identified at the time of that deposition, are similarly lacking in probative value, since, as previously pointed out, exhibits 96, 98 and 101 do not refer to a waiver at all, plaintiff's exhibit 97 refers to a waiver to be executed in the future (after October 8, 1935) and plaintiff's exhibit 99 of February 8, 1936 and 100 of March 11, 1936 refer to the existence of a claim for the establishment of a usufruct. All of this, of course, is to be read in connection with plaintiff's assertions as to the existence of a usufruct in the Gold case. These assertions completely negate the purported evidence referred to by plaintiff.

7. Defendant respectfully renews his request that 3434 the motion for a new trial be denied in all respects.

Memorandum of District Court Denying Motion For New Trial, Filed June 16, 1949

3435 On May 5, 1949, judgment was entered in the above-entitled cause in favor of the defendant on the merits, with the provision that defendant have and recover from plaintiff costs and have execution therefor. On the same day plaintiff filed a motion for a new trial on newly discovered evidence. On May 9, 1949, defendant filed a motion for an order requiring plaintiff to furnish security in the amount of Three Thousand Dollars for costs which might be awarded to defendant in this case and from an order staying plaintiff from taking further proceedings until such security is furnished.

Plaintiff's motion for a new trial will be denied.

As to defendant's motion to require plaintiff to give security for costs, it appears the Code of Law for the District of Columbia, in giving this Court discretion to require security for costs, deals with a time before, but not after, judgment. While the language refers to serving a notice for security for costs at any time, the remedy provided for not giving such security is by way of non-suit or dismissal of plaintiff's case, which actions may be accomplished only before entry of final judgment. Moreover, if it be granted this Court has discretion to order such security, in my judgment it should not exercise such discretion at this late date. Motion for security for costs accordingly will be overruled.

45 Mr. Gallagher: If Your Honor please, the depositions we are about to read are a little lengthy; and, for the convenience of the Court, we would like to suggest that Mr. Ingoldsby sit in the witness chair and give the responses to the questions that are put.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer the deposition, in part, of Wilhelm von Opel, of Wiesbaden, Germany, taken in this matter on September 5, 1947, at Wiesbaden, Ger-46 many.

The Court: Whose deposition is it?

Mr. Gallagher: The deposition of Mr. Wilhelm von Opel, the father of Fritz von Opel.

Mr. Burling: We concede the admissibility of that deposition, Your Honor, on the ground that Mr. Wilhelm von Opel is dead.

The Court: You concede it?

Mr. Burling: I don't concede the admissibility of every part.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Gallagher (reading): "Afternoon Session, 1:00 P.M."

"A. The brother who died in the war intended to give me his whole share but I insisted that in the interest of the unity of the family every brother receive the same share.

"A. When the principal sale was made it was agreed that the remaining shares shall be sold too. It was agreed at a certain price in case I insisted on the sale and another price in case General Motors insisted on the sale.

"Q. In other words, you had an agreement which gave General Motors an option to buy at a certain price?

"A. Yes I did.

"Q. And also an agreement that you could compel General Motors to buy at a certain price?

"A. Yes.

"Q. At the time the shares were sold in 1929 did General Motors want you and your brother Fritz to retain some of the shares?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Can you explain why General Motors wanted you and your brother to keep some of the shares?

Mr. Burling: There is an objection to that, your Honor. That calls for an opinion of the witness as 56 to the state of mind of the General Motors officials. How could the witness know how General Motors wanted it?

The Court: Gentlemen, I think in this case, unless the testimony adopts a very remote line, I will hear it all the way through. I think that would be of advantage to Mr. Gallagher in his case, and to you in yours.

In any event, where we get off into any completely remote subject, of course I will deal with it. But where we come to these little points, like that, I am just as familiar with that point as I can be.

Mr. Burling: I am sure Your Honor is.

The Court: And it doesn't make any imprint on my mind. So you needn't worry about those matters.

Mr. Burling: There is one matter that counsel and I will have to have an argument on, Your Honor.

The Court: You won't reach that tonight, will you?

Mr. Gallagher: I think we will reach that rather soon. It is going to come out of this deposition, Your Honor.

The Court: Within the next ten or fifteen minutes, do you think we will reach it?

Mr. Gallagher: I think we will.

The Court: Then reach up to that point, and then we will stop.

Mr. Gallagher: All right, sir.

57 Mr. Ingoldsby (reading answer to the last question read from the deposition):—

"A. General Motors was very much interested to accomplish that we retain an interest in the firm. I remained chairman of the Board of Supervisors and my brother remained a member of the Board of Supervisors. We helped to further develop their enterprise."

Mr. Gallagher: I now ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 3 a photostatic copy of a letter from Wilhelm von Opel to the National City Bank. It is stipulated by the parties that it is a true and correct copy of the letter.

(The photostatic copy of the letter was accordingly marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 3.)

Mr. Gallagher: And I now ask that the German photostat copy be marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 3-A.

(The copy of the letter in German was accordingly marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 3-A.)

(Resuming from the deposition, Mr. Gallagher reading the questions, and Mr. Ingoldsby the answers):

"Mr. Connor: Mr. von Opel, I will show you a document addressed to the National City Bank and signed by you and ask you to read that if you will. That is, look it over.

"A. Yes.

58 "Q. That is not your written signature, is it, Mr. von Opel?

"A. No, it is not.

"Q. Is this a copy of a letter which you sent to the National City Bank?

"A. I remember that I wrote such a letter.

"Q. Before you sent this letter to the National City Bank you had entered into an agreement for the sale of the shares with General Motors, had you not?

"A. When the principal sale was made my brother and I had been asked to retain a certain interest in the firm. It is provided either in the principal agreement or in a supplementary agreement that we should retain the shares.

"Q. Do you know where the original copies of those agreements are?

"A. I already looked for this contract. I had to evacuate the office in which I worked for a long time within a period of two and one-half hours. I don't know where the contracts are. I couldn't find this contract although the period of evacuation was extended to one whole day."

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 3 and Plaintiff's Exhibit 3-A in evidence.

The Court: Very well.

59 (The documents heretofore marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 3 and 3-A were accordingly received in evidence.)

(The reading from the deposition was resumed):

"Q. Together with this letter of April 11, 1929 you did send shares numbered from one to six hundred of Adam Opel, A.G. to the National City Bank, did you not?

"A. I remember that such a thing happened."

"Q. After you sent the shares of stock to the National City Bank in April, 1929, did those shares of stock remain with the bank until 1931?

"A. Yes, as far as I know.

"Q. Can you read any English at all, Mr. von Opel?

"A. It is very difficult for me to read English. I might realize what the general meaning is."

Mr. Gallagher: I now ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 4 the power of attorney given to Fritz by his father. It has been admitted by the defendant that this is a true and correct copy.

(The copy of power of attorney was accordingly marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 4.)

Mr. Gallagher: And I also ask to have marked as 60 Plaintiff's Exhibit 4-A a copy of the certificate of acknowledgement by the counsel, also dated the same date.

(The copy of certificate of acknowledgement was accordingly marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 4-A.)

Mr. Gallagher: I believe, Mr. Ingoldsby, there is no pending question, but there is another answer after the identification.

(The reading from the deposition was then resumed):

"A. I am sure that this document exists also in German.

"Q. If such a document exists in German, do you know where it is?

"A. I don't know. I have no idea where it might be but I remember that such a paper has been executed.

"Q. Do you recollect that you executed such a document and gave it to your son Fritz?

"A. I remember that I gave a power of attorney to my son to act on my behalf.

"Q. And do you recollect that the power of attorney you gave to your son was dated on or about October 6, 1931?

"A. There is too much time elapsed between the date of this transaction and this day that I could be sure of the date but since our transaction took place in 1931 I 61 assume that the date on the document is correct.

"Q. Is it your recollection that this appears to be an English translation of the power of attorney you gave to your son Fritz some time during the year 1931?

"A. Yes, I gave my son a power of attorney entitling him to deal with the shares however he liked."

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer the documents, Plaintiff's Exhibit 4 and Plaintiff's 4-A.

The Court: Very well.

(The documents heretofore marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 4 and 4-A were accordingly received in evidence.)

Mr. Gallagher: I now ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 5 the original of a gift agreement dated October 5, 1931, and I ask leave of the Court to substitute therefor a photostatic copy of that document.

The Court: All right.

(Copies of the gift agreement were accordingly marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibits 5 and 5-A, in English and in German, respectively.)

(The reading from the deposition was resumed as follows):

"Q. Mr. von Opel, did you and Mrs. von Opel ever make a gift to your son Fritz?

62 "A. Yes.

"Q. Do you remember when this gift was made?

"A. In the year 1931.

"Q. In connection with that gift, was a document drawn?

"A. Yes, a paper was executed.

"Q. Do you remember who drew that document?

"A. A document was re-written by Wronker-Flatow. It was originally drafted by the attorney Hachenburg but Hachenburg's draft was in another form.

"Q. Do you know where the original document of the gift agreement is at this time?

"A. I looked for it but I did not find it.

"Q. So the answer to the question is that you do not know where it is?

"A. Yes.

"Q. I will show you a document bearing the date Ruesselsheim, the 5th of October 1931, then I will ask some questions about it. To the best of your recollection is this a copy of the original gift agreement?

"A. Yes."

Mr. Gallagher: And I now offer the original gift agreement from which this copy was made, and which the defendant has heretofore admitted was a true and correct copy of the original.

63 The Court: It may be received.

(The documents heretofore marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibits 5 and 5-A were accordingly received in evidence.)

Mr. Gallagher: I now direct your attention to page 13, Mr. Ingoldsby, to the line beginning "Now to go back to 1929", after the offer of the Exhibit 5, at the middle of the page.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Yes.

(The reading from the deposition was accordingly resumed):

"Q. Now to go back to 1929 when Adam Opel, A.G. was sold to General Motors, was your son Fritz happy or unhappy about that sale?

"A. Very unhappy.

"Q. Can you briefly explain why?

"A. He was the man who was able to continue the management of the firm. But a number of prince consorts were brought in. They all wanted to play the general manager.

"Q. Just prior to the time the plant was sold to General Motors was Fritz the general manager of the whole plant?

"A. He was one of the managers of the whole plant.

"Q. How many managers were there?

"A. Three.

"Q. After the Opel Works was sold to General
64 Motors in 1929, where did Fritz go?

"A. He went to the United States.

"Q. Did he go with General Motors?

"A. Yes, he did.

"Q. And did he work in some of the General Motors plants in the United States?

"A. Yes, he worked as a volunteer in several of the plants.

"Q. About how long did he work for General Motors in America?

"A. For about three-fourths of a year.

"Q. And then was he sent to Antwerp by General Motors?

"A. Yes.

"Q. In their Export Division?

"A. Yes, he was sent there to learn their export business.

"Q. I asked a little while ago why Fritz was unhappy about the sale to General Motors in 1929?

"A. He expected to become the leading man in the family firm. He felt that for all practical purposes I had sold his future and his position.

"Q. Did Fritz' unhappiness have anything to do with your making the gift to him in 1931?

"A. Because of the fact that Fritz was so unhappy 65 I made him the gift of the General Motors shares to enable him to establish a position in the United States for himself."

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, the argument that probably will ensue later is a few pages further over. But, noticing the time, I wondered if Your Hohor desired to adjourn before reaching it.

The Court: You go ahead, until you reach that point.

Mr. Gallagher: All right, sir.

I now ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 6 a copy of a letter from Fritz von Opel, attorney in fact, to General Motors, dated October 17, 1931.

(The copy of letter dated October 17, 1931 was accordingly marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 6.)

(The reading from the deposition then proceeded, as follows):

"Q. Do you know whether or not Fritz von Opel, as your attorney in fact, exercised the option to sell the Opel shares to General Motors?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Do you recollect what year it was that Fritz exercised that power?

"A. I am not quite sure, it might be 1931 or 1934.

"Mr. Connor: I will ask Dr. Kronstein to give 66 you the substance of the document which I have dated October 17, 1931 purporting to be a letter from Fritz von Opel, attorney in fact to General Motors. I will ask you if you have any reason to believe the option was exercised on any other date than that?

"A. I don't believe so."

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 6, which it has been admitted was received or sent on that date.

(The copy of letter heretofore marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 6 was accordingly received in evidence.)

(The following question and answer were then read):

"Q. In connection with the gift, Mr. von Opel, did you cause your son to discuss the matter with Dr. Max Hachenburg of Mannheim?

"A. Yes."

Mr. Gallagher: I will ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 7 a letter dated October 3, 1931, from Dr. Hachenburg to Dr. Wilhelm von Opel.

(The letter was accordingly marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibits 7 and 7-A.)

(The reading from the deposition was resumed):

"I will show you this document purporting to be a letter dated October 3, 1931 from Dr. Hachenburg to you 67 and I will ask you if such a letter was received by you.

"A. I remember this letter. I am only sorry that I have not followed the advice given in this letter. I did receive the letter.

"Q. Did you receive it in the regular course of mail?

"A. I believe I received this letter by mail."

Mr. Gallagher: I offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 7 in evidence.

(The documents heretofore marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 7 and 7-A were accordingly received in evidence.)

Mr. Gallagher: I ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 8 a document purporting to be an enclosure in the letter of October 3, from Dr. Hachenburg to Wilhelm von Opel.

(The document was accordingly marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 8.)

(The following question and answer was then read):

"Q. I will show you this document marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 8 and ask you if that was an enclosure in the letter of October 3, from Dr. Hachenburg to you?

"A. Yes.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 8 in evidence.

68 (The document heretofore marked for identification Plaintiff's Exhibit 8 was accordingly received in evidence.)

(The following question was then read from the deposition):

"Q. The first paragraph of Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 7 recites in substance that the day before October 3, that is, October 2, Dr. Hachenburg had a long discussion with your son and gave him an outline of the contract."

Mr. Gallagher: I will now ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 9 this document.

(The document referred to was accordingly marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibits 9 and 9-A.)

(The following question and answer were then read from the deposition):

"Q. I will now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 9 and ask you if at or about that time your son Fritz von Opel showed you that outline?

"A. I cannot remember."

Mr. Gallagher: I will now ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 10.

(The document referred to was accordingly marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 10.)

(The following question and answer were then 69 read from the deposition):

"Q. I will now show you another document purporting to be a letter dated October 5, 1931 from Dr. Max Hachenburg to you and ask you if you received such a letter in the regular course of mail?

"A. I remember that I received this letter."

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibits 9 and 10 in evidence.

(The documents heretofore identified as Plaintiff's Exhibits 9, 9-A, and 10 were accordingly received in evidence.)

(The reading from the deposition then proceeded as follows):

"Q. Although you had your son Fritz discuss this gift matter with Dr. Hachenburg, am I correct in my understanding that Mr. Wronker-Flatow made the document in its final form?

"A. Yes.

"Q. It is a fact, is it not, that Fritz von Opel sold the 600 shares of Adam Opel stock which you gave him?

"A. Yes it is.

"Q. Yesterday you testified that Fritz had sold the six hundred shares of Adam Opel stock which you gave him.

Do you know what he did with the proceeds of that 70 sale?

"A. From conversations I learned that he acquired oil wells, participated in a brewery and acquired a gasoline refinery. He seemed to be interested in the gasoline refinery because he wanted to transform the oil into gasoline, I was told as time went on. I haven't seen anything with my own eyes.

"Q. Did you ever direct Fritz as to what he should do with the proceeds of the sale of Adam Opel stock?

"A. Never did. I discuss this matter with him.

"Q. Then, it is the fact, is it not, that you never undertook to control in any way what he should do with the proceeds of the sale of the stock?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Did you have anything to do with Fritz' investment in the Uebersee Finanz Korporation?

"A. I never had anything to do with that.

"Q. Did you ever direct Fritz to place the securities which he bought with the proceeds of the Opel stock into a holding company of any kind?

"A. Never.

"Q. Did you ever have any communication with Adler and Company, the Swiss banking firm?

"A. As far as I remember there was a director whose name was Dr. Frankenburg. I was familiar with him from Frankfurt. Whether I exchanged letters I do not 71 remember. I do not believe that, no, no. I exchanged letters with Dr. Frankenburg of a personal character but not of a business character.

"Q. Did you ever have any business letter communication with the firm of Adler and Company itself?

"A. I cannot remember.

"Q. Were you ever a director of the Uebersee Finanz Korporation?

"A. No.

"Q. Did you ever own any stock in the Uebersee Finanz Korporation?

"A. No.

"Q. Did you ever, to the best of your recollection, have any business letter communication with the Uebersee Finanz Korporation?

"A. No.

"Q. To refresh your recollection, Mr. von Opel, I will call your attention to three items which appear on the books of the Uebersee Finanz Korporation and will ask you about each one of them. The books appear to show that on or about 4 October 1934 that there was paid to you through Uebersee at the direction of your son the sum of five-hundred and nine Swiss francs.

"(Mr. von Opel asked if this was paid to him in Switzerland and Mr. Connor stated that the books didn't 72 show.)

"Mr. von Opel: I received money from my son several times. He gave me a stag as a gift for shooting in Hungary and he paid for this. He financed my trip with francs to South America.

"Q. In reference to the South American trip, is it your recollection that you got that payment through the Rotterdamische Bankvereiniging?

"A. I have no idea from where the money came.

"Q. Do you remember approximately the amount of the advance which Fritz made in connection with your South American trip?

"A. I don't know the exact amount but I assume it was about 10,000 to 20,000 Reichsmarks computed in German currency.

"Q. When you made this trip to South America, can you recollect the year?

"A. I was in South America three times.

"Q. Was one of those trips during the year 1935, do you recollect?

"A. About this time. It was after my world trip which was about 1932.

"Q. Do you recollect when you were on this shooting trip in Hungary, Mr. von Opel?

"A. I was in Hungary repeatedly. I was in Hun-73 gary about five times for hunting purposes.

"Q. To refresh your recollection, I will call your attention to the fact that the books of Uebersee show that apparently about 1934, 509 Swiss francs or the equivalent was paid to you in Paris. Do you recollect that?

"A. No.

"Q. Have you ever seen any of the books of the Uebersee Finanz Korporation?

"A. Never, no.

"Q. Did you ever have any arrangement of any kind with Uebersee Finanz Korporation in which they would make advances to you?

"A. No."

Mr. Gallagher: At this time I direct your attention to page 25, at the top of that page—

"Mr. Connor: I wish, Dr. Kronstein, that you would advise the witness I am going to shift to another subject at least for awhile."

Now we have a number of exhibits here, Your Honor.

The Court: A number of exhibits?

Mr. Gallagher: To be identified and marked again.

The Court: Is there any objection to these?

Mr. Gallagher: No, I don't believe there is.

The Court: Perhaps this is a good place to stop.
74 I will have to get a couple of opinions out between now and tomorrow morning. So until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

(Accordingly, at 4:10 p.m., the trial was adjourned until tomorrow morning, Thursday, December 9, 1948, at 10 o'clock.)

* * * * *

The Deputy Clerk: Ueberse Finanz-Korporation v. Clark.

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, I would like to present to the Court Mr. Michael J. Kenny, member of the bar of the District, who is associated with us.

The Court: All right.

Deposition of WILHELM VON OPEL (Resumed)

(Reading from the deposition was resumed, Mr. Gallagher reading the questions and Mr. Ingoldsby, on the witness stand, reading the answers, as follows):

Mr. Gallagher: I direct your attention to page 30, the middle of the page, commencing with the language—

"Mr. Connor: I will ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit #24 a copy of a document entitled 'History of the Gift' dated September 18, 1933. I will ask to have the witness read Plaintiff's Exhibit #24. Is that a memorandum from your files?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Did you make it on the date shown?

"A. About this date. I cannot say if it was one-half day earlier or not.

"Q. Are the statements in that memorandum true?

"A. Yes."

Mr. Gallagher: I offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 24 in 78 evidence.

The Court: They will be received, unless there is objection.

(The document was accordingly received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 24.)

(The reading from the deposition was resumed):

"Q. I ask that the witness take a look at the fifth paragraph of Plaintiff's Exhibit #5. The gift agreement makes reference to 'Niessbrauch', doesn't it?

"A. Yes.

"Q. What did you intend by the provision concerning the 'Niessbrauch'?

"A. I intended to accomplish that my son takes care of me if I should suffer financial breakdown and have no money any more.

"Q. Did you ever intend to ask your son for any money while you had enough to support yourself?

"A. I never intended that.

"Q. Did you ever intend to ask him to do any more than provide for your and your wife's support when you had no money?

"A. No.

"Q. Up to this time have you ever asked your son to give you any part of the income from the property which you gave him?

"A. No.

79 "Q. Have you adequate property at this time to support your wife and yourself?

"A. Thanks be to God, yes.

"Q. Mr. von Opel, I believe you stated that your age is 77 years, is my recollection correct?

"A. I am 76 years old.

"Q. Now within the last two or three months have you been ill?

"A. Yes. I was sick seven weeks ago.

"Q. What illness did you have at that time?

"A. Pleurisy.

"Q. And how long were you ill?

"A. About three weeks but even now I am in the stage of convalescence."

Mr. Gallagher: Now turn to page 56, please—

"Cross Examination

"Mr. Wilhelm von Opel further testified as follows:

"By Mr. Baum:

"Q. Mr. von Opel,"—

The Court: Do you want to read that?

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, we want to offer this portion of the cross, unless the defense does.

Mr. Burling: We don't want to read it, but my suggestion is that if they read a part of it, and we come back, the record will be chopped up.

80 The Court: That is why I might suggest they do it, and if they leave out any part you want, you can offer it.

Mr. Gallagher: I may have the right to go back to any portion we may offer as redirect?

Mr. Burling: We also wish, if Your Honor please, to read certain portions of the direct that were omitted.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Gallagher (to Mr. Burling): You say now you wish to offer certain portions of the direct that were omitted?

Mr. Burling: We should read that first, Your Honor, before the cross-examination.

The Court: I will let you read any part you want, that you think is helpful to your case.

(Mr. Ingoldsby having left the witness stand and returned to the trial table):

Mr. Baum: If Your Honor please, Mr. Laufer may follow the same procedure, and be the witness?

The Court: Surely.

(Mr. Laufer now on the witness stand):

Mr. Baum: I will start reading at the top of page 25:

"Mr. Connor: I wish, Dr. Kronstein, that you would advise the witness I am going to shift to another subject at least for awhile."

The Court: Is this direct?

Mr. Baum: That is correct, Your Honor.

81 The Court: Perhaps I should have a copy of this, and I can follow you a little better. All right, go ahead.

Mr. Baum (continuing reading):

"I ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit #15 a copy of a document dated September 9, 1931 addressed to the Finanzamt at Wiesbaden."

May I have the document which was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 15 to the deposition?

Mr. Gallagher: Has it been offered?

Mr. Baum: I ask that this document be marked Defendant's Exhibit 1.

Mr. Gallagher: What is that marked?

Mr. Baum: That is 15, in your deposition.

Mr. Gallagher: You are going to switch the order?

Off the record, please.

(A document having been marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit 1):

Mr. Baum: Your Honor, rather than hold up the proceedings, I have offered the English translation of the document. I think we may go ahead until the plaintiffs find from the Court files the original of this in German.

The Court: Is there any objection to that?

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

We have it now, Your Honor.

The Court: All right; proceed.

82 Mr. Baum: And I offer this document as Defendant's Exhibit 1-A.

(The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibits 1 and 1-A.)

Mr. Baum: I ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibit 2 an instrument which was attached in the deposition to Plantiff's Exhibit 15, a letter of September 9, 1931, to the Finanzamt Wiesbaden.

The Court: We will have it understood, gentlemen, wherever a document is offered and there is no objection, it will be received without my announcing it. If there is objection, of course, I will rule on it.

Mr. Gallagher: Yes, sir.

(The letter was accordingly marked as Defendant's Exhibit 2.)

Mr. Baum: (To the Deputy Clerk) And Defendant's Exhibit 2-A.

(The last-mentioned document was marked as Defendant's Exhibit 2-A.)

Mr. Baum: And I ask to have a copy of a document dated October 28, 1931, addressed to Firma Adler and Company Kommandit Aktien—Gesellschaft, marked as Defendant's Exhibit 3, and the German will be 3-A.

(The copies of the document were accordingly marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibits 3 and 3-A.)

83 Mr. Baum: I ask to have marked, which will be Defendant's Exhibit 4, letter dated December 24, 1931, addressed to Wilhelm von Opel from the Schweize-rische Kreditanstalt. (Credit Suisse). And Defendant's Exhibit 4-A.

(The documents were accordingly marked as Defendant's Exhibits 4 and 4-A.)

Mr. Baum: (Resuming reading from deposition):

"I hand Plaintiff's Exhibits #15, #15-A, #16 and #17"—Now Defendant's Exhibits 1, 2, 3, and 4—"to the witness and ask that he read them.

"Q. This morning, Mr. von Opel you testified you had no recollection of any written correspondence with Adler and Company. I will ask you if Plaintiff's Exhibit #16 refreshes your recollection to the contrary?

"A. This letter was not in my mind when I testified this morning.

"Q. I will ask you now then, after having shown you the letter, do you recollect having written this letter to Adler and Company?

"A. I don't see any signature under this letter. I assume that a signature should appear on the copy.

"Q. Shouldn't the signature appear on the original rather than on the copy, Mr. von Opel.

"A. I assume that a signature should also appear on the copy. I cannot remember to have written this letter.

84 "Q. I will now show what purports to be a letter to the Finanzamt at Wiesbaden—Plaintiff's Exhibit #15 and ask you whether or not you recollect having written that letter to the Finanzamt?

"A. I don't remember this letter. This whole matter is entirely out of my memory."

Mr. Baum: I will now skip to page 29, the question beginning with the words "On Saturday, I asked you"—

"Q. On Saturday, I asked you about Plaintiff's Exhibit #16 purporting to be a letter dated October 28, 1931 from you to Adler and Company and I believe you stated you had no recollection of this letter. I will now ask you if over the week end you have gone over several papers pertaining to this matter and if your recollection is now refreshed in regard to this letter?

"A. Yes, I now remember.

"Q. Will you state whether or not this is a copy of the letter you sent to Adler and Company?

"A. Yes."

Mr. Baum: I offer Defendant's Exhibit 3 in evidence.

(The document heretofore marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit No. 3 was accordingly received in evidence.)

Mr. Baum: I now ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibit 5 a copy of a letter from Adler and Company
85 to Wilhelm von Opel, dated November 30, 1931. That is referred to in the deposition as Plaintiff's Exhibit 16-A.

(To the Deputy Clerk) This will be 5-A, and this will be Defendant's Exhibit 5.

(The documents were accordingly marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibits 5 and 5-A.)

(The following question and answer were now read from the deposition):

"Q. I will now ask the witness if he received this letter?

"A. Yes."

Mr. Baum: I offer Defendant's Exhibit 5 in evidence.

(The documents heretofore identified as Defendant's Exhibits 5 and 5-A were accordingly received in evidence:)

(The reading from the deposition was then resumed as follows):

"Q. To the best of your recollection are these documents, Plaintiff's Exhibit #16 and #16-A, the only communications you ever had with Adler and Company?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Will you state briefly why you wanted to make the guarantee mentioned in those letters?

"A. To establish an existence for my son.

"Q. But you were unable to go through with that transaction, were you?

86 "A. The 3,500,000 reichsmarks involved in this guarantee I had to call back to Germany.

"Q. So therefore, you couldn't go forward with that transaction?

"A. Therefore, I could not execute this transaction, so I came to the idea to make the gift."

Mr. Baum: I now ask that the Defendant's Exhibits 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 be received in evidence.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

(Defendant's Exhibits 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 were accordingly received.)

Mr. Baum: That is all the direct examination I wish to read. I will now proceed to the cross.

This is the cross-examination of Wilhelm von Opel, appearing on page 56 of the deposition:

"The witness, Mr. Wilhelm von Opel, further testified as follows:

By Mr. Baum:

"Q. Mr. von Opel, in 1929 what position did you hold in Adam Opel, A. G.?

"A. I was Chairman of the Board of Supervisors.

"Q. And after 80% of the shares of Adam Opel, A. G. were sold to General Motors in 1929, did you continue in the same position?

"A. Yes, General Motors confirmed me in my position.

87 "Q. And how long did you remain in that position?

"A. Until a few years ago. Until I was for political reasons constrained to retire.

"Q. What do you mean for 'political reasons constrained to retire'?

"A. At the order of General Motors I joined the Nazi party.

"Q. And for that reason you were forced to retire?

"A. As a member of the party I was compelled to resign from my position as a chairman of the board of supervisors.

"Q. By whom were you so compelled?

"A. I resigned voluntarily already prior to the enactment of the law requiring that because I knew what was coming.

"Q. And after 1929 did you hold any positions in any other business enterprise in Germany?

"A. I was also a member of the board of supervisors in the Continental Rubber, Hapag, North German Lloyd, Iron Foundry Becker which is a member of the Opel concern and in Adam Opel, A. G.

"Q. Did you take an active part in the companies you have just mentioned?

"A. Not active, but as chairman of the board of supervisors I was given certain tasks of Adam Opel, A. G. I was given certain special tasks of General Motors.

"Q. Did you have investments in companies other 88 than the Opel which you mentioned?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Were those investments made before or after 1929?

"A. In the main it was after 1929 because then I came into possession of liquid funds.

"Q. By your answer you mean do you not, that you used the money you received from the sale of the Opel shares in 1929?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And how much did you personally receive from General Motors in 1929 from the sale of the Opel shares?

"A. I cannot say definitely how much it was.

"Q. Was it 24,000,000 Rm?

"A. I was just about to say 24,000,000 or 26,000,000 Rm. more or less, after I had paid my obligation.

"Q. And with this money which you received from General Motors, you became interested in other companies and became a member of the board of directors, is that correct?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Did you have any other interests in business enterprises before 1929?

"A. Yes, by share holdings.

"Q. And what was the approximate value of these investments?

"A. I cannot remember that.

89 "Q. And after the sale to General Motors in 1929, you owned 600 shares of Adam Opel, A. G., is that correct?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And you still owned those shares as of January 1, 1931, did you not?

"A. Yes."

Mr. Baum: I will now skip from that point to line 5 on the next page, with the question beginning "The 600 remaining Opel shares"—

"Q. The 600 remaining Opel shares which you had originally retained in 1929 were sold to General Motors by your son Fritz von Opel as attorney in fact for you in 1931, were they not?

"Mr. Baum: For the purpose of assisting the witness in answering the question, I will show him Plaintiff's Exhibit #6?

(To counsel for plaintiff). Is that still Plaintiff's Exhibit 6?

Mr. Gallagher: Yes, in the same order.

(The reading from the deposition was then resumed, Mr. Baum reading the questions and Mr. Laufer reading the answers, as follows):

"A. I have made a gift of the shares to my son and I was annoyed about the fact that he sold them.

"Q. But you know that he sold them to General Motors in 1931, do you not?

"A. I see that from this document and as a member of the board of supervisors this fact was reported to me.

"Q. And do you know for what price those shares were sold to General Motors?

"A. We have made an agreement with General Motors pursuant to which we could sell the shares at such and such a price but I do not know at what price they were actually sold.

"Q. When you were questioned by Mr. Connor, you identified this document, Plaintiff's Exhibit #6 as being a copy of a notice to the General Motors Corp. exercising the option under the agreement of April 11, 1929, did you not?

"A. Yes."

Mr. Baum: Plaintiff's Exhibit 6 was here retranslated to the witness. Then—

"Q. Can you tell from Plaintiff's Exh. #6 at what price the shares were sold?

"A. No.

"Mr. Opel: I want to point out that I never bothered about the sale because the shares were no longer in my possession.

"Q. You say you never bothered about the sale of the shares after this time because the shares were no longer in your possession, is that correct?

91 "A. Yes.

"Q. That is because you claim you gave the shares to your son on October 5, 1931, is that not correct?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And yet on October 6, 1931, you gave your son a power of attorney to deal with these shares on your behalf with General Motors Corporation, is that not true?

"Plaintiff's Exh. #4 here retranslated to the witness.

"A. If it says so in the document, it must be correct."

Mr. Baum: I ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibit 6 a copy of a cable from Wilhelm von Opel to Mr. Sloan, dated October 23, 1931.

(The copy of cable was marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit 6.)

Mr. Ingoldsby: What is the old number on that?

Mr. Baum: It is the same number. It happened to work out to be the same number.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I see.

(The reading from the deposition resumed):

"I show the witness Def. Exh. #D-6 and ask him to read it.

"Q. Is that a copy of a cable which you sent to General Motors on October 23, 1931?

"A. I cannot say that.

"Q. You don't remember?

92 "A. No, I don't remember."

Mr. Baum: I offer this Defendant's Exhibit 6 in evidence at this time, since plaintiffs have admitted that this document was received by Wilhelm von Opel, subsequent to the date of this deposition.

(The document heretofore identified as Defendant's Exhibit 6 was accordingly received in evidence.)

(The reading from deposition resumed):

"I ask to have marked as Def. Exh. D-7, a copy of a cable to Wilhelm von Opel signed 'Smith', dated October 30, 1931.

"I show the witness Def. Exh. D-7 and ask him to read it.

"Q. Do you remember this cable?

"A. No.

"Q. In other words, Mr. von Opel, you do not remember that on October 23 you offered to keep one-half of the 600 shares of Opel, A. G. until the first of January, 1936?

"A. No, I do not remember that.

"Q. And you do not remember that on October 30, 1931, General Motors accepted your proposal?

"A. That is all new to me."

Mr. Baum: I now offer Defendant's Exhibit 7, since that has also been admitted to have been received by Wilhelm von Opel.

93 (The copy of cable was received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit No. 7.)

Mr. Baum: I now ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibit 8 a certified copy of the transcript of record of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, in the case of Uebersee Finanz Korporation, A. G. vs. Walter T. Rosen and others, which bears the signature or certificate of the clerk of the Second Circuit; and the Federal Reserve Bank of New York was a party defendant.

(The certified copy of transcript of record was marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit No. 8.)

Mr. Baum (resuming reading from deposition):

"I show the witness the affidavit of Fritz von Opel, which appears beginning on page 43 of that record, and ask to have translated to him the paragraph which bears the number 6."

Mr. Gallagher: Excuse me just a moment, Mr. Baum.

Mr. Baum: I am substituting the whole affidavit for part of the affidavit, to make it more simple.

Mr. Gallagher: All right.

(The reading from the deposition was then resumed as follows):

"Q. Now, Mr. von Opel, do you remember having cabled to General Motors offering to retain 300 shares and receiving payment for them in gold or on a gold basis?

94 "A. No.

"Q. So you do not remember sending a cable to General Motors on October 23, 1931?

"A. I do not remember.

"Mr. Baum: I point out to the witness that Def. Exh. D-8 is a sworn statement of his son.

"Q. Do you think that your son was not telling the truth?

"A. My son tells the truth as his father does.

"Q. Your son in this affidavit Def. Exh. D-8, states that after October 5, 1931, he came to New York and that he learned from Mr. Smith that you had agreed by cable with Mr. Sloan to modify the escrow agreement for 300 Opel shares. Is that true or not?

"A. I do not remember the matter. It is so important—he wanted to arrange the matter one-half one way and the other half the other way—I really should remember it.

"Q. But you cannot remember it?

"A. I cannot remember that. I made a gift of the shares on October 5 to my son and after that the matter was settled as far as I was concerned."

Mr. Baum. I will not insist on my motion to strike, which is contained in the record.

(The reading resumed):

95 "I ask to have marked as Def. Exh. D-9 a copy of a letter from Mr. E. F. Regan of the National City Bank to Mr. Fritz von Opel, dated September 22, 1933 and acknowledged by Mr. Regan before a notary public.

"I ask to have the body of the letter translated to the witness.

"Q. I ask the witness whether he instructed the Deutsche Bank & Disconto Gesellschaft Frankfurt on October 24, 1931 to cable the National City Bank in the form quoted in Def. Exh. D-9?

"A. I do not know anything about it.

"Q. As far as you can remember now, Mr. von Opel, you have no knowledge of instructing the bank to send such a cable?

"A. No, I do not remember anything.

"Q. Mr. von Opel, in the year 1931 you had an account in Switzerland in the sum of 3,875,000 Swiss francs, did you not?

"A. Yes, more or less."

Mr. Baum: At this point I offer Defendant's Exhibit 9, the genuineness of which has also been admitted by the plaintiffs.

(The document was received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit No. 9.)

(The reading from deposition resumed):

96 "Q. And as stated in Defendant's Exhibit 2, formerly Plaintiff's Exhibit 15-A, that amount was to be used to guarantee an obligation of your son Fritz to Adler and Company, is that not correct?

"A. Yes, to guarantee it.

"Q. And as stated in Defendant's Exhibit 2, formerly Plaintiff's Exhibit 15-A, your son's obligation involved the purchase of shares of Uebersee Fananz Korporation, did it not?

"A. I do not know of the matter.

"Q. But you remember the guarantee?

"A. No, I do not remember the guarantee.

"Q. You just testified you did?

"A. I said that I remembered the sum of 3,700,000 francs.

"Q. Do you remember that on September 9, 1931, you applied for a license to dispose of the Swiss account to guarantee your son's obligation as shown in Plaintiff's exhibit #15?

"A. I remember this letter and also that I had the money returned home.

"Q. When?

"A. That must have been around that time or three or four months or three or four weeks later.

"Q. Now you testified, Mr. von Opel, that you made 97 this guarantee in order to enable your son to establish an existence for himself, did you not?

"A. Yes, he should use the money for that purpose.

"Q. And then on October 5, 1931, you claim you made a gift to your son of 600 shares of Opel for the same purpose, did you not?

"A. I believe that the money had to be returned to Germany and by the fact of the return of the money to Germany I conceived the notion of making the gift of the shares.

"Mr Baum: I now ask to have marked as Def. Exh. D-10 a letter dated March 21, 1932 from der Praesident des Landesfinanzamts Kassel to Mr. Wilhelm von Opel."

Mr. Baum: I ask to have the English marked Defendant's Exhibit 10, and the German 10-A.

(The documents were marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibits 10 and 10-A.)

Mr. Baum: I also ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibits 11 and 11-A, from letter requesting registration of liabilities to foreign creditors, dated November 30, 1931.

98 three pages, to the registration office for foreign liabilities, dated December 11, 1931.

(The copy of letter and attachments was accordingly marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit 12.)

Mr. Baum: I ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibit 13 a letter to the Devisenstelle Frankfurt, dated January 5, 1932, together with an attachment consisting of two pages and representing a list of patents.

(The letter was marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit 13.)

Mr. Baum: I ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibit 14 a letter addressed to the Devisenstelle Frankfurt, dated January 13, 1932, and an attachment thereto of the same date, containing a declaration in lieu of an oath.

(The letter was accordingly marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit 14.)

Mr. Baum: I ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibit 15 and 15-A, a letter from the Devisenstelle Frankfurt to Wilhelm von Opel, dated January 25, 1932.

(The letter was marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibits 15 and 15-A.)

99 dated February 5, 1942.

(The copy of letter was marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit 16.)

Mr. Baum: I ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibit 17 and 17-A a notice of attachment dated February 10, 1932, from the sheriff's office, Zurich, to Dr. Wilhelm von Opel.

(The notice was marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibits 17 and 17-A.)

Mr. Baum: I ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibits 18 and 18-A a letter from the Schweizerische Kreditanstalt to Mr. Wilhelm von Opel, the letter being dated February 25, 1932.

(The letter was marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibits 18 and 18-A.)

Mr. Baum: I ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibits 19 and 19-A a notice of request for transfer of property attached, from the sheriff's office, Zurich, dated March 15, 1932, addressed to Dr. Wilhelm von Opel.

(The notice was accordingly marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibits 19 and 19-A.)

Mr. Baum: I ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibits 20 and 20-A a letter of the Reichsbank Wiesbaden to Dr. Wilhelm von Opel, dated March 24, 1932.

(The letter was marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibits 20 and 20-A.)

Mr. Baum: I ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibit 21 copy of a letter of April 5, 1932, from Dr. Wilhelm von Opel to Reichsbankstelle Wiesbaden.

(The letter was accordingly marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit 21.)

Mr. Baum: I ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibit 22 copy of a letter dated April 14, 1932, from Dr. Wilhelm von Opel by Miss Uebel to the registration office for foreign liabilities, and attached thereto a completed registration form.

(The copy of letter was marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit 22.)

Mr. Baum: I ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibits 23 and 23-A, letter of May 9, 1932, from the registration office for foreign liabilities to Dr. Wilhelm von Opel, containing therein a completed supplementary form.

(The letter was marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibits 23 and 23-A.)

(Reading from deposition resumed):

"I show the witness Defendant's Exhibit D-11 which is a request for a report of foreign liabilities and ask him whether he remembers having received that form?

"A. Yes, that was the registration of foreign liabilities.

"Q. And that form is dated November 30, 1931, is it not?

"A. Yes, that is the covering letter in which they sent the registration forms."

Mr. Baum: I offer Defendant's Exhibit 11 in evidence.

(The document heretofore marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit 11 was accordingly received in evidence.)

Mr. Baum (Resuming reading from deposition):

"Mr. Connor: I concede that Defendant's Exhibit 10, a letter from the Devisenstelle Frankfurt to Mr. Wilhelm von Opel dated March 21, 1932 was received at the office of Mr. Wilhelm von Opel.

"Mr. Baum: I offer Defendant's Exhibit D-10 in evidence.

"Mr. Connor: No objection.

"Mr. Baum: I offer Defendant's Exhibit D-11 in evidence.

"Mr. Connor: No objection.

"Mr. Baum: I show the witness Defendant's Exhibit D-12 consisting of a copy of a letter to the registration office for foreign liabilities dated December 11, 1931, together with a completed form and a supplement thereto bearing the same date and ask him to read it.

"Q. Is Defendant's Exhibit D-12 a copy of a letter and an accompanying report which you sent to the regis-102 tration office for foreign liabilities?

"A. Yes.

"Mr. Connor: I concede that Defendant's Exhibit D-12 is a copy of the documents submitted to the registration office for foreign liabilities."

Mr. Baum: Mr. Gallagher, are you now willing to concede all the documents up through 23?—And we will stop reading it.

Mr. Gallagher: Surely, we are.

Mr. Baum: I offer Defendant's Exhibits 12 through 23, as having been conceded by the plaintiffs.

(The documents heretofore identified as Defendant's Exhibits 12 through 23 were accordingly received in evidence.)

Mr. Baum: And I will therefore skip and begin reading at the top of page 68, line 3:

"Mr. Baum: Mr. von Opel, I show you Defendant's Exhibit D-13 and ask you to read it.

"Q. Mr. von Opel, in that letter, Defendant's Exhibit D-13, you state that your son attached your Swiss account in order to protect himself, do you not?

"A. Yes.

"Q. But you had given your son on October 5, 1931, you say, 600 Opel shares, had you not?

"A. Yes.

103 "Q. Then why did your son need the 3,500,000 Swiss francs to protect himself?

"A. I do not know what kind of a transaction of my son that was.

"Mr. Baum: I show the witness Defendant's Exhibit D-17 and ask him whether his son attached his Swiss bank account.

"A. Something was involved and some sort of bank transaction.

"Q. According to Defendant's Exhibit D-10 the application for a license to release the Swiss bank account was denied on March 21, 1932, was it not?

"A. They have rejected that.

"Q. Now you testified a short while ago, Mr. von Opel, that you made a gift of the 600 shares of Opel stock to your son because the 3,500,000 Swiss francs had to be brought back to Germany, did you not?

"A. I do not recall whether it is true or not.

"Q. You said before that because you had to bring the money back you conceived the idea of a gift of the shares to your son, did you not?

"A. I must think about the matter. It happened a long time ago. I cannot state that so precisely."

Mr. Baum (continuing): Now resuming on the next page:

"By Mr. Baum:

104 "Q. Mr. von Opel, will you tell us in your own words the reasons why you claim you made a gift of the 600 shares of Opel stock to your son Fritz?

"A. He was supposed to build himself a new livelihood after I had sold his livelihood in Germany to the Americans.

"Mr. Baum: I have asked to have marked as Defendant's Exhibit D-24 a memorandum to the files entitled 'Personal considerations concerning the gift'.

"I show the witness Defendant's Exhibit D-24 and ask him to read it.

"Q. Is this exhibit, Defendant's Exhibit D-24, a copy of a memorandum which you wrote on September 19, 1933?

"A. Yes."

Mr. Baum: I offer Defendant's Exhibit 24 in evidence.

(The document identified as Defendant's Exhibit No. 24 was received in evidence.)

Mr. Baum (Resuming reading):

"Mr. von Opel, I call your attention to the fact that this memorandum states that the gift was made above all to avoid an increase in the inheritance tax, is that not correct?

"A. If one makes a gift one considers why one 105 makes a gift.

"Q. Who originally suggested the idea of a gift, you or your son Fritz?

"A. The idea of a gift originated with me since my son could not make a gift.

"Q. Did your son ask you to make a gift to him?

"A. He did not ask me, I did that of my own accord.

"Q. Mr. von Opel, I call your attention to Plaintiff's Exhibit 24 which states in the second paragraph that your son came to you and suggested the idea of a gift?

"A. I remember that my son came to me and that we discussed the matter and then Mr. Hachenburg said it could be done by way of a gift.

"Q. Mr. von Opel, I show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, a copy of the purported gift agreement and ask you when that was executed?

"A. It was signed in accordance with the date.

"Q. And where was it signed?

"A. As far as I can remember I signed in Ruesselsheim.

"Q. In your office or in your home?

"A. In my office for at that time I no longer resided in Ruesselsheim.

"Q. And when did your wife and your son sign the 106 agreement?

"A. I assume that my son signed at the same moment that I signed.

"Q. Were any other people present besides yourself, your son and your wife when you signed?

"A. I cannot say that any more.

"Q. Was the original of that exhibit shown to any government officials?

"A. I believe that the document was submitted to the foreign exchange authorities or to the prosecuting authorities.

"Q. Did they keep the original or did they give it back to you?

"A. I cannot remember that. I have been looking for the original and was unable to find it.

"Q. Was your home or your office in any way damaged during the war?

"A. Not very much. Somewhat.

"Q. Were either of them hit by bombs?

"A. My house here was hit by a dud.

"Q. Did you lose any of your personal papers as a result of the war?

"A. Not as a result of the war but because of the fact that the Opel firm left me so little time to vacate my office some of the files disappeared.

"Q. You had a day to vacate your office, did you 107 not?

"A. A day.

"Q. And you took your papers with you when you left your office, did you not?

"A. Some of the papers were burned which came from my office which I had had for forty years. Some I dragged to a neighboring house and some I took along.

"Q. Who burned the papers?

"A. My secretary.

"Q. Which secretary?

"A. Either Miss Muehleberger or Miss Esklony.

"Q. Were those papers burned at your instructions?

"A. Yes, upon my instructions.

"Q. Is it possible that the original of Plaintiff's Exhibit #5 was burned?

"A. That may have been possible.

"Q. Did your daughter Elinor ever see the original or a copy of Plaintiff's Exhibit #5?

"A. I cannot say that. She had nothing to do with it.

"Q. Was the original of Plaintiff's Exhibit #5 ever shown to anyone else other than your own family and the foreign exchange authorities?

"A. I had no interest in showing it to others but I do not know.

108 "Mr. Baum: I ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibit D-25 a letter from Fritz von Opel to his father, dated December 21, 1936. And I show the letter to the witness and ask him to read it.

"Q. Is this a letter which you received from your son Fritz?

"A. Yes."

Mr. Baum: I offer Defendant's Exhibit 25 in evidence.

(The letter was marked as Defendant's Exhibit No. 25 and 25-A for identification, and received in evidence.)

Mr. Baum: I will now skip down that page to where I ask to have marked Defendant's Exhibit 27—

"I ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibit 26"—formerly 27—"a letter from Mr. Wilhelm von Opel to his son Fritz, dated September 21, 1933." That should be 26 and 26-A.

(The letter was accordingly marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit 26 and 26-A.)

"I show the witness Defendant's Exhibit 26"—formerly 27—"and ask him to read it.

"Q. Is this a letter which you sent to your son?

"A. Yes."

Mr. Baum: I offer Defendant's Exhibit 26 in evi-
109 dence.

(The letter, heretofore identified as Defendant's Exhibit 26, was received in evidence.)

(The following question and answer were then read):

"In this letter, Mr. von Opel, you requested information from your son concerning the details of the transactions in America, did you not?

"A. I had no business asking for these details but the curiosity of a father induced me to write the letter."

Mr. Baum: I now skip—

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, we ask that the next question be read in, to show why he asked.

Mr. Baum: We will be glad to read it—

"Q. Didn't you ask for those details because you were being investigated by the foreign exchange control authorities?

"A. That very likely had something to do with it."

Mr. Baum: I will skip the next question, since that letter is now in, and I will continue reading at the second line of page 73:

"Mr. von Opel, I show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 8, the draft of an agreement prepared by Mr. Hachenburg.

"And now I show you, Mr. von Opel, Plaintiff's Exhibit 24 and call your attention especially to the last sentence to to that exhibit. The last sentence says that the gift 110 was carried through in accordance with the Hachenburg draft, does it not?

"A. The Hachenburg draft was modified somewhat by Wronker-Flatow.

"Q. The Hachenburg draft which I just showed you, provides for a holding company, does it not?

"A. So far as I can remember, yes.

"Q. But in Plaintiff's Exhibit 5 there is no mention of a holding company?

"A. No.

"Mr. Baum: I show the witness now Defendant's Exhibit D-8, the affidavit of Fritz von Opel, dated June 7, 1935, and ask to have translated to him the first full paragraph on page four of the affidavit."

Mr. Baum: That is now—it appears at folio 138 of the record on appeal.

(The reading from the deposition was resumed as follows):

"Q. That affidavit of your son Fritz says that he orally agreed with you that the shares would be put in a holding company, does it not?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Is that statement true?

"A. My son in his impulsive nature, upon the execution told me things that he was going to do with the 111. shares.

"Q. Whose idea was it to include a provision for a 'Niessbrauch' in Plaintiff's Exhibit 5?

"A. Unfortunately, it was my idea to insert the 'Niessbrauch' but it was interpreted differently than it was intended. This was intended to be a security so that he should support me if I lost everything.

"Q. When you executed Plaintiff's Exhibit 5 you wanted the 'Niessbrauch' provision in it did you not?

"A. Yes.

"Q. At the time the agreement was executed you thought it was important to have a 'Niessbrauch', did you not?

"A. I considered it important as a safeguard for me in my old age.

"Q. Would you have made the gift to your son if there had been no 'Niessbrauch' provision in the agreement"?

"A. I would not have signed the agreement if there has not been a protection for me in it.

"Q. Now you testified that the 'Niessbrauch' was included in the agreement so that your son could support you in the event you lost everything, did you not?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Where in Plaintiff's Exhibit 5 does it say that you were to have a 'Niessbrauch' so that your son should 112. support you if you lost everything?

"A. That is not stated here.

"Q. In this agreement, Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, it is provided that your son is to receive 20% of the income, is that correct?

"A. It says so there.

"Q. I show you now Plaintiff's Exhibit 8, the Hachenburg draft of the agreement and ask you whether or not it is provided that you should receive 75% of the income?

"A. As I just read quickly, that is what is stated therein.

"Q. Why was your share of the income changed from 75% to 80% when the agreement was executed?

"A. For the reason that we wanted to have more."

Mr. Baum: I desire to skip, now, to the top of page 77.

Mr. Gallagher: We ask that it be read in, Your Honor. We ask that that portion be read in.

Mr. Baum: I will read it, then—

"Q. Mr. von Opel, you testified that you knew Dr. Frankenburg only socially, is that correct?

"A. Socially, well we did not discuss girls only, we also talked about business matters.

"Q. Did you ever employ Dr. Frankenburg as your agent or representative?

113 "A. I often asked his advice but I never paid him for it. I do not recall that he ever requested anything for it.

"Q. Did he ever act on your behalf whether he was paid or not?

"A. He was employed by Adler and Company and we may have transacted some business because of his connection with that firm.

"Mr. Baum: I ask to have translated to the witness the first four sentences of paragraph 9 of Defendant's Exhibit D-8, the affidavit of Fritz von Opel of June 7, 1935.

"Q. Did you suggest to your son that Dr. Frankenburg should become Managing Director of the holding company?

"A. No.

"Q. Well then, is the statement made by your son Fritz not correct?

"A. After I made the gift of the shares to my son, he talked to me about it now and then but I said I didn't care, it was all the same to me.

"Mr. Baum: I now ask to have translated to the witness the first two sentences of paragraph fifteen of Defendant's Exhibit D-8, the affidavit of Fritz von Opel, dated June 7, 1935.

114 "Q. Is the statement that the key to the deposit was held by Dr. Frankenburg as your agent and representative true?

"A. I have nothing to do with the key.

"Q. Was Dr. Frankenburg your agent or representative for the purpose of safeguarding your 'Niessbrauch'?

"A. No.

"Q. Then would you say that the statement made by your son Fritz is not true?

"A. I do not wish to say. That may be an agreement between my son and Dr. Frankenburg in my interest.

"Q. Mr. von Opel, do you know a Mr. Theodore Hoffacker?

"A. I do not know him but the name sounds familiar to me as if I had heard it before.

"Q. As far as you can remember, did you ever have any business dealings with Mr. Hoffacker?

"A. No.

"Q. Mr. von Opel, did you ever give any instructions to your son or anyone else concerning what should be done with the shares of stock of the Spur Distributing Company?

"A. I hear that name for the first time today."

The Court: Excuse me just a moment. I will have to take a brief recess here for about 5 minutes.

(Following the recess):

The Court: Gentlemen, I am sorry our 5 minutes stretched out as it did, but I had an important conference with Judge Morris which took some time.

All right, Mr. Baum.

Mr. Baum: We were at the top of page 77—

"Mr. von Opel, in Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, in the first paragraph the agreement reads that it is your desire to preserve the shares in the male line of the family, is that not correct?

"A. Yes.

"Q. What did you mean by that?

"A. That my son and my children shall be connected with the Adam Opel firm which my father established and developed into a great enterprise.

"Q. But on October 5, 1931, you knew that General Motors had the right under their agreement, which is Plaintiff's Exhibit 3, to buy the shares any time up until 1934, did you not?

"A. Yes, as it is written in the agreement.

"Q. And this agreement, Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, itself recognizes the possibility of such a sale by providing the 'Niessbranch' will attach to that property substituted for the shares, does it not?

"A. That is written here.

116 "Then at the time you say this agreement was executed you knew that it was possible that your son would not keep any interest in the firm, did you not?

"A. It was not clear that he would sell.

"Q. But General Motors could buy the shares whether he wanted to sell or not, couldn't they?

"A. We had an agreement with General Motors, yes.

"Q. If you yourself had sold the shares to General Motors for dollars what would you have had to do with the dollars?

"A. If I would have sold them I would have to report them to the authorities.

"Q. And under the law in 1931 you would have had to deliver the dollars to the Reichsbank for marks, would you not?

"A. Yes."

Mr. Baum: I will now skip to line 4 on page 79:

"Mr. Baum: I ask to have marked as Defendant's Exhibit 27—formerly 28—a hand-written copy of a telegram addressed to the Prussian Minister of Justice, Berlin, and bearing the notation 'Dispatched about May 17, 1934'.

"I ask the witness to read Defendant's Exhibit 27, formerly 28.

"Q. Is that your handwriting on Defendant's Ex-117 hibit 27?

"A. No, no.

"Q. Is this a copy of a telegram which you sent to the Minister of Justice in Berlin?

"A. Yes."

Mr. Baum: I offer Defendant's Exhibit 27 in evidence.

(The copy of telegram was accordingly received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 27.)

(The reading from the deposition resumed):

"In this telegram, Mr. von Opel, the statement is made: 'My son's capital is working for Germany since return was always a matter of course for us. I shall cause my son to advise you how long it will take to wind up his American investments for the purpose of returning them'. Is that not correct?

"A. I had to send off this telegram for political reasons.

"Q. What did you mean your son's capital is working for Germany?

"A. If it increases over there it really works also for Germany since my son is a German.

"Q. But your son was no longer a resident of Germany after 1929, was he?

"A. No.

118 "Q. You said you sent this telegram for political reasons, what did you mean by that statement?

"A. The government was always after me to return these assets which did not belong to me any more and for political considerations I had to send off this telegram.

"Q. Mr. von Opel, were you a member of the Nazi party?

"A. Yes.

"Q. When did you join the Nazi party?

"A. I joined around July 20, 1933, but my membership dated back to April 1, 1933.

"Q. Were you a contributing member of the SS?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And how much was your contribution per month to the SS?

"A. So far as I can remember, one hundred marks.

"Q. Do you recall having been appointed by Adolph Hitler to the National Academy for German law?

"A. Yes.

"Q. When?

"A. I do not know when it was but about 1934 or so.

"Q. How many people were members of the Academy for German law?

"A. I have no idea.

"Q. Did you know Adolph Hitler, personally?

119 "A. I met him on an exhibition stand when he visited an automobile exhibition.

"Q. And did you have your picture taken with him at that time?

"A. I believe yes."

Mr. Baum: I will now skip to the middle of page 81, to the question reading "On the occasion of your 70th birthday"—

"Q. On the occasion of your 70th birthday did you receive a medal from Adolph Hitler?

"A. On my 70th birthday they wanted to confer upon me the golden party insignia but I refused that and I stated my wish that instead they give me the cross of merit in recognition of the services rendered by the motor car factory.

"Q. And did you at that time receive a personal telegram from Adolph Hitler?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Mr. von Opel, in 1933 did you have printed in a newspaper a call upon the people to vote for Adolph Hitler in March 1933?

"A. There was a call by the German industrialists which I also signed."

Mr. Baum: That is all the cross-examination which I desire to read, Your Honor.

(Mr. Laufer accordingly returned to the trial table from the witness stand.)

The Court: What is this Niessbrauch? What is the definition of that?

Mr. Burling: That is what I referred to yesterday, Your Honor, as a usufruct.

The Court: That is what I thought, but I wanted to make sure. I understood you were to have some testimony about it later, but I wanted to identify the word.

Mr. Burling: Yes, sir.

Mr. Gallagher: That is correct, Your Honor.

Page 32.

Mr. Ingoldsby (having assumed the witness stand): Just a minute. This is numbered differently. What are you starting with?

Mr. Gallagher (reading from deposition): This is—

"WILHELMINE DERN nee UEBEL, a witness, who, having been first duly sworn was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

"By Mr. Connor:

"Q. Mrs. Dern will you give your full name for the record?

"A. Wilhelmine Dern.

"Q. What was your full maiden name?

"A. Wilhelmine Uebel.

121 "Q. Where do you live, Mrs. Dern?

"A. In Frankfurt.

"Q. Do you know Wilhelm von Opel?

"A. Since July 1, 1918.

"Q. Were you ever employed by him?

"A. 13 years.

"Q. During what period?

"A. July 1, 1918 to June 30, 1923 and then from March 1, 1927 to December 31, 1934.

"Q. And in what capacity were you employed?

"A. Private secretary.

"Q. Were you his first secretary during that period?

"A. Yes, I was the first secretary during this period."

Mr. Gallagher: I will ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 25-A the property tax return of Wilhelm von Opel for 1931.

(The document was accordingly marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 25-A.)

Mr. Gallagher: I will ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 25-B an amendment to exhibit 25-A.

(The amendment was marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 25-B.)

122 Mr. Gallagher: I will ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 25-C a document entitled "ZU IV: SONSTIGES VERMOEGEN." This is 25-C, now (handing to the Deputy Clerk).

(The document was marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 25-C.)

(The reading from the deposition was resumed, Mr. Gallagher reading the questions and Mr. Ingoldsby the answers):

"I will ask you if you prepared this property tax return, Exhibit 25-A?

"Mrs. Dern: Yes.

"Q. Have you prepared that under the direction of Mr. Wilhelm von Opel?

"A. I prepared the return, then I submitted it to Mr. Wilhelm von Opel who approved the statement prepared by me.

"Q. Did Mr. von Opel sign the original of this?

"A. Probably. I only signed once a tax return when Mr. von Opel was on a world trip. Every other return has been signed by himself.

"Q. Do you know whether the original of this one was signed by him?

"A. I am unable to answer this definitely yes or no since a long time has gone.

"Q. Well you just stated that you only signed one 123 return and he signed all the rest of them. Did you mean by that that he signed this one also?

"A. I don't know.

"Q. Was this a copy of the return which was sent to the tax office by Mr. von Opel in the year 1931?

"A. Yes, absolutely.

"Q. I will ask you if this is an amendment to Exhibit 25-A which was also filed with the proper tax authorities?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And this is an amendment to the tax return which is Exhibit 25-A, is that correct?

"A. Yes.

"Q. I will ask you if you can tell us what Exhibit 25-C is?

"A. That is a statement to the number of the property tax return referred to in this statement.

"Q. I will call your attention to the figure 3,710,566.— R. M. at the bottom of page 2 of Exhibit 25-A and to the same figure at the bottom of Exhibit 25-C and ask you if those two figures represent the same item?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Do you know whether Exhibit 25-C was filed with the tax authorities?

"A. Today I can't say any more whether it has 1124 been sent but I can say that the figure in the tax return itself has been taken from this sheet. If the original from this sheet is not any more in the files of Mr. von Opel, then it has been submitted to the tax office.

"Mr. Connor: May it be understood that these documents are papers from Mr. von Opel's files and he would like the privilege of substituting copies.

"Mr. Baum agreed to this."

Mr. Gallagher: I will ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 26 the property tax assessment of Wilhelm von Opel as of January 1, 1931, which is dated August 2, 1932.

(The property tax assessment was marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 26.)

Mr. Gallagher: I will ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 27 amended property tax assessment of Wilhelm von Opel as of January 1, 1931, which is dated the 25th of November, 1932.

(The amended property tax assessment was accordingly marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 27.)

Mr. Gallagher: I ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 28 amended property tax assessment of Wilhelm von Opel as of January 1, 1931, which is dated June 23, 1934.

(The document was marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 28.)

125 (The reading from deposition resumed):

"I will now ask you whether those documents are assessments served upon Wilhelm von Opel and his wife on the basis of his 1931 property tax return, Plaintiff's Exhibit 25?

"A. Yes.

"Mr. Connor: It is understood that for all these papers taken from the files of Mr. von Opel, photostatic copies may be substituted.

"Mr. Baum: Yes."

Mr. Gallagher: I will ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 29 a document entitled "ANZEIGE AUF GRUND DES VOLKSVERRATGESETZES"—"Report under the statute against National treason"—and dated October 27, 1933.

(The document was accordingly marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 29.)

Mr. Gallagher: I will ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 29-A, a document consisting of seven pages, attached to Plaintiff's Exhibit 29.

(The seven-page document was accordingly marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 29-A.)

(The reading from deposition resumed):

"Q. Did you prepare Plaintiff's Exhibit 29, Mrs.
126 Dern?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And was that signed by Wilhelm von Opel?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And was that submitted to the Finanzamt at Wiesbaden? (Revenue office)

"A. Yes.

"Q. I will ask you whether Plaintiff's Exhibit 29-A was signed by Wilhelm von Opel?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And was Plaintiff's Exhibit 29-A submitted with Plaintiff's Exhibit 29 at Wiesbaden?

"A. It cannot be otherwise.

"Q. Would your answer be 'yes' that it was?

"A. Yes.

"Q. You were familiar with Mr. Wilhelm von Opel's business affairs, were you not?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And were you familiar with the facts which are contained in Plaintiff's Exhibit 29 and 29-A?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And are the statements contained in Plaintiff's Exhibits 29 and 29-A accurate statements?

"A. Yes.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer these in evidence.

(The documents heretofore identified as Plain-127 tiff's Exhibits 25 through 29-A were accordingly received in evidence.)

(The reading from the deposition was resumed as follows:)

"I will go back a moment to this return marked Plaintiff's Exhibits 25, 25-A and 25-B and I will ask you if from your familiarity with Mr. von Opel's business affairs, the statements contained in those exhibits are true to the best of your knowledge and belief?

"A. Yes, absolutely.

"Q. During any part of the time that you were secretary to Wilhelm von Opel, do you know of any demand that was made upon Fritz von Opel, the son, for any income from the property which was given to Fritz as a gift?

"A. No, I do not know anything of any incoming money from Fritz von Opel.

"Q. Did you ever know of any demand or request made by the father upon the son for any income from the property which he gave him as a gift?

"A. No.

"Q. Did you know of any income or any payments ever having been made by a company called Uebersee Finanz Korporation to Mr. Wilhelm von Opel?

"A. No.

"Q. Did you ever know of any income from a company called Spur Distributing Company?

128 "A. No.

"Q. Did you ever know of any income to Wilhelm von Opel from a company called Harvard Brewing Company?

"A. No.

"Q. Did you ever know of any income coming to Mr. von Opel from Amerlogene, Inc.?

"A. No.

"Q. I will call your attention to the bottom paragraph on page six of Exhibit 29-A and ask you if you can explain that paragraph, Mrs. Dern?

"A. Today I do not know any more exactly what that means but it has something to do with the gift contract.

"Q. Did any of Mr. von Opel's books reflect what that was?

"A. No, I do not believe.

"Q. Do you have any recollection of the size of the amounts referred to there?

"A. No.

"Q. Are Mr. von Opel's books for that period available at this time do you know?

"A. Since 1935 I had nothing to do with Mr. Wilhelm von Opel. I do not know.

"Q. If the amounts referred to in that paragraph were other than small amounts, would you know about it, Mrs. Dern?

129 "A. Perhaps. It is hard to say.

"Q. Well, you state that according to your knowledge and understanding that no payments had ever been made to Mr. von Opel out of the property which he had given to his son Fritz, is that correct?

"A. I don't know of any payment. Nothing came.

"Q. Nothing came to the office, is that correct?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Did you ever hear of the son making a small advance to the father when the father was on a shooting trip to Austria or Hungary?

"A. I don't remember.

"Q. Did you ever hear of an advance being made by the son to the father when he was on a world trip some time in the 1930's?

"A. No, I didn't hear of that.

"Q. I will call your attention to the fact that Wilhelm von Opel has heretofore testified that he has had two or three advances from his son.

"A. That might be outside of my knowledge.

"Q. And that these advances were made when on one occasion the old gentleman was on a hunting trip in Austria and on a world trip and on a third occasion. Is it possible that that reference in the paragraph at the bottom of page six was to those advances that 130 Wilhelm von Opel testified about?

"A. Absolutely possible.

"Q. When you said paragraph six had something to do with the gift, what did you mean by that?

"A. When I made my statement I had in mind that the statement has been made in relation to paragraph six. This paragraph six relates to the gift agreement. I do not know any more today what the substance of the statement means.

"Q. Then do I understand correctly that in paragraph six you had no intent to state that any income had come from Fritz von Opel from the property which was given in the gift?

"A. I don't know of any income given to Wilhelm von Opel from this property.

"Mr. Connor: Will you read the last paragraph on page six of Plaintiff's exhibit 29-A out loud for the record?

"A. 'I advanced occasionally amounts for my son. These advances have been repaid to me by my son. I only mentioned that to my protection because eventually a claim against my son as of 1933 might be seen therein.'

"Q. Does that paragraph mean that the father owed nothing to the son and the son owed nothing to the father?

"A. That means that the father advanced money 131 for the son which the son repaid again the father.

"Mr. Connor: I have asked the witness to read Plaintiff's Exhibit 7, being the letter dated October 3, 1931 from Dr. Max Hachenburg.

"I will also ask the witness to take a look at Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, the gift agreement.

"Q. Do you remember when this letter from Dr. Hachenburg was received by Mr. von Opel?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And do you remember the gift agreement which was drawn, a copy of which is Plaintiff's exhibit 5?

"A. Yes, I typed it.

"Q. By examining these two documents, can you tell when the gift agreement was drawn and signed?

"A. Yes, the date of Hachenburg's letter is obviously correct and the date of the gift contract is certainly correct too.

"Q. So that the gift agreement was executed on the 5th of October, 1931?

"A. Certainly on the date which is written on the document.

"Q. And where did you type this gift agreement?

"A. In my office in Ruesselsheim.

"Q. Do you know Wronker-Flatow?

"A. Yes.

132 "Q. Was he there at the time the gift agreement was executed?

"A. Yes."

(Mr. Laufer having replaced Mr. Ingoldsby on the witness stand, and Mr. Baum now reading the questions):

"Cross Examination

"The Witness: Mrs. Dern further testified as follows:

"By Mr. Baum:

"Q. Mrs. Dern, where do you live in Frankfurt?

"A. In Eisernhand 38.

"Q. How long have you lived there?

"A. Since March 1944.

"Q. When did your employment with Mr. von Opel terminate?

"A. December 31, 1934.

"Q. Did you take care of Mr. von Opel's personal affairs as well as his business affairs?

"A. Yes, both.

"Q. You testified that the gift agreement, Plaintiff's exhibit 3 was executed on the 5th of October, 1931. Who else was present when that gift agreement was executed?

"A. I cannot say precisely. I wrote the agreement.

"Q. But you know that Dr. Wronker-Flatow was 133 there?

"A. By all means.

"Q. And Mr. von Opel and Mrs. von Opel and Fritz von Opel signed the agreement in your presence on that day?

"A. I was not present when the agreement was signed.

"Q. Then you were only present when it was typed on the machine, is that correct?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And you typed the date the 5th of October 1931 on it, did you not?

"A. On the day when I wrote it, yes.

"Q. But you don't know on what date it was signed, do you?

"A. I must think about it how it was. I cannot say for certain, I was not present.

"Q. When Mr. Connor asked you when the agreement was executed you said it was October 5, 1931, are you now saying that was not correct?

"A. He did not ask when the agreement was signed, he asked when the agreement was typed.

"Q. So that when you said it was made on October 5 you only meant it was typed on October 5?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And you have no idea of when it was signed?
134 "A. I believe for certain on the same day.

"Q. How do you know it was signed on that day?

"A. I do not know it but I believe it was.

"Q. I ask the witness to read Plaintiff's exhibit 8, the Hachenburg draft of the gift agreement. Now I'll ask the witness, have you ever seen the document which I have shown you?

"A. At that time, yes.

"Q. Did you use this document in typing the gift agreement, Plaintiff's exhibit 5?

"A. I do not recall any more.

"Q. What did you use in typing Plaintiff's exhibit 5?

"A. I do not remember any more. It may have been a dictation by Wronker-Flatow. I do not remember."

Mr. Baum: I will now skip to the top of page 43, the following page.

Mr. Gallagher: Just a moment, please.

Mr. Baum: Surely—

"Q. After you typed the original of Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, what did you do with it?

"A. I have taken it to Mr. von Opel to his room.

"Q. And you never saw it signed?

"A. I saw it later but I do not remember if I saw it on the same day.

135 "Q. And do you know of your own knowledge when this agreement was actually signed by Wilhelm von Opel, Fritz von Opel and Marta von Opel?

"A. I was not present but I can assume that it was on the same day because Mr. Wilhelm von Opel wanted the typing to be done.

"Mr. Baum: I ask Mr. Laufer (interpreter) to explain to the witness that the question asks whether she of her own knowledge knew and not what she can assume.

"A. I cannot say it when I was not present when it was signed."

Mr. Baum: That is all of the cross-examination, Your Honor.

(Mr. Laufer having returned to the trial table, and Mr. Ingoldsby having replaced him in the witness chair, to read the answers):

Mr. Gallagher: On page 136—

"Redirect Examination, Mrs. Dern

"I ask to have marked as Plaintiff's exhibit 5-A another copy of the gift agreement headed: 'Ruesselsheim, den 5. Oktober 1931'. (Ruesselsheim, dated 5 October 1931.)"

Now—

"We have asked you to come here from Frankfurt 136 again today, Mrs. Dern, to have you identify documents which were not shown to you the other day. I will hand you Plaintiff's exhibit 5-A and ask you to look it over. I will direct your attention particularly to the handwriting on the first page thereof opposite the word 'abschrift'. Whose handwriting is that?

"A. Mine.

"Q. By reference to that handwriting, can you now tell us whether Plaintiff's exhibit 5-A was unquestionably a copy of the original gift agreement?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Have you seen that document, Plaintiff's exhibit 5-A at any time since you left the employ of Wilhelm von Opel?

"A. No. I see it for the first time today.

"Q. And by that answer you mean that today is the first time that you have seen this document since you left the employ of Wilhelm von Opel?

"A. Yes.

"Mr. Connor: I offer Plaintiff's exhibit 5-A in evidence.

"Q. I will show you Plaintiff's exhibit 45 and ask you if that document was sent on behalf of Wilhelm von Opel to the Finanzamt Wiesbaden on or about January 2, 137 1932?

"A. I must assume that for sure. I did not type it myself,

"Q. I will show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 38 and ask you if that is the preliminary tax assessment served upon Wilhelm von Opel by the Finanzamt Wiesbaden?

"A. Yes.

"Q. I will show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 39 and ask you if that is a copy of the reply sent to the Finanzamt Wiesbaden in response to Plaintiff's Exhibit 38?

"A. Yes.

"Q. I will show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 40 and ask you if that is the further tax assessment served upon Wilhelm von Opel by the Finanzamt Wiesbaden?

"A. Yes.

"Q. I will show you the envelope, Plaintiff's Exhibit 40-A and ask you if that was the envelope in which Plaintiff's Exhibit 40 was sent to Wilhelm von Opel?

"A. Certainly.

"Q. I will show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 41 and ask you if that is a copy of a letter which was sent to Wilhelm von Opel's office by Dr. Faust purporting to be a copy of a letter which Dr. Faust had sent to the Finanzamt at 138 Wiesbaden?

"A. That is certainly the case, it cannot be different.

"Q. I have asked you to examine every page in this book, Plaintiff's Exhibit 42 and now I ask you if you have examined every page in Plaintiff's Exhibit 42?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And who made the entries on all of the pages in that book?

"A. I made all the entries. There are some insignificant notes in the books written by someone else. These notes have been made after I left.

"Q. I will ask you if there are any pages in this book which refer to any business transactions of Wilhelm von Opel and Fritz von Opel?

"A. There is one Opel shares page in the book.

"Q. I will show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 42-A and ask you if that is the page you refer to?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And is that the only page in Plaintiff's Exhibit 42 which refers to any business transactions involving Fritz von Opel?

"A. The only one.

"Q. Is this book a complete record of the investments, that is bonds and securities, of Wilhelm von Opel covering the period from January 1, 1930 up until the time 139 you left the employ of Wilhelm von Opel?

"A. Yes.

"Q. I call your attention to the fact that on the back cover of this book there appear the dates from January 1, 1930 until December 31, 1935 and also call your attention to the fact that you left Wilhelm von Opel's employ on December 31, 1934. I ask you to explain that notation on the cover of the book.

"A. I began this book on January 1, 1930. Before this time there was only very sketchy bookkeeping of the investments. Why the final date on the book shows the note to December 31, 1935, I do not know. I do not know whether they began a new book of similar type or not at that time.

"Q. But all the entries in the books except for a few insignificant notations were made by you, were they not?

"A. Yes."

(During the reading from the deposition, just preceding, the documents referred to were marked accordingly as Plaintiff's Exhibits 45, 38, 39, 40, 40-A, 41, 42, 42-A.)

Mr. Gallagher: I now ask to have marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 54, a loose-leaf book and its contents—"Buchhaltung-1937."

140 (The loose-leaf book was marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 54.)

Mr. Gallagher: I also ask to have marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 55, a loose-leaf book and its contents, "Buchhaltung—1938."

(The loose-leaf book for 1938 was accordingly marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 55.)

Mr. Gallagher: (Resuming reading from the deposition)—

"I will show you Plaintiff's exhibits 54, 55, 56, and 57 and I will ask you if you can tell us what those exhibits are.

"A. The bookkeeping statements of Mr. Wilhelm von Opel for the years 1937, 1938, 1939 and 1940.

141 "Q. Are those books, Plaintiff's exhibits 54, 55, 56 and 37 a complete bookkeeping record of all of Wilhelm von Opel's income and expenditures during the years covered by the books?

"A. Yes."

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer those books in evidence.

(The loose-leaf books identified as Plaintiff's Exhibits 54, 55, 56 and 57 were received in evidence.)

Mr. Baum: No recross-examination, Your Honor.

Mr. Gallagher: Now turn to page 48, please—

(The attachment II to Plaintiff's Exhibit 30 was marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 30-B.)

142 Mr. Burling: I am confused. I am not objecting. But you said that was all for the witness Dern. I don't know exactly what you are doing now. Are you interrogating a witness?

Mr. Gallagher: No; I am starting with—Excuse me just a moment—I am merely identifying all these documents before we start with the witness Esklony.

Mr. Burling: I have no objection, but it is an unusual procedure.

Mr. Gallagher: You want me to eliminate those pages, or this page, from the deposition, then? We will save time if we get them all marked at one time.

Mr. Burling: Very well.

Mr. Gallagher: She is going to refer to all these exhibits in her testimony.

Mr. Burling: I understand this is preparatory to the testimony of Esklony?

Mr. Gallagher: Yes, sir—

"Mr. Baum: I would like to have the record show that this is a loose-leaf binder.

"Q. Mr. Connor: I will show the witness Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 42 and ask her to state what that book is?

"A. That is a book which covers all investments of Mr. Wilhelm von Opel for the period January 1930 to December 31, 1935."

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 42.

(The book heretofore identified as Plaintiff's Exhibit 42 was received in evidence.)

"Did you make the entries which appear in this book, Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 42?

"A. No, Mrs. Dern did.

"Q. Are you familiar with the entries which are made in that book from your knowledge of Mr. Wilhelm von Opel's business affairs?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Do you know whether that is a complete record of Mr. Wilhelm von Opel's investment accounts for the period covered by the book?

"A. Yes.

"Mr. Connor: I will ask to have marked as Plain-163 tiff's Exhibit No. 42-A a page in Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 42 bearing the heading: 'The National City Bank, New York, New York, 55 Wall Street.

"Q. I will ask the witness if that page refers to the gift to Fritz von Opel?

"A. Yes. Mrs Dern made the note: 'By gift to Fritz von Opel compare document of October 5, 1931'."

Mr. Gallagher: Plaintiff's Exhibit 42 has been offered in evidence, and Plaintiff's Exhibits 42-A, as a part of Plaintiff's Exhibit 42, is also offered.

(Plaintiff's Exhibit 42-A was now received in evidence.)

Mr. Gallagher: I will ask to have marked as Plaintiff's exhibit 43 a book which contains income and expenses for Mr. Wilhelm von Opel during the year 1935.

(The book was marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 43.)

(The question and answer were then read:)

"I will show the witness Plaintiff's Exhibit 43 and ask her to state for the record what that book is?

"A. That is the book which contains all income and expenses of Mr. Wilhelm von Opel during the year 1935."

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 43.

(The book heretofore identified as Plaintiff's Exhibit 43 was received in evidence.)

164 (The reading from the deposition resumed:)

"Mr. Baum: I would like the record to show that this is also a looseleaf binder.

"Mr. O'Connor: I will ask to have marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 44, a book which contains income and expenses for Mr. Wilhelm von Opel during the year 1936."

(The book referred to was now marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 44.)

(The question and answer then followed:)

"I will show the witness Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 44 and ask her to describe what it is.

"A. That is the bookkeeping book containing all income and expenses for Mr. Wilhelm von Opel during the year 1936."

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 44.

(The book heretofore identified as Plaintiff's Exhibit 44 was received in evidence.)

"Mr. Baum: I would like the record to show that this is also a looseleaf binder.

"Mr. Connor: Now in Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 43, is there any page which has referred to Fritz von Opel?

"A. Only the page entitled 'Patent Account'. This account contained payments made for patents belonging to Fritz von Opel.

165 "Mr. Connor: The entire book has been offered in evidence but for purposes of clarity I will ask to have the page referred to, marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 43-A."—the page entitled "Patent Account".

(The page referred to was marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 43-A.)

"Mr. Connor: Will you briefly and generally describe what those entries refer to on Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 43-A?

"A. The entries made on this page refer almost all to payments made to Mr. Dyhr, the patent technician of Fritz von Opel.

"Q. Who paid those amounts?

"A. Mr. Wilhelm von Opel.

"Mr. Connor: I will ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 44-A a page in Exhibit No. 44 entitled 'Patent-Konto'." This page is marked merely for purpose of identification, the whole book having been offered in evidence.

"Mr. Connor: I ask the witness to take a look at Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 44-A. I will ask you to describe for the record what the entries on that page are.

"A. On this page there are entered the payments made by Mr. Wilhelm von Opel to Mr. Dyhr during the year 1926.

166 "Q. Are there any other pages in Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 44 which refer to any transactions of or with Fritz von Opel?

"A. No.

"Q. When you went to Ruesselsheim this morning to look for the books of Wilhelm von Opel did you look for books of account prior to 1935, that is preceding the time covered by Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 43?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And did you look very diligently for those books?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Did you find those books?

"A. No, I am sorry.

"Q. Have you any idea of what became of those books of account preceding the year 1935?

"A. As far as I remember there is only one book involved and this one book has been burned.

"Q. When?

"A. The day when we vacated in October 1945.

"Q. You said that you looked for those books for the period to 1935 this morning?

"A. Yes.

"Q. When you were looking for them you had no distinct recollection of them having been burned, did you?

167 "A. No. Otherwise I wouldn't have looked for them.

"Q. What makes you think that they were or may have been burned?

"A. It was a different type of book involved than the books presented to me before. In 1935 they established another system of bookkeeping.

"Q. Why were these other books of account not burned in 1945?

"A. I wanted to have retained all the books belonging to the new bookkeeping system, so that the new bookkeeping system would remain complete.

"Q. Were you short of office space or did you have such reasons as that for getting rid of the books prior to 1935?

"A. No, absolutely. If we would have considered these books of special importance we could have found the space to keep them. The period during which the books had been kept was already lowered to ten years and later to five years.

"Q. By whom?

"A. By law.

"Q. Was it your purpose then at the time that the books prior to 1935 were destroyed to continue to keep those books which were required to be kept under the law?

168 "A. This was at least one of the reasons.

"Q. Well, in 1945, of course the books prior to 1935 were old books, were they not?

"A. Yes, very old. Mr. Wilhelm von Opel wanted to burn them all.

"Q. That is those old books prior to 1935?

"A. Yes, he wanted to burn all old books.

"Q. When the books were burned, was there any purpose in concealing information in those books from anybody?

"A. No.

"Mr. Connor: I will ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 45 copy of a letter to the Finanzamt, Wiesbaden, dated January 2, 1932 and sent by or on behalf of Wilhelm von Opel.

"Q. I call your attention particularly to the handwriting at the bottom of Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 45 and ask you if you know whose handwriting that is?

"A. That is the handwriting of Mr. Hagemann.

"Q. Who was Mr. Hagemann?

"A Customs investigator."

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 45.

(Plaintiff's Exhibit 45 was now received in evidence.)

169 "I will ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 45-A an excerpt from a newspaper of stock quotations."

(The newspaper excerpt was marked for identification Plaintiff's Exhibit 45-A.)

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 45-A.

(The exhibit identified as Plaintiff's No. 45-A was now received in evidence.)

(Further from the deposition:)

"Miss Esklony, are the books of account of Wilhelm von Opel after the year 1936 still in existence?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And where are they?

"A. Partly in Ruesselsheim and partly in Wiesbaden.

"Q. Will you make an effort to bring those books and records after 1936 to the hearing tomorrow?

"A. Yes. Then I will have to go to Ruesselsheim again.

"Mr. Connor: I ask to have marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 46, a folder entitled: Schweizerische Kreditanstalt Zurich from March 1930 to June 1932, (Credit Suisse Zurich) and pages contained therein.

"Q. I will ask the witness to take a look at Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 46 and the pages contained therein. What do the entries on those pages refer to?

"A. They refer to his account with the Credit
170 Suisse. (Schweizerische Kreditanstalt)

"Q. What does the first entry on the first page indicate?

"A. It refers to the transfer of Mr. Wilhelm von Opel to the Credit Suisse.

"Q. What date and in what amount?

"A. 11 March 1930 and the amount is 3,787,990.80 Swiss Francs.

"Q. And can you tell from Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 46 what finally was done with the money represented in that first entry?

"A. The balance has been transferred to the Reichsbank Direktorium Berlin.

"Q. Do you mean substantially the whole amount represented in the first entry, that is, 3,787,990.80 Swiss francs were finally transferred to the Reichsbank Directorium Berlin?

"A. Yes.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 46.

(The folder was received in evidence.)

(Mr. Ingoldsby having returned to the trial table, Mr. Laufer having replaced him on the witness stand, to read the answers, and Mr. Baum now reading the questions from the deposition:)

171 Mr. Baum: I now continue with the cross examination of Edith Esklony, at the middle of page 100:

"Miss Esklony further testified as follows:

"By: Mr. Baum.

"Q. Miss Esklony, up until 1939, I believe you testified you were the assistant secretary of Mr. Wilhelm von Opel, were you not?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And who was Mr. Wilhelm von Opel's principal secretary?

"A. From January 1, 1935 to July 1939 it was Miss Frentzel.

"Q. And were the duties of taking care of Mr. Wilhelm von Opel's business affairs divided between you and Miss Frentzel during that period?

"A. Yes.

"Q. In what way were they divided?

"A. Miss Frentzel took care of Mr. Wilhelm von Opel's correspondence and the most important matters. The bookkeeping duties were also divided between myself and a junior secretary who was also employed by Mr. Wilhelm von Opel.

"Q. What was the name of the junior secretary you just referred to?

"A. Miss Fornoff. That is her maiden name.
172 Her married name is Hummel.

"Q. During what time was she employed by Mr. Wilhelm von Opel?

"A. She was employed as early as Mrs. Dern's employment period until approximately the end of 1941.

"Q. Do you know where Mrs. Hummel lives now?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Can you give us the address?

"A. Pfirschbach near Hoechst in the Odenwald."

Mr. Baum: I will now skip the next questions, and read the question beginning—

"You testified the other day that some of the books of Mr. Wilhelm von Opel were burned, did you not?

"A. Yes.

"Q. At whose orders were the books burned?

"A. At Mr. Wilhelm von Opel's orders."

Mr. Baum: That is all.

(Mr. Laufer having returned to the trial table, and Mr. Ingoldsby now on the witness stand:)

Mr. Gallagher: Page 89—

DEPOSITION OF MARTA VON OPEL

"Marta Von Opel, a witness, was called, and having been first duly sworn was examined and testified as follows:

173 "Direct Examination

"By Mr. Connor:

"Q. What is your full name, Mrs. von Opel?

"A. Marta von Opel.

"Q. Do you speak some English?

"A. Yes, very little.

"Q. And you are the wife of Wilhelm von Opel?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And you are the mother of Fritz von Opel?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And how old are you, Mrs. von Opel?

"A. Seventy-two.

"Q. What was your birth date?

"A. 25 August 1874.

"Q. And do you live with your husband at Wiesbaden?

"A. At Ruesselsheim before.

"Q. And you now live at Wiesbaden?

"A. Yes, since 1929.

"Q. Do you remember what year the family sold out substantially all of its interest to General Motors?

"A. I think it was at the end of 1929.

"Q. Are you and your husband under a community property system of ownership?

"A. Yes, ever since our marriage.

"Q. But is it not correct that about two years ago you changed that arrangement of community property ownership?

"A. Because of my husband's Party membership our entire fortune was blocked. That was the reason for the change.

"Q. Now after the general sale of the Opel Company to General Motors in 1929, did you and your husband retain 600 shares of Adam Opel, A.G.?

"A. As much as I know he and his brother Fritz retained some.

"Q. Of course, what your husband retained, you owned half of under the community property system, didn't you?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Do you read English, Mrs. von Opel?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Now this purports to be a copy of the gift agreement. Do you remember signing a paper which was the same as this paper, Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 5?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Do you remember the date that you signed that, Mrs. von Opel?

"A. I couldn't know it by heart, it is too long ago.

"Q. But you remember signing the original of that?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Do you remember whether you signed it at Ruesselsheim or at Wiesbaden?

"A. I think at Wiesbaden.

"Q. And do you know Wronker-Flatow?

"A. I know him, of course.

"Q. And did he and his wife visit at your home in Wiesbaden?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And you knew him back in 1931?

"A. Or earlier. I don't recall. He is a General Motors man. I knew him since he was in Ruesselsheim.

"Q. And do you remember at this time whether Mr. Wronker-Flatow was there when you signed the gift agreement, Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 5?

"A. I can't remember, but my husband and my son were there.

"Q. Did they sign at the same time you did or had they signed already?

"A. I think they signed it already and came back from Ruesselsheim and told me about it at Wiesbaden.

"Q. And then you signed it at Wiesbaden as nearly as you remember.

"A. Yes.

"Q. Now, in that gift agreement, Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 5, some mention is made of a 'Niessbrauch'. Did you see that as you read it?

176 "A. Yes.

"Q. Now in that connection, I will ask you whether or not you ever received any income from the gift you made to Fritz?

"A. No, never. We received little presents, a wrist watch and one time my son Fritz arranged for a stag to be shot. Once in 1939 when we were in South America, Fritz gave us a certain amount in foreign exchange to help us for that trip. My husband tried to combine a business trip with a pleasure trip and we met the Opel agents in South America.

"Q. But you, yourself, never received any income from the gift?

"A. Never, never.

"Q. And to your knowledge, did your husband ever receive any income from this property which he gave to Fritz as a gift?

"A. No.

"Q. After you and your husband made this gift to your son, Fritz, did you have any left for yourself?

"A. More than we wanted. We never did want very much money."

(Mr. Laufer now on the witness stand, to read the answers in the deposition:)

Mr. Baum: Cross examination of Marta von Opel, 177 beginning on page 99—

"Mrs. von Opel, after 1929 your son Fritz no longer had a residence in Germany, did he?

"A. My husband sent him to the United States and he was in Belgium for a time on behalf of General Motors.

"Q. And did he live in Switzerland for several years?

"A. Only for several months. He has a villa there. He was sometimes in Berlin and Westerland.

"Note: Westerland identified as a little island off Germany in the Atlantic Ocean.

"Q. After the year 1931, about how often did you see your son Fritz each year?

"A. After 1931 we did not see Fritz every year.

"Q. Between 1931 and 1939 did you see him on a number of occasions?

"A. Yes. Several times in his home in St. Moritz and he came here several times from Berlin."

Mr. Baum: That is all.

191 DEPOSITION OF MANFRED STANSFIELD
(WRONKER-FLATOW)

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer the deposition of Manfred Stansfield.

(The deposition follows, Mr. Gallagher reading the questions, and Mr. Ingoldsby, on the witness stand, reading the answers:)

"Manfred Stansfield was called on behalf of the Defendant, and, after having been first duly sworn by the Notary, was examined and testified as follows:

192 "Mr. Baum: This deposition is taken pursuant to notice dated March 12, 1948 and filed with the District Court for the District of Columbia on the 17th day of March, 1948.

"In addition to the appearances noted on the title page, there is also present Dr. Heinrich Kronstein, Professor of Law, Georgetown University, who is acting in capacity of interpreter in behalf of the Plaintiff. There is present Mr. Joseph Laufer, attorney for the Department of Justice acting as interpreter in behalf of the Defendant.

"It is mutually stipulated between the parties that these two persons are qualified to, and shall act as interpreters without taking oath.

"Direct Examination

"By Mr. Laufer:

"Q. Mr. Stansfield, what is your full name?

"A. Manfred Stansfield. I changed my name from Manfred Wronker-Flatow.

"Q. You used the name Manfred Wronker-Flatow until what time?

"A. Until I was naturalized. With my naturalization I dropped the second part of my name and took the name of my mother.

"Q. What is your present occupation?

"A. I am an officer and director of a corporation.

"Q. Where do you reside?

"A. 49 West 57th New York.

193 "Q. Prior to your coming to the United States, where did you reside?

"A. Partly in England and for about 40 years in Germany, a little over 40 years.

"Q. Will you state briefly your education?

"A. Well, I was born in England. Up to the age of six, I had education in England, whatever you have, and then I went to Germany and went to the Humanistic Gymnasium, passed my mature there. I studied at Munich, Geneva, and Berlin, plus my legal examination as a lawyer.

"Q. When were you admitted to the bar?

"A. In 1920; to the Court in 1911. After the war, I was admitted to the bar.

"Q. Where were you admitted to the bar?

"A. In Berlin, later on in Wiesbaden, when I moved there.

"Q. After your admission to the bar in Berlin in 1921, where did you reside?

"A. In Berlin.

"Q. Until what time?

"A. Until 1930. In 1930, I moved to Wiesbaden.

"Q. How long did you live in Wiesbaden?

"A. Until the end of 1932. Then I moved to Ruesselsheim.

"Q. And you remained in Ruesselsheim how long?

"A. Until November, 1933, November 24, 1933.

"Q. And then you left Germany?

194 "A. I left Germany, yes.

"Q. And you came to the United States?

"A. Not right straight away. I first went to Switzerland and looked over the General Motors organization for General Motors in Europe.

"Q. And then you came to the United States?

"A. Well, I came to the United States quite often before I settled down, and that was in May, 1939. It may be June —no, I think it was the end of May, 1939.

"Q. After you left Berlin, did you continue to practice law in Germany, that is, in Wiesbaden and subsequently in Ruesselsheim?

"A. I did not practice law. I was a member of the Vorstand when I came to Ruessellsheim, member of the Vorstand of the Adam Opel A. G. I was a member of the board of supervision, I think you would call it, and, as such, I was also general counsel of Adam Opel A.G.

"Q. In addition to your training in German law, did you have any training in American or English law?

"A. The training I had was by studying personally, yes, and I was with Justizrat Schneider as Referendar before the war, who was the expert on American and English law. So, I had a practical education in American and English law. But, I would not, by any means, call myself competent in American law or English law. For the purposes it served, it was all right.

195 "Q. Were you ever a Notary in Germany?

"A. No. I never applied for it. I was all the time traveling practically. My practice was international and I traveled all over Europe and was very often in the United States and Canada.

"Q. You are now a citizen of the United States?

"A. That is right.

"Q. When did you meet Wilhelm Von Opel?

"A. 1928.

"Q. When did you meet Mr. Fritz Opel?

"A. It was also in 1928.

"Q. On what occasion did you meet these gentlemen?

"A. In 1928, there were negotiations between General Motors and the Opel Brothers regarding the sale of the Opel Plant or the Opel firm. At that time, the firm was not a corporation. In fact, I was rather instrumental in insisting on changing it to a corporation before we took it over.

"Q. You were retained by General Motors Corporation at that time, or had you been retained before?

"A. I was retained before.

"Q. Since when?

"A. Ever since General Motors came over to Germany, I acted for them for all of their activities. They had an Acceptance Corporation. I acted for Frigidaire and for the insurance company.

196 "Q. When was that, approximately?

"A. I would say it started in 1926 or 1925, something like that.

"Q. In dealing with Adam Opel A. G., were you acting on behalf of the General Motors Corporation?

"A. Are you talking now about the beginning? During then, they were the Opel Brothers, you see.

"Q. Were you ever retained by the Adam Opel, A. G., prior to the sale to General Motors?

"A. Not prior to the sale to General Motors, no.

"Q. But subsequently?

"A. Subsequently I went with General Motors, first on the board, as I stated. I was counsel of the Adam Opel A. G. I went in the board of managers.

"Q. That was when?

"A. 1930 that I went on the board of management.

"Q. Were you retained personally by Wilhelm Von Opel at any time?

"A. No.

"Q. At no time?

"A. At first there was strong opposition on the part of the Opel Brothers against American methods. They had built up their firm through a lifetime. They felt everything they had done was wonderful. I had to amalgamate that with American ideas. I had a lot of fights with the Opel Brothers to start with. As they saw that I tried 197 to be fair in every case, I developed very nice friendships with both. I understand the Opel Brothers formerly also had terrible fights and they also remained brothers in spite of that. It developed into a very friendly relation and Wilhelm Von Opel treated me, after a very short while, as a very good friend, and all of his internal matters, most personal matters, he discussed with me. I should not say all, because I know only of these he did discuss with me.

"Q. But you were never formally retained by him as his attorney?

"A. No.

"Q. Were you ever retained by Mr. Fritz Von Opel?

"A. No.

"Q. In your capacity as general counsel of Adam Opel A. F. in Ruesselsheim, you had, of course, contact with all of the officers of the General Motors Corporation in the United States, did you not?

"A. Well, with all of those that had anything to do with it, and most of them I knew very well, but I knew them before as counsel of General Motors.

"Q. In your official capacity as counsel of General Motors, with whom did you deal in the General Motors organization here?

"A. On the legal level it was John Thomas Smith, 198 and Charley Carroll was in the Export. That is on the legal level. Otherwise, there were many. J. P.

Mooney was the president of the Export Corporation at that time. There were Graeme Howard and Ed Riley. There were numbers.

"Q. You knew Mr. Pratt?

"A. Oh, yes, I knew Mr. Pratt.

"Q. And Mr. Sloan?

"A. Very well.

"Q. Mr. Brown?

"A. I had very little to do with Mr. Brown. I met him in John Thomas Smith's office.

"Q. And Mr. Bradley?

"A. I knew him very well; also the Fisher Brothers, Fred Fisher and Charley Fisher.

"Q. You mentioned before that negotiations between the General Motors Corporation and Adam Opel A. G. and Opel Brothers were carried on in 1928. What was the final result of these negotiations?

"A. Well, the first final result was an option for General Motors either to buy the plant of the Adam Opel A. G. and all the assets of the Adam Opel firm, to buy the stock if the Opel Brothers in the meantime converted their firm into a corporation. It was an option with the right for General Motors to investigate. Investigations took place. I would say that in March, 1929 the option was accepted and 199 payments were made, and escrow agreements were made and so forth.

"Q. What escrow agreements are you referring to?

"A. There was an escrow agreement—now, I have not seen those for many, many years, and I do not quite remember whether they were separate escrow agreements for Fritz Von Opel and Wilhelm Von Opel.

"Q. When you speak of Fritz Von Opel, do you mean the Brother of Wilhelm?

"A. That is right.

"Q. I am showing you now Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 3; and I ask you whether this is one of the escrow documents you were referring to? This is a letter dated April 11, 1929, and addressed to the National City Bank by Mr. Wilhelm Von Opel.

"A. Do you mind if I read it to refresh my memory?

"Q. Read it by all means.

"A. I mean I remember it, but not the details. It would have been the end of March or early in April, I would say.

"Mr. Laufer: At a previous deposition, it was stipulated between the parties that the date of Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 3 is April, 11, 1929.

"Mr. Connor: That is at page 9 of the depositions heretofore taken.

"The Witness: This looks as if there were two escrow agreements. This would only be ten percent.

200 "By Mr. Laufer:

"Q. Could you tell us what the purpose of this escrow agreement was?

"A. There were many purposes. In fact, on both sides, there were different reasons for being quite satisfied in having this escrow agreement. In the first place, it was felt that it would be well to keep some German ownership, at least, at the beginning. When we had all the publicity, there was quite an uproar when the biggest automobile plant in Germany was sold to American control, and this enabled us to say that we felt there was at least as much capital still in the Opel firm as there was in most of the other German automobile plants.

"Now, I have to recollect a little bit. I know there were many considerations on both sides. There was quite some discussion about the question. When we started out, we were talking of 100 percent. While giving it a lot of thought on both sides, we could see some very good reasons why it should be traded this way. On General Motors' side, also they wanted to keep the interest of the Opel Brothers. We knew that there would be quite some feelings because General Motors was going to scrap a great deal of the work that Fritz Opel had done; that is, the old Fritz Opel, on the engineering end; and they had a terrific program of cars ranging from the smallest four cylinder car up to the eight cylinder car, compared at that time with the Cadillac. We felt in the beginning we were going to reduce the 201 program, beginning only with the one small model and later on to a small six cylinder model, and that was almost over the dead body of Fritz Opel. He did not say that in so many words. We had all of these fights afterwards with him. We felt we wanted to keep him interested and have an interest in the development and not to break up. We felt that was one of the ways how to do it. That is the second reason.

"The first reason was very important for the General Motors.

"For the Opel Brothers, it was naturally also interesting to have some of the money outside of Germany. At any time it was interesting to have dollars or get dollars or be able to convert to dollars. I think that was interesting to the Opel Brothers to get it at a later date.

"I cannot say that I discussed this particular point before this was made, but maybe I mentioned it to the Opel Brothers that it would probably be advantageous.

"Q. So, what was the actual, final transaction that was made in 1929?

"A. Before the option was accepted, the firm had been changed into a corporation. Now, at that time, my firm was already acting also for the Opel Brothers. It was a rather peculiar situation. With the permission of General Motors, we acted then for both parties practically. It is understandable why they would have my firm act in the change to a corporation, because they wanted to know that 202 the corporation, as set up, would be satisfactory to General Motors. When the transaction was made, the corporation was in existence, then the stock was purchased.

"Q. How much of the stock was purchased?

"A. Eighty percent, and 20 percent went into escrow.

"Q. Ten percent of this stock was referred to in this escrow agreement; is that right?

"A. Yes, I think that is the ten percent; ten percent of the 100 percent, that is right.

"Q. And the remaining ten percent?

"A. As far as I remember, in the name of Fritz Opel.

"Q. And these remaining ten percents were covered by a similar escrow agreement?

"A. That is correct.

"Q. Now, you say there were very good reasons on both sides why a German interest should be retained; is that correct?

"A. That is correct.

"Q. Would it not have been just as well served by having the Opel family own outright, retain outright, ownership in this 20 percent instead of subjecting them to this escrow agreement?

"A. General Motors wanted to be in the position at any time, when they wanted to, to make the 100 percent 203 purchase. Of course, that is the way they started out; that was their original intention.

"Q. This agreement also provided that Wilhelm Von Opel or Fritz Opel could, in turn, request General Motors to take the stock off their hands?

"A. That is correct; but at a certain damage.

"Q. In what respect was there a certain damage?

"A. As far as I remember, the price was higher if General Motors asked and lower if the Opel Brothers asked. So, if they waited until General Motors asked, they would have gotten a higher price.

"Q. Was one of the considerations involved in having the German interest retained, problems of German taxation?

"A. On whose side?

"Q. On the side of either one, General Motors on the one hand or the Opel Brothers on the other.

"A. As far as General Motors was concerned, we set up a situation where the transfer would not be 100 percent in the name of the General Motors Corporation. Part of the stock went to the Argonaut Realty Corporation, five percent of the stock, if my memory is correct. That was set up with the idea if at any time the stock of the Opel Brothers, if they insisted on taking over, still General Motors would not own 100 percent of the stock. That was done because otherwise it would involve a real high real estate 204 tax. That tax was not meant really to hit cases like this, but it would have hit them. For that reason we protected it by having five percent to the Argonaut Realty Corporation.

"Q. On the part of the brothers, Wilhelm Von Opel and Dr. Fritz Opel?

"A. As far as tax was concerned?

"Q. Yes.

"A. Well, they did not discuss their tax problems at that time with me. They did later on, but not then.

"Q. Mr. Stansfield, I would like to ask you if you are familiar with the so-called gift agreement which was entered into between Wilhelm Von Opel and his son?

"A. Very definitely yes. I have not seen it for quite some time. So, I do not remember the exact wording of every one of them.

"Q. I would like to show you a copy of that agreement and ask you whether that is the one you refer to, Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 5?

"Mr. Connor: Mr. Laufer, since Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 5 was put into the record at the depositions taken in Germany I understand that you procured from Wilhelm Von Opel, a copy of a document purporting to be the original of the gift agreement, and that the document which you have just handed to me is a photostatic copy of that purported original gift agreement. I think it would be 205 well for the record if this were now marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 5-B, and that in the further discussion of the gift agreement, we might preferably refer to Plaintiff's Exhibit 5-B for identification in connection with the discussions of the gift agreement.

"Is that agreeable?

"Mr. Laufer: Yes.

"Mr. Connor: Let the record show that there has been handed to the witness a photostatic copy of Plaintiff's Exhibit 5-B for identification.

"The Witness: That is the gift agreement, yes.

"By Mr. Laufer:

"Q. Were you present, Mr. Stansfield, when this agreement was signed?

"A. I am sure I was present when it was signed by Wilhelm Von Opel and Fritz Von Opel. I am not sure whether I was present when Marta Von Opel signed it. I lived at Wiesbaden at the same time Wilhelm Von Opel lived there. I know for certain it was signed. I remember that very definitely.

"Q. You say you remember definitely it was signed by Wilhelm?

"A. By both. I was present when it was signed.

"Q. Do you know when that agreement was signed?

"A. I do not remember the date, but I feel sure that the date on here was the date when it was signed, because 206 I did not usually make agreements and have them ante-dated.

"Q. So, you state that you are sure that this agreement was not pre-dated?

"A. I feel absolutely sure, because I did not do that. When I was present and contracts were made, we did not ante-date them. It was not a practice.

"Q. Did you state to an official of the FBI that you recalled vaguely some discussion about pre-dating this agreement?

"A. Definitely not.

"Q. You never said that to the FBI agent?

"A. Definitely not.

"Q. Did you tell him that it was entirely possible that the agreement may have been pre-dated?

"A. I do not think I ever would have made such a statement.

"Q. You mean to say that you did not make such a statement to the FBI agent?

"A. Yes. About a half a dozen FBI agents—I do not know how many—have asked me the same question. I do not remember every question and every answer, but I feel pretty sure that I would not have said to him that it might be well possible that it was ante-dated. I would not expect to give such an answer.

"Q. Do you recall who typed the agreement?

207 "A. Well, I recall who could have typed it, and who was in the office of Geheimrat Von Opel, because it was in the office of Geheimrat Von Opel, and his chief secretary was Miss Uebel. I know somebody typed it and I know it was brought in and signed.

"Q. When you drafted this agreement of October 5, 1931, did you prepare an original draft, or did you have any preliminary drafts to work on?

"A. It would be my guess that there was a draft, very lengthy draft, of Max Hachenburg. I have the highest respect for Max Hachenburg, as a lawyer, but I did not think this quite met the situation we had there.

"Q. I an showing you now a document marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 8, and I ask you whether this is the draft of Dr. Max Hachenburg that you were referring to?

"A. It looks like it. I mean I do not remember every detail of it, but it looks like Dr. Hachenburg's.

"Q. Who was Dr. Hachenburg?

"A. One of the outstanding German corporation lawyers.

"Q. Did you know him personally?

"A. Yes; we worked together. He represented the Opel Brothers at our first meeeting with General Motors on the purchase of the stock or the Opel plant. He had at that time, also made some draft of agreements which we did not accept, but we made very much simpler agreements 208 that I drafted at the same time in English and in German.

"Mr. Connor: You are now referring to agreements with respect to the sale to General Motors?.

"The Witness: That is correct; in connection with Dr. Hachenburg.

"We were very close together for days. I met him outside as a lawyer.

"By Mr. Laufer:

"Q. Did you confer with him also on the drafting of this document of October 5, 1931, the Agreement?

"A. I do not remember that I did, and I do not think I would have.

"Q. But you saw this preliminary draft that he had drawn up?

"A. That I remember.

"Q. Did you see any other documents that he had addressed to Wilhelm Von Opel or Fritz Von Opel about this very same agreement?

"A. It could be, but I do not remember.

"Q. I am showing you now Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 7, copy of a letter dated October 3, 1931, and addressed to Wilhelm Von Opel, and I ask you whether you remember having seen this letter?

"A. It is quite probable that I have seen it. I could not swear to it, but I would say Wilhelm Von Opel would 209 have shown it to me.

"Q. I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 9, a copy of an outline of the gift agreement, which was contained as an enclosure of the letter of October, 1931, Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 7, and ask you whether you had seen this outline at the time of drafting the October 5, 1931 agreement?

"A. I do not remember this. I do not remember seeing it. If it was part and parcel of the correspondence up to the date when I made this other draft, then I might have seen it.

"Q. I am showing you now Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 10, copy of a letter dated October 5, 1931, written by Dr. Max Hachenburg, and addressed to Mr. Wilhelm Von Opel, and ask you whether you saw this letter at the time when the October 5, 1931 agreement was drafted?

"A. I do not remember that letter.

"Q. When you drafted this agreement with whom did you discuss it?

"A. Well, in the first place, with Wilhelm Von Opel, but Wilhelm Von Opel had discussed with me many times the desire to be able to preserve—he said he was not worried about income, and this went back years before this, say in 1929, after the agreement was made—he was worried about preserving for himself and for his family, or for his family, capital, as much of the capital as he could, and in 1931, starting, I would say, in the early summer of 210 1931, as you know, the financial situation, the economic situation everywhere, was very upsetting, and people were very nervous about what was going to happen next. So, it was the outcome of many talks. It was not that we sat down in 15 minutes and decided this thing. We had discussed the general question behind this before. We had discussed it in many respects.

"The four Opel brothers had between them offspring of eight, six of them had gotten the full share of the Opel plant. One had gotten a good part as endowment when she married. This was the sister of Fritz Von Opel. Fritz Von Opel was the only one who never got anything out of it. In addition, he was the main one who lost by the sale. Before the sale was made, Fritz Von Opel was the man who probably would have taken over the general management of the whole plant. He was the one headed for that. In fact, if I remember correctly, he was made a member of the Vorstand as general director. He was called general director when the corporation was made. In the beginning when General Motors took it over, he and Mr. Wood were the two members of the Vorstand. But, it very soon appeared that it was not a team that could really work together, because the General Motors, I guess, naturally prevailed 100 percent, and the Opel families were not used to listening to instructions from other people. So, it did not quite work out.

"So, the idea was, when the sale was made—Fritz 211 had lost his position, had lost practically his future, as a German industrialist, because the Opel family was not permitted to go in the automobile industry again. That was all the training that Fritz von Opel had. So, the idea of giving Fritz Von Opel a share similar to what the seven others had gotten, and most of them were younger than he was, was in the air. It was developed to this in 1931, when all the excitement about what is going to happen to Germany—are the Communists going to take over or are the Nazi going to take over? That led to the discussions with Wilhelm Von Opel. I do not think that I had many, if any, discussions about it with Fritz Von Opel."

(The reading of the deposition continuing, Mr. Boland now in the witness chair reading the entries.)

"Q. Did you have any discussions with anybody else?

"A. About this particular deal between Wilhelm Von Opel and his son?

"Q. Yes.

"A. I do not recall. I recall that maybe the mother was present sometimes, but otherwise it did not go outside as far as I remember.

"Q. Did you discuss it with Wilhelm Von Opel's daughter?

"A. I don't think so, at least, I definitely do not remember. I do not remember ever talking to her about business matters. I remember talking to her about her family 212 matters, about her husband, but not about capital matters.

"Q. When you drafted this agreement of 1931, did you have the option agreement of 1929 on hand?

"A. I do not know.

"Q. Did you discuss it with Wilhelm Von Opel at that time?

"A. In 1931?

"Q. Yes.

"A. It could be. If I did, I don't remember, and I don't remember in what connection, but it could be. I really do not know the details. It is seventeen years back.

"Q. Do you recall whether you discussed that option agreement with Fritz Von Opel, the asserted donee?

"A. When you say the option agreement, do you mean the escrow?

"Q. Yes.

"A. Wait a minute. Whether I discussed the escrow agreement—I am quite sure we did, because it was so closely connected. We were not talking about the same agreement.

"Q. I was talking about the escrow agreement of 1929. I will repeat the question. Did you discuss the escrow agreement with Wilhelm Von Opel at the time when you finally drew up this agreement of October 5, 1931? I am referring now to Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 3.

"A. It would be naturally that it would have been 213 mentioned. We knew the contents of it. There was not much we could discuss about it. It was a simple agreement. We knew what the contents were. It was part of the atmosphere.

"Q. You also mentioned or discussed this escrow agreement of 1929, Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 3, with Mr. Fritz Von Opel?

"A. I do not remember. Also there it is very well possible; it is almost probable, when we were in together in connection with this agreement, because of the way it developed—I would say we took that escrow agreement for granted to start with. It was part of the whole gift.

"Q. You testified before that this draft by Mr. Hachenburg was not acceptable and required modification; is that correct?

"A. Under the circumstances, yes, that is correct.

"Q. Would you explain to us why the original draft was not acceptable or required modification?

"A. Well, to understand this whole situation you have to put yourself into the atmosphere of October 1931 in Germany, which was similar to the atmosphere here now today, or anywhere, when you start discussing whether there is going to be a war or not, or is this part of the country going to turn Communistic or is not—many things we know today we did not know seventeen years back. We did not know at that date whether we had a lot of time to 214 go through a very complete set of how this should be handled in planning your future, in a very careful way for the son and so on, or whether you had only 24 hours to do it, you see, because emergency decrees were coming out one after another. I do not remember any more the dates when they came out, I know at that time there was a hectic situation.

"Q. What emergency decrees are you referring to?

"A. I am not referring to any detail. There were very many and the current economic situation was almost growing out of hand.

"Q. Are you now speaking about the emergency decrees by the Bruening Government or any specific emergency orders that might have a bearing on Mr. Von Opel's specific situation?

"A. At that moment, there were no emergency decrees that prevented doing what we did with the gift agreement, but we did not know whether within 24 hours there wouldn't be something to that effect, or in three days or in three months. Before the things happen, you do not know what date they are going to happen.

"Q. Are you referring now to decrees governing foreign funds control in Germany?

"A. Anything could interfere with Geheimrat Von Opel making the gift to his son effectively and disposing of stock that he had outside of Germany.

215 "Q. Such decrees would be decrees governing currency and foreign funds; is that not correct?

"A. Don't let me tie myself down to anything. It was a big cloud. We did not know what it might be, what things that would interfere with doing what was the intention to do.

"Q. Do you recall that on October 2nd, the German Government issued an additional emergency decree relating to foreign funds control which strengthened the extent of government control over foreign funds?

"A. I do not remember that it was done on the 2nd of October. Even if the date was October 2nd, it does not mean you knew it on the 2nd of October. It could have been a few days later.

"Q. Or a few days earlier?

"A. That you knew about it, before the 2nd day of October?

"Q. Yes.

"A. I do not remember. I do not remember any one of the dates. I have not gone over those things. I must say I only got my books after fifteen years, just about a month ago. So, I was out of contact with those things and they did not mean anything more to me, the date. What I was concerned with at that time was whether, when we made the agreement, we could do it, whether it was legally possible. I was under the impression, and I suppose everybody else would have been, that it was necessary to act 216 very quickly and very smoothly, to make it effective.

"Q. So, the whole transaction was carried through with some degree of urgency and haste?

"A. It was almost hectic. I mean at that time the Nazi had gotten into power. In every election, they got more votes. Some people thought, in spite of that, that we might go Communistic, but other people thought they might go National Socialistic, but few people knew what the difference was, but they knew it would not be good for the capitalists.

"Q. I am returning to my question: Why was the draft by Mr. Hachenburg abandoned? You said, did you not, that there were too many details in this agreement?

"A. Yes.

"I will give you a little bit more background. I had a lot of experience in Peace Treaty settlements after the last war, and I knew how important it was that transactions were made on certain dates and that they were made so that they would stand up under the scrutiny of examination and cross examination. So, I knew that the important thing was to get this gift settled in a way that somebody outside of Germany was the one who owned it, that it would not be subject to German legislation any more; that no pressure could be brought about handling this, and for that reason, a lot of things were done that when you look at it as a lawyer, who is used to taking things
217 very peacefully and has a lot of time to think things over, you might do them a little bit differently, but

I knew that the main thing was to get it out of German legislation if we wanted to make this gift effective, and so that it stayed outside.

"I must say one thing, how capitalists felt in those days. There was a fear. Some feared Communism and some feared National Socialism, but they all feared something. There was a saying at that time that money alone does not make you happy. In Germany it was said, 'Geld allein macht nicht glücklich, man muss es in der Schweiz haben.'

"That is, money alone shouldn't make you happy; you should have it in Switzerland to be happy about it. That meant you had to have it outside of Germany.

"There was also a good reason why this transaction should take place outside of Germany just as fast as possible, and for that reason we did some of the things you would not do otherwise in your dealing with a stranger and not between a father and a son.

"Q. Do you know whether, at the time of this agreement, there was some form of understanding between Wilhelm Von Opel and Fritz Opel as to how the shares that were the object of the gift were to be handled?

"A. I can tell you my own opinion and my own recollection about this situation. I felt the right thing 218 would be for Fritz Von Opel to sell the Opel stock just as fast as he could, and for this reason: I did not want to have it in escrow there and have a situation where pressure could also be brought upon General Motors. I was interested in General Motors getting out of the whole situation. If it was known that there was an escrow agreement and that General Motors were the people who could decide—we said there was so much capital in German hands. We did not say whether it would stay in German hands or not; we never mentioned that. But, in case there were regulations that would force the Opel brothers to bring their money in or something like that, General Motors would have been under the same pressure. They would have been forced, not by law maybe, but by pressure that could be exerted on the various corporations, and I know how General Motors would have acted if they had been told by the Government. They would have said, 'Well, we will wait until all this is clear and clarified and so on.' For that reason, it was my opinion that if the gift was to be made effective in every respect—that is, being subject to German laws—it should get out of the escrow of General Motors—that was the main thing that I felt should happen.

"Q. And you communicated this opinion of yours to your friend, Mr. Wilhelm Von Opel, and to Mr. Fritz Von Opel at that time?

"A. I am sure I expressed it. I do not know 219 whether they were so clear about this, but I made it very clear that I would act quickly and would do that. I have given a lot of advice that was never followed, not only in this respect. I did not keep a diary of everything I said. I must say that too.

"Q. The draft of Mr. Hachenburg's contained rather detailed references to a holding company?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Do you know whether or not there was an understanding between Wilhelm Von Opel and Dr. Fritz Von Opel to have these shares transferred to a holding company?

"A. I do not remember that at all. Let me put it this way: I felt that the only thing that was urgent was to get it out of the General Motors and have it under the control of Fritz alone, and nobody else had to decide what should happen to the proceeds of these shares but Fritz Von Opel outside of Germany. That was my personal opinion in the whole thing. I felt that everything else could be handled afterwards. That was not urgent. I am sure I said, 'I do not want to burden the situation at this moment,' because what he was given was practically part of his inheritance, in any case, and so on.

"Q. Do you recall whether or not it was clear between Mr. Wilhelm Von Opel or whether it was made clear as between Wilhelm Von Opel and Fritz Von Opel during this drafting period, that the Opel shares or their 220 proceeds should be transferred to a holding company?

"A. Well, there is no question that some talk must have been about that subject, on account of the Hachenburg letter and draft. I mean that would have brought up the question. I am sure that I just brushed that aside because I did not feel that was a thing that was important at this moment.

"Q. I am not so much concerned about your personal opinion at that point, but as to your observation as to the relations between Wilhelm Von Opel and Fritz Von Opel with regard to this matter.

"A. Well, I have tried to think of it. I don't remember from that time. I have heard it afterwards. I do not remember at that time whether we went into any detail about any holding company or anything. I was in the management of a concern that was very busy and I was asked to sit in and help straighten this situation out. That could all be done quickly because we had discussed the problems that we were trying to solve very often before.

"Q. I now show you a transcript of record in the case of Uebersee Finanz-Korporation Aktien Gesellschaft versus Rosen and others in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, and refer you to page 30 of that record, where there is an affidavit by Manfred Wronker-Flatow, dated June 6, 1935, and call your attention to a statement appearing on page 31, and ask you whether this refreshes your memory.

221 "Mr. Connor: May I suggest the witness read the whole affidavit?

"The Witness: 'In September and October, 1931, I advised Dr. Wilhelm von Opel and his son Fritz von Opel in the preparation and execution of a deed of gift from the former.

to the latter, of which a copy is attached to the affidavit of Mr. Fritz von Opel herein marked Exhibit R. I participated in the conversations which led up to the execution of these documents. In these conversations, it was stated by Dr. Wilhelm von Opel and Mr. Fritz von Opel that the securities should be transferred to a corporation for the purpose of protecting the interests therein created by the deed of gift. The clauses in the deed of gift relative to the usufruct reserved to the parents of Fritz von Opel were particularly insisted on by Dr. Wilhelm von Opel, who said that he attached the greatest importance to this restriction on and reservation from the gift. As drawn by me the deed of gift, Exhibit R, was drawn for the purpose of carrying out the intention of the parties so expressed.'

"Is that what you wanted me to read?

"By Mr. Laufer:

"Q. Yes.

"A. This was in 1935 and this is 1948, and probably what I said at that time was fresher in my mind. At this moment, I do not recollect.

"Q. Do you remember having made this affidavit to 222 an American court in 1935?

"A. I remember having made an affidavit at that time, and I suppose it is that.

"Q. Will you have a look at the entire affidavit and see if you can identify it as your own?

"A. Well, I made an affidavit to that effect. I suppose it is verbally what I said. That, I cannot swear to without seeing my own draft. I do not remember every detail of it.

"Mr. Laufer: I will have marked as Defendant's Exhibit D-34 the affidavit of Manfred Wronker-Flatow, dated June 6, 1935, appearing on pages 31 to 35 of the transcript of the record in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in the case of Uebersee Finanz Korporation Aktien Gesellschaft versus Walter T. Rosen et al.

"By Mr. Laufer:

"Q. Coming back to this drafting period on or about October 5, 1931, did you know at the time that Fritz von Opel held an option on certain shares of a Swiss corporation called Uebersee Finanz-Körporation?

"A. I do not recall hearing that name until long after that.

"Q. Did you know that he held options on shares in some Swiss corporation at that time?

"A. I do not remember that I did.

"Q. You stated before that about that time when 223 the gift agreement was signed, the sale of these shares had been practically decided upon; is that correct?

"A. I know that I personally was strongly in favor of selling them.

"Q. Well, I am interested in the intentions of the parties.

"A. I flattered myself that they were following my advice. Whether they were going to or not, I do not know. I prepared everything so they could do it, and could do it smoothly and without any noise.

"Q. I show you again a copy of the alleged gift agreement of October 5, 1931, and marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 5-B, and call your attention to the second sentence in the first complete paragraph of this agreement which reads in English that the agreement was made, 'In order to preserve the property in the male line of descent' of the Opel family, and I would like to ask you to explain the meaning and purpose of that statement?

"A. Well, you see, this agreement was in an unorthodox way for this reason: Properly, the agreement should have been made before a notary public and under the ordinary circumstances, that is what we would have done. A notary public, under German law, is something entirely different from a notary public over here. I wonder whether I have to go into detail there?

224 "Q. If you will state briefly the difference.

"A. Well, the difference here, I believe, anybody who can write their name and a few other things can apply to become a notary public, and he has to be able to answer some questions that he knows before he goes to answer them. Over there, you have to be a lawyer of old standing. In some states over there, you could only be a notary public, but you had to be a fully qualified lawyer, with qualifications to become a learned judge, in any case, in any state, you have to have that qualification, as far as I remember.

"Now, in those states that I really know, as a rule, they were lawyers of old standing that became notary publics. When a notary public took up a notarial act, he kept the originals in his own notarial file, and all he handed over to the parties was a copy, a certified copy of the original. If the notary died, for instance, the originals would go to the court, and the court would keep them, and God knows how many years later, you could always get a certified copy of that original, and it was as good as the original in any place under the law. The notary public files were always open to inspection at any time because he had to take care of the payment of stamp duty taxes.

"Q. Inspection by whom?

"A. As far as I remember, by the tax control, to see that the taxes were properly taken care of. In many 225 cases, the notary did not have the right to hand over certified copies before those taxes were paid.

"So, we had a good many reasons why, at that time, we did not want to run into danger of having any publicity of a big gift being made, a gift of this extent being made. We did not want it to leak out until the gift was effective and was really made valid. It was my idea at that time that the quickest way to act was that way without any publicity and have Fritz Opel take care of the whole situation.

"Q. I should like now to revert to my question, why the statement was made in the first paragraph of this gift, 'In order to preserve the property in the male line of descent'?

"Now, although we did not want this document to become public property before we really had obtained the purpose of this document, that is, to get this part of the Opel fortune into hands that would not be subject to the German laws any more—before we had achieved that, we did not want it to become public property. After that, we knew we had to present it, and we had to state that gift was made and gift tax had to be paid. So, for that reason, knowing the sentiment of the Germans, we did not have to tell them and we did not want to tell them—in fact, the transaction that was being made was parting with the Opel's stock to an extent.

So, I can assure you, we made many documents that 226 way, that were made for the Nazi people to read them and be happy about them when they read them. This read all right for a Nazi, to see that the father who was subject to Nazi pressure, wanted the son to keep this in the family.

"Q. At that time, in 1931, what Government was in power?

"A. The Bruening Government.

"Q. When you speak of Nazi pressure, you are referring to some indefinite future?

"A. Yes.

"Q. You just stated that you wished to keep the situation under your control until the shares were sold; is that correct?

"A. Yes; until they could not touch it.

"Q. You said before, you avoided a notarial act in order to preserve the secrecy of this transaction?

"A. That was one of the things. I do not know whether I said secrecy or not; keep it in the family.

"Q. You said you wanted to keep it in the family?

"A. All right.

"Q. In making a notarial act, the only access to these notarial files would be had by the Government; is that correct?

"A. Right; and the tax authorities; and whatever that meant already then, and whatever it meant in the future, we found out later on to the fullest extent, but we had some idea what it could mean.

"Q. So, you wished to keep the agreement a family 227 secret, at least until you had sold the shares; is that correct?

"A. The same as we did with the whole Opel transaction in 1928 and 1929. No publicity came out of the Opel transaction until it was finalized. For six months, nobody knew anything about it, about the way we handled it.

"Q. But the 1929 transactions were formalized and finalized before a notary public; is that right?

"A. Not at the beginning. At the beginning, two of the agreements were signed in Paris and one of the managing directors—in fact, the managing director of the General Motors GMBH—had typed the English agreement, and my wife, who was a very poor typist, who never did it for any business purposes, typed the German agreement and Hachenburg dictated while I wrote the German part and English part. We kept the secret there too as long as necessary.

"Q. This agreement of October 5 was never formally notarized afterwards?

"A. It was not necessary, because you could legalize the gift just by performance.

"Q. When was the gift perfected under German law after the signing of this agreement?

"A. When the transfer of the donated object was actually made. I hope 'transfer' is the proper word in American legal law.

"Q. When was the gift then perfected?
228 "A. At that date it was perfected.

"Q. At that date it was perfected?

"A. Yes.

"Q. You stated before that you wished to wait. You did not mean to say you wished to wait until the perfection of the gift, because the agreement, itself, constituted, according to what you say now, the perfection of the gift?

"Q. Not according to what I said, no. The agreement itself was not notarized and thereby, there was no legal possibility to sue, for instance, under that agreement. If it had been notarized, then the donee could sue the donator."

Mr. Burling: I appreciate the difficulties counsel has in reading. I would respectfully request that he endeavor to read it as much as possible so that the meaning we gave to the sentences can be brought out. I am sure it is through inadvertence that counsel has read through a great many commas.

Mr. Gallagher: You want the commas read?

Mr. Burling: I don't want the commas read.

Mr. Gallagher: The pauses, you mean.

Mr. Burling: I want the sense brought out.

Mr. Gallagher: I am sure we can. I wanted to expedite it.

Where did we leave off?

The Court: You read that part, Mr. Burling.

229 Mr. Burling: May I read it?

The Court: You read it.

(The reading of the deposition continued, Mr. Burling now reading the questions and Mr. Boland the answers):

"Q. At that time, then, was the gift completed?

"A. In fact, when the shares got in the power of Fritz von Opel, or whichever way it was done afterwards—I do not know how they handled it at the final stages. I know what we did so they could handle.

"Q. So, the gift, what is called in American law, an escrow agreement, it was not the transfer itself?

"A. That is correct.

"Q. So the execution of the gift was to take place at some later stage?

"A. Correct.

"Q. And in what form did you visualize the effectuation of the gift?

"A. Well, there were two possibilities. There, again, I want to make it clear, I had this double capacity. I did not want to have General Motors involved in any way in this whole thing, and for that reason, for quick action and not make it necessary for American lawyers to pass on the legality of the gift act and so on, I just made out power of attorney for Fritz von Opel so that he could go over and give instructions to General Motors to get out 230 of the escrow. From then on, as far as I was concerned, they were practically on their own. I had opened the doors of how to do it and how to get it under control. Whether they did it or how they did it, it was up to them. I do not think I followed through on the further steps.

"Q. If Fritz von Opel never took the shares out of escrow but sold them directly to General Motors, when, in your opinion, was the gift executed?

"A. Well, he was acting at that time, as far as the outside was concerned, on behalf of the owner of record. I would say that the moment he put into his own name either the shares or the proceeds, he had the right to act as the owner of the stock, from that moment, because Wilhelm von Opel immediately gave him the power to act. This power was also for several reasons. One of the reasons was my experience with legal foreign documents getting into the hands of American lawyers and the time it takes before they decide that this document is in order and they can transfer millions of dollars to somebody else. I mean they do not do that in a half hour's time.

"Q. You mentioned before that you thought the gift was completed at a time—

"A. When the transfer was actually made.

"Q. When the transfer was actually made to Fritz von Opel's own name?

231 "A. To Fritz von Opel.

"Q. To Fritz von Opel as the attorney in fact, of Wilhelm von Opel?

"A. Wait a minute. You talk about the shares. Internally, it was the understanding that he was the owner at that moment. Externally, there was no intention—in fact, it was the intention not to make that clear, because the proxy was not in order. It was, to an extent, taking the place of a complete notarial act.

"I do not want to decide at this moment, without thinking it over very carefully, at what moment this gift agreement became effective by performance.

"Q. What sort of shares were these automobile shares?

"A. Usually they were bearer shares, so I suppose they were bearer shares. I mean German shares, as you probably know. They were in escrow under the name of Wilhelm von Opel.

"Q. Coming back to the gift agreement of 1931, do you remember that it contained certain provisions about Niessbrauch? Whose idea was this insertion of this Niessbrauch provision?

"A. Probably everybody's. There again, you must think of the situation, that we did not know what was going to happen. I personally felt that the Nazi had a good possibility of getting into power, and their programs were printed all over the place. So there was a possibility that some day, capitalists would be very happy if they could walk out of their country with their hat on and 232 would know where to go. Now, naturally, Geheimrat von Opel always had a claim against his son. If the father could not take care of himself, he could always ask his son to take care of himself, but the extent he had to take care of himself was not the same as if he got a proper usufruct.

"You see, there were two ideas. In the first place, the substance had to be preserved outside of Germany. It was my opinion that that could only be done if there was 100 percent, an absolute, transfer of title to the substance to Fritz von Opel. I have seen such cases before. The second thing was if everything went wrong in Germany, the same way it went wrong in Russia before, he would still have something outside that he could fall back upon. It would not be the substance, but it would be part of the fruits of the substance that he would have for himself, and for his wife in an emergency. And, there again, we did not complete that in this agreement. We opened the doors. We expressed intentions understandable. We relied more on the son carrying out the expressed intentions in the case of emergency than pinning it down in a legal agreement as you would do if you were giving away part of your fortune to a stranger with no obligations and, certainly, no moral obligations.

"Q. If that was the purpose, would your objectives not have been just as well served, or better been served, by leaving out any references to Niessbrauch instead of 233 specifying the circumstances, such as Niessbrauch, since it involved a transaction between father and son?

"A. Yes. It is very easy today to decide what would have been better or what would not have been better, and I agree with you that probably Niessbrauch was not the best way. It was started by Hachenburg to throw in Niessbrauch. Personally, I would have probably only mentioned the intention to do this and would have expected the son to carry it out. It could have been done in a different way.

"Q. You were the final draftsman of this agreement, were you not?

"A. I agree. I had just about as much time for drafting as you have for catching a lunch, and so on. Nevertheless, it does not make any difference, as far as I am concerned, because it could have been handled that way if they wanted to. You see, they wanted a much more elaborate setup.

"Q. They insisted on the insertion of this Niessbrauch?

"A. Something to that effect. At that time Niessbrauch was used, yes. It may not be the proper thing to mention this, but I would think Wilhelm von Opel also wanted to have a little whip in hand some time over Fritz that he could use suddenly. He had so much money and income out of this that he would know he had to talk to his father about it any time his father wanted him to do so.

"Q. So, Fritz von Opel was not pleased with the 234 insertion of this Niessbrauch?

"A. I would not say so.

"Q. Now, you drafted these Niessbrauch provisions in their final form. Were they validly created?

"A. The Niessbrauch?

"Q. Yes.

"A. All I can say was that I drafted this agreement. I knew that this agreement itself was not more than a letter of intention, as far as that is concerned, but always relying on the father and son relation. I would say it goes a little further, because I would say it is worded in a way that the father could sue Fritz von Opel to create a Niessbrauch under agreement. I think that is the case. But, we did not talk about law suits at that time. I do not think they ever had them, as far as I know.

235 "Q. I call your attention to a statement made by you in your affidavit of June 6, 1935, Defendant's Exhibit No. 34,"—Now Defendant's Exhibit No. 8, old 34—"in which you say, 'The clauses in the deed of gift relative to the usufruct reserved to the parents of Fritz von Opel were particularly insisted on by Dr. Wilhelm von Opel, who said that he attached the greatest importance to this restriction on and reservation from the gift. As drawn by me, the deed of gift, Exhibit R, was drawn for the purpose of carrying out the intention of the parties so expressed.'

"Is that statement correct that you made at that time?

"A. He did think it was important to have Fritz still a little bit under control, as far as the income was concerned, and if he went haywire, he could step in and put him on the right track.

"Q. So, the Niessbrauch was something that was to be immediately effected as a potential whip or so, as you termed it?

"A. I did not say that, that it had to be immediately effective. Everything here was only pointing the way they wanted to handle things.

"Q. Unless the instrument created this power of Wilhelm over Fritz, the intention of the parties would not have been carried out?

"A. Well, the gift was not carried out by that 236 document, neither. They were both relying on each other that they would.

"Q. I call your attention further to a statement in your affidavit of June 6, 1935, in which you state as follows:

"'In German law, the right of usufruct (niessbrauch) was and is recognized to be a separate estate in the thing and to be a real thing or right in rem (dingliches recht) in the thing. By virtue of this concept of German law, and the deed of gift itself Dr. Wilhelm von Opel and his wife retained an independent property right in the securities described in the deed of gift and in any and all proceeds thereof, which independent property right gave the parents certain definite rights and powers under German law with reference to said securities and their proceeds.'

"You then specify the various rights of the parties involved in this Niessbrauch.

"You still think that this statement states the law correctly as it applied to this particular transaction?

"A. Let's put it this way: I was under the assumption that everything had been done to carry out the letter of the deed and to make it really effective. I did not know it had been. In case it had, those were the conditions.

"Q. You mean to say now that you made an affidavit in 1935 to the Court without ascertaining from the parties involved what was actually done pursuant to the 237 agreement you drafted?

"A. I gave a legal opinion on conditional situations, but I did not pass any opinion on the transactions they had done without asking me, and afterwards I did not know how they had done it. I was under the impression that they had been done at that time, that both had been made effective.

"Q. But you did not make a statement on German law, as a legal expert alone; you make this statement as the draftsman of the agreement; you made statements in this affidavit as to the intentions of the parties and so on?

"A. Those were the intentions, yes. Whether they carried them out, that was something else. I did not say they carried them out, because I really did not know. In fact, I must say I took it for granted they did.

"Q. I am reading now another portion of this affidavit, and I am quoting as follows, from page 34 of the transcript of record:

"'I am informed that with part of the proceeds of the securities described in the deed of gift, Exhibit R, Mr. Fritz von Opel purchased shares of a Swiss corporation, Uebersee Finanz-Korporation A. G. If this be the fact, I am of the opinion that under German law the above-described rights and obligations based on the reserved usufruct would attach to the Uebersee Finanz-Korporation shares in the same manner as if these shares had been described in the deed of gift itself.

238 "'I am informed that with part of the proceeds of the securities described in the deed of gift, Exhibit R there was purchased a quantity of gold now situated in the United States. On this assumption of fact, I am of opinion that under German law the above-described rights and obligations based on the reserved usufruct would attach to this gold in the same manner as if the gold had been described in the deed of gift.'

"From these statements, it would appear that you obtained information from Mr. Fritz von Opel or somebody who had knowledge concerning the affairs of the Uebersee Finanz-Korporation as to what was actually done after you had drawn up the gift, and you stated in this affidavit on the basis of your information so obtained; is that correct?

"A. Everything is correct that is in there. The way it was stated there, I was informed that was the case. If that was so, those are the consequences, under the assumption that the original niessbrauch was actually effected, because, otherwise, nothing was part of it up to that point.

"Q. Did you have any doubt, or do you have any doubt now, as to the correctness of the statement made in this affidavit?

"A. Which statement?

"Q. This last statement, 'I am of the opinion that under German law, the above-described rights and obliga-
239 tions based on the reserved usufruct would attach to this gold in the same manner as if the gold had been described in the deed of gift.'

"A. Well, it would follow very definitely. If the substance changes from one substance to another, the usufruct stays on there. At some place, it has to be real created niessbrauch. If it has, then, the substance remains a subject of niessbrauch.

"Q. Well, coming back to your affidavit, you did state there, did you not—

"A. (Interposing) If it is there, I did.

"Q. —independent property right was effectively created?

"A. Let me see what I said?

"Q. If you care to read the entire affidavit, just take your time.

"A. This, I would say, is only correct with the assumption that it was actually carried out the way that it was intended.

"Q. Did you spell out any such assumption at that point?

"A. I do not think I had any doubt at that point. I must have been given that impression that it was, but I would not go into that. That must have been my impression at that time, otherwise I would not have said it.

"Q. Mr. Stansfield, did Wilhelm von Opel ever 240 discuss with you the advantages of having Fritz von Opel classified as a devisenauslaender, or foreign national, within the meaning of the German Foreign Funds Control Laws?

"A. We discussed the possibility of having Fritz von Opel outside and the advantages that might have, in some respects, long before there was this devisengesetzgebung, that we are talking about.

"Q. And what were the advantages that you saw in having him classified as a foreign national, non-resident of Germany?

"A. Well, to prevent him from being subject to laws that might be—might come out in the future, where it would be of importance.

"Q. Was this qualification or classification of Fritz von Opel as a devisenauslaender or foreign national, for purposes of Foreign Funds Control, discussed at the time when this 1931 agreement was made?

241 "A. I don't remember that at that time there was much talk about that.

"Q. Did Wilhelm von Opel ever express himself to you as to the advantages of having Fritz von Opel so classified, after Fritz von Opel had left Germany?

"A. Well, we have discussed the advantages. We had seen so many examples of situations like that, from people who came from Russia; and we know about what had happened to them; and from other countries; that we have talked about those things. I was very much aware of the importance of it; and I don't know how much we had to talk about it. We had demonstration lessons since 1917 directly in front of our nose. I think every American today understands it, more when they see the Hungarians and the Czechoslovakians, and all these people come over here.

"Q. Do you know whether Wilhelm von Opel ever tried to modify the escrow agreement of 1929, by negotiations with the officials of the General Motors Corporation, before this alleged gift agreement of 1931?

"A. I think from the very beginning they disliked the fact that they were going with the mark up or down. They didn't like that, that General Motors would not run the risk of what happened to the mark; and they didn't like it so much.

"Q. Why shouldn't it be to the advantage, in a 242 way, to General Motors, if it is a disadvantage to the Opel family?

"A. Well, they didn't know—it was a risk to both sides. If they could have pinned it down to exact, absolute figures, that they would have liked to have done; but that, they couldn't do.

"Q. Do you recall whether there were negotiations concerning a modification of the escrow agreement along these lines?

"A. You mean after the escrow agreement was made?

"Q. Yes.

"A. I remember up to the point, there were a lot—at the moment, I don't remember any talks—you mean between '29 and '31?

"Q. That is right.

"A. I don't remember any at the moment.

"Q. If such negotiations took place, would you have been one of the negotiators?

"A. It could be. They could also have taken it up directly with the head office.

"Q. I was speaking just now of modifications prior to the alleged gift agreement of 1931. Do you know whether after that date, there were any negotiations concerning such a change?

"A. After the gift agreement?

"Q. Yes.

"A. I don't remember, from my own recollection, that there were any such.

243 "Q. Mr. Stansfield, I am showing you now Defendant's Exhibits 6 and 7, and ask you whether you have ever seen these before?

"A. What is it, on page 4 here? I see now what it is. It is a cable. I just didn't know what—

"Q. This here (indicating).

"A. I remember that Geheimrat von Opel—I am trying to remember. There was something between Fritz Opel—that is, old Fritz Opel—and Wilhelm von Opel; they had an argument always about this.

"Q. What was the argument about?

"A. About the gold clause. In fact, from the beginning it was very strong objection not to have that in. People were not afraid in 1928 of the dollar, or 1929 of the dollar; but they were afraid of the mark. But I do not recall detail about this. I mean, in detail, I don't remember what this all was about.

Wilhelm von Opel personally, probably would have preferred—there is another one; that is their reply, yes?

"Q. Yes.

"A. I really don't remember this exchange of cables. I don't remember it. It was not in line with my thinking on the whole plan.

"Q. Do you remember what happened after the execution of this agreement on October 5?

244 "A. Well, in what respect? A lot of things happened.

"Q. Well, in accordance with what the parties planned at the time, as you understood it?

"A. Well, if I remember correctly, Fritz left almost immediately for the United States; and as I stated this morning, I believe, already, I felt the easiest way to handle it was to get it out of the hands of General Motors. For that reason, if I saw the telegram of the third, I believe I would have advised against it.

"Q. Do you know when Fritz von Opel came back from the United States?

"A. Fritz did?

"Q. Yes.

"A. No.

"Q. Was it immediately or—

"A. I don't remember.

"Q. You do not remember?

"A. Not at this moment. I don't remember. If you will help me, maybe—

"Q. Do you recall a visit by John Thomas Smith, the general counsel of General Motors in Ruesselsheim, about that time, or somewhat later?

"A. I recall a number of visits of John Thomas Smith; and I don't think I could fix any dates at all with regard to it.

245 "Q. Now, after October 5, 1931, did you at any time discuss this agreement, or its execution with Wilhelm von Opel or Fritz von Opel?

"A. The execution of the agreement?

"Q. That is right.

"A. No, I don't—I don't remember. I would have only discussed it if they asked me any more questions.

"Q. Well, did they ask you any more questions after that?

"A. I don't remember.

"Q. You do not remember?

"A. Nothing, as far as I was concerned, nothing of importance happened where I was acting for them in that respect. They did it without me, whatever they did, after that.

"Q. Were you ever consulted by either Wilhelm von Opel or Fritz von Opel concerning any taxes payable on this transaction?

"A. Well, we were very clear that gift tax would have to be paid; and that was discussed; but it was not my business to say how much the gift tax would be, and how that had to be handled; because they had their tax experts.

"Q. You did not deal at all with the tax aspects of this transaction?

"A. If I talked about taxes, it was only in a very general way; but not for me to act as an expert on it.

"Q. Do you know whether Wilhelm von Opel had 246 disagreements or difficulties with the tax authorities, concerning the amount of taxes payable?

"A. He would have been quite an exception, if he didn't have some difficulties with the tax authorities in those days, I would say. Anybody who had a lot of money had a lot of discussions.

"Q. But you do not remember anything definite about that?

"A. You see, I remember very much later—but that—

"Q. When was that?

"A. That had nothing to do—in '33; yes, in '33 and '34, there were tax—difficulties—I don't know; it had nothing to do with taxes, I believe. I am not quite sure.

"Q. Then you are not speaking of tax difficulties in 1933 or 1934?

"A. No, I don't think so.

"Q. And you did not discuss these tax aspects of the gift with officials of General Motors either?

"A. Of the gift? I didn't discuss the gift with the officials of General Motors at all.

"Q. You never did?

"A. I don't remember that I ever did; and I don't think I did. I feel pretty sure I didn't.

"Q. And you say—

"A. In fact, I did not want to involve them in the whole thing.

247 "Q. And you say that you did not consult with them on the tax aspects, either, of that gift?

"A. General Motors?

"Q. That is right.

"A. I don't quite see what aspect I should discuss with General Motors, as far as the gift is concerned. I don't see your point. Maybe it is—

"Q. Do you recall that a proposal was made at one time to repurchase this minority interest on the part of Wilhelm and Fritz von Opel, or Wilhelm von Opel alone?

"A. I do; because I came over to the States in connection with that.

"Q. Had this proposal anything to do with the problems of German taxation, in which Wilhelm von Opel was involved, as a result of the gift?

"A. I really don't know now, at this moment, what was the reason why they wanted to discuss that at all. I wouldn't know at the moment.

"Q. Do you remember whether the Opels at one time suggested to the officials of General Motors Corporation that the Opels should reacquire the interests that they had transferred, this minority interest that they had transferred, in a purely fictitious fashion, so as to make the Opels appear again as the owners of this minority interest?

"A. There was some pretty wild scheme, I be-248 lieve, that was not acceptable to General Motors, at all, the way it was put up.

"Q. It was put up by the Opel family though?

"A. I think so, yes; was brought up by the Opel family.

"Q. That they would reacquire the shares in a purely fictitious way?

"A. I wouldn't use the word 'fictitious' because I don't remember the detail of it. It never came off; and it did not—

"Q. I show you now a letter dated June 2, 1932"—

Mr. Gallagher: I want to point out at this point, Your Honor, we are supposedly offering the testimony at this point. I mean, it is our witness. And at this point we would not have offered this, because it is sheer hearsay.

If you want it read, because you think it is relevant to the part read, I want the record to reflect that you are reading it in. I am just pointing out I would have omitted this.

The Court: Then you do not offer it?

Mr. Gallagher: We do not offer it.

The Court: Mr. Laufer was examining the witness.

Mr. Gallagher: That is right, Your Honor.

The Court: If you don't offer it, then I think he will have to offer it on cross; otherwise it won't come in.

Mr. Gallagher: All right, Your Honor.

249 The Court: Are we getting anywhere near the end of this?

Mr. Gallagher: There is about twenty minutes left, I think.

The Court: Then I think we had better adjourn. I have to complete a case tomorrow morning; so you be here at 11 o'clock. We will adjourn until 10, and this case will be resumed at 11 o'clock.

(Accordingly, at 4:20 p.m., the trial was adjourned until 11 o'clock tomorrow morning, Friday, December 10, 1948.)

Deposition of MANFRED STANSFIELD (Wronker-Flatow) (Resumed)

Mr. Burling: Your Honor, I was reading from page 206, and I was asked to start skipping. I will ask counsel to advise me how far they would like me to skip.

Mr. Gallagher: I would skip the next four or five 253 pages, all the way over to 210, starting "Mr. Stansfield, are you today," and so forth.

(Accordingly, the reading from the deposition was resumed, Mr. Burling reading the questions and Mr. Boland, on the witness stand, the answers:)

"Q. Mr. Stransfield, are you today indebted to Mr. Wilhelm von Opel?

"A. No, I don't consider myself indebted to Wilhelm von Opel.

"Q. Mr. Wilhelm von Opel has stated to the American Military Government that you owe him a considerable amount.

"A. That is his privilege; but it is my privilege to say that I am not.

"Q. On what grounds do you state that?

"A. Do I have to state here why or what? Is that a question that has anything to do with this? If he brings up the case, he states on what ground it is; I will state on what ground it isn't. Is that a question that—

"Q. I think you are required to answer the question, why you don't consider yourself indebted to Mr. Wilhelm von Opel.

"A. It was set off through services on my side.

"Q. When were these services performed?

254 "A. Oh, during the years.

"Q. What years?

"A. My personal opinion is that there was never any intention to ask it back; but that is a matter, in itself.

"Q. I show you a photostat of a document dated March 16, 1931, and ask you whether that is your handwriting and your document.

"A. Definitely my handwriting, my document. I haven't seen it since.

"Mr. Laufer: Will you please mark this document as Defendant's Exhibit D-36; and I offer it."

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, the exhibit we now mark bears directly on the issue whether Wronker-Flatow should be here, and I therefore ask leave to read it, in the translation, or ask Your Honor to read it.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

The Court: You may read it.

Mr. Burling: The exhibit reads, in the translation:

"Wiesbaden, March 16, 1931. (Rosselstrasse 7).

"I, the undersigned attorney Manfred Wronker-Flatow, acknowledge having received from Geheimrat Dr. ing. h.c. Wilhelm von Opel a loan of 20,000.00 Dollars. Interest thereon is to be paid at the end of each period at the Reichsbank discount rate current at that time beginning 255 on April 1, 1935; for the first time on July 1, 1935.

Repayment is to be made by 10 annual instalments of $2,000.00 each (two thousand Dollars United States Currency) beginning on April 1, 1936; first instalment payable on April 1, 1936; for the consecutive years likewise on April 1. As collateral serve the life insurance policies which I have taken out in favor of my wife with the Iduna Life Insurance and with the French Life Insurance L. Urbaine in the amount of RM40,000.00 respectively Francs 125,000.00, which will become payable, except in case of death, in the years 1947 respectively 1948. My wife Alexandra Wronker-Flatow, nee Manzel, recognizes by her signature this agreement as also binding for herself.

sgd. Manfred Wronker-Flatow
sgd. Alix Wronker-Flatow."

Mr. Gallagher: What was the date on that, Mr. Burling?

Mr. Burling: March 16, 1931.

I ask that that be received in evidence.

(The letter heretofore identified as Defendant's Exhibit No. 28 was accordingly received.)

AFTERNOON SESSION

The Court: All right, gentlemen.

Deposition of MANFRED STANSFIELD (WRONKER-FLATOW) (Resumed):

Mr. Burling: At the bottom of page 211—

(Mr. Burling reading the questions and Mr. Boland, in the witness chair, reading the answers):

"Q. Did you render any services to Mr. Wilhelm von Opel after 1937?

"A. Wilhelm von Opel?

"Q. That is right.

"A. No, I don't think so. I don't recall.

"Q. I am showing you now a photostat of a letter dated March 8, 1937, and ask you whether you identify this letter as written by you?

"A. Yes, I see this; that is my letter. That was written for a purpose for Geheimrat and for Nazi purposes."

Mr. Burling: I would like to have this letter marked as Defendant's Exhibit 29 and 29-A, and I offer it in evidence.

(The letter was accordingly marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 29 and 29-A.)

Mr. Gallagher: Does Your Honor wish a copy of this?

The Court: He can read it, if he wishes.

Mr. Burling: I should like to read it, if I may—

"New York, March 8, 1937. 123 W. 57th Street.

"Dear Geheimrat: First of all I have to apologize for my long silence. I was never before aware how difficult it is to write letters in which one is compelled to admit being unable for the moment to live up to obligations previously incurred.

"You, dear Geheimrat, know that I incurred these obligations under circumstances which seemed to guarantee that I would be able to meet them. In spite of the most successful pioneer work for G. M. and the Opel firm, I have been deprived without any fault on my part of the very foundations of an arrangement, when things took a turn which no sensible and intelligent man could have been expected to take into consideration. Now after fifty 271 years of most strenuous work and of great success I find myself with my wife in a more and more exhausting struggle to earn a living and enough money to support and educate our six children.

"To be forced in such times to write about repaying sums of money which are entirely out of proportion to my present situation is paralyzing to such a degree that one postpones it again and again hoping to be able to write something positive. The delay has become unduly long, and I am sincerely grateful to you for not having doubted my good will to pay my debt in spite of my long silence which would have been incomprehensible under normal conditions.

"In the last three years full of work and worry, which are now behind us, I hope to have laid the foundation of an organization which in 1937 ought to yield enough to enable me to start redeeming my debt. I am confident to be in a position to submit to you positive proposals in 1937, probably during the next six months and would be very grateful to you for having patience until then in view of the prevailing circumstances which were brought about through no fault of my own.

"Please rest assured that although everything I had built up in decades has been destroyed, and in spite of all obstacles and all difficulties which often seem in-272 surmountable, my intention remains unshaken to meet liabilities which I incurred in good faith.

"Since my health has so far withstood all the hard physical and mental trials and tribulations and the constant climatic and other changes, I have not given up hope that there will be a way out of all this darkness.

"My wife joins me in sending you our kindest regards and compliments, which we beg to convey to Mrs. von Opel, too.

"With our best wishes for your personal welfare,

"Yours very truly,

"M. Wronker-Flatow."

Mr. Burling (continuing): Now do you wish me to read Mr. Connor's objection?

Mr. Gallagher: You don't need to read the objection; we don't have an objection. We withdraw the objection.

(The deposition resumed):

"Q. Mr. Stansfield, did you discuss your testimony today with anybody before you came here?

"A. Before I came here? My—

"Q. Your testimony that was given today?

"A. I have been talking about the case off and on, with Fritz von Opel.

"Mr. Laufer: That is all."

(Mr. Gallagher now reading the questions, Mr.
273 Boland the answers):

"Cross Examination

"By Mr. Connor:

"Q. Directing your attention back to the general time around 1931, when this gift agreement, Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, was made, will you give us, if you know, what the general mode of living of Geheimrat von Opel was?

"A. Well, that of a wealthy bourgeois who knew the value of money, for which he and his family had worked a lifetime.

"Q. I presume that you knew something of his financial position, did you not?

"A. Well, in a general way, everybody knew something about it; but I knew, because I knew at least what he had received out of this deal.

"Q. Well, was Wilhelm von Opel, as you knew him, a man whom you regarded as one living within his income, or up to his income, or beyond his income?

"A. I would say, well within his income.

"Q. Did he have any yachts?

"A. No; I think he would have reproved you, if you suggested it.

"Q. Was he the kind of a man to indulge in any other similar types of luxury that you know?

"A. The only luxury that I know was that he once 274 or twice made a travel around the world, for which he had waited many, many years, I believe. He was not only very careful with his money, but also with his time; and he planned his days and every hour of the day, weeks ahead, as a rule.

"Q. From your association with the von Opels; that is, Wilhelm and his son, Fritz, what would you say of any independent capital that Fritz, himself, had about the year 1931? Was he a man of capital himself?

"A. Fritz von Opel?

"Q. Fritz von Opel, the son.

"A. If he had some, I didn't know it.

"Q. You testified earlier, I believe, that of the number of Opel family members involved in the Opel works, Fritz, to your understanding, was the only one who had not obtained his share, or whatever you characterized as his share?

"A. That is correct.

"Q. That is correct?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And I believe you also testified that Fritz von Opel's sister the daughter of Wilhelm von Opel, had, prior to that time, received some gift of substance from her father; is that correct?

"A. That is what I always understood from the 275 parents.

"Q. What position did Fritz von Opel occupy in Adam Opel when you first contacted the situation?

"A. In '28, if I remember correctly, he was in the engineering, and with his uncle Fritz Opel. I don't want to take that on my oath; but that is my recollection, that he was working on that side; and his uncle was always very fatherly with him, and friendly with him, except when they had fights. But that is also—that is in retrospect. It was always on a very fatherly basis.

"Q. And as far as the family hierarchical arrangement was concerned, was Wilhelm von Opel the senior brother of that generation of brothers?

"A. Only the two were left, Fritz and Wilhelm von Opel. I think Wilhelm very definitely was, whether Fritz always recognized it, Fritz Opel, that I wouldn't say.

"Q. But on your first contact—

"A. A difference of opinion between those two, but I don't believe between anybody else.

"Q. So that at your first contact with Adam Opel, Wilhelm von Opel was regarded as the head of the firm?

"A. I would say so; and it was also expressed in the set-up after it was taken over, because Wilhelm von Opel was the chairman of the board, and Fritz Opel was 276 the vice chairman of the board.

"Q. Yes. And Fritz von Opel, the son of Wilhelm, was Wilhelm's son; was he not?

"A. That is correct.

"Q. And as among the von Opel children, who were Fritz von Opel's cousins, he, in turn, was senior to them, in age; was he?

"A. He was senior to all in age, I say right away; I mean the boys. I don't know whether Hans was older or younger; but I believe he was younger. I mean, that is a fact; but I know he was very definitely the one who you would consider the crown prince in the situation; which, again, was expressed in the position that he got when it was changed in an aktiengesellschaft, because he was made a member of the Vorstand, and I believe, the only member of the Vorstand at that time.

"Q. You are now talking about Fritz von Opel having been elevated to those positions?

"A. Right; whereas Hans von Opel, the next by age, was not even a member of the Vorstand.

"Q. Now, after General Motors took over the Opel works, do you know anything of a trip by Fritz von Opel to the United States to take a training course in General Motors' plants here in America?

"A. Yes, I remember that.

277 "Q. Will you tell us what you remember in that connection?

"A. I think up to the fall of '29, it must have been, Fritz von Opel and Keith Wood were the members of the Vorstand. I don't want to take that on my oath, as far as the dates are concerned; but I believe it was about that. And then I. K. Reuter came over and was made the other member of the Vorstand, I believe, together with Keith Wood again; and Fritz was then—it was suggested that he go out of Germany and study General Motors' methods, and so on. That was the set-up with General Motors.

"Q. And after he had made this educational trip to General Motors in the United States, did he return to a position with General Motors in Belgium, I believe, in Antwerp?

"A. I know that he was in Antwerp, yes, with General Motors, Continental.

"Q. Do you happen to remember in what capacity?

"A. No, but it was in the Export. General Motors, Antwerp, was a company which belonged to the Export Corporations of General Motors.

"Q. And is it the fact that at or about the time that the so-called gift agreement, Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 5, was made, that Fritz von Opel was resident in Belgium?

278 "A. I think that is correct. I couldn't swear to it. I mean that is also a question of fact that can be established; but I think he was.

"Q. Yes. And from your knowledge of the situation, and from what you have already testified to, in respect of Fritz von Opel's position with the Adam Opel works, was it the probable thing that had General Motors not purchased the Opel works, that Fritz would have been the logical head of the firm?

"A. Would say, hundred percent, yes, sir.

"Q. Of course, after the sale of the Adam Opel works to General Motors, the opportunity for Fritz von Opel, the son, to have become head of the enterprise was gone; was it not?

"A. Practically, I would say, yes.

"Q. And this Adam Opel works was a family institution of some—

"A. Generations.

"Q. —generations of standing?

"A. About 70 years, it was at that time, yes.

"Q. Did the fact that Fritz von Opel would thus have become deprived of his opportunity to succeed his father as head of the Adam Opel works have anything to do with the old gentleman, Wilhelm, making the gift 279 to the son?

"A. It might have been an additional consideration.

"Q. Now, on your direct examination, in connection with Plaintiff's Exhibits No. 5 and 5-B, which purports to be the original thereof, you were asked some questions by Mr. Laufer as to that instrument being executory in its nature. Do you recollect that interrogation?

"A. Yes. Could I see what 5 and 5-B was?

"Q. This is 5 (indicating) that purports to be the English translation. This is 5 and that is 5-B.

"A. That is the same document in different languages, then, yes.

"Q. Exhibit 5 is a translation of the German document and 5-B purports to be a photostatic copy of the original document.

"A. I see.

"Q. I would like to have you re-examine them, and when you have completed it, I want to interrogate you about them.

"A. I am sorry, I didn't have this quite some time; so I don't have to remember the whole thing now, will you tell me what you are referring to? In a general way, I remember it, but in detail I had better look at it again, where you want me to.

"Q. I will direct your attention to a paragraph 280 that is the fourth paragraph in this exhibit which, in English, reads:

"'I, Wilhelm von Opel, herewith transfer title to these shares to our son, Fritz von Opel, by assigning to him our claim for the delivery of these shares to us.'

"And I will ask you whether, under German law, you have a concept similar to what, in the English or American law, is referred to as a chose in action?

"A. Yes, it is almost verbally from the law, this paragraph. Paragraph 931. Do we have a translation, so I don't have to try to translate it?

"Q. You say there is some provision in the German law which relates to something which is analogous to the English chose in action?

"A. Yes; and it is almost identical in the wording with the law, this part.

"Q. Well, would you make an effort to translate the German law provision for us?

"A. If a third party is in the possession, then the transfer may be replaced by procedure whereby the owner assigns the right for delivery.

"Q. Now, will you state for the record, Mr. Stansfield, a description of the document from which you are reading that portion of the German law?

"A. Well, this is one of the ways by which the 281 ownership can be transferred, instead of actually handing over the article that is to be transferred, you just assign the right to demand delivery from a third party, who is in possession of it. This is, in fact, what was done here in the fourth paragraph.

"Q. Could you give us the name of that book?

"A. This is the German Civil Code; this is Paragraph 931.

"Q. Is that any particular edition of the German Civil Code?

"A. Oh, my God, 1905. That was the book I had when I was a student; but it is still in order. I worked so hard on it; and that is why I have it here. I can pick it up always.

"Q. And will you give us the section number of the Code that you translated just above?

"A. 931; and it is the third title in the third book of the German Civil Code. It refers to the transfer of property. It is the acquisition and the loss of the ownership of movables.

"Q. And was that provision of the Code, to which you have referred, operative and the effective law of Germany at the time Plaintiff's Exhibits No. 5 and 5-B was executed?

"A. That is correct.

282 "Q. Now, these words of transfer in the fourth paragraph of Plaintiff's Exhibits 5 and 5-B purport to be a transfer of a chose in action; do they not?

"A. That is what I would say, yes.

"Q. Well, doesn't it say right there:

"'Transfer title to these shares to our son, Fritz von Opel, by assigning to him our claim for the delivery of these shares to us.'

"A. That is correct.

"Q. Now, isn't it, in your opinion, a chose in action which is described by the words, 'our claim for the delivery of these shares to us'?

"A. That is what I would say, yes.

"Q. Well, is there any question about it?

"A. Well, I only express myself carefully, because when you use legal expressions in law, that you don't really know 100 percent, I don't like to be positive; but I think it is the same.

"Q. So that we understand the English concept, if we assume that a claim against another person, or a corporation is a chose in action—

"A. Yes.

"Q. —within the meaning of the English law, do not the words of the fourth paragraph of Plaintiff's Exhibits 5 and 5-B, actually presently transfer a chose in 283 action?

"A. Yes, they do, yes.

"Q. And if those words in the fourth paragraph are a present transfer of an existing chose in action, is there anything executory about the effect of that paragraph? In other words, isn't that a present transfer of the chose in action?

"A. Well, it was a transfer at that moment, yes; because the wording is exactly in line with the law. I must say that; I had to refresh my mind on that.

"Q. And isn't it the fact that if the effect of that language was to convey to Fritz von Opel at once, that is, at the date of the agreement, this chose in action, nothing further remained to be done in order to effect that transfer?

"A. It is correct.

"Q. This morning you were interrogated about the niessbrauch, which is referred to in Plaintiff's Exhibits 5 and 5-B and you gave certain explanations which you recollected, in reference to the reasons for that niessbrauch being incorporated.

"Do you know when Fritz von Opel married Margo von Opel?

"A. I don't know the exact date.

"Q. Well, approximately the year?

284 "A. But it was either '29 or '30, early '30 or late '29, I would say.

"Q. Do you recollect any discussions with the old gentleman in respect of his desire to have Fritz marry the daughter of some other industrial parent?

"A. Yes, quite a lot of them.

"Q. What did he express as his desire in that connection?

"A. Well, he was not very favorably impressed by the marriage. I wouldn't like to go much further. He didn't like the idea.

"Q. And was it because of his desire that Fritz, as I say, marry the daughter of some industrial family, rather than a person outside of that group?

"A. Well, I would say, yes. It was the impression that I got. He was quite outspoken at this time; but at this time Fritz von Opel is married to the same girl; so I don't want to go into too much detail at this point.

"Q. Might I just add in that connection, weren't most of her friends theatrical people?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Or people in the field of arts?

"A. Yes, she came from those. I think her former husband was directly connected with the theatre. In fact; I know he was.

285 "Q. Isn't that, as a matter of fact, one of the reasons why the old gentleman was not as enthused about the marriage as he would have been had she been the daughter of some industrialist?

"A. So I would say. The old Geheimrat liked the theatre very much, but not particularly for marrying.

"Q. Now, following the date of the gift agreement, Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, Plaintiff's Exhibit 4 purports to be given by Wilhelm von Opel to his son, Fritz, or sent to him. Now, this Plaintiff's Exhibit 4 purports to be a power of attorney from Wilhelm von Opel to his son, Fritz von Opel, dated the sixth day of October, 1931, a date subsequent to the date of the gift agreement.

"I believe that on direct examination, your testimony was to the effect that it would have taken a considerable period of time, and made the transaction more complicated, if Fritz attempted to deal with the General Motors people under the gift agreement, rather than having a direct power of attorney. That is my understanding of your testimony.

"A. That was my opinion, yes, sir.

"Q. Yes, sir. And is that the reason, as you understand it, why this power of attorney was given to Fritz?

"A. Definitely. I have done that in many cases.

286 "Q. Yes. Well, why would the old gentleman give his son a power of attorney to deal with the shares of stock if, in fact, he, on the day before, had given him a gift? Will you explain why that was done?

"A. The main reason, as I stated this morning, I believe was the urgency to see that it got out of the hands of General Motors at the earliest possible moment; and I was afraid, and I believe I was rightly afraid, that if he came up with a legal document involving gifts, and niessbrauchs, and ausgleich der erbschaft, and so on, they would have gotten a half dozen German lawyers in to explain the meaning of this agreement; but when he came in with a power of attorney, he could get it out without any of the difficulties, because that was written in their own language.

"Q. You say that you had done a similar sort of thing in other cases. What did you have reference to when you said that? I don't want the details of the cases, but give us a typical situation.

"A. I had many international situations, where, to avoid having to go into the details of the transaction, it was handled by powers of attorney.

"Q. Yes.

"A. In cases where the transfer was already made.

"Q. Is it not the fact that in Germany, for instance, 287 in connection with the sale of real property, the purchaser is, as a matter of practice, frequently given a power of attorney of the seller to execute the transfer of title to himself?

"A. Yes, to make the application—what would you call that—for auflassung, for the registration of transfer of title in the records of the Court; and in many cases, the sale was immediately effected, payment was made before the Notary Public, and for some reason, the auflassung was not made immediately; and then the purchaser was given an irrevocable power of attorney to make the transfer by himself, the transfer. That was quite the practice.

"Q. And in view of that custom in Germany, there was nothing inconsistent about the father giving Fritz this power of attorney; that is, Plaintiff's exhibit 4; was there, in your opinion?

"A. In my opinion, no; because it was just a way of handling it, the quickest way of handling the matter, speeding it up.

"Q. Was there anything in anywise inconsistent between a completely executed gift on October 5, 1931, and the delivery of this power of attorney on October 6th?

"A. In my opinion, no, because, otherwise, I would 288 not have done it that way.

"Q. Now, this morning, there was directed to your attention Defendant's Exhibits 6 and 7, purporting to be a telegram dated October 23, 1931 from Wilhelm von Opel to Mr Sloan, of General Motors Corporation, in which reference is made to the first person; namely, the word 'I'. Now, in view of what you have stated in reference to the power of attorney, Plaintiff's Exhibit 4, will you take a look at Defendant's Exhibits 6 and 7, and state whether there is any inconsistency in the use of the word 'I' in Defendant's Exhibits 6 and 7?

"A. As far as the General Motors, the front with the General Motors was concerned, it was Wilhelm von Opel's shares; therefore, if he had said anything else but 'I', then, they would have started asking a lot of questions. They didn't know anything about this agreement. In fact, with my knowledge, it was never brought to their attention.

"Q. So that, to have referred in this telegram of October 23 to the shares as belonging to Fritz von Opel would have given rise to the same complications that you spoke of?

"A. Right.

"Q. In connection with attempting to execute the transaction by presenting the gift agreement, itself, to 289 General Motors; is that correct?

"A. Right.

"Q. Isn't it the fact that it was Fritz von Opel, who, himself, and irrespective of his father's desires in the matter, finally made the determination as to how the option with General Motors should be carried out?

"A. I think that is true, yes, sir. Do you mind if I add one sentence to this whole thing? I think this whole telegram, now that I read it, is an expression of the uncertainty of the situation. If you did something, you never were sure that you were doing exactly the right thing. After talking to Mr. Mooney, the Geheimrat got shaky, whether Fritz von Opel shouldn't rather keep the stock than sell it.

"Q. That is Fritz, the son?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Going back for a moment to Plaintiff's Exhibits 5 and 5-B, I will direct your attention to a paragraph appearing therein which, in the English, reads:

"'In the event that the parents von Opel shall not have drawn in full or in part the income from the shares accruing to them by virtue of their usufruct (neissbrauch), the advancement to Fritz von Opel shall be deemed to have increased by the income not drawn, and he shall be accountable therefor.'

290 "I would like to ask you whether it was not the fact that, in the event the parents did not call for, or make demand for, the income which accrued on the corpus of the gift, that that uncalled for income would become a part of the corpus of the gift, itself?

"A. Yes. That is still clearer in the German. I didn't quite get the paragraph. I believe it is this one.

"S 931. Ist ein Dritter im Besitze der Sache, so kann die Uebergabe dadurch ersetzt werden, dass der Eigentuemer dem Erwerber den Anspruch auf Herausgabe der Sache abtritt."

Mr. Baum: If I may, Your Honor, when this was transcribed, I think the reporter made a mistake, and this was intended to refer to something a few pages back.

This section you have just read to the reporter in German is the German text of the Section 931 of the Civil Code which the witness referred to some few pages back in the deposition. I think it was just a mix-up.

(The reading from the deposition resumed):

"Q. You have just referred to—

"A. Is that the one you read? I think it conveys a wrong impression in the English, because this is only in the case of death, when the parties, the descendants, that have received something, in the case of inheritance, then they have to permit it to be accounted against them as some-291 thing received already on account of death, to this extent.

"Q. And these last remarks that you have made were in connection with a reference to the last paragraph on the first page of Exhibit 5-B; were they not?

"A. If this is 5-B, yes.

"Q. That is.

"A. Yes.

"Q. And when you said that the English translation, in your opinion, is inadequate, you had particular reference to the words, 'And shall be accountable therefor'?

"A. Yes, I didn't get it clearly enough. If I just—Does it say in connection with what? I don't think it really gives the true—it doesn't really give the true meaning of this paragraph. It is almost impossible to translate without explaining what ausgleichspflicht is.

"Q. Will you explain for the record, what the legal implication is of the word ausgleichspflicht, appearing in the last paragraph of page one of Exhibit 5-B?

"A. Well, according to the law, descendants are obligated, in case they inherit, without a will being left, from their parents something, they have to permit every-292 thing that they received beforehand, specified what —they have to consider as received on account of— in fact, it is added to the estate as it exists at that time; and then they divide the whole estate and deduct from the various shares what the individual descendant has already received in advance, which is accountable. And in this case, this would have been accountable as received in advance. In this case, it would have been added to the corpus of the whole gift, and would have to be deducted from the total at the end. But, in case the gift then would have been greater than the share that the descendant would have received as an heir, he is not obligated to return the surplus.

"Q. Let me see if your explanation accords with some analogy in the English or American law. Under American law, it is frequent for a parent, or a testator to give a gift to a child during his lifetime, and then to provide that, before the donee of the gift shall share in the donor's estate, there must be first charged to the donee the amount of the gift or the value of the gift before he can then share in the balance of the estate. Is that an analogy?

"A. It is an analogy, yes. As far as there is any analogy between the two systems, that is one.

"Q. And, as you explained, in the event that the 293 amount of the gift, or the value of the gift, exceeds the share which the donee would be entitled to out of the estate, he, nevertheless, is not required to return any excess to the estate?

"A. No; that is the law.

"Mr. Conner: I think that is all."

Mr. Burling: If your Honor please, back at page 206 of the record, where I was reading yesterday, an objection was made, or I was asked not to read a portion of our direct examination of the witness, and you said I should wait until cross-examination. Since my friends read the cross, I don't know what Your Honor's ruling is as to when we can require this portion to be read in this document offered in evidence.

The Court: They are the parties who are offering this deposition. Do you want to offer that?

Mr. Burling: As I understood the rules, when one party offers a part of the deposition, the other party may require additional parts to be read.

The Court: That is right.

Mr. Burling: I just want to do that.

The Court: Do you want to offer it now?

Mr. Burling: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: I will permit it.

Mr. Gallagher: Is that the letter from Smith to Wronker-Flatow?

294 Mr. Burling: Yes, page 206.

Mr. Gallagher: Will you let me see it a few moments, first?

Mr. Burling: This is the document the plaintiffs have admitted was mailed and received in the regular course of business.

Mr. Gallagher: That is right.

Your Honor, for the Court's information, if it wants to read it, we have no objection. But as far as the record is concerned, we say it is clearly hearsay.

The Court: There has been a lot of hearsay in this. I have noticed it as we have gone along.

Mr. Burling: I don't ask to read it now, Your Honor, but to have it marked for the record.

The Court (to Mr. Gallagher): You do not object to it on the ground of hearsay?

Mr. Gallagher: If Your Honor wants to read it, we have no objection to Your Honor's reading it.

The Court: There has been so much hearsay in here, I suppose I will have to separate it in some way.

Mr. Gallagher: On the basis of hearsay, then, Your Honor, if I understand it, wishes me to express our position. As far as the rules of evidence are concerned, it is clearly hearsay and could not possibly be admitted.

The Court: If in the argument of the case you 295 think it is inadmissible, you just call my attention to it.

Mr. Gallagher: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: I have noticed that in the reading of these depositions there is a great deal of hearsay. I suppose I will have to discriminate between what is hearsay and what is not, at the proper time. But it has all gone in without objection. So I will take this subject to your objection later on.

Mr. Burling: I understood at the outset Your Honor indicated you did not want to hear objections.

The Court: Yes, that is right.

Mr. Burling: We would have had a lot of objections under the old rules of evidence.

The Court: Yes; that is the ordinary procedure in a civil court. We don't take a great deal of time with that, unless it is way off, or highly objectionable.

Mr. Burling: Yes, sir.

The Court: All right.

(From the deposition, resumed):

"Q. I show you now a letter dated June 2, 1932, a copy of such a letter, which was addressed by the general counsel to Dr. Manfred Wronken-Flatow; and I would like to ask you to look at it, to read it, and see whether it refreshes your recollection, whether you received this letter?

296 "A. That was in '32. I remember some, now that I read this letter, that I got some information from John Thomas on the things;"—

Mr. Burling: May I ask that it be noted that that should read "John Thomas Smith"?

Mr Gallagher: Surely.

Mr. Burling: Thank you.

(From the deposition, resumed):

"A. That was in '32. I remember some, now that I read this letter, that I got some information from John Thomas Smith on the things; but they were transactions where I was not involved in those forward and backward, that was backing out and making suggestions, that I probably would not have agreed to personally. It is telling the whole story.

"Q. But you recall having received this letter?

"A. I have a faint recollection that I did receive such a letter. You see, there were many things happened; I don't recall all of them."

Mr. Burling: I will ask to have this letter marked as Defendant's Exhibit 30. The original is in English, and there therefore is no German. And I offer it in evidence.

Mr. Gallagher: And there is no necessity to further state Mr. Connor's objection which was made at that point.

297 (The letter was accordingly marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit No. 30.)

Mr. Burling: I now go to the redirect examination, page 231—

"By Mr. Laufer:

"Q. Mr. Stansfield, I call your attention again to Plaintiff's Exhibit 4, the power of attorney.

"A. Yes.

"Q. Do you recall whether you drew up this power of attorney yourself?

"A. Most of the form of it was drawn up hundreds of years ago, I believe. Some of it, yes.

"Q. But you got up that statement, that power of attorney as it now appears, did you?

"A. Yes. Beg pardon, I got—

"Q. Did you get it up—I don't say drafted—you got it up?

"A. Yes. I haven't read it.

"Q. Please do, now.

"A. But I don't think anybody else was there to do it except myself.

"(Whereupon, the witness read the document.)

"The Witness: Yes, sir.

"By Mr. Laufer:

"Q. Now, would you say that, pursuant to its 298 terms, Mr. Fritz von Opel was authorized to demand transfer of the shares, or payment of their proceeds to himself?

"A. Not under this power, no.

"Q. But you did state, did you not, that this power of attorney was very much like the powers used in Germany, or elsewhere, to avoid—

"A. Yes.

"Q. —further complications?

"A. I think it should have had another sentence in there that is usual in German powers; but, unfortunately, apparently this was taken from an English form, and it wasn't added. That is the one thing that is missing. It should have been in there. But it did the main thing, that we got it out of General Motors at that time. Everything else could be handled afterwards with all the time available to do everything else.

"Q. Is it your recollection that the fact of the gift was never brought to the attention of General Motors' officials at that time?

"A. I would say, definitely not.

"Q. Do you recall when the fact of that gift did come to their attention?

"A. No. I don't remember. It didn't mean much, as far as I was concerned, whether it did later on or didn't, because it was all past history, when it did.

299 "Q. You testified before about the children and grandchildren of Adam von Opel.

"A. Yes.

"Q. At the time the sales transaction was made, who, of the Opel children, Adam Opel children, were alive at that time?

"A. Fritz Opel, Dr. Fritz Opel, and Wilhelm von Opel.

"Q. And no other brothers were alive?

"A. No.

"Q. And the place of the deceased brothers was taken by their descendants?

"A. That is correct.

"Q. And in due course, these descendants received the shares that their fathers would have received?

"A. That is correct.

"Q. Had they been alive?

"A. That is correct.

"Q. How many Adam Opel grandchildren were there at the time?

"A. Let me—I am under oath, and I will try to count them again. I counted them before, and I would ask Fritz to correct me if I make a mistake. I think Karl von Opel had four children, two boys and two girls. Heinrich von Opel had two daughters; and Wilhelm von Opel had 300 a boy and a girl; and I believe that is eight. Fritz Opel had no children; and Ludwig von Opel had no children, either.

"Q. The six grandchildren of Adam Opel who received their portion of the estate were the children of the two brothers who were deceased at the time of this transaction?

"A. Correct.

"Q. You testified that at the time of the gift, Elinor von Opel, the sistor of Fritz von Opel, was already married?

"A. That is right.

"Q. Do you recall how much she received from her parents at the time of her marriage?

"A. I don't recall that they ever told me; but I do recall that I was told that she did receive an endowment.

"Q. You do not know how much it was?

"A. I don't remember the figures; but she married a husband who had quite some money of his own.

"Mr. Laufer: That is all."

(Mr. Gallagher now reading the questions, Mr. Boland answers):

"Recross Examination

"By Mr. Connor:

"Q. Isn't it either a custom, or under some legal 301 sanction, that when a daughter marries, she is given a gift, a marriage gift by her parents?

"A. It is a very definite custom, when the parents have the means to do so, they they do; and quite considerable gifts, as a rule; a good part of their future inheritance. So I would believe that it was a very important part that she got.

"Q. You say that its amount is usually based upon its being a good part of their future inheritance; is that correct?

"A. Right.

"Q. Is that a rather universal custom or tradition among German people?

"A. Where there is anything—yes, I would say it is, very definitely. It is right in the law. It is regulated, a mitgift.

"Q. You say it is controlled by the law?

"A. It doesn't say how much you have to give as a mitgift. It has to be quite an amount that is within—what would be up to the standing of the family; that is, financially and otherwise.

"Q. Could you readily refer to your Code Book, Mr. Stansfield, and give us that provision in the German Code?

"A. I haven't seen this for some time, but maybe I 302 could.

"Q. Have you now found the provision of the German Code; and if you have, will you state for the record, giving the section number, and whatever other portions of the book are necessary, to identify that section?

"A. Would you call this the section sign?

"Q. Yes.

"A. It is all simple. Section 1620 of the Fourth Book of the German Civil Code; and I think that is all we have to say; and it is about the relations between parents and child, in general.

"Q. And will you now give us a translation of that section, Mr. Stansfield?

"A. The father is obligated to give his daughter, in case of her marriage, an endowment within the—it includes the standard of the—in ratio of his station in life, for the purpose of starting her own household, as far as he is in a position to do so, taking into consideration his other obligations and without endangering his own standard—you might say, standard of living; and provided, the daughter does not have capital of her own which is sufficient for the purpose.

"Mr. Connor: I wonder if we might stipulate at this—point in the record that those portions of the German Code to which reference has been made, be copied into 303 the record? I believe it is Sections 1620 and 931.

"The Witness: I haven't finished this. I think the next sentence, at least, should be translated. It is the same:

"The mother is under the same obligation, in case the father is not in a position to supply the endowment, or in case he has died.

"I think you should have that in.

"Mr. Connor: Yes, and I should like to suggest the stipulation for the record, to the effect that these two sections of the German Code, which have been referred to, Section 1620 and Section 931, be copied into the record, in the original German in order that we may tussle again, perhaps, with the question of their meaning.

"Mr. Laufer: It is so stipulated."

Mr. Gallagher (to the reporter): This is the end of his examination. I will give you this German to copy.

(The concluding portion referred to follows):

"S. 1620. Der Vater ist verpflichtet, einer Tochter im Falle ihrer Verheiratung zur Einrichtung des Haushalts eine angemessene Aussteuer zu gewaehren, soweit er bei Beruecksichtigung seiner sonstigen Verpflichtungen ohne Gefaehrdung seines standemaessigen Unterhalts dazu imstande ist und nicht die Tochter ein zur Beschaffung der Aussteuer ausreichendes Vermoegen hat. Die gleiche
304 Verpflichtung trifft die Mutter, wenn der Vater zur
Gewaehrung der Aussteuer ausserstande oder wenn er gestorben ist.

"Die Vorchriften des S 1604 und des S 1607 Abs 2 finden entsprechende Anwendung.

"Mr. Connor: I think that is all."

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, I think that is all.

307–351 Thereupon,

DR. HEINRICH KRONSTEIN, called as witness on behalf of the plaintiff, and being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Will you state your full name and profession, Doctor? A. My name is Heinrich Kronstein. I am professor of law, Georgetown University Law School. I am a member of the Bar of this Court.

Q. Would you state briefly your educational background? A. After elementary school in Gymansium—that means high school.

Mr. Burling: I think if we could save time, Your Honor—I myself have called Dr. Kronstein as an expert in German law, and I fully concede he is such an expert.

Mr. Boland: If Your Honor please. We would not agree to a statement of this man's qualifications. We think the Court should have the benefit of a statement of his qualifications.

352 Mr. Burling (to Mr. Boland): I was just trying to help you.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Would you state briefly your educational background, Doctor? A. After elementary and Gymnasium, meaning high school and junior college, in Baden, Germany and after two and a half years in war service, in the First World War, I studied law at the University of Heidelberg, in Baden.

When I passed my first bar examination in the State of Baden, I passed through the three years of referendar time, which means an apprenticeship in the court.

Q. And what does that mean? A. That is, under the German system, the study of law is three years in the university, and then three and a half years, at least, in the State of Baden, of practical experience in the administrative agencies, the courtrooms, and the law offices.

Q. And when were you admitted to the practice of law, Doctor? A. 1924.

Q. And then? A. Then I went to Berlin and passed there my Doctor's examination at the University of Berlin, Doctor of Law.

Q. And after that? A. That was my legal education under civil law.

Then in 1936 I began to study common law in the Columbia Law School in New York.

Q. When did you first come to America, Doctor? A. December, 1935, and studied there until 1939, where I received the degree of L.L.D., and came to Georgetown and received the degree of S.J.D., and became professor of law in 1940.

Q. Have you had any experience, Doctor, in the field of actual practicing of law? A. Certainly.

Q. How long did you practice law, Doctor? A. I first, after my second bar exam, it was the practice in my home state, Baden, I was appointed Gerichts Assessor in charge of one of the sections of the Municipal Court of the City of Mannheim.

Q. Was this immediately after you passed your bar examination? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any special significance to that appointment? A. In the State of Baden, it was a merit appointment.

Then I began to practice law in 1926, and practiced law in the City of Mannheim until November, 1935.

Q. At which time you came to America? A. Yes.

354 Q. And other than going to Columbia University Law School, Doctor, what have you done in the field of law in the United States? A. I was called as an expert of the Department of Justice since 1936, to 1940, or 1939. In 1939 I came to the Department of Justice on a per diem basis, since I was not a citizen at this time. I became an attorney in the Department of Justice in 1940, and was in the Department of Justice Anti-trust Division in the problems of international cartels and foreign law, until 1946.

Q. And when did you first come to Georgetown University Law School? A. I made my Doctor there, from 1939 to 1940, and became Professor then, first of comparative law, and full Professor since 1947; and teach corporation law, bankruptcy, and international private relations.

Q. Have you ever previously testified as an expert on German law? A. Yes.

Q. Doctor, would you explain briefly why you came to America in 1935? A. I left Germany first, because I am, to speak in the Nazi terminology, of the Jewish race; second, because I opposed Naziism.

355 Q. Doctor, I show you now Plaintiff's Exhibit 5 and ask whether or not you have had an opportunity previously to examine this document. A. I did, yes.

Q. What does this document purport to be? A. It purports to be a gift contract.

Q. And does it purport to be an executed gift contract? A. Yes, it purports to be executed.

Q. In using the words "gift contract," Doctor, do these have any special significance under German law? A. Yes. A gift contract is one of the contracts discussed and defined in the Civil Code, the Burgerliches Gesetzbuch.

Q. Would you spell that, Doctor, please? A. B-ü-r-g-e-r-l-i-c-h-e-s G-e-s-e-t-z-b-u-c-h.

Q. And is that what is commonly referred to as the German Code? A. Yes, that is the German Code.

Q. What is the significance of the German Code in German law? A. Germany is one of the so-called civil law countries. In 1896 the law was codified, the private law was codified, and overhauled. If you today study a question of private law, you look first to the Code. But you have to keep in mind that since 1896 the law developed, 356 and you have to consult the decisions of the courts, just as you do here.

In addition to that, you have to consult the commentaries and the textbooks, which have much more significance in Germany than they have here.

Q. Is the word "gift" defined in the German Code, Doctor? A. Yes, it is.

Q How is it defined? A. In Section 516 it is defined.

Q. And what is the definition? A. It says a gift is some delivery or some giving by which anyone enriches himself out of the gift of someone else, provided both parties agree that there shall be no consideration.

Q. So that, basically, a gift is defined as the transfer of property without consideration? Would that be a true statement? A. No; I don't like the words "transfer of property." A gift is a contract under German law. Under American law, a gift is a part of property law.

Under German law, a gift is a contract; and you find, if you look in the Code Section 516, you find it in the second part of the code. The first part of the Code contains the general rules, whether a person has legal capacity.

The second part of the Code has the personal 357 contractual relations, or tort relations—such as a claim I have against you, personal relations, which have nothing to do with any right in rem.

The third part deals with property law, personal and real, and all relations between a person and the goods, the real and personal property.

The fourth part is family law, and the fifth part is inheritance.

Q. Referring to a gift contract, Doctor, is it true that such a contract is without consideration— A. Yes, it is.

Q. —as we understand it in American law? A. German law does not know the concept of consideration. It is perfectly possible that a contract exists without consideration.

Q. Well, it is true that the promisee under a gift contract could sue for specific performance? A. Yes. I don't like the words "specific performance." That has too much of a technical meaning in American law.

Q. Could the promisee require performance? A. Yes—require and demand performance. If I make a contract, sales contract, or whatever contract I make, and the contract is not performed, I can sue in law for the performance.

Q. Even though it is a promise to give a gift? A.
358 Even though it is a promise to give a gift.

Q. Are there any special requirements for such a contract, under German law? A. Yes.

Q. What are they? A. The gift contract has to be in a solemn form, meaning in a form authenticated by a notary. But a notary shall not be compared with an American notary public. A notary, in the different parts of Germany, as position. In some states they are judges, people of judges' positions. In my home state, Baden, for instance, one of the notaries was appointed member of the Supreme Court of Germany. And in other states, you find distinguished lawyers of experience in the writing of documents, when they are over age, appointed notaries.

Q. What are the general purposes of a notary in Germany, Doctor? A. He has two principal purposes, at least in south Germany, where that, I believe, took place. He has one purpose he has everywhere in all Germany, to operate as a document officer, and to authenticate the document, or only to verify the signature.

His second purpose, in south Germany, is that he has many assignments such as you find here in the probate court.

Q. In the probate court? A. Yes.

359 Q. Assuming, therefore, a promisor to make a promise in respect of a gift to a promisee, then as I understand your testimony, it is that after that contract is notarized, the promisee can require performance under German law? A. Yes.

Q. Is there a distinction between that and American law in that respect? A. No doubt.

Q. That is the only distinction? A. The distinction is that, as far as I say, under the American law, a gift is no contract. Therefore the concept is different.

I am now teaching comparative law for eight years, and I learn I should never say that this, in the American law, is equal to this, in the German law, because it is finally generally not the case.

Q. You have testified, I believe, Doctor, that the promisee can require performance of the promisor on the gift contract, if notarized? A. Yes.

Q. Is that defined or set out in the German law? A. Yes; you will find two clear statements to the effect that the German Code—which is more a masterpiece in logic than in practical law, and is brought up in an entirely 360 logical line—you will find in the introduction to all types of contracts, such as sales or gifts, you find again some general rules.

And in this general rule you find right at the beginning of the general rule, in Section 241, on the basis of any obligatory relation, the creditor is entitled to demand that the debtor perform. That is one basis, so that the donee can ask for it.

But you find, furthermore, by indirect way, if you look, for instance, in Section 519, there it says the donor is entitled to refuse the performance of his promise, if by the performance he would endanger his standard of life.

This provision that he can refuse in a specific case certainly shows that as a rule he can ask for the performance of the gift.

Q. Now, Doctor, I believe your testimony thus far is to the effect that under German law two people can enter into a contract in respect of a gift, and that the promisee can sue the promisor for performance, if that contract is notarized. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that true? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Let us assume that the contract was not in fact notarized, is there any provision under German law 361 which would cure this formal requirement? A. Yes, there is.

Q. What is that, Doctor? A. In Section 518, Section 1, the statute provides that the notarial or judicial authorization of the gift is necessary; and then it says, in 518, Section 2, it says a deficiency of the form might be cured by the actual performance—or by, but, more literal, by actual delivery as promised.

Q. In other words, Doctor, if we were to make a contract in respect of this particular chair, and you agreed to give me the chair, as a gift, and we had words of promise on your behalf and acceptance on my behalf, and that were notarized, then I could require you to perform the contract? A. Yes.

Q. But if that were not notarized, I would have no right against you except that by your actual delivery of the chair to me, the gift would be completed and the contract good? Is that correct? A. By the act of delivery, the gift contract becomes valid. For instance, if you have a gift contract in written form or in oral form, which contains many provisions other than just the promise to give and to accept, the whole gift contract becomes valid as soon as the performance took place.

Q. Directing your attention now, Doctor, to Plain-362 tiff's Exhibit 5, this document here—and that is an English translation, I believe, is it not? A. Yes. Could I have the German text?

Q. Yes. A. What is your question?

Q. I haven't asked a question yet, Doctor.

And directing your attention to page 1 of the Exhibit 5, would you point out and read to the Court in English first, whether or not there are words of promise.

Answer the question, first, whether or not there are words of promise; and, if so, read these words. A. Before I do that, I might say a word in regard to the relationship between promise and delivery.

The German law makes a very sharp distinction between what it calls Obligatorischer Vertrag. That is the contract by virtue of which personal obligations come into existence.

For example, I make a contract to buy a pair of shoes; I promise to pay $10. The shoe seller promises to sell the shoes. The German law makes a very sharp distinction between this contract, called Obligatorischer Vertrag, and the delivery of the shoes.

The delivery of the shoes, under German law, is independent from the contract itself. If, for instance, the delivery of the shoes again being considered a contract, I, as the seller, offer to you, the buyer, to transfer the prop-363 erty and the title in these shoes to you, and you accept the title in the shoes, that is again a contract.

If you take a document such as this, you have to find out how much of this contract is of Obligatorischer Vertrag character, establishing relations in person, in personam, and how much it has to do with the so-called Dinglicher Vertrag.

Q. Do I understand you correctly, Doctor, that what you have just stated is basically that in each gift contract there are really two contracts, after it has been executed? A. After it has been executed, there are two contracts?

Q. And one is the— A. The so-called Obligatorischer Vertrag, and the other is the Dinglicher Vertrag.

The Obligatorischer is all the relations covered by the second book of the Civil Code—the contract of sale, the contract of gift, the contract of rent.

Then if the contract is made in which I promise to sell; the other fellow accepts; then the contract has to be made under the third book of the Civil Code, in which I transfer the title.

These two contracts are separate, to the extent that one of them might be void without making the other void. The Obligatorischer Vertrag might be void; the Dinglicher Vertrag remains valid.

There are other cases I can give you.

364 Q. Directing your attention, Doctor, to the first page of Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, in order to bring some of this testimony down to a practical basis, are there words of promise set forth in the October 5, 1931, draft, the Plaintiff's Exhibit 5? A. Yes.

Q. Would you read those words to the Court, please? A. In the second paragraph—

"In view of the premises I, with the consent of my wife, make a gift from our community property to my son Fritz von Opel of the shares owned by us and mentioned above of the Adam Opel Aktiengesellschaft in Ruesselsheim, Main, Nos. 1 to 600, having a par value of RM 6,000,000,00 (six million). These stocks are deposited at present with the bank."

That is the promise to transfer.

Q. That is the promise to transfer? A. Yes, the promise to make the gift.

Q. By the way, Doctor, would you direct your attention to the original of Plaintiff's Exhibit 5 and explain what the meaning of the German equivalent of community property is in Germany? Is it similar to our use of community property in America? A. The German law on community property is one of the most complicated parts of the law.

But for the purposes of reading such a contract as 365 this, I think I can state it; that is simple.

Q. It has been stipulated by the counsel for the defendants that the property here in question was jointly owned by the mother and father. A. Yes.

Q. Still on page 1 of the gift agreement, Doctor, are there words of acceptance on behalf of the donee? A. Yes—"I, the undersigned Fritz von Opel, accept the gift."

Q. If I understand your testimony correctly, if they were notarized, Fritz von Opel, the donee under that gift agreement, could require performance from the donors, the father and the mother. Is that true? A. Yes, he could.

Q. Assuming it is a fact, Doctor, that this gift agreement was not actually notarized, are there any words on the first page of this contract which would cure the defect from the standpoint of this Dinglicher Vertrag to which you referred; and, if so, would you read the words? A. On the last paragraph of this page, I see the sentence:

"I, Wilhelm von Opel, herewith transfer title to these shares to our son Fritz von Opel by assigning to him our claim for the delivery of these shares to us."

366 Q. Is it your opinion that these words are words of actual conveyance, actual transfer, Doctor? A. Yes, certainly, they are.

Q. And what effect would they have, Doctor?

Mr. Burling: Just a moment, please.

I won't object more than once, Your Honor. I take it that it is understood that the Doctor's opinion is being asked on the basis of an assumption that this is a bona fide contract.

Mr. Boland: Oh, yes, yes.

The Witness: Here on the question whether there is or is not a sufficient transfer of property, we have to consult the third book of the B.G.B., where we find the chapter on the acquisition and loss of personal property.

There the general rule is established, in Section 929, that the transfer of title in personal property requires that the owner delivers possession to the person who acquires it, and that both parties agree that title is passed, that is, the Dinglicher Vertrag.

Now, that is the rule, the general rule, the usual rule, how the title in personal property passes.

But, in Section 931, there is a rule dealing with a case that the seller or the donor is not himself of the goods. He wished to transfer title. He can do so by assignment of his claim against the depository, to the donee 367 or to the the buyer. It reads:

"If the third person possesses the goods, the transfer might be substituted by an assignment of the owner to the other person required."

And by the assignment of what? By the assignment of the claim for the delivery of the goods.

Q. Would you now direct your attention and re-read those words of conveyance, Doctor, and read them aloud? A. (Reading): "I, Wilhelm von Opel, herewith transfer title to these shares to our son Fritz von Opel by assigning to him our claim for the delivery of these shares to us."

Q. And from what you have just read, from the German Code, it is your opinion, as I understand it, is it not, that actual title to the 600 shares of stock passed by words of conveyance set forth in the words you have just read? Is that true?

Mr. Burling: Again, on the same assumption that this is a bona fide agreement.

Mr. Boland: I think that is understood, Mr. Burling.

Mr. Burling: All right; I won't make it again.

Of course, I think it is understood that an expert witness cannot testify to an ultimate fact, is it not, Your Honor?, I mean, this witness has no knowledge of what happened on October 5, 1931.

The Court: As I understand, he is testifying on 368 the state of the law with regard an instrument on its face. That is what I understand.

Mr. Burling: Yes, Your Honor.

The Witness: This document purports to give two things:

Number one, the promise to give, and the acceptance to take; and Number two, the full transfer of the title in the shares.

Mr. Boland: Let us get these assumptions of Mr. Burling clear, Your Honor. The assumptions I will concede are these, and only these: that Dr. Kronstein is testifying on the assumption that this is an actual contract which was entered into between Fritz von Opel, his mother, and father, on October 5, 1931. I grant no other assumptions.

Mr Burling: The assumption that the parties intended to contract as indicated by the paper.

Mr. Boland: I am having Dr. Kronstein testifying that this document, being an original, valid, gift agreement, testify to what the words mean under German law; and that is all.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Now, is it your testimony that if this contract was actually entered into between Fritz von Opel and his mother and father, and if the only thing before you were page 1 on this agreement, that title passed to 600 shares of Opel stock? A. Yes, that is my opinion.

369 Q. Under German law? A. Under German law, the title passed.

Q. And title passed, as I understand you, even though this is an assignment of a claim against a third person, because under German law you may have the power to substitute a claim which you have against a third person in possession? Is that true? A. Yes.

Q. So that, getting back to the chair, Doctor, you have words of promise by the donor, the promise to give; and words of acceptance by the son, "I accept." That is the Obligatorischer Vertrag? A. Yes.

Q. And "Vertrag" means contract? A. Yes.

Q. Now, you have also read words of conveyance, words of transfer of title, in other words, of handing over the shares from one to the other? A. Yes.

Q. And those words are present? A. Yes.

Q. And that is what you call Dinglicher Vertrag, meaning contract? A. Yes.

370 Q. And all that is necessary for a Dinglicher Vertrag is an actual transfer or handing over, with the intent that the title pass? A. With the intent that title pass, and the acceptance of the intent.

Q. Right. So that it is the Dinglicher Vertrag, the actual transfer of title, which cures the effect of the lack of notarization, if that is a fact that this was not notarized? A. Yes, certainly.

Q. Now, Doctor, I direct your attention to the first paragraph on page 2, and would you read that aloud to the Court, please, from the English translation? A. (Reading): "The usufruct in the shares is not assigned to Fritz von Opel. It remains with Wilhelm von Opel and his wife, hereafter called the parents Opel, until the death of the survivor of them. However, 20 per cent of all dividends and interest received will accrue to Fritz von Opel."

Q. Would you give us your opinion, Doctor, whether that language would have any effect on the passage of title, to which you have just indicated or testified to? A. Would you permit me to read the whole page again?

Q. Yes. A. To see whether there are—

371 Q. Certainly. A. No; that has no effect on the passing of title.

Q. Would you explain why you make that statement, Doctor? A. German law doesn't know the idea of equitable or legal interests in the same way the American and English law knows it.

If you transfer title in personal property or in real property, you can only transfer the whole title. You cannot transfer half of the title. You transfer the title, and the title passes.

Therefore I don't see how, if you take page 1 together with this section, how we can come to the conclusion that the effect of this contract is that something remains, as a matter of property law, in the hands of the parents. Title passed.

Q. Your testimony is, Doctor, is it not, that because of the language on page 1 of the gift agreement, the promise to give, the acceptance, and the actual transfer, that title passed? A. Yes.

Q. And that title passed absolutely and unqualifiedly? A. Up to this point, you gave to me up to now, it says nothing which could establish anything else but a complete transfer of title.

Q. Well, what I am trying to get to, Doctor, is that your testimony on German law is that if title passes, 372 title passes completely and absolutely. Is that right?

A. There are situations; for instance, I have a picture. I give you this picture, this specific picture, and we agree, in case of your death, this picture shall go back to me. That would be a possible condition. The title would pass to you, but it would be a condition of the return of this particular, specific picture to me after your death.

Therefore I hesitate to make such a broad statement as you suggest, because of this case I have in mind.

Q. Well, how broad is the German law? A. But title passes, but if title passes in this case, nothing remains in the donor of equitable or legal interest in the matter.

This one case which hinders me to say all the title passes absolutely, because you use the word "absolutely," because of this one case I mentioned.

But if we understand you have not in mind this condition which I here refer to, with this understanding, the title passed absolutely and fully, and gives complete power over this property to the donee.

Q. Getting back to the gift agreement, Doctor, therefore your testimony is, is it not, that title passed absolutely and unqualifiedly, as a result of the words on page 1, and that your reason why the first paragraph on page 2 does not in any way affect passage of the title is because
373. of the German law in cases such as this, where title passes; that in such cases, the title passes absolutely? A. Yes.

Q. Would you direct your attention to the next paragraph, Doctor, on page 2, and read that to the Court? A. (Reading): "If the parents Opel should predecease Fritz von Opel, the above described gift shall be considered as an advancement and shall be deducted from his share in such property as might be inherited by him or his sister, Mrs. Elinor Sachs, nee von Opel, or in case of her prior death, by her issue."

Q. And the next paragraph? A. (Reading): "For this purpose the value of the shares shall be fixed as the value at the time when the duty to account for the advancement arises."

Q. And the third portion of it? A. (Reading): "If this value is higher than the present value, the higher value shall apply, if it is lower, then the lower value."

Q. Do these paragraphs which you have just read, Doctor, in any way affect the passage of title? A. No, not at all.

Q. Would you read the next paragraph aloud, please? A. (Reading): "In the event that the parents Opel shall not have drawn in full or in part the income from 374 the shares accruing to them by virtue of their usufruct, the advancement to Fritz von Opel shall be deemed to have increased by the income not drawn and he shall be accountable therefor."

Q. Does this paragraph in any way affect the passage of title, Doctor? A. No, certainly not.

Q. Would you read the next paragraph aloud? A. (Reading): "If the shares should be sold or exchanged against other property the proceeds from such sale or the property taken in exchange shall be substituted for the shares, after the usufruct of the parents Opel has been safeguarded. All provisions stipulated above will then fully apply to such substituted property."

Q. Does this paragraph in any way affect the passage of title, Doctor? A. No.

Q. Would you read the next paragraph, on page 3? A. (Reading): "If Fritz von Opel predeceases his parents without leaving legitimate issue, the gift executed by this document will become void. The stocks or the property substituted therefore including the income accrued but not drawn will then revert to the parents Opel or the surviving parent."

Q. Does this paragraph in any affect the passage
375 of title, Doctor? A. This question cannot be answered either yes or no. I mentioned before that, for instance, in the case of a picture, a Rembrandt, which I gave to someone title, with the understanding that it shall go back if the donee dies, there the title would pass, but it would be a permissible condition of dissolutive character, a condition which might dissolve title in the case of death.

However, here, we don't deal with a specific picture. Here we deal with shares which can be exchanged, and the contract speaks of exchange into something else.

The German property law is very exact. This property cannot be clearly specified and defined, such an agreement, as we read here, has no effect on the passing of the title and does not establish a condition of the transfer, because at the time of the death the property might be mixed with a hundred other matters. And therefore I cannot see that this section has any effect on the passing of title.

Q. Therefore, in answer to my question as to whether this paragraph has any effect on the passage of title, your answer it what? A. No.

Q. Doctor, you will agree that all this language means something? A. Yes, certainly.

376 Q. This language starting at the top of page 2 and going through page 3? A. Certainly; every word has a very clear—I might say, not clear—a very obvious meaning.

Q. Well, let us start with, for example, what is the meaning of the first paragraph on page 2? A. (Reading): "The usufruct in the shares is not assigned to Fritz von Opel. It remains with Wilhelm von Opel and his wife, hereafter called the parents Opel, until the death of the survivor of them. However, 20 per cent of all dividends and interest received will accrue to Fritz von Opel."

With all proper deference to the man who drafted this contract, it is not a masterpiece of writing law. If you interpret a German contract, you do not just look on the word, and if you see the word "usufruct," you take the word and look in the index under "usufruct," and find that, and think that is what the parties did.

We have to apply two basic rules of interpretation. The first rule is that under German law, different from American, the objective statement of the parties governs.

If I say, "I transfer this ring to you," believing the ring is not just a Woolworth ring, but it is gold, the objective test, the objective words, have to be looked on. Under Section 133 of the Civil Code, this objective test

377 has to be interpreted within the meaning of the intention of the parties, and the practice of life.

Q. So— A. And let me state one further rule of interpretation. The rule of interpretation is that the contract shall be so interpreted that the contract can be performed, and as much as possible of the words used in the contract can be given a meaning as much as possible and as close as possible to the intention of the parties.

Q. Directing your attention to paragraphs 2, 3, and 4, Doctor, would you explain— A. Paragraph 3?

Q. 2, 3, and 4 (indicating). A. Yes.

Q. And would you explain generally and briefly what these paragraphs mean, Doctor, under German law? A. These paragraphs are easily explained. Under Section 2050, that is, in the fifth book of the law on inheritance, it is provided that whenever a deceased has made gifts to the heirs, to one of the heirs, that this gift has to be reported.

Let me give a case, if you permit. A father has two children. He dies in December, 1948. His estate is one million dollars. He has given a gift two years ago, two years before, to the child B, a gift of two hundred thou-378 sand dollars. Now, in the distribution of the estate, the child has to report this gift, if the deceased has required so in the gift, as he has done here.

If he reports—you take the estate of one million dollars, and add to this estate two hundred thousand dollars, and you have one million two hundred thousand dollars; and you divide that into two parts. And son A who had already two hundred thousand, which is four hundred thousand; and the other gets the six hundred. So there is, again, the one million.

So that is what this section means, and that is what here is requested, that Fritz von Opel, in case of the death of his parents, reports this amount in the distribution of the estate of the parents.

Q. Do I understand your interpretation or your reading of the German law provisions, Doctor, that unless the donor in a gift agreement or in a gift makes a specific provision for that type of accounting, that the example you just gave would not take effect?

In other words, it would not be accounted for unless specifically provided for in the gift itself? Is that true? A. In this type of gift, yes; specific provision is necessary. There are other types we do not have to deal with here, where it is not necessary.

379 Q. And, as a German lawyer, that is your understanding of the purpose of those paragraphs? A. Yes.

Q. Doctor, I think the example you gave was the example where we assume the child got an amount less than the amount of what his inheritance would be. A. Yes.

Q. Let us assume the child's gift was actually greater than what he would have gotten in the distribution after the death, what are the provisions in the German law in such a case? A. For instance, if what you mean, if I have my example—

The Court: Suppose in this case he had drawn six hundred thousand dollars, and there is a million left; what happens then?

The Witness: Then you make the same kind of arithmetic to find out how much he gets. But the statute expressly provides that the child who has received more than his share has nothing to return—an expressed provision of section—

The Court: That is the same thing the other witness said.

Mr. Boland: Yes, sir. But he wasn't testifying as an expert on German law.

By Mr. Boland:

380 Q. Therefore, as you read the provisions on page 2 of this gift agreement, under German law, in no set of circumstances, regardless of what the amount of this gift is, what relation that bears to the final, ultimate estate of Wilhelm von Opel, would Fritz von Opel be required to return any amounts of money for distribution? A. No. He would not be obliged to make any payments to the estate or to Mrs. Elinor Sachs, or to anyone else.

Q. So that these provisions are merely arithmetic calculations for the purposes of testamentary disposition, and only that, and do not in any shape, form, manner, or way create any claim against Fritz von Opel? Is that true? A. Yes, that is true.

Q. Directing your attention to the fifth paragraph on page 2, read that aloud, would you, for the benefit of the Court, and explain what that means? A. (Reading): "In the event that the parents Opel shall not have drawn in full or in part the income from the shares accruing to them by virtue of their usufruct, the advancement to Fritz von Opel shall be deemed to have increased by the income not drawn and he shall be accountable therefor."

Q. Can you give me any light on how that would be interpreted under German law, Doctor?

The Court: Don't you agree the word "not" should 381 be inserted in there?

The Witness: No; he should be accountable, because the idea seems to me that all of the Opel parents under this contract might have a claim for 80 per cent, if they only take 20 per cent a year, or take nothing. And then that is to be considered, in addition, a gift.

The Court: That is right. I understand that.

(To counsel): Didn't you agree the other day that the word "not" ought to be there in front of "be"?

Mr. Boland: No, sir.

Mr. Gallagher: There is no mistake or difference on the question of the language of this, Your Honor.

The Court (to Mr. Burling): Didn't you?

Mr. Burling: No, sir. I didn't think either side thought the word "not" should be in there.

The Court: Let me read it.

I see; I understand.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. And this, too, is in connection with the testamentary accounting; the use of the word "accountable" there? A. Yes, it is—for the same reason.

Q. And what relationship, or how would that particular paragraph affect the rights of the donee under this contract? A. The rights of donee?

Q. Yes. Does that create a right of any sort,
382 nature, or kind, against the donee? A. No, certainly not.

Q. I direct your attention to the next paragraph.

The Court: Gentlemen, I think that is a rather important paragraph, and I believe I will have to stop at this point. You will probably take some little time on this, will you not?

Mr Boland: Yes, Your Honor; we are coming to a rather lengthy one.

The Court: This next one will probably be the controlling one, won't it?

Mr. Boland: No; that will be with respect to the first paragraph on page 2, Your Honor.

The Court: All right. It certainly seems to me that it is very important.

. . . . . .

DR. HEINRICH KRONSTEIN resumed the stand and was examined and testified further as follows:

Direct Examination. (Continued)

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Dr. Kronstein, as we adjourned on Friday, I believe you had testified, in respect of Exhibit 5, the gift 387 agreement dated October 5, 1931, that the language on page 1 of this exhibit set forth a promise to give, on behalf of the father and mother von Opel, and an acceptance of that promise by the son; and, on the assumption that that was not notarized, that, as I understood your testimony, was not an enforceable obligation, those two things constituting what is known as an Obligatorischer Vertrag.

You further testified that at the bottom of the page were words of actual conveyance of title, which you referred to as the Dinglicher Vertrag. Is that right? A. Yes.

Q. You further testified that under German law, the transfer of title through the Dinglicher Vertrag cured the lack of notarization in the Obligatorischer Vertrag. Is that right? A. Yes.

Q. And I believe that you testified that the title absolutely passed as a result of the language on page 1 of that exhibit. Is that right? A. Yes.

Q. Then we went on page 2 and described very generally the language in the first paragraph of page 2, that is, in connection with the reservation of certain rights on behalf of the donor. Is that right? A. Yes.

388 Q. And we had gotten through the testamentary accounting provisions in paragraphs 2, 3, and 4, on page 2 of the English translation. Is that right? A. Yes.

Q. And I believe that the fifth paragraph on page 2 is the place at which we adjourned. You had not gone into that particular paragraph. Is that true? A. Yes.

Q. Would you read aloud, Doctor, the fifth paragraph on page 2? A. (Reading): "In the event that the parents Opel shall not have drawn in full or in part the income from the shares accruing to them by virtue of their usufruct, the advancement to Fritz von Opel shall be deemed to have increased by the income not drawn and he shall be accountable therefor."

Q. So that paragraph, Doctor, related to the first paragraph on page 2? A. Yes.

Q. Would you prefer to discuss that paragraph in connection with the first paragraph on page 2? A. Yes; it cannot be explained otherwise.

Mr. Boland: Your Honor, it is our belief that the Court will have a clearer presentation of the problems involved in this particular contract if we discuss this paragraph with the first paragraph on page 2. So, with Your Honor's permission, we will skip that paragraph and go on to the next paragraph on page 2.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Will you read that, Doctor? A. (Reading): "If the shares should be sold or exchanged against other property the proceeds from such sale or the property taken in exchange shall be substituted for the shares, after the usufruct of the parents Opel has been safeguarded. All provisions stipulated above will then fully apply to such substituted property."

Q. Would you explain the significance of that paragraph under German law, Doctor? A. I think that this paragraph, too, cannot be explained and discussed without going into the first paragraph on page 2.

Q. So that when we return to the first paragraph on page 2 we will also consider the fifth and sixth paragraphs? Is that true? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you read the first paragraph on page 3, Doctor? A. (Reading): "If Fritz von Opel predeceases his parents without leaving legitimate issue, the gift executed by this document will become void. The stocks or 390 the property substituted therefore including the income accrued but not drawn will then revert to the parents Opel or the surviving parent."

Q. Would you explain briefly what is contemplated by such a paragraph, under the German law? A. I already, on Friday, answered your question, whether this section has an effect on the transfer of title.

Q. You stated that it did not? A. That it has not. And I discussed that more in full, and it will become clearer as our discussion proceeds. But this section, too, cannot be separated altogether from the first section on page 2. It has to be seen altogether at one time.

Q. Would you repeat what you said on Friday, for the benefit of the Court, as to what your interpretation of that paragraph was? A. I said that there are cases in which the transfer of property, personal property, can be under a condition. For instance, I give a Rembrandt picture to my friend, with the understanding that the property falls back to me if this friend dies.

There it is perfectly clear that here is one specific piece of property; and, if he dies, the condition occurs and the property goes back.

In this case, however, especially after we have 391 discussed the usufruct idea, we will not end the discussion before we come to what shall be a substitution of property. Mr. Fritz von Opel, if this usufruct did not hinder him—and it didn't—to sell the shares and to buy other shares or buy houses, or pictures, or have a good living on it, then it is absolutely impossible, at the moment of his death without legitimate issue, to find out the specific piece of property on which this depends.

Therefore we cannot compare the case of the picture, with this case; and therefore this provision has not the meaning to establish a conditional transfer of title. It is something else.

Q. Does the preceding paragraph give you a clew upon which you base your conclusions? A. The preceding paragraph, again, only in connection with our discussion of the usufruct, because I cannot separate the question of the power of Fritz von Opel to sell and exchange again to other properties, from such sale of the property taken in exchange that may be substituted, after the usufruct of the parents von Opel has been safeguarded, I cannot separate that from the usufruct.

Therefore, all that I can say at this moment is that this provision, as this contract is written, does not establish a conditional transfer of title; it doesn't affect the transfer of title. The way it is written, it permits only other 392 explanation, and I think I can present explanation, as you say.

Q. All right, Doctor. Now, before we return to the explanation of the first paragraph on page 2, there is one question I would like to ask you about the transfer of title to the 600 Opel shares.

When we discussed page 1 on Friday, you testified that under German law a substitution of an assignment of claim against a third person in possession would permit the actual transfer of title, did you not? A. Yes, I did.

Q. At that time, I do not believe that I gave you the assumption of a fact that if these shares were physically located in New York, would that make any difference, under German law? A. It depends why they were situated in New York. If they were situated in New York on the basis of a contract between the Opel parents, or Wilhelm von Opel, with a New York bank, then certainly we would have to consider under which law this assignment, by Wilhelm von Opel to Fritz von Opel, takes place.

Q. Well, assume, Doctor, for our purposes, that the shares of stock are located in a bank in New York, and that the parents fail title in respect of this through a claim against the bank.

393 As I understand your testimony, you stated that under German law, an assignment against a person in possession, a third person in possession, may be substituted for the shares themselves, and title will pass. A. Yes.

Q. And the only question I am asking you is whether it makes any difference whether those shares are in New York or in Germany, under German law. A. It makes a difference, under German law, whether the shares deposited in New York were deposited under a contract governed by New York law. Suppose a contract between the bank, the National City Bank or the Guaranty Trust Bank, in New York, and the Opel parents, was governed by New York law, then the assignment would have to be valid under New York law, because the German conflict of law would look to New York law for the problem whether this assignment is good.

But if the assignment is good, then the title in the shares would pass with the transfer.

Q. Assuming that the assignment of the shares was valid, then, as I understand you, under the German law, the title would pass? A. Exactly.

Q. Directing your attention now, Doctor, to this first paragraph on page 2, you have testified generally on Friday that this is to be reserved rights on behalf of 394 the donors. Would you explain in more particularity as to what you had in mind in interpreting this contract as to just what rights are reserved to the donors? A. You have to permit me—I began yesterday to say a few words about the interpretation of German contracts and the rules of interpretation.

Q. What are those rules? A. Because if you take this language in itself, it looks like a pretty sloppy way of drafting; and we have to interpret it under the following test:

First, the objective statement; what does he state?

Second, we have to put it together with the other sections in the contract.

And then we have to look at the intention of the parties.

I told you before that under German law, one possibility is excluded, that this section interferes with the transfer of title.

Another possibility is excluded, that this section established a right in rem of the Opel parents.

Q. Doctor, what do you mean by a right in rem?

Mr. Burling: I object to the question, if Your Honor please. I know Your Honor is operating under the equity rules, and it tends to let everything in. I wish to save an objection for the record at this point, however, that this plaintiff is estopped, fundamentally estopped, to assert there was no usufruct, because this plaintiff has asserted in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, under oath of Wronker-Flatow and Fritz von Opel, that the usufruct was validly created and Fritz von Opel in 1935 had acquired legal title. I wish to save the point of estoppel for the record.

395

The Court: All right.

Mr. Boland: Your Honor, we most forcefully disagree with the position of the defendants on that; but we will take the issue up when they establish their point, if they do.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Would you explain what is meant by a right in rem under the German law, Doctor? A. A right in rem is the opposite to a right in personam. If we take the Civil Code again and look in the second and third parts, the second part speaking of the relationship between persons, such as a sales contract, a buyer and a seller make a contract of sale; this contract does not establish any right in rem, legal or equitable, none at all. It established a claim of the buyer against the seller to enter into with him a conveyance contract.

Q. For the conveyance contract, you have to look into the third part of the book. The third part of the book established all the rights in rem which exist. And there the —— German law is very definite; there are only a 396 limited number of rights in rem in existence. It is absolutely clarified how they are established. No interpretation is possible, by mere judicial or legal or any other interpretation, to bring any of these rights in existence.

The general right is property right. I own the chair. But I have a right in rem in this chair.

I have a mortgage on real property. I can take out of the real property, by the means of foreclosure, the money I need. That is the relationship between money in the property.

It must be contrasted with the right in personam. I give a loan to X, and I have a claim against him to pay back. This might be evidenced by a mortgage, when I have a claim against X; and when he doesn't pay, I can exercise my right in rem to take the money out of the property.

So this distinction between right in personam, a claim against someone, for an action, the payment of money or any action, because the German law, as mentioned before, has specific performance as a rule; that is one thing. And an entirely different thing is the right of a person in something, a property right, a mortgage right, a pledge right, and so forth.

Q. Doctor, you say it is clear that this does not establish a right in rem? A. Yes.

397 Q. If it doesn't establish a right in rem, how do you interpret this language? A. Since it dosn't establish a right in rem, it can only establish a personal claim, a personal claim of the Opel parents against the son, for certain action.

Now, if you will permit me to look again in the chapter on gift contracts, the chapter provides—

Q. This is a chapter of the German Code? A. Of the German Civil Code—it provides, in Chapter 525, that you might make a gift under an impost; and if you do so, the donor acquires personal claim against the donee for the performance of the charge.

Q. But a charge, under German law, does not in any way affect the passage of title? A. A charge or impost, under German law, neither interferes with the transfer of title nor establishes it in any way as a right in rem.

Q. Are you using the words "charge" and "impost" interchangeably, Doctor? A. Yes.

Q. So that your interpretation of the first paragraph on page 2 is that it creates a personal claim, an in personam claim on behalf of the donors against the donee? A. It is a charge—and I might, if you will permit me, refer to a court decision. It is a decision of the highest tax 398 court in Germany, the Reichsfinanzhof, a decision of April 7, 1925, in Volume 16, page 97. There a gift contract is made, and a Niessbrauch—I don't like very much the word "usufruct", because it is not a translation—a Niessbrauch is provided for in the contract.

The court says this Niessbrauch cannot come into existence without an act of reconveyance by the donee to the donor. And then it says that what it actually is—and I will translate it in a minute—

"Unter diesen Umstaenden kann aber die vorbehaltene Bestellung des Niessbrauchs nichts anderes darstellen alseine Auflage im Sinne des Sec. 525, BGB."

"Under this condition, the reserve establishment of the Niessbrauch can mean nothing else but a charge in the meaning of Section 525, B.G.B."

I follow exactly this approach of the court.

Q. Well, Doctor, if you state that the interpretation of this paragraph, the first paragraph on page 2, is merely an in personam claim, a claim of donors against donee, my question to you is what kind of rights are reserved? What are the particularities of the rights that are reserved to the donors, in respect of the language of this passage?

399 Mr. Burling: I object to the question unless counsel states to the witness that he is asking on the assumption of fact which the witness of course knows nothing about, that there was here no reconversion, no delivery back to the donor.

Mr. Boland: Reconveyance?

Mr. Burling: Yes, reconveyance.

Mr. Boland: I will be glad to make that assumption, Your Honor, that there was in fact no reconveyance into joint possession of the donor and donee.

Mr. Burling: And then I object on the estoppel point, on which Fritz von Opel swore to the Southern District Court of New York—

Mr. Boland: Your Honor, he has already made that objection.

The Court: Yes. I will hear you on that later.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. On the assumption, Doctor, there has not been an actual reconveyance into joint possession, and considering that as an assumption herein, would you describe in particularity the types or rights that are reserved, these so-called in personam rights reserved to the donor, in such language as we have in the first paragraph on page 2? A. I see three possible ways of interpretation. The one is that this agreement gives the Opel parents a contractual claim for payment of a certain percentage of the income 400 which Mr. Fritz von Opel made out of this property.

Q. Would you explain, using the language of that paragraph, exactly how that claim would work? A. If I take this paragraph in itself, without looking to the paragraph 5; if I take this paragraph in itself, then the interpretation would be that the Opel parents have a right to tell the son, "We give you this gift, and you give us your income out of this property which we have given to you"—as a matter of personal claim.

And the word "usufruct" in German practice is not at all used in the way it is used in the third part of the B.G.B. as the right in rem.

It is very often in the literature used—let me give the German word—Zur Sicherstellung Niessbrauch, meaning a Niessbrauch for merely consentual relations—that the father in this case, or the parents, would be entitled to write a letter to the son, "Now the year is over, and you give us what you made out of this money"—that is, if I interpret this section in itself, without looking on anything else.

Q. So that in interpreting this section, the first paragraph on page 2, in and of itself, it would come down to the question what was intended was a personal right on behalf of the donors to claim 80 per cent, in effect, of the income 401 from the corpus of the gift? A. The first section doesn't speak at all of the 80 per cent. It just speaks of "The usufruct in the shares is not assigned to Fritz von Opel." I only speak of that—the 80 per cent, yes, it would be, since 20 per cent would go to Fritz von Opel. So that it would be a claim for 80 per cent. That is one possible interpretation.

Q. Now, looking at the gift as a whole, Doctor, and taking into consideration the language of the other paragraphs, following this paragraph, what other possible interpretations are available? A. We have here, in the fifth—

"In the event that the parents Opel shall not have drawn in full or in part the income from the shares accruing to them by virtue of their usufruct, the advancement to Fritz von Opel shall be deemed to have increased by the income not drawn and he shall be accountable therefor."

If somebody helps us to this extent, that if my first interpretation is correct, and that the parties establish a personal claim for the payment of the 80 per cent, then it would mean, taking these two sections together, that Fritz von Opel would not be obliged to make payments to the parents, unless specific demand is made by the parents for payment.

If the parents do not make any specific demand, 402 then Fritz has no obligation, and the money is to be added to the capital.

So that, using this language, your interpretation—the additional language of the give-agreement—how does that change the first possibility which you gave, Doctor, of an in personam claim? A. It doesn't change it. It only clarifies it to this extent, that Fritz von Opel would be under no obligation to give an income out of this gift, to his parents. He would be only obliged to do so if a demand is made. Otherwise the word "drawn"—"shall not have drawn in full or in part"—would not be sufficiently explained.

Q. Directing your attention, Doctor, to the remaining language on page 2 and the top of page 3, are you given any further clews as to a possible interpretation as to what the donors, the parties to this gift agreement, meant, in using the language in the first paragraph in page 2? A. Certainly, what I mentioned before, I don't find in this language any act of reconveyance giving the Opel parents any possession. Therefore I exclude any possibility of a right in rem.

Q. I understand that, Doctor, but thus far in looking to the affirmative side of your testimony as to what you do interpret the parties might have meant, you testified they might have meant a personal claim against the donee 403 for 80 per cent of the income.

Are there any other interpretations of this language, using your objective test as required under German law? A. Yes, there are. It might be interpreted in this way:

Since the word "Niessbrauch" is used as a technical word in the third part of the Code, it might be that the Opel parents were given a personal claim against the son to establish a right in rem at any time they desire to do so. That is a possible interpretation.

So, then, if that is the case, the Opel parents would have no claim against Fritz von Opel for payment of anything.

But they would be entitled, at any time, to tell Fritz von Opel, "We wish that now a right in rem is established."

That means that the properties given in joint possession of the Opel parents and Fritz von Opel, and then the Opel parents take out of the money whatever they wish, up to 80 per cent.

As long as this claim for the establishment of this right in rem is not made, the Opel parents would have no right to get the money. But they would be entitled, at any time, at any minute, to say, "Now we wish the establishment of the right in rem."

Q. So that up to this point, Doctor, we have two possible interpretations, as I understand your testimony. One 404 is that the parents reserve to themselves merely a personal right against the donee, to call upon the donee for 80 per cent of the income from the corpus of the gift, purely as an in personam claim between two parties.

And the second possibility is that the parties might well have intended to have a personal claim on behalf of the donors against the donee, to call upon the donee at some future time to establish a right in rem, to call upon him to reconvey the property into the joint possession of the donee and donors, at which time the donors would then have a property right in the property, the corpus of the gift, in order to enable them to directly draw the income from the gift itself.

Is that true? A. Yes.

Q. Are there any other possible interpretations? A. Yes; I see a third possibility, that these two first possibilities are to be combined; that the parents had a claim for 80 per cent, if they wished to have 80 per cent, or for 20 per cent, or for nothing, whatever they decide to have, against Fritz von Opel; and that in addition to that, they could, for purposes of security, say:

"Dear Son: Now we wish to have security for our claim, and this security is that you will now establish a right in rem.";

405 So that is a combination between these two possibilities. I believe that all three possibilities, on this language, merely the objective test, the three possibilities exist.

Q. So that bringing the three possibilities into partial focus, the first is the personal claim of the donors against the donee to call upon the donee for 80 per cent of the income. That is right, isn't it? A. Yes.

Q. And the second is a personal claim of the donors against the donee to call upon him to establish a right in rem? A. Yes.

Q. To establish the usufruct? A. Yes.

Q. And the third, being a combination of the first and the second, in other words, a personal claim on behalf of the mother and father von Opel, against the son, to call upon him for 80 per cent of the income? A. Yes.

Q. And they would have the additional right, which is a personal claim too, to call upon him at any time in the future to secure the first right, the 80 per cent of the income? A. Yes.

Q. They could call upon him to set up a usufruct
406 in order to secure that personal claim? A. Yes.

Q. At which time they would then have a direct property right in order to take the income themselves? A. They would have a combined right; they would have a right in personam, protected by and secured by a right in rem, as you have in a mortgage—exactly the same thing.

Q. And you say that the possibility of the parties intending to establish an immediate right in rem, that the parties intended at the time of the gift agreement to establish a right in rem, is not within the realm of interpretation? Is that the way I gather your testimony? A. I cannot testify as to intention. I can only testify as to what this piece of paper says.

Q. That is right, using the objective test on this piece of paper, and you say that that possibility is not within the realm of interpretation? Is that right? A. As this piece of paper it written, there is absolutely no possibility to interpret this piece of paper as the establishment of a right in rem.

Q. Why are you so sure in that statement, Doctor? A. You can interpret in German law very much in contractual relations. But you never can interpret conveyance, an act of conveyance, into a contract, especially in a case in which no possession, none whatsoever, was retained by the 407 donors.

Let me again refer to this, I would say, in the German law, that is absolutely elementary, that there cannot be a right in rem without possession or without an act of conveyance.

Now, again, in this case the Court says, where the gift was made, as I said, and a Niessbrauch was reserved, it says—and there is some real property involved—

"The gift of real property, under the reservation of Niessbrauch, can only be executed by, first, transferring the title to the donee, and then letting the donee establish the reserve Niessbrauch on behalf of the donor."

Q. In coming to the definite conclusion, using the gift agreement itself, that no immediate right in rem was established, have you used as a basis or at least as a partial basis for your conclusion the lack of any condition of reconveyance in the gift, Doctor? A. Certainly. It says no word of reconveyance. There is no word providing for joint possession. It is just saying that it is an assignment of the claim of the Opel parents to Fritz von Opel.

By this act, title passed; and, without anything more, no Niessbrauch or right in rem at any time can come into existence. All that can come into existence is, under 408 Section 525 of the Code, personal claims of different kinds.

Q. Assuming, Doctor, that a German attorney was present at the time of this gift agreement, and assuming that German attorneys prepared drafts and prepared this gift agreement, would that aid you in your conclusion that an immediate right in rem was not intended? A. Certainly. I think it is unbelievable to me that a German attorney doesn't know that. It might happen often that people who are really great business lawyers, forget about the basic rules on property law. But that is a basic rule of property law we are dealing with here, and if a German lawyer was present, there is no doubt that this contract expresses intentions which means no right in rem for the Opel parents.

Q. Doctor, you have practiced in Germany for quite some time; would you explain to the Court what language could be inserted in this gift agreement in order to establish an immediate right in rem. A. All that would have to be done is to add one part, in which you say:

"I, Fritz von Opel, herewith reassign—or assign—my claim against the depository of shares in New York to the Opel parents, with the understanding that it shall be a joint claim of the Opel parents and myself."

409 And by this act Fritz von Opel would have to take out the shares under the name of the three; it would have been provided that he had to take these shares and put them in New York into a bank under the name of Fritz von Opel, Wilhelm von Opel, and Marta von Opel; or he could give it to the bank to keep it there, with instructions to keep it under the name of the three, and pay out exactly as it provided here. That is all that is necessary.

Q. So that if the parties had intended the establishment of the immediate right in rem, it would have been a very simple thing, under German law? A. Very simple.

Q. And it could have been done under this instrument itself? A. It could have been done, if the assignment was not made just as an outright assignment, but with the idea that it is reassigned to all three, it was already clearly an established right in rem.

Q. And, and the important thing in establishing an immediate right in rem is the joint possession, Doctor? A. The German law—let me say that—in regard to personal property, and in some extent in regard to real property, is based on the idea that there cannot be a right in rem without possession. Even if you had even a limited right in rem, you have to have possession yourself, or you 410 have to give the possession to a depository, or where you otherwise have the right to dispose of it, to give it to the other fellow.

But without possession and without any direct right to take possession, there is no right in rem possible, by very definition.

Q. All right, Doctor; I believe we understand your testimony, and particularly the three possibilities, the three possible interpretations which you have given.

You have indicated before in your testimony that you would explain the meaning of the fifth paragraph on page 2 after you had had an opportunity of explaining the first paragraph. Would you now explain, in the light of your testimony, how you interpret the fifth paragraph on page 2? A. Yes. If you take my first possibility in regards to the first paragraph on page 2, you have to interpret the Section 5 this way:

First, that the Opel parents can make a claim against the son; but without making a demand, no obligation on the side of the son can exist.

If my second possibility of interpretation prevails, then the Opel parents were free to take out of the property up to 80 per cent, but they were not bound to do so.

Q. That is, after demand was made and the 411 usufruct established? A. Yes.

And on the first possibility, where the right in rem is only established to secure the claim, certainly the same theory followed that I have in the first possibility, if the Opel parents demand, and the son doesn't pay, then the Opel parents might make him pay it out of the right in rem. If they don't claim, the money is added to the capital.

And in the case of death of the Opel parents, and in case of distribution of the estate, the whole gift, plus the money not called on by the parents, is to be accounted for in the distribution of the estate, as discussed on Friday.

Q. Under your interpretation of this paragraph, Doctor, until a demand is made, under the first possibility, there is no establishment of a right in rem; it is merely a personal claim? A. Yes.

Q. For 80 per cent of the income? A. Yes.

Q. Until a claim is made, for 80 per cent of the income, is the donee free to do with the corpus and the income as he will? A. He has full power to do with the property what he wants, because it is his property. His obligations in regard to the property are purely personal obligations to the Opel parents.

412 Q. In the second possibility, which is merely the personal right to call upon the donee to establish the right in rem, upon demand of the donor, until such demand is made, would you explain the ownership rights of the donee, Fritz von Opel? A. Until such demands are made, Fritz von Opel is the free owner.

Q. So you would interpret— A. And even if there are claims in regard to number one, then there is a personal claim; and as long as no judgment is taken, there is no right in rem in existence.

Q. I understand that, Doctor. But I am now on the second possibility, where the only right is that the donor has reserved to himself the right to call upon the donee to establish a right in rem in favor of the donors. A. Yes.

Q. Until demand is made, is the donee free to do with the property as he will, both corpus and income? A. Yes.

Q. And, under this possibility, your interpretation of the fifth paragraph on page 2 is that until demand is made, the uncalled for portion of the 80 per cent income will be added to the capital only after demand is made? Is that right? A. It will be added to the capital if no demand is made?

413 After demand has been made to establish the usufruct. A. Ah, yes.

Q. And until demand is made to establish the usufruct, this paragraph does not apply to the gift? Is that right? A. I have to ask you to repeat the question. I am not clear about that.

Q. Under the second possibility, as I understand your testimony, the donors, the parents von Opel, reserved unto themselves the right to call upon Fritz, the donee, to set up a usufruct, at which time they would have a right in rem for 80 per cent of the income. Is that right? A. The right in rem for 80 per cent of the income, that is not entirely clearly expressed, because a right in rem means if once the right in rem is established, the income goes to the parents.

Therefore, if the right in rem is established, it is up to the parents to take out of the income coming to them as much as they want. And this here provides that if they don't take, if they don't exercise their power, then it is to be added to the capital.

Q. That is exactly my point. Suppose no demand is made by the parents against Fritz to set up a usufruct, then the provisions of this paragraph would not apply, until 414 the demand is made? Is that right? A. Until—we are working with the second possibility—

Q. That is right. A. Certainly this has no meaning until the Opel parents put themselves in the position in which they can get any of the profits. And they can get any of the profits, as the second possibility, only if the right in rem is established.

Q. So that until the demand is made, the right under the second possibility does not apply? A. Exactly.

Q. Would you go to the further paragraph, please, Doctor? A. (Reading): "If the shares should be sold or exchanged against other property the proceeds from such sale or the property taken in exchange shall be substituted for the shares, after the usufruct of the parents Opel has been safeguarded. All provisions stipulated above will then fully apply to such substituted property."

Q. What does this paragraph mean? A. Could I see the German text?

Q. I have it (handing to witness). A. It is exhibit—

Q. 5—5-A. A. Yes. What is your question?

415 Q. What does this paragraph mean? A. This paragraph means, in regard to the second possibility, that the Opel parents can claim the establishment of a right in rem not only in the original Opel shares; but if Fritz von Opel has sold the shares and has other property now, out of these shares, that this right in rem is to be established in this new property of Fritz von Opel.

So it indicates that the parties had in mind that Fritz was free to dispose of the property. Furthermore, there is one word in the German especially—

Mr. Burling: I object to it, if the Court please. It has been stipulated—and it is hard enough to deal with this very intricate matter of foreign law in the one language—and it has been stipulated by counsel for both sides that the translations of all these documents are correct.

The Witness: Let me say a word to that. Between correct translations and translations for all purposes, in the technical meaning we use by a lawyer, it is difficult; there are words which have just a flavor, under the law, which you cannot translate.

I don't object against the word "safeguarded" at all. But I have to work out the word "Sicherheit". I have to refer to this word.

Mr. Burling: May I be heard further, Your Honor?

416 This witness is not coming newly to this case. He went to Germany, for example, to assist in the deposition of Wilhelm von Opel and others, which were read. And long before the stipulation was entered into that this document was correct, Dr. Kronstein was fully familiar with the document and hundreds of pages of testimony were taken concerning it.

The Court (to the witness): I understand you to say there are some English words which do not indicate the full import of the German words, notwithstanding the translation. I think you would have a right to take that into account.

The Witness: The word "Sicherstellung", this word, which has a very specific meaning in German law—or "Sicherheit" is used in connection with my first possibility. You use this word if you are perfectly clear about the fact that no right in rem exists. But that whenever you wish to acquire protection, security, and, for instance, a mortgage is exactly that—"Sicherstellung".

Therefore I wish to refer to this word which was used, which was a certain indication of the test, of this objective test, what that all means; that it means a possibility that the parents as against the son, and if the son didn't say, or if the parents wished to have other protection, they could ask for a right in rem, if they wanted it.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Would you direct your attention, Doctor, now to 417 the first paragraph on page 3. I believe you indicated you were going to withhold your explanation of that until after you have covered the usufruct paragraph? A. Yes.

Q. Would you explain what that means, in the light of your previous testimony?

The Court: Excuse me just a minute, before you go to that.

In regard to this paragraph, the fifth on page 2, do I understand you say, under the German law, if the parents of Fritz von Opel had wished to assert this right in rem against the exchanged property, that this property he bought out of the proceeds of the sale of the other, they might have done so at any time?

The Witness: At any time.

The Court: They might do so even now? His mother might do so even now?

The Witness: Suppose nothing happens, I don't know what happens between this document and today. But if nothing happens between this document and today, then this right exists.

The Court: Well, now, is that a legal right?

The Witness: A personam is not in the property.

The Court: I understand. It is a legal right that would be asserted in the courts.

418 The Witness: Yes.

The Court: Upon a demand.

The Witness: Yes.

The Court: I see. Go on.

Mr. Boland: Your Honor, in order to clear up any problem you might have in your mind at this time, we intend to establish as a fact that any rights reserved to the donors under this gift agreement were in fact waived, and we intend to establish that the waiver was valid.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. You were reading, I believe, from the first paragraph on page 3. A. Yes—

"If Fritz von Opel predeceases his parents without leaving legitimate issue, the gift executed by this document will become void. The stocks or the property substituted therefor including the income accrued but not drawn will then revert to the parents Opel or the surviving parent."

Q. Would you explain that in the light of your testimony, Doctor? A. That if the right in rem is established, if the parents demand the establishment of the right in rem, under my second possibility, then there is definitely established a claim in specific property in which the interest exists. We could then say that in case of the death of Fritz von Opel without legitimate issue, this specific property would go to the parents.

As long as their right in rem is not established, we have some difficulties to interpret this provision. And it might even have no meaning, until the right in rem is established. But it certainly has not more meaning than that, that in the case of the death of Fritz without legitimate issue, the Opel parents have a claim against the estate, under the German law, against the heirs, for what remains out of the gift, if any.

Q. There are two conditions, are there not, situated in that paragraph? A. First that Fritz von Opel predeceases, and second that he predeceases without legitimate issue.

Q. And if upon the happening of those two conditions—first, that he predeceases his parents, and secondly that he predeceases without legitimate issue—what type of right would the donors have in such a case? Is that merely a personal right? A. Yes.

Q. And that would be a right against the estate of Fritz von Opel, for what is remaining in the corpus of the 420 gift? A. Yes.

Q. During the course of the opening statement, Doctor, Mr. Burling alluded to the analogy of a trust, using the cestui que trust analysis. You are familiar with trust law in this country, are you not, Doctor? A. Yes.

Q. Would you distinguish a Niessbrauch from a trust? A. As I have already said, I learned to be extremely careful in using concepts of one law in the other law. But as a legal device, Niessbrauch and trust have absolutely nothing to do with each other. They even exclude each other. Let us cite an example:

In cases of trust, the legal owner has no right, no beneficiary right, in this matter. If the beneficiary has a right, and the legal owner is only to the outside of the owner.

And the Niessbrauch, the definite and final right, economic and beneficial right, is with the title owner, only for a certain period of time, for instance, for a lifetime, of the Opel parents. But after this time is over, usually lifetime, then the title owner has no limitation any more.

For instance, if I am a creditor of the title owner, I can certainly in execution of judgment take his title, and his title is only limited in full use by this right in rem of the parents or of the Niessbrauch, to take out certain 421 parts of the income or all of the income, or whatever it might be.

Q. So that, as I gather your testimony, the analogy between trust and the Niessbrauch is not a true analogy? A. No. It is once in a while used for certain purposes. A lawyer highly regarded by me wrote an article in the Columbia Law Journal where he works out all possible cases in which you might use institutions of German law in many different situations, to accomplish what American law accomplishes by trust. There he mentioned one particular situation in which you might use the Niessbrauch for the same purpose. But that is all. You cannot, beyond that, compare the two institutions.

Q. So that the net result of your testimony thus far, having covered the gift agreement in detail, is that it is a promise to give, and an acceptance by the donee; that title passed through words of conveyance, which cure the lack of notarization; that title actually passed to 600 Opel shares in New York, on the assumption that the words of assignment were valid under New York law; and that the remaining words of the gift agreement, on pages 2 and 3, did not affect in any way the passage of title.

I believe you further testified that the first paragraph on page 2 created an in personam right on behalf of the donors against the donee. There were three possible inter-422 pretations;

One, merely the personal claim against Fritz; and

Two, merely a personal claim to call upon Fritz to set up a usufruct or Niessbrauch; and

Three, a combination of the first two, a personal right against Fritz, with a further personal right to call upon him to establish the usufruct to secure or guarantee, in effect, the personal claim.

And that the language in connection with the first paragraph on page 3 was merely an in personam right or a personal claim on the surviving mother on behalf of the donors, if the son predeceased without legitimate issue; and that that personal right ran only against the remaining portion of the corpus of the gift at the time of his death.

So that we have only two personal rights against Fritz von Opel. And how would you describe paragraphs 2, 3, and 4, Doctor? Are they also personal rights? A. They are not on the same level with the other rights. The other rights follow Section 525, as charge or impost. This paragraph you refer me to just now I already described on Friday as rules made by the donors for the case of the distribution of the estate of the Opel parents.

Q. So that they are merely testamentary in nature and concerns the testamentary disposition and the arithmetic of such disposition on behalf of the donors? A. Don't call it

"testamentary" in nature, because you come then 423 into the problem of form. Under the express provision of 2050 B.G.B., it is provided that whatever the donor requests in the gift, the accounting has to take place.

Q. Would you direct your attention now, Doctor, to Plaintiff's Exhibit 7. This purports to be a draft of a gift agreement, and I would like to ask you whether or not you are familiar with this draft, Doctor? A. Yes, I studied that in preparation of this testimony.

Mr. Boland: I believe this agreement, Your Honor, has been stipulated by defendants to have been prepared by Dr. Max Hachenburg, and that this is a copy of the draft prepared by him.

Mr. Burling: We have stipulated a draft. I believe you have the number wrong. We do stipulate Plaintiff's Exhibit 8 is a draft prepared by Dr. Max Hachenburg.

Mr. Boland: Yes; thank you very much, Mr. Burling. It is Exhibit 8, Your Honor.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Dr. Kronstein, are you familiar with the name Dr. Max Hachenburg? A. Certainly.

Q. Will you explain generally who he is? A. Hachenburg 424 was one of the two commentators of the Commercial Code.

Q. The Commercial Code? A. The Commercial Code. And of a number of other statutes. He has, and I am glad he—he is alive—he has the highest possible reputation of a practicing attorney, comparable in this country with John W. Davis or someone similar.

Q. By "commentator", Doctor, I believe you had better explain that a little. We in America might think of radio commentator. Is that in connection with preparing his commentaries? A. Yes. As I mentioned, the code system operates this way, that you go through the Code, to the decisions, and the commentaries.

Hachenburg wrote one of the two National Code commentaries. You would not decide a question, as a Judge or a lawyer, in commercial law, without consulting Hachenburg. You have not to accept it, because there is in some cases a difference of opinion. But no Judge or no practicing attorney will overlook what Hachenburg has to say.

Q. Directing your attention, now, to Plaintiff's Exhibit 8, Doctor, you have testified you have read this particular exhibit. Assuming, now, that this exhibit had been in the hands of the parties to this gift agreement and was used as a basis of the gift agreement, does this draft shed any light upon your interpretation of Exhibit 5? A. Cer-425 tainly, it does.

Q. Would you explain what light is shed, and how? A. In Section 1—

Q. Would you read the portions to which you are referring aloud, Doctor? A. Yes. In Section 1 it makes what I call the promise and the acceptance, as well as the transfer of title—

"Geheimrat Dr. Wilhelm von Opel and his wife ne ..... residing in Wiesbaden, make a gift, from their community property, to their son Fritz von Opel, residing in Antwerp, of par value RM 6,000,000.00 shares of stock of the Adam Opel Aktiengesellschaft in Ruesselsheim. These shares are No. .....

"The donee accepts this gift gratefully.

"The parents execute this gift by transferring the title to the donated shares. The shares are, at the present time, deposited with General Motors in New York. The title is transferred by assigning the donor's claim to have the shares delivered to them. This claim is assigned herewith. General Motors will be advised of the assignment of this claim by the parties concerned.

"The following further provisions apply to the gift:

"Section 2."

426 Q. Before you get to Section 2, Doctor, generally that mere indicates there was a promise and an acceptance, and the actual assignment of the title? A. The title is transferred by assignment, by assigning the claim of the donors to have the shares delivered to them.

Q. What I am particularly interested in, Doctor, is whether this draft sheds any light on the first paragraph on page 2. A. Let me see Section 2. You have to interpret Hachenburg's draft in Section 2, in connection with Section 1. In Section 1 he established the promise of conveyance, as well as conveyance. In Section 2 he goes on to establish whatever else—

"The donors reserve to themselves for life the usufruct in three quarters i.e., in par value RM 4,500,000.00 of the donated shares. The balance of RM 1,500,000.00 is exempt from the usufruct. The donors' usufruct expires at the death of the last parents.

"Mr. Fritz von Opel is entitled and, upon demand of the donors obliged, to assign the shares to a holding company which he owns. In this case the parents will have the usufruct in 75 per cent of the shares which the holding company will be required to issue in exchange for the Opel 427 shares. These shall be deposited in the name of the father, Geheimrat Dr. Wilhelm von Opel. After his death these shares shall be considered as deposited for the wife of Geheimrat Wilhelm von Opel, Geheimrat Dr. Wilhelm von Opel and, in case he should predecease his wife, his widow"—and so on.

Q. Does the language you have just read in Section 2 of the draft, Exhibit 8, does that language shed any light on the intention of the parties? A. Yes.

Q. How does it, Doctor, and what light does it shed? A. It says, in paragraph 1, that the donors reserve their Niessbrauch, without establishing the right in rem.

But it says, in Section 2, paragraph 2, that on demand of the Opel parents, Fritz von Opel shall be obliged to assign the shares to a holding company, and that then these holding company shares shall be deposited in the name of the father.

Q. Does that fit into any one of your three possibilities to which you have previously testified, Doctor? A. Absolutely. It is exactly my third possibility.

Under Hachenburg, what he had in mind—and of course I don't know what he had in mind—and knowing Hachenburg and having seen him drafting many, many contracts,

I know that such a contract is not written, just written 428 down, but is studied extremely carefully, and that every word has very much a meaning.

He says, in Section 2, that on demand of the donors, Fritz shall assign the shares to a holding company, and in this case the parents shall have this right, and they shall be deposited in the name of the father.

So he had perfectly in mind that the right in rem shall come in existence at the moment these holding company shares are deposited with the bank, and they shall be dependent upon the demand of the Opel parents, if they demand that; but Fritz, however, might do it without demand.

Q. But you have indicated, by using the Hachenburg draft, you come to the conclusion quite clearly that what the parents intended was that a right in rem upon the demand of the parents to the son be created through the assignment of the holding company shares into the possession of the donors? A. That is the objective test of this draft of Hachenburg's, beyond what the gift agreement you have shown to me shows.

Q. Is there any further indication, by the use of the Hachenburg draft, Exhibit 8? A. Could I see the German again please?

In the draft itself, or in what you call my attention first to Plaintiff's Exhibit 7?

429 Q. I am talking about what is now marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 8, which is the draft of October 3, 1931, I believe. A. Yes. I call your attention to two points, first on page 2 of the English translation.

Q. Of the Exhibit 8? A. Of the Exhibit 8, in paragraph 3.

Q. The third paragraph on page 3? - A. Yes. In paragraph 3 he again provides that in case that the holding company is established, and the right in rem is established—there are two conditions—then the father guarantees that the son gets a special minimum amount of money.

In Section 3 it says, in paragraph 3,—

"If the holding company has not distributed all or part of its profits, so that the usufructuaries did not draw the proceeds during their lifetime, these reserves together with the holding shares themselves will remain in the hands of the son Fritz von Opel to whom the gift was made."

These two provisions are both dependent upon the establishment of the holding company and of the right in rem. As long as the holding company was not established and the shares were not put into possession and did not remain in possession, there was a complete, free property of Fritz von Opel, and only a personal claim against Fritz, out 430 of Section 2, paragraph 1.

Mr. Burling: I move to strike the answer, Your Honor. The witness said, "As long as the holding company was not adopted." If he has any knowledge at all, he knows it was, and that Uebersee, the plaintiff here, is that corporation.

The Witness: Pardon me. I used the words "If it should not be established", because I only follow the words the draft speaks of.

Mr. Boland: Your Honor, this is a draft of October 3, 1931, as Mr. Burling well knows; and we are endeavoring to get the intent of the parties on October 3, 1931. At that time there was no holding company established and there was no such thing as Uebersee, owned by the plaintiff or by Fritz von Opel here.

And the question to Dr. Kronstein was whether or not this draft gives any light on the intent of the parties, and he is merely describing the draft in view of what the parties could have intended.

Mr. Burling: The witness said that as long as this was not done, then there was no right in rem. But that is a condition contrary to facts, since it was done.

The Court: You can bring that out on cross. And I will make a note as to what the facts are, and if it is not applicable, I will disregard it.

By Mr. Boland:

431 Q. Directing your attention, Doctor, to Plaintiff's Exhibit 9, which is entitled "Fundamental Considerations", the defendants have stipulated that this particular exhibit was prepared by Dr. Hachenburg, the same Dr. Hachenburg who prepared the draft which is Plaintiff's Exhibit 8.

Is this document a fair summary of the Plaintiff's Exhibit 8 which you were just reading from, Doctor? A. It is the preparation of that. It contains the principles on which Exhibit 8 obviously was based.

Q. Does this exhibit, Plaintiff's Exhibit 9, shed any light on the intention of the parties to this gift document, Doctor? A. Can I see the German, please?

Yes.

Q. And would you indicate the particular portion to which you are referring when you make that answer? A. I think very important is number 4.

Q. Number 4? A. Number 4 of this "Fundamental Considerations."

Q. On page 2? Yes; would you read that, please, Doctor? A. It says:

"In order to secure the usufruct, the donated shares or the holding shares replacing them are deposited with a bank in the father's name. By virtue of his usufruct, the 432 father is entitled to vote the shares in the case of such resolution of the holding company which dispose of the actual net profits. Father guarantees to his son that his 25 per cent share of these profits will amount to"—additional sums.

Q. And from that you draw what conclusion, Doctor? A. In order to secure the usufruct, or in the German language, "Zur Sicherstellung" Niessbrauch—and, if you speak of "Sicherheit", or safeguard Niessbrauch—it is absolutely impossible to have any other interpretation but my interpretation number three.

Again he speaks of the contract which is to be made right away, the transfer of the gift is to be made right away, under number 1 of this "Fundamental Considerations." And then it says, under number 3—

"The gift was made subject to a usufruct for life"—

And then it says—

"In order to secure the usufruct."

If the usufruct would have been established as a right in rem right away, there is nothing to secure, because nothing secures itself better than a right in rem itself.

Therefore, from this I say clearly that Hachenburg didn't want to establish a Niessbrauch right away. He wanted to have a personal claim, and then the question of the right in rem is a question of the demand of the parents, or of no demand of the parents, for purpose of securing.

Q. So that, Doctor, as I understand your testimony now, after having gone through the gift agreement itself, Exhibit 5, very searchingly, and having gone through the drafts of Hachenburg, that on the basis of these three documents, you have concluded there is no right in rem; that there was no an intent to establish a right in rem, an immediate right in rem. Is that right? A. Yes.

Q. That all drafts, and the document itself, are consistent with the promise of the donors to give and the acceptance by the donee; they are all consistent with the position you have taken, that title actually passed? A. Yes.

Q. Through the Exhibit 5, through the instrument itself, and also consistent with the position that merely personal, in personam claims are reserved to the donors, and that no right in rem was established?

Is your answer yes? A. Yes.

Q. And that no right in rem was intended to be immediately established? Is that right? A. Yes.

Mr. Boland: Your Honor, it is just about 12:30, 434 and I am going to take him into a slightly different phase of this.

The Court: All right. We will resume at 2 o'clock.

(Accordingly, at 12:25 p. m., the luncheon recess was taken until 2 o'clock.)

* * * * *

441 DR. HEINRICH KRONSTEIN resumed the witness stand pursuant to the luncheon recess, and testified further as follows:

442 Direct Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Dr. Kronstein, directing your attention to Plaintiff's Exhibit 7, are you familiar with this document? A. Yes; I studied it in preparation of this testimony.

Mr. Boland: Your Honor, this particular exhibit, I believe, has been stipulated by defendants to be a letter from Dr. Hachenburg to Mr. Wilhelm von Opel in which the draft, which is Exhibit 8, was attached and enclosed.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. You are familiar with this document, Doctor? A. Yes, I am.

Q. Is there anything in this letter, Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 7, which would shed light on the intent of the parties? A. Yes.

Q. Would you point out the particular verbiage of the letter and read it aloud, please? A. One point is to be found in the last part.

Q. The last paragraph? A. Of the letter.

Q. Of the letter. A. Yes.

It says: "But the same would apply if the contract were to provide not for a true usufruct, but instead for a 443 purely personal claim to the payment of a corresponding share of the profits. This right also would be part of your property. It is to be evaluated in the same manner as the usufruct itself."

I mean, for purpose of taxation.

Q. From the language in there, he used it in interpreting the intent of the parties? A. It was evidently in the mind of Hachenburg that there should be a possibility. One is merely a contractual right, involving his contractual right, and combining security.

Q. Yes. Possibility one and three? A. Yes.

Q. It is merely a personal claim against the donee? A. Yes.

Q. Or in the alternative, a personal claim against the donee with the right to secure a personal claim by demand and establishment of usufruct? A. It says: usufruct itself. It is a very technical word. It is approximately correct but it doesn't bring out this flavoring. There is a German uneigen. The opposite of that is eigen. Eigen is his. So he has very well in mind that it is—

Q. (Interposing) Well, is there any language in that letter which sheds light upon the intent of the parties to you, Doctor?

444 The Court: He did not finish on that last paragraph.

By the Court:

Q. What right is he talking about? What does the right mean? Part of that property? A. He is talking about taxes.

Q. Do you have the right in personam? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is a taxable right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is what you call property? A. It is not a property right. It is a claim, and under the German tax law, under that parmeigen, and while you have difficulty of translation, it means all the assets, and is to include his claims, athough it is not property but it is a claim.

Q. You mean a right which he may or may not assert? A. It is against his son, which he may or may not assert.

Q. It would still, however, be returnable for tax purposes? A. It is still to be reported for tax purposes.

I conclude from that that it was clearly in the mind of the people who drafted and discussed the contract, what they did, that the establishment of a right in rem was not 445 the purpose of the agreement. It looks like, as I pointed out before, Hachenburg drafted it and he outlined it. My personal opinion is number three, a personal claim, which he might combine, if he wished, with the right in rem.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. That is demand upon the son to secure that claim with the right in rem by the establishment of usufruct upon the demand? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there any other language in that Exhibit 7 which sheds any light, Doctor? A. On page 2, at the end of the second paragraph on page 2:

"Such an arrangement would, at the same time, stress the fact that this is not a fictitious transaction. It is your actual intent that the ownership pass to your son immediately, only the income is reserved to you."

That makes it important for the interpretation of the document, that the first draft of the document had in mind to have the property right transferred, and only income is reserved to you, in the relation between father and son.

I believe that strengthens my opinion on the meaning of this contract.

Mr. Boland: Let me have Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 4.

By Mr. Boland:

446 Q. Doctor, I show you now a document which has been identified as Plaintiff's Exhibit 4 and entitled power of attorney, and ask whether or not you are familiar with this document? A. I studied it in preparation for my testimony; yes.

Q. You have heretofore testified, Doctor, that on the basis of the language of the gift agreement, Exhibit 5, that title passed absolutely to Fritz von Opel. You have testified that your contention in respect of the usufruct is that there is merely a personal claim on behalf of the donor against the donee, and you testified that the language on page 2 and 3 of the gift agreement did not in any way affect the passage of title, did you not? A. Yes, I did.

Q. You have had opportunity to re-read this power of attorney? A. Yes.

Q. You know that the power of attorney is dated October 6, 1931; isn't that true? A. Yes.

Q. If you were to know, Doctor, that Fritz von Opel—assume this: Assume we establish this as a fact: that Fritz von Opel actually came to the United States and went to the National City Bank and exercised the claim against the National City Bank through the use of this power 447 of attorney. Would that in any way affect your testimony in respect of the passage of title to Fritz von Opel under the gift agreement, Exhibit 5? A. No, it would not.

Q. Can you explain why not? A. If the title passed, a power of attorney cannot change the fact. The title passed, and this document as it stands does not shed any doubt that the title passed on October 5th. This document prepared is signed October 6th, so it cannot change the fact that title passed before.

Q. So if I understand your testimony correctly: If title passed on October 5th, then the granting of a power of attorney by the father to the son on October 6th, would in no wise interfere with the passage of title on October 5th? A. No; not at all.

Q. Even if Fritz von Opel were to exercise claim against the National City Bank through the use of a power of attorney? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Boland: I would like to have marked for identification a letter dated September 22, 1933, addressed to Fritz von Opel by the National City Bank.

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 47 for identification.)

By Mr. Boland:

448 Q. Doctor, I show you now a document which has been identified as Exhibit No. 47 and ask you to read that document aloud. A. (Reading:) "Mr. Fritz von Opel, New York City.

"Dear Sir:

"We quote the following extract from the cable received from the Deutsche Bank & Disconto Gesellshaft, Frankfurt on October 24, 1931:

"'GEHEIMRAT DR. WILHELM VON OPEL RUESSELSHEIM INSTRUCTED US TO CABLE TO YOU THE FOLLOWING NEW POWER OF ATTORNEY—UNTIL YOU HEAR FROM ME TO THE CONTRARY YOU ARE HEREBY AUTHORIZED AND REQUESTED TO ACT UPON ANY AND ALL INSTRUCTIONS WHICH MAY BE GIVEN YOU FROM TIME TO TIME BY MY SON FRITZ VON OPEL REGARDING ANY

AND ALL FUNDS OR OTHER PROPERTY AT ANY TIME WITH YOU FOR MY ACCOUNT AND TO HONOR EACH AND EVERY WITHDRAWAL HE MAY REQUEST THEREFROM—SIGNED DR. WILHELM VON OPEL.'"

Q. Having had opportunity to read Plaintiff's Exhibit 47 for identification, and assuming that this telegram was in fact signed by Wilhelm von Opel, would that in any way change your testimony in respect to that passage of title? A. No, Mr. Boland. I told you before that this document on its face, dated October 5, 1931, transfers the title to Fritz von Opel. This title passed and no power of 449 attorney whenever given, can change the fact that title passed.

Q. That is assuming title passed on October 5th? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Doctor, you have practiced in Germany for quite some time. Is there anything unusual about having made a gift, where the title passed on one day, and the next day giving a power of attorney to act as the agent of the donor? A. In this banking transaction, you have shares that are deposited in the bank, and the father gives to the son the shares. He does not go to the bank to get the agreement, or statement to the bank, to get the agreement for consideration or examination, and the best way to handle it is to give a power of attorney, so that the bank can give the property out without any further examination. For instance, such occasions of gifts of shares is not the case of the usual business dealings, but if you have the situation, which you have every day, I come to the bank and ask for credit, and the bank tells me: All right, I give you credit, but you assign to me a hundred thousand dollars worth of stock and assign it as of this day, and we will not inform your customers, your debtors, of this assignment, and you give the bank a power of attorney, and we collect on that power of attorney.

This assignment to the bank would be perfectly all 450 right, and the power of attorney which in form looks inconsistent, is perfectly consistent, and if, for instance, a bankruptcy occurs of the assignor, the assignment is perfectly all right, and the power of attorney only given for the purpose of collecting to make things easier.

That is nothing special at all.

I could refer to Mr. von Tour, who in this part of the private law is a leading writer of leading textbooks, and he discussed this question carefully and does not find anything unusual in that.

Q. Getting back to my question, Doctor, I don't believe you have answered it directly.

Is there anything unusual about giving a gift, where the title passes on one day and subsequently to give a power of attorney? A. No. I just don't like your wording, if it is unusual in a gift. Gifts are always unusual because human beings do not make gifts but make contracts for consideration, but when it is usual and the title passes and a power of attorney was given later on, it is perfectly usual and absolutely consistent with the transfer of title.

Q. Let me ask you, Doctor: Assuming it was established in this case that the giving of the power of attorney was for the purpose of facilitating the exercise of the claim against the National City Bank, would you under 451 such circumstances consider it unusual for an attorney to recommend such a procedure? A. No, not at all.

Q. You have testified, Doctor, thus far that the title has passed, according to the agreement, on page 2, and had no effect on the passage of title, certainly any personam rights created, and it was clear that that was the intent of the party. You have also testified that the power of attorney given to the son in respect to the exercise of his right as donee was not unusual, and that they in and of themselves in any wise changed the passage of title already having taken place. Now, Doctor, directing your attention to another phase of this problem, let us assume that those rights which you have testified about, that they have been created and reserved to the donor. Let us assume that the rights as actually intended by the parties were within the realm of these three possibilities. Under German law can such rights be terminated in any fashion? A. Some of them; certainly.

Q. What is the law of Germany with respect to the termination of right of this nature? A. In regard to my first and third possibility, an understanding or agreement between Fritz von Opel and the parents would be necessary and satisfactory. It is the idea of the law that contractual claims cannot take place one-sided. It has to take 452 place by understanding, and all that is necessary is an informal understanding and that the son's claims shall be waived and abandoned. That is all that is necessary.

Q. And you direct your testimony to possibility one? A. Yes; one and three, and I would say the same in regard to possibility number three. I find, I feel the one-sided assertion by Wilhelm and Marta von Opel would be sufficient because even if the right in rem is established under the specific provision of the law, it can be waived by the party entitled to the right in rem. If the Opel parents could waive the right in rem itself, they can waive the claims to establish the right in rem in the same way they could waive the right in rem itself, that is, by one-sided agreement.

Q. What about possibility two, where the donor has claim against his donee? A. I spoke of possibility two.

Q. You mentioned it as three. A. As possibility three?

Q. Yes. You just testified, as far as the record is concerned, of possibility three, and the testimony which you have just given refers to possibility two? A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you say possibility three. A. Yes; I 453 meant two.

Q. So that your testimony is that in respect to possibility two, where I, the donor, have merely a right against you, a claim in the future upon demand to establish usufruct, it is your opinion that under German law, a one-sided waiver is sufficient on behalf of the donor? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Going to possibility three, where I have a claim against you as donee, plus a further in personam right to call upon you to establish usufruct to secure personal claim. A. It is the same answer as in two. Possibility one would be correct because the basic principal part of possibility three is a contractual claim. A claim for security certainly depends and is contingent on the existence of a contractual claim, and therefore the waiver takes place by understanding.

Mr. Burling: May I note an objection? This goes not to the rules of evidence, but to a point of estoppel.

I would like to show for the record a motion to strike the testimony about waiver on the ground plaintiff was estopped. Now he is going to sue on waiver, and the witness who could testify about waiver is Wilhelm von Opel, and they took his deposition and he didn't say one word about waiver.

Now, he is dead and now we hear about waiver for the first time, and I think that raises estoppel.

454 The Court: I will hear you on that point.

Mr. Burling: I want to be heard on that point.

Mr. Boland: We can establish the right of the parties.

The Court: I will accept it, subject to the materiality of the facts of the case as developed later.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. In respect to this contract your claim against the donee, as I gathered it, it is German law that both parties must agree to the waiver? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that you explain it has an informal meaning? A. Yes.

Q. Do you mean, express or implied? A. Express or implied.

Q. Either one? A. Yes, sir.

Q. So regardless of which of the three possibilities, if it is established, as a matter of fact, in the course of these proceedings that the parties both agreed to a waiver of whatever rights were reserved to the donor, then it is your testimony, is it not, that under such circumstances and under the opinion of the three possibilities, the right reserved in the donor would have been waived? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And permanent and forever? A. Yes, sir.
455 You only speak now of the German law.

Mr. Boland: This concludes, Your Honor, a portion of Dr. Kronstein's testimony. The second phase of his testimony is in respect to nationality, and we think it would be more in line with orderly presentation of proof if we were to recall this witness at a later date after the facts have been established, and have him testify further on nationality, which is a wholly different subject.

The Court: Is there any objection?

Mr. Burling: No; I would prefer it, and that we have cross examination of him on this part.

May I introduce Miss Magdalena Schoch, a member of the Bar of this Court. She was the first woman to be a professor of law at a German university. She has been a research associate of Harvard Law School and she is our law expert, and I asked her to sit with me.

The Court: All right.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Burling:

* * * * *

471 Q. Will you look at the last paragraph of Plaintiff's Exhibit 5? A. Yes.

Q. Did I understand you to say, on your direct examination, that notwithstanding the last paragraph of the instrument, title passed without any condition? A. I testified that this last paragraph has to be read together with the paragraph before. There are two possible interpretations you might give this paragraph. The one is, the interpretation which I give it, that it establishes contractual rights of the Opel parents, with the result that it is a condition on the transfer of title.

But then this condition is definitely killed and out of existence if Mr. Fritz von Opel sells the 600 or exchanges the 600 shares. Because under German law, if he takes it as a property right, it has to be absolutely exact; you cannot have property an indefinite thing.

472 Q. I wish to address myself to that contention of yours. If I understood you correctly, I could draw up an instrument giving my son my Rembrandt painting, providing, however, if he should predecease me, title would revert to me— A. Yes.

Q. And if he should predecease me, title would automatically revert to me? A. Yes.

Q. So that he took a title subject to a condition? A. Yes.

Q. Supposing I provided in the instrument that my son could exchange my particular Rembrandt, which I will say is the Man with the Golden Helmet, for another Rembrandt he might like, and which he did, he exchanged the one Rembrandt for another Rembrandt, and then he died; what would happen to the title of that Rembrandt? A. Even in this very limited case you put, the exchange of one Rembrandt to another Rembrandt, I believe we have to interpret the abstract language of the German Code, whether the property rights, title rights, of the father would disappear. Of course, it has to be completely definite and clear and specific in what this right exists.

Q. Would not the Court, at the time the question was tested, listen to the facts; and if it could be estab-
473 lished that the first Rembrandt was in fact exchanged for the second, that then the Court would find that was a sufficient identification of the property? A. That is exactly what I did, in my testimony. I tried to find out, in my direct testimony, I tried to find out an interpretation, which is a gift of the Opel parents—

Q. I am talking about a Rembrandt, Doctor. A. Now, please, in this situation the Court would only say, in your case, that the son would have an obligation to the father to give him, or his estate, a Rembrandt which he finally had. But if the son sells this Rembrandt number three—

Q. Let us stick to the hypothesis I have put. It would be much simpler. A. Yes.

Q. Assuming there is a second Rembrandt, the son having exchanged the first Rembrandt for the second Rembrandt, and the Court hears testimony from the art dealer who says the son did this, and this is the Rembrandt which the son exchanged for the first one, wouldn't the Court then find that was sufficient identification of the painting, so that a property right existed upon the son's death? A. Not for property right—only for contractual obligations.

Q. You say you can never have a condition follow 474 a transfer of the property? That is, you can give property subject to a reverter, but no matter what happens, if the property is ever transferred, that right in rem cases? Is that right? A. If the property is ever transferred? If the property, in your case, if the Rembrandt is sold and exchanged for another Rembrandt, the parties have to make a new Dinglicher Vertrag, a new conveyance, and have to say, "We hereby agree that the title in this new Rembrandt is substituted for the old title, and we agree title shall pass, or contingent title shall pass."

Q. Is it not true that you are expressing a minority view among German law experts? A. Such a point, I cannot tell you—expressing a minority. I think I follow my teacher and professor, Martin Wolff, along these lines And I believe he represents very much the majority of German law, and not the minority.

Q. You will, of course, agree there is a split of authority on this point? A. A legal question without split of authority is not difficult to find; but I am not aware of a split of authority, in my opinion.

Q. Are you not aware that there are decisions of the German courts on the question of tracing the continuity of the property? A. When property is given for 475 security, this problem is raised. There you might, in specific cases, imply from the very acts of the parties, it is agreed that the conveyance of last Rembrandt shall take place. But you have to show that; something has to happen. Just by the mere fact that you write that into a contract here, and do nothing more, I think that is a specific and abstract rule of the German property law and not to be reconciled with such an interpretation. I don't think so.

Q. You give no effect, then, to the words in the last paragraph on page 3 of the instrument—

"These stocks or the property substituted therefor including the income accrued but not drawn will then revert to the parents Opel or the surviving parent."

A. I give it certainly effect, as I testified in my direct examination. I think that the Opel parents have a claim against the son, or against the estate of the son, for whatever remains out of the gift after these contingencies occur. But as a matter of right in rem, I am unable to construe it.

Q. That is not what the words say, though, is it? A. That is not what the words say, no.

Q. You construe the instrument to mean something other than what the words say? A. If you don't do that, then this section has just no meaning and gives no rights 476 whatever to the Opel parents. It has no other alternative.

Q. Assuming your teacher, Dr. Wolff, is right on the law— A. Mr. Burling, Martin Wolff, in the field of property law, is right.

Q. Is he right as against an opinion of the Supreme Court? A. Yes; but there is no opinion on this point.

Mr. Burling: May I have a moment to confer with counsel, Your Honor? I just want to get the citation of the Supreme Court case, if Your Honor please.

I will come back to it. I can't find the citation immediately, Your Honor.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Would you state the authorities that you rely on for your view that no property right would follow the substituted property, after the Opel shares were sold? I am again talking about the last paragraph of the instrument. A. By following very elementary and basic authorities, I have to construe through, under the principles of the Code—just a second—let me say it perfectly frankly—it is one of the most embarrassing things that a legal expert has to testify as we would discuss facts. We are dealing here with a legal problem. And I have to have a chance 477 to explain the whole legal theory.

Q. My question is, Doctor, what authorities do—you rely on? A. My authorities, I will answer you, is the Code, and the entire principles of the German law.

Q. That is not very helpful. The fact is that we have a conflict, and the Court will have to decide between experts here in this case, and it would be helpful if you would tell us what sections of the Code you rely on. A. I would like to see a decision which is inconsistent with the statement which I made. The only explanation I have is that this opinion, this decision, you have, deals with other property.

Q. Doctor, I happen to be cross examining. You are not examining me, but I am examining you. I wish you would tell me what authorities you rely on.

Mr. Boland: Your Honor, I think it is very important, if Mr. Burling has a Supreme Court case contrary to the position taken by this witness, that instead of the witness being required to support what he says with authorities, that Mr. Burling should produce the decision right here and now.

The Court: I think he has the right to ask the authority.

Mr. Boland: He is assuming there is a split of authority.

The Court: No. He is asking if there is an au-
478 thority or a decision that he knows.

(To the witness): Doctor, have you looked that particular point up in the law, or are you just going on elementary principles?

The Witness: Oh, I looked it up.

The Court: Lately?

The Witness: Yes, lately. In fact, the day before I came into this Court, I went over all the points again.

The Court: You think you have some decisions on it?

The Witness: I have some Martin Wolff. I have the commentaries here. They said it is absolutely out of question that you can establish, under German law, an indefinite and unspecified right in any property. That is out of question, said the Supreme Court decision, and does not exist.

The Court: Once more, I think probably you and he are talking about something different. I think what Mr. Burling is trying to get at is, assuming you had a picture, as you used the illustration, a Rembrandt picture, and had a provision in regard to it, such as in this last paragraph; and the evidence was overwhelming that that picture was swapped for another one, just exchanged for another one, and there isn't any doubt at all about the evidence.

The Witness: In such a case, if the facts are this, if I gave to my son a Rembrandt, and then he writes to me a letter—"Dear Father: I am buying another Rem-479 brandt, and I would like to exchange Rembrandt number two for Rembrandt number one"—and it is fine; the parties make an agreement and understanding, that the new Rembrandt, the new picture, shall be conveyed to the father as of the death of the son.

The Court: Suppose he didn't write him, and this provision were in the agreement, you see, and he just swapped it and got another; then this wouldn't apply to it? Is that the testimony?

The Witness: In the case of this picture, you could, depending on the facts, how far the father saw the picture; whether he came there and was silent, or he said it was fine—you could there imply.

The Court: Yes; I understand your point; if it is indefinite, you cannot follow it and you cannot trace it and you cannot identify it. I understand your point. It has to be absolutely clear.

The Witness: It has to be clear absolutely without any doubt.

The Court: I have that point. But I think his idea is where there is absolutely no doubt about it, then would this provision apply?

In other words, would the obligation which attached to the original, apply to the substitute, when there is no doubt about it?

The Witness: The obligation, certainly, would apply.

480 The Court: I understand your distinction about whether it goes in rem or not.

The Witness: Whether it goes in rem is another question.

The Court: I understand that; but I think your question there is, isn't it, whether it would apply—

Mr. Burling: Your Honor understands me exactly.

The Court: Your answer is that it would apply, but it wouldn't vest a right in rem.

The Witness: If I represented the creditors of the stock, I certainly would make the point, and I think successfully, that that is the free property of the son.

The Court: I have your distinction so far.

The Witness: Under that, I admit there might be a very limited factual situation, such as Your Honor suggested. Where you have a picture, and the father is informed, or he sees it and silently approves, you might have a certain factual situation where you can say that the reconveyance or a new conveyance in regard to it exists. But you have to keep it very much in very limited lines.

The Court: Well, I got that.

Mr. Burling: The citation, if Your Honor please, which we refer to is Supreme Court, November 18, 1924, Volume 109, R. G. Z. 201.

The Court (to the witness): Do you want to make 481 a note of it?

The Witness: I would like to.

Mr. Burling: I am informed I might have given a wrong citation to the witness, Your Honor. I should have said Volume 136, pages 100 to 106, for the year 1932, decisions of the Supreme Court.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. What I am ultimately trying to get at, Dr. Kronstein, is, suppose this Court found as a fact that the proceeds of the Opel shares were put into a holding company, the Uebersee Finance-Korporation; that nothing else was put into Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, and that all the proceeds were put into Uebersee Finanz-Korporation; then wouldn't the reverter follow through the Opel shares into the Uebersee shares, assuming that the Court found that as a fact? A. I think, Mr. Burling, in my direct I testified that if the Niessbrauch is established, then this section here would certainly follow the property on which the Niessbrauch was established. Then there would be no property any more, because it would specifically and definitely clarify which property is covered by the contract.

Q. Now, you stated this morning, I believe, that you were familiar with Plaintiff's Exhibit 8, which is stipulated to be the Hachenburg draft of the gift agreement? A. 8?

482 Q. Plaintiff's Exhibit 8, the Hachenburg draft, A. Yes.

Q. And you have testified that Mr. Hachenburg was roughly the equivalent at the German Bar to John W. Davis at the American Bar, have you not? A. Yes.

Q. Is it not true that in his draft there is a provision for a reverter and calling also for a following of the property? A. Yes; but let us read that.

He clearly bases this section on this point, that they have nothing, that there can nothing happen to these shares, these Opel shares; that these Opel shares are exchanged into shares of the holding company.

Therefore he writes here, logically, that if he exchanged the shares into shares of the holding company, then the shares of the holding company shall be substituted. And he says, in Section 2, that the shares shall come into the holding company if the father requests so, or if Fritz von Opel is doing it on his own motion.

Q. Now I ask you to address yourself, going back to Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, to the first paragraph on page 2, the so-called usufruct paragraph.

You have testified concerning various possibilities of construing the usufructuary provisions of this state-483 ment, have you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say that the instrument itself did not bring a usufruct to light? A. Yes.

Q. Am I right in thinking that your reason for this is that no delivery to the usufructuary was made? A. This contract does not bring to light a Niessbrauch as a right in rem.

Q. That is right. A. As I testified this morning, it might bring in existence a claim.

Q. A claim to have a Niessbrauch? A. Yes. And the reason I say that, for the establishment of a right in rem, under various split ideas of the third part of the book, it would be necessary to give the Opel parents possession, or susbtitute of possession.

Q. And you say that the reason that the usufruct did not come into existence when this instrument was signed, was that there was no delivery of possession of the res to the Opel parents? A. As far as a right in rem is concerned.

Q. That is what we are talking about. A. As far as a right in rem is concerned, yes, it didn't come in existence, because there was no possession of the parents or 484 joint possession of the parents and Fritz von Opel provided for or established.

Q. Yes; I am talking now always about a right in rem. A. Yes.

Q. A true usufruct is a right in rem, is it not? A. This word "true"—

Q. I will withdraw the question and ask you, is a usufruct a right in rem? A. This general word, not always is a usufruct necessary. But if you speak of a usufruct under section so and so of B. G. B., that is a right in rem.

Q. Thank you. And the reason the right in rem didn't come into existence is the failure of delivery for possession? A. Of possession.

Q. There is no other failure, is there, that you know of? A. If the usufruct is a right in rem, and suppose it is a right in rem, certainly some other section of this contract would be subject to difficult interpretation. For instance, in the section which says—

"In the event that the parents Opel shall not have drawn in full or in part the income from the shares accruing to them by virtue of their usufruct, the advancement to Fritz von Opel shall be deemed to have increased by the income not drawn and he shall be accountable therefore."

485 If it is a right in rem, then under German law the income becomes property of the Opel parents, and there was absolutely no need, it wouldn't make any understanding, for using such words.

Q. We will come to that, Doctor. Is there any defect in the usufruct other than failure of delivery? A. If you ask for defect, there is no other defect.

Q. Thank you. So that if delivery of res to Wilhelm and Marta von Opel took place on that assumption, then the usufruct came into existence and there was a right in rem in Wilhelm and Marta von Opel? Isn't that true? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: Now, Your Honor, I would like to ask some hypothetical questions which in fact are based on the Gold case. It would, I think, since this is being tried without a jury, it would simplify matters if, rather than wait until I argue that point later, if I could point out pages in the Gold clause record to Your Honor at the time I ask the hypothetical questions, so that Your Honor will see that I am getting at, and how I believe the record binds the plaintiff.

I take it I am a—it is not in evidence; I cannot prove it—but the fact is that John W. Davis, who was referred to earlier, argued this case in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in the Second Circuit.

486 If Your Honor please, I am about to question in relation to matters covered by the affidavit of Fritz von Opel, appearing at page 66 of the record:

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Let us suppose, Dr. Kronstein, the hypothetical case—And I have reference to folios 197 and 198, if Your Honor please—

Let us suppose that Fritz von Opel, acting under the power of attorney that has been identified, put the Opel shares to General Motors and obtained roughly $3,700,000, and used a part of that to buy a holding company, namely, the Uebersee Finanz-Korporation; and let us suppose he put the remainder of the proceeds into Uebersee.

And let us suppose that he then held all of the shares of Uebersee, except three shares which were qualifying shares for directors.

And let us suppose he put the shares into a safe deposit box in a bank in Zurich.

And let us suppose further that Fritz von Opel took the key of that box and delivered it to an agent of his father's—

Would that constitute, in your opinion, valid delivery of possession sufficient to create the usufruct? A. Yes, provided all the assumptions you mentioned, that X

487 was the agent of the father, and that this agent, as agent of the father, took possession; then certainly at this moment the Niessbrauch would be established.

Q. Very good. And at that time there would be a right in rem? A. There would be, I believe there would be my third possibility—and of course we would again come into difficulties, in five, this English translation of the gift contract. But it would be a claim of the Opel parents for income, secured by a usufruct on the shares of Ueberseé which he would have at this time.

Q. Just a moment. I thought you testified, Doctor, that the only reason a usufruct did not arise under the first paragraph of page 2 was failure of delivery.

Now you have testified that my hypothesis, the delivery of the key to the safety deposit box, in which the shares resided, to an agent of Wilhelm von Opel, would constitute valid delivery. Why would not, under that hypothesis, why would not the usufruct arise at that moment? A. I told you, immediately after when you broached this question, I told you we now speak only of the first paragraph of page 2. If you speak of the whole agreement, you have to interpret page 2, this usufruct section, together with the section "In the event that the parents Opel shall not have drawn in full or in part" and so forth, and that 488 would lead to the interpretation that a right in rem was established the moment that this key was given to the agent of Wilhelm, if he was the agent; and the right in personam was established by making such delivery.

Q. In other words, you do agree that under my hypothesis, that Fritz von Opel delivered the key to Wilhelm's agent, and at the moment he delivered the key, the right in rem arose and it was complete? A. Provided, let me say, it was complete, provided the agent accepted the key and agreed that these parties agree that that shall be a usufruct—under this provision, yes, sir.

Q. Under that? A. Yes.

Q. And if the defendant can establish that the facts are in accordance with my hypothesis then you would have to agree, would you not, that the usufruct did arise under Plaintiff's Exhibit 5— A. Not under Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, because it would not arise from this agreement. From this agreement there would result a claim for the establishment of the right in rem, and the right in rem would be established by the delivery of the key and the agreement of the parties.

Q. In any event, if we agreed the key was delivered to the agent, as agent for Wilhelm, and the agent accepted the key for the father, then the usufruct did arrive? A. Then my possibility number two and my possibility number three would come into existence.

Q. I wonder if you wouldn't answer my question. Won't you agree, if we establish that Fritz von Opel delivered the key to Hans Frankenberg, Frankenberg acting as Wilhelm's agent, and Frankenberg accepted the key on behalf of Wilhelm, then at that moment the usufruct came into existence? A. Yes, I agree.

Q. You do agree? A. Yes.

Q. Now, you understand, do you not, that it is the contention of the defendant that Fritz and Wilhelm contemplated, at the time the agreement which is Plaintiff's Exhibit 5 was drawn up, that a holding company would be acquired; that the proceeds of the Opel shares would be put in the holding company, and the holding company symbolically was delivered to the father. That, you understand, is our contention.

Now, will you state what provisions, if any, of Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, are in any way inconsistent with Defendant's contention? A. The inconsistency is that it is not included in this contract—inconsistent with your explanation that it has been agreed. I only can testify as to the text of the agreement, or the agreement itself, which has no reference to such an understanding.

Q. The agreement itself is bare of any reference to a holding company? A. Yes.

Q. Is there anything, however, which is inconsistent with that hypothesis? A. No; there is nothing inconsistent.

Q. So, aside from the fact that the parties did not include in Plaintiff's Exhibit 5 a provision that the Opel shares or the proceeds thereof be put into a holding company, which in turn should be delivered to the father, there is nothing in Plaintiff's Exhibit 5 which tends to negate the defendant's contention? Is that true? A. Since the contract says that if the shares should be sold or exchanged against other property, and so on, certainly any exchange might be possible, including said exchange into holding company shares. Therefore there is nothing inconsistent with such a procedure.

Q. I wonder if I cannot get a yes or no answer—at least a little closer to it. A. Yes, there is nothing inconsistent.

Q. There is nothing inconsistent between the provisions of Plaintiff's Exhibit 5 and the contention which I just stated to you? A. No.

491 Mr. Burling: May I have a moment, Your Honor?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I will ask you to look once more at Plaintiff's Exhibit 7, please. I believe it has been stipulated that that is a letter which Dr. Hachenburg wrote to Geheimrat von Opel on October 3, 1931. Will you examine that and see whether there is anything in that letter which indicates that Hachenburg understood it was the intention of the parties to create a holding company? A. Yes, it was the understanding of Hachenburg, as the draft shows; and, furthermore, page 2 speaks of, or better, it says:

"My proposal is to have the holding company shares deposited for you. You will then be entitled to vote in the holding company, but only on such matters in which you have an actual interest."

So there is no doubt that Hachenburg's draft had in mind the establishment of the holding company. Whether that is the intention of the Opels or not, I do not know. But it is the intent of this letter and of the draft attached.

Q. I believe you testified this morning you were able to arrive at opinions as to the probable intent of the parties, on the basis of Hachenburg's draft. A. Certainly.

492 Q. Are you aided in any way in determining the probable intent of the parties by observing the fact that Hachenburg put in his draft provisions for a holding company? A. Certainly; I am very much impressed by that; and because it indicates to me that Hachenburg indicated the holding company, and then the holding company was stricken out—that the Opels, or Wronker-Flatow, or whoever it was, didn't like the holding company, and struck it out.

Q. In the Hachenburg draft, which is Plaintiff's Exhibit 8, these words appear in the second paragraph:

"The shares are, at the present time, deposited with General Motors in New York."

A. Yes.

Q. There is no reference to General Motors in the final draft, is there? A. Might I see again the contract?

"Our claim for the delivery of these shares," it says on the first page.

And "These stocks are deposited at present with the bank," in the second paragraph.

There is no reference to General Motors.

Q. In the Hachenburg draft it says the stock is deposited with General Motors, and in the Wronker-Flatow draft it says they are deposited with the bank.

Does that lead you to the conclusion that he didn't 493 like that and struck it out? A. It only leads me to the conclusion that since he drew it himself, that he didn't know whether the shares were deposited with General Motors or in behalf of General Motors in the National City Bank—and that is all I concluded on that.

Q. Well, in any event, the Hachenburg draft recites that the shares were deposited at New York, whereas the Wronker-Flatow draft merely refers to it as a bank.

Isn't it clear to you that Wronker-Flatow, at the time he revised the Hachenburg draft, went through it to delete those portions of the Hachenburg draft which would expose the scheme too much, that is, the scheme to transfer, whether or not it was a valid gift, to transfer what was in effect a claim against General Motors? A. I have really no way of answering this question because I cannot really see how in Wronker-Flatow's mind it was. I think, oh, I used this section, for the comparison which is to find if there were changes. Where General Motors was to be changed to bank, that has certainly no legal significance. Whether it has any other significance, I don't know.

Mr. Boland: Your Honor, I think questions of that nature are highly improper. It asks if this doesn't show a scheme Wronker-Flatow has.

494 The Court: Well, he has answered it.

Mr. Burling: I concede it would have been objectionable, Your Honor, except for the length to which my friend went this morning in developing inferences.

The Court: I think it is argumentative.

Do you gentlemen have some motion here to argue?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Yes, Your Honor, we have.

The Court (To Mr. Burling): Are you about through with the witness?

Mr. Burling: No, Your Honor, I would have at least half an hour more.

The Court: Then I will hear this argument on the motion.

(To the witness): Can you come back at 10 o'clock in the morning?

The Witness: Yes.

The Court: I will excuse you until ten.

(Witness excused accordingly.)

508 PROCEEDINGS

Mr. Ingoldsby: May I address the Court, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Your Honor, I file herewith a memorandum in opposition to the memorandum filed by the Government yesterday.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Ingoldsby: And may I ask at this time, Your Honor, whether we would be entitled to a full copy of the statement from which an excerpt was taken regarding the statement of a witness in Germany?

The statement was contained in the defendant's memorandum filed yesterday regarding a statement purportedly made by Wilhelm von Opel prior to 1933.

Does Your Honor recall the statement to which I refer?

The Court: No, I don't believe I do.

Mr. Ingoldsby: The statement in effect stated that there was a witness in Germany who had stated that some time prior to 1933 Mr. Wilhelm von Opel had stated that he could not trust anyone, even Wronker-Flatow, because Wronker-Flatow had borrowed some money from Mr. von Opel and then had executed a crooked contract for Mr. von Opel, and now Mr. Wronker-Flatow was in effect threatening or shaking down Mr. von Opel.

The Court: And what is your question?

510 Mr. Ingoldsby: My question is, may we have a copy of the entire statement from which the excerpt was taken?

The Court (To counsel for the defendant): What do you say to that?

Mr. Burling: I would be glad to furnish counsel with such copy. I don't have it with me, but tomorrow morning I would be glad to furnish it to counsel.

The Court: All right. I will dispose of this other matter at the noon recess.

Mr. Ingoldsby: And may I ask counsel at this time if they propose to bring that witness from Germany?

Mr. Burling: We do not, Your Honor. We did not learn of this until a day or so before the trial, when we received the report.

Mr. Ingoldsby: All right.

Now, may I ask one other question of the defendant's counsel?

Yesterday Mr. Burling mentioned several times the principle of equitable estoppel. If he intends seriously to contend that the doctrine of equitable estoppel applies to any question of this case, Your Honor, we would like to present a legal memorandum for the benefit of the Court on that topic. If he seriously relies on it, I wonder if he would mind telling us at this time to what set of facts in this case he considers the principle applicable.

511 Mr. Burling: I would be glad to do that. The set of facts to which I refer is that in 1933, a few days before the banks closed, Uebersee Finanz-Korporation bought $1,250,000 of gold coin in the United States. They desired to export this; but on March 4 the President by Executive Order forbade the exportation or possession of gold, and on March 9 Congress ratified that, making it illegal for a private person to possess gold or export gold.

Uebersee had a legal theory that if it could establish that Wilhelm von Opel had a beneficial interest in the gold, then the gold could be exported; and a suit was brought by Uebersee, the plaintiff here, which was in effect a suit against the United States.

It was a suit against the bank account that had possession of the gold, and against the Federal Reserve Bank which, as agent for the Government, was to receive the gold.

The action was to enjoin the Federal Reserve Bank from requiring that the private bank turn over Uebersee's gold, against payment in dollars. And Your Honor will recall, of course, that the paper dollars which Uebersee would get back represented, I think, 59 cents in the old gold dollar. So that some $700,000 was involved. That is, if Uebersee could have gotten the actual gold coins to Switzerland, they would have been some $700,000 better off.

In pressing that suit, Uebersee filed with the 512 District Court for the Southern District of New York affidavits executed by Wronker-Flatow, by a Swiss lawyer named Meyer, and by Fritz von Opel; and also filed as a part of the proceeding legal memoranda prepared by Isadore Kressel, one of its counsel, and by Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardner & Reed, all of which were to the effect that a usufruct had in fact arisen and had followed through the Opel shares into intermediate securities and cash, and finally resided in the gold coin.

That case was argued in the Southern District, and then was argued, as I said yesterday, in the Second Circuit, by John W. Davis, and by Mr. Kressel in rebuttal.

We say that the plaintiff cannot now assert that no usufruct arose, in view of the fact that the plaintiff swore, both as to its understanding of the German law, through its German lawyer, Wronker-Flatow, and as to the facts by the affidavit of Fritz von Opel, that delivery was made; that the key, as I remarked yesterday, was handed over; that the proceeds were put in Uebersee, and the shares of Uebersee were put in Box 1917 in the Swiss Credit Bank—Schweizerische Kreditanstalt—and the key to that box was then delivered to Dr. Hans Frankenberg, as agent for Wilhelm von Opel.

That is the testimony of Fritz von Opel, in the earlier suit. And we propose to argue that that estops the plaintiff now from saying that the usufruct did not 513 arise, or from saying that the key was not delivered.

Dr. Heinrich Kronstein resumed the stand and was examined and testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (Continued)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Dr. Kronstein, I would like to see if we can in a few words recapitulate what your testimony on cross 514 examination was yesterday. Am I correct in believing that you testified, first, that if and on the hypothesis that Wilhelm von Opel and Fritz von Opel understood in 1931 and intended and agreed that no gift was to take place, and they understood that the purpose of the transaction was solely to make it look as if Fritz von Opel were the title holder to the 600 shares of Adam von Opel, but that really Wilhelm was to remain in ownership, then even if Plaintiff's Exhibit 5 was executed, title did not pass.

Is that correct, sir? A. Yes, you understand me correctly.

Q. Thank you. And am I also correct in believing that you testified that if, and again on the hypothesis that the proceeds of the shares of the Opel stock were all used either in buying Uebersee or put into Uebersee—

Did you understand me so far? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The proceeds were all put into Uebersee, and the shares of Uebersee were put in Box 1917 in the Schweizerische Kreditanstalt, and the key to that box was handed by Fritz von Opel to Dr. Hans Frankenberg, as agent for Wilhelm, and Frankenberg acted as agent for Wilhelm and received possession of the key; then a valid usufruct arose in the persons of Marta and Wilhelm von Opel under the usufructuary provisions of Plaintiff's Exhibit 5.

Is that correct, sir? A. Yes. But you added, now, 515 the Schweizerische Kreditanstalt, which you didn't mention, at least I didn't get; and Swiss law would apply, probably, to the question whether the right in rem has been established, because that would be situated in Switzerland and would follow the Swiss law. If it would follow the German law, in which I am only an expert, on the Niessbrauch, I don't know whether it would be established by this method.

Q. But under the German law, is it not true that delivery at Zurich would constitute valid delivery? A. No, not as a matter of German law; because, as a matter of German law, German conflict law looks to the place where the property is situated. Therefore the German conflict law would look to the Swiss law for the question whether the right in rem has been established.

Q. So it is your opinion, is it, that my present hypothesis, that is, if the delivery took place in Zurich, then it is impossible for a German lawyer to answer the question, because he does not know what the Swiss law is on that point, theoretically? A. At least from the theory of an expert.

Q. From the theoretical point as an expert? A. Yes.

Q. I understand. Now, did I also understand you to say, Doctor, that there is nothing in the Hachenburg 516 draft, or the Hachenburg letter transmitting the draft, or in the conveyance itself, that is, Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, which is inconsistent with the hypothesis I just stated? A. I stated so.

Q. Now, my next questions, Doctor, are not designed to suggest anything more than the possibility that a lawyer becomes interested in a case he works on, and that sometimes affects his judgment--nothing more than that, sir.

Will you state when you were first connected with this case? A. I was consulted before the first deposition in Germany took place, and was asked to support Mr. Connor in taking the deposition in Germany.

Q. And when were you first consulted, please, Doctor? A. That was about July, maybe in June, 1947.

Q. And then you and Mr. Connor traveled to Germany for the purpose of taking the Wiesbaden depositions? A. Yes.

Q. Is that it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You acted as interpreter during those depositions for Mr. Connor? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And did you also advise Mr. Connor on the 517 general conduct of the depositions? A. Mr. Connor doesn't need my advice on taking depositions. But I advised him on the German law.

Q. I see. And you also conducted some investigational activities in Germany, did you not? A. No.

Q. Have you ever been in Ludwigshafen? A. No; I wasn't even at the time I was general claims assistant, in Ludwigshafen; I wasn't in Ludwigshafen for many years.

I never was in Ludwigshafen—I never did anything in the form of investigation. All that I did was that the lawyers for the Government and Connor asked me to go to Ruesselsheim and to look over certain files and to bring to both lawyers whatever I found there, which is what I did.

Q. Does the name Giulini mean anything to you Doctor? A. Oh, yes—a former client and a friend of mine.

Q. Have you ever made any inquiries concerning this case of any persons associated with Giulini Brothers? A. No; I wrote to my former law partner, who was my law partner at the time I was there; I wrote to him, after I read the name of Giulini in the case, and asked him about the facts he has in his files.

Q. That is, facts concerning either Uebersee's participation or Fritz von Opel's participation in the production of bauxite in Hungary? Is that right? A. Yes.

518 Q. You know, as a matter of personal knowledge, do you not, that Mr. Fritz von Opel's funds in the United States—whether or not they are his, the ones he claims to own—have been vested by the Alien Property Custodian? A. Yes.

Q. You know of your own knowledge, also, do you not, that the plaintiff corporation, Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, has been blocked in Switzerland? Isn't that true? A. I don't know that out of direct knowledge. I know that only from reading the files, that that was blocked under the Washington Accord, I think—the use of the word "blocked", the Washington Accord provides that Switzerland in all cases in which doubt exists, on the ownership, will advise firms that they cannot make any disposition of their property until a final finding by the American and by the Swiss Compensation Office, which operated under the American-Swiss Accord, until it has made its final finding.

Q. What I am getting at is, you know the estate cannot use any funds it has, it cannot now dispose of them. A. It cannot dispose of the funds in the United States. This blocking; therefore—I didn't want to use the word "blocking"—only refers to the question whether Uebersee can get the property back in the United States. Under the Washington Accord, as far as I understand it, Switzerland is authorized to make the first finding, whether a firm having property in the United States is German or not German. And as long as this investigation is not finished, the Compensation Office doesn't hand in the so-called certification. And the blocking has only to do with the property within the United States.

Q. Well, the Accord refers expressly to property within Switzerland, doesn't it? A. No; it refers to corporations established in Switzerland. Certainly there are provisions in regard to property in Switzerland. But this certification provision, and as far as I know, I have no knowledge of this case. I am now going a little bit in the field of speculation, because I don't know.

Q. Is it not your personal opinion that the plaintiff corporation has no funds which it can dispose of in Switzerland? A. I really haven't seen any of the papers. I haven't seen any of the documents. I really don't know how I can make under oath a statement of the actual situation.

Q. Then I will ask you another question: You haven't received any funds from the plaintiff corporation in Switzerland, have you?

Mr. Boland: Your Honor, we object to that question. This seems to be an attempt to look for funds which have not been vested by the Alien Property Custodian, and I suggest this is not the proper place to do that.

520

The Court: What is the purpose of this inquiry?—as to whether he has received any funds from Switzerland?

Mr. Burling: The purpose of the inquiry is to show he has not received any funds from Switzerland, and the plaintiff could not, at the present time—

The Court: I don't know whether that is correct cross examination.

Mr. Burling: Very well, Your Honor.

Mr. Gallagher: May I state Dr. Kronstein has been compensated from Switzerland during the past year and he is not waiting, as Mr. Burling is trying to infer, that he is not going to get anything until this case is over.

The Court: Well, gentlemen, if you want to go into it, it is all right with me. I thought one of you was objecting.

Mr. Boland: We do object, Your Honor.

Mr. Gallagher: To Mr. Burling's line of inquiry.

The Court: Very well. We will let it all go out.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Have you examined the photostat of the decision of the German Supreme Court dated April 8, 1932, in Volume 136, pages 100 et seq.? A. I got it this morning, and I recognized this decision.

521 Q. Have you had occasion to read it? A. Yes; I know the case.

Q. You do? A. Yes. I didn't know yesterday the number of it. When you said Volume 136, and the number, I didn't know it by the number.

Q. Naturally, but you can express an opinion about it? A. Certainly, definitely.

Q. Is it not correct that in this case the plaintiff, a manufacturer of sugar, sold to a merchant a consignment of sugar, agreeing with him that title should remain with the merchant until the purchaser had paid in full? Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. And is it not correct that the agreement was that the buyer was to resell the merchandise as his own, and if he sold it prior to the payment of the purchase price, the proceeds obtained, or the claims resulting from the resale, were to pass into the ownership of the manufacturer, that is, the plaintiff? A. The claims?

Q. The proceeds. A. The proceeds, the claims, for the sale of the sugar. He can sell the sugar, and then it is agreed that instead of that, instead of the sugar, 522 the claims shall be assigned to the manufacturer.

Q. Isn't it true that the agreement also contemplated, if the resale price was paid, that is, the proceeds were received, that title to the proceeds— A. The money.

Q. That title to the money passed automatically to the original seller? A. The money, yes.

Q. Thank you. And is it not true that in that case the man who first bought the sugar did in fact resell it, and the money was put in his bank account? A. The claims arose, since the claims were given to the manufacturer, and it was the claims; and the money came in on these claims, and the money was certainly owned by the manufacturer.

Q. I am only trying to get the facts straight, Doctor. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you listen to the facts and see if you do not agree with me. Isn't it a fact that the sugar was resold, and the purchase price was put in the seller's bank account? A. It was agreed—

Q. Isn't that true, Doctor? A. It is not so true. I will have to say a word to that. The agreement is A sells to B sugar. B cannot pay. Conditional sale. Property 523 title remains in the seller until payment is made.

It is furthermore agreed that if B doesn't sell for cash, but sells for claim, that this claim shall be assigned to the manufacturer, to A.

And certainly if the money comes in out of the assigned claims, then this money goes to the producer.

Q. Doctor, I will ask you again, isn't it the fact that in this case B did sell the sugar and did receive payment, and the payment went into B's bank account? A. You skip one important point in the case. B sold the sugar. B acquired claims for the sugar. The claims were assigned to the producer, and when the money came in, the money was certainly given to the manufacturer.

Q. The money was not given to the manufacturer—and wasn't it given to B? A. Yes, it was paid to B; but as soon as it arrived in B's possession, it had to be handed out, and the property, or this money, was considered transferred to the manufacturer.

Q. Ultimately B held property, didn't he? A. Yes.

Q. And at the time he held property, the money was in B's bank account, wasn't it? A. Yes.

Q. And is it not true that A asserted that he owned the money in B's bank account? A. Yes.

524 Q. And isn't it true that the trustees in bankruptcy said that all A had was a claim against B? A. Yes.

Q. And isn't it true that the trustees made the argument that A could not claim the proceeds, because they lacked full description? A. Lack of description, not of property, but of claims—of claims. That is something entirely different.

Q. But the res we are talking about is money in B's bank account? A. But the point is entirely in the case whether you can exchange claims, and exactly the situation is the same under the American law. If you take the Benedict case, and the Upton case, you see you have in the United States exactly the same situation, that while you cannot exchange personal property, but you can exchange claims.

For instance, in the Upton case, the money comes in, and the buyer receives the money; he has to hand in the money to the seller. And if he doesn't the money is the seller's money. But in regard to personal property, that is not the case.

I brought here, Mr. Burling, an article which brings together all these problems, especially to distinguish the case you just tell me, which shows this case has 525 absolutely no bearing on the question of personal property; that in regard to personal property, the property has to be as specific as possible.

This article even criticizes the Supreme Court, it is so absolutely opposed to any compromise. And it says look to the situation in claims; and they look here to 136, 100, and in similar cases where the Supreme Court permits the exchange of claims.

"As to personal property," says the article, "since 1934 no Supreme Court decision or any other court decision gives us any hope that this absolute and specific rule is changed."

Q. What is the citation of that article? A. The article is 138 Archiv fur die Civilistische Praxis, which would be especially known to your experts, on page 350, to determine the specific property in cases of transfer of title, and of assignment, compared.

Now, I don't want to take more of your time. I would otherwise say one more word of distinction.

Q. Well, now, addressing your attention to Mr. Boland's questions to you as to the nature of a usufruct, I am now talking in general terms and assuming that a usufruct has arisen in property. What rights does a usufructuary have in the property of which he is the usufructuary? A.

526 There we have to look to two points. The first is is a statute which enumerates the rights of a person having a right in rem, called Niessbrauch.

Furthermore we have to look to the contractual relationship to the person establishing the Niessbrauch, and the Niessbraucher. As long as the property, the title, is not given up and sold to anyone else, there is a contractual relationship between the two parties governing even in the right in rem. So I have to tell you that, the provisions of the Civil Code govern, if the contract doesn't say anything. They always govern in the relationship of an assignee of a title only and, third, the Niessbraucher.

Q. You can't answer my question without looking at the particular contract which creates the usufruct? Is that right? A. Yes, I think certainly it would be a necessary point to consider. But certainly we can look in the provisions of the statute, which are to be found in the third part of the book.

Q. By the way, the third part of the book relates to rights in rem, does it not? A. To rights in rem.

Q. Perhaps we can go along a little faster, if you will let me put the questions. A. No; I could answer that very fast. We have here to look, since we have to do with 527 shares, and shares in Germany are a bearer instrument, we have to look for the specific provision for bearer instrument, and that is Section 1081.

So it says that in such a case that joint possession shall be given to the title owners, in the Niessbrauchers, which is called the usufructuary.

Q. Let me interrupt you. First, is it clear that the usufructuary has a right in rem to the property? A. Yes, once the usufruct and the right in rem is established, he has the right in rem.

Q. And he has a right in rem? A. Yes; I prefer to call it "joint title."

Q. Is it not true also that the person having the usufructuary interest has a considerable voice in the management of the property? A. The statute again says that the Niessbraucher and the title owner of the bearer instrument are obliged to each other to cooperate for the purpose of collecting the due capital or to collect interests or dividends or to other measures required for the purpose of an orderly administration of the property. That is Section 1083.

Q. And then the case of shares, the usufructuary was entitled to vote the shares in so far as the vote was a matter affecting his usufructuary interest? Isn't that true? A. That is, in the German literature, very much a question of discussion. And as far as I can see, 528 there is no decided case. But if you look in the books and the commentaries, you find, for instance, the position taken by Feine, saying that all the voting rights are with the owner.

And you see Staub's position, taking a middle view, saying that the owner has the right to vote for all matters which have to do with income, and that the Niessbraucher has a right to do the voting in respect to the income.

Q. Didn't you misspeak yourself when you said the owner had the right to vote for all matters regarding income? A. No. The position, one, is that the title owner has all voting rights; and the second position is that the title owner has the rights for all measures which have nothing to do with income; while the Niessbraucher shall vote in regard to income. And the third position taken is that the Niessbraucher has all the voting rights.

Q. And you know, do you not, that Dr. Hachenburg in advising Wilhelm von Opel took the middle position? Isn't that what he says? A. He suggested to have it as a contractual provision. As I told you before, you have to look at the relationship between the parties, the contractual position. And he wanted to write that into the contract, so that the voting rights, in certain cases, shall be with the Niessbraucher parents, and in other cases shall be with the title owner.

Q. And the usufructuary could prevent the ef-
529 fective sale of the property, could he not? A. Certainly he can prevent the disposition of the property, if the right in rem is once established.

Q. You are a professor of comparative law, are you not? A. I am teaching comparative law for eight years.

Q. Now, Mr. Boland yesterday asked you something about the comparison between American trust law and German usufruct law. A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the life of a usufruct, will you compare the position of an American cestui que trust and a German usufructuary? A. First we have, under your own question, to limit the situation to the lifetime of the usufructuary. There, for instance, the title owner can dispose of his property, of his title right, at any time—sell it to whomever he wants. And such property is only limited by whatever rights the usufructuary or the Niessbraucher has.

Q. Will you explain what it is that the title owner under a usufruct can sell?—what economic value? A. Let me give you a case. I have a house and I make a Niessbrauch on my house. This Niessbrauch comes to an end—

Q. But my hypothesis is that the question— A. Now, pardon me—

530 Q. The life of the usufruct— A. Pardon me. But the economic value cannot be determined, without looking to what happened later. Certainly if I can sell my house, I will sell my house at the regular value of the real property, minus the value of this, I might call burden or lien on the property.

If the Niessbraucher is 78 years of age, the Niessbrauch will not mean much to the economic value of the house. If he is 24 and in best health, and the Niessbrauch is established for the whole life, it will mean much. Therefore I cannot give you a general statement.

Q. All right. In general, however, during the life of the Niessbrauch, will you not agree that the person having the Niessbrauch or usufructuary interest has a greater interest in the property than the American cestui que trust?—a very much greater interest? A. Would you repeat that? I didn't get the beginning of your question.

Q. Addressing yourself to the period of time during which a usufruct exists, will you not agree that the interest in the property of a usufructuary is very much greater than the interest of an American cestui que trust in the property? A. If you understand the interest with power, certainly under the trust law the beneficiary cannot exercise any power over the property. While, as we have

531 just described, the Niessbraucher has the right in rem, direct rights for the purpose of administration and so on. If you understand power with interest, I agree with you

Q. That is to say, over and above the interests of a cestui que trust, a usufructuary has the power to go-possession of the res; he may or may not, depending upon which view of the German law you take, have the right to vote the shares, and he can effectively prevent the sale of the res? Is that not correct? A. If the right in rem is established, yes.

Q. Of course, and the right in rem is established if there is a usufruct. A. I think, Mr. Burling, as I say in absolute consistence with all the German writers, if we have to distinguish between Eigentlicher and Un Eigentlicher, if it is established as a contractual right, there is no right in rem. Just by the fact that the word Niessbrauch is used, I wouldn't like to decide whether there is a right in rem.

Q. Doctor, how is a Niessbrauch or usufruct characterized in the German Code? A. It is perfectly correct that the German Civil Code deals only with the right in rem.

Q. Thank you. A. You have, for instance, in mortgages, in all these cases, you might have contractual rights.
532 You have chattel mortgages and real property mortgages by contract, where I say I will not sell my house until it is paid back.

Q. But, Doctor, is it not a fact that a usufruct is a right in rem under the German law? Doesn't the Code so provide? A. This answer I will never give, that the Niessbrauch under the German law is a right in rem. All I say is that the Civil Code only deals with the Niessbrauch as a right in rem. But aside from that, there exists a contractual right of the Niessbraucher.

Q. It doubtless can provide all kinds of contractual rights, Doctor. But a usufruct, under every authority you can find, is a right in rem, isn't it? A. I can only answer that, that the Civil Code deals only with the right in rem. If I would see a case, I am not satisfied with looking on the word. I have to look on the law.

Q. The concept of usufruct comes from the Roman law, does it not? A. Mr. Burling, I am working in this field now for too many years; so I can really only tell you I do not believe the usufruct comes from the Roman law. But my opinion is entirely unimportant. I believe it comes from the Germanic law. Other people might believe it comes from Roman law. But if you put me in the 533 position of my own scholarly work, I come to the point where I can testify. Of course, that is my own opinion.

Q. You mean to say that the concept of usufruct is not well known in the Roman law? A. And I believe as an entirely different thing, because the Roman property law and the Roman title law is different from the Germanic, and the Germanic property law doesn't come from the Roman, only with the German title law.

It is so closely connected; but, as I said yesterday, there are two schools of the German, and I belong to the school of Martin Wolff, and we worked on this problem for many years. I wrote my Doctor's thesis on a problem very close to that, and I cannot say it comes from Roman law, because I don't believe it.

Q. Don't most authorities say that the German law is the so-called civil law? A. It is one of the civil laws, yes.

Q. And don't most authorities regard the civil law as stemming from Roman law? A. As I advised, if you would look at the book of Buckland and McNair, two of the greatest English scholars, you will see that these two great scholars come to exactly opposite results. But I know that generally you speak of civil law coming from Roman law. That is a very loose and incorrect 534 language.

Q. I wonder if you would please answer my question, Doctor: Don't most authorities regard the civil law as stemming from the Roman law? A. No authority today takes this position.

Q. No authority? A. No, no authority in the field of history takes this position.

Q. That is to say, your position now is that every authority in the field of history as well takes the position that the civil does not come from Roman law? Is that right? A. Please, Mr. Burling, I can't answer that.

Q. I do wish you would answer the question yes or no. A. I cannot say yes or no. I can only say that certainly some aspects of the civil law problems come from Roman law. That is all I can say.

Q. I will come to another point. Did you not testify yesterday that a devisen inlander, owning American dollars, or owning American securities, was under an obligation pursuant to the foreign exchange decrees of July, 1931, as amended, to report and to tender such American dollars or American securities to the German Reichsbank against a payment in marks? A. Yes.

Q. And under the German foreign exchange regulations, in the month of November, 1931, a devisen inlander 535 having dollars or American securities could not transfer those dollars or American securities to anyone except the Reichsbank without a license, could he? A. Would you be good enough to repeat that?

Q. Yes, sir. Before I do that, I will ask to have marked for identification a photostat Reichsgesetzblatt, pages 421 to 425, for August 1, 1931.

(The photostat was accordingly marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit No. 31.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I hand Defendant's Exhibit 31 for identification to the witness. Will you agree, Doctor, that that is a photostat of the Reichsgesetzblatt? A. Yes.

Q. Am I not right that that constitutes an executive order concerning foreign exchange control, promulgated on August 1, 1931? A. Yes.

Q. Now, will you turn to Section 3 and state whether the following translation is correct:

"Foreign currency or credits payable in foreign currency which have been acquired otherwise than in accordance with Section 2, may be transferred only under a license in writing of the Office of Foreign Exchange Control, except where such assets are sold to the 536 Reichsbank or one of the banks provided for in Section 2, paragraph 3."

A. Yes.

Q. Now, will you tell me whether the following is a correct translation of Section 4—

"Foreign securities not listed on a German stock exchange may be acquired for a consideration only under a license in writing of the Office of Foreign Exchange Control.

"Foreign securities not listed on a German stock exchange may be transferred only under a license in writing of the Office of Foreign Exchange Control, except where such securities are sold to the Reichsbank or one of the banks contemplated by Section 2, paragraph 3."

A. Yes.

Q. Now will you look at Section 12, please, Doctor. Is this a correct translation—

"Any transactions which violate any of the provisions of Sections 3 to 11 are void."

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Now I want you to assume a hypothesis. Assume that no gift took place and no agreement was executed between Wilhelm and Fritz von Opel on October 5, 1931.

But assume instead that on October 6 Wilhelm
537 gave Fritz a power of attorney over the 600 Opel shares, and assume that Fritz left Wiesbaden on the 6th, went to New York, put the shares to General Motors, received back as attorney for his father either cash or General Motors shares or claims against General Motors. A. Yes.

Q. Assume that Fritz then returned in November to Wiesbaden, and that he and his father then drew up Plaintiff's Exhibit 5 and put the date October 5 on it. A. Yes.

Q. Would any title have passed on that hypothesis, from Wilhelm to Fritz? A. On this strict hypothesis, no title under German law would have passed.

Q. The fact that the instrument was pre-dated would be irrelevant, wouldn't it?

I mean, the fact that it bore the date October 5 would be irrelevant if the transaction in fact— A. If, on October 5, a full agreement would be made, an oral agreement would be made, and it would only be provided for to write it down later, then the agreement would be made on October 5 and would become valid by taking the property.

But if what you call pre-dated means the agreement was made on October 24 or November 10 or whatever, 538 and then written with the date of October 5, when the oral agreement was made in November, certainly the agreement would be void under German law.

Q. If an oral agreement had been made on October 5, that a gift would be made, title would not have passed to Fritz, would it, on October 5? A. It would have passed in the moment, as explained in direct, when the conveyance took place.

Q. What delivery would have taken place on October to Fritz? A. Suppose an oral agreement, as a mere matter of assumption, suppose an agreement is made on October 5; power of attorney is given; and it is said by the father to the son, "You go to America and you take this property, and it is our understanding that this property shall be yours as soon as you take it."

It would have all the elements of a gift promise and gift acceptance, and the contract would become valid by taking. And then it didn't become effective in November, but the moment the Opel shares are handed to the son.

Q. What is there in your hypothesis that would constitute delivery? A. The taking, if it is agreed between the parties, that Fritz von Opel shall go to New York and take the shares, the delivery is the taking of the shares in New York.

539 Q. And your view is that that constitutes delivery as a gift, even though Fritz von Opel puts the shares to General Motors under an instrument— A. I said, in fact, I do not know. I only know as a matter of assumption. I say if the agreement is made on October 5, with the understanding that Fritz shall go to New York and go to wherever these shares are and take these shares, when the agreement would become fully valid, at the moment he takes the shares.

Q. Would he not have to take the shares in his own name, for that to be true? A. No. The question of the name, then you come to the problem of the power of attorney. I don't think that would be, in this perfectly hypothetical case, of importance. If the agreement is that father tells son, "I hereby make you the gift of these shares. Go to the bank where the shares are. Take these shares. And we agree that as soon as you take the shares, it shall be yours."

The contract would become valid the moment he takes the shares.

Q. And that is true, in your opinion, even though the son in taking the shares is acting under a power of attorney naming him attorney in fact for his father, and even though the proceeds of the sale of the shares are deposited in his father's bank account? A. The question of 540 whether it was a gift or not a gift, is a problem of the internal relation between donor and donee.

The power of attorney has to do with the external, with the relationship with the third parties. And therefore it has absolutely nothing to do with this question.

I can tell you a case which I can only give to show it might be, to qualify this answer, because the word "predating" might have so many different meanings. If it is just straight making an agreement on November 25 and writing October 5 certainly there is no agreement before November 25.

Q. We could get along much faster, Doctor, if you would listen to my question and answer if, and then let us go to the next question.

I do not believe you have answered my question. Do you assert that on the hypothesis that father and son made an oral agreement on October 5; that the father did give the son the stock, and the father gave the son a power of attorney, and the son went to New York and put the shares to General Motors, acting under an instrument which called him attorney in fact for his father; and that he then deposited the proceeds of the shares in his father's bank account—would that constitute a valid gift to the son? A. I can only answer this question exactly if you tell me the words of the oral agreement. If you tell me that, 541 I can give you an exact answer.

Q. Supposing that the father and the son agreed on October 5 that a gift was to be made to the son which would be reduced to writing at a later date, and the instrument predated.

And supposing that the father then gave the son the power of attorney, the son went to New York and put the shares to General Motors under the power of attorney and deposited the proceeds of the sale in his father's bank account.

Would that constitute a valid gift to the son, at that moment? A. I would be perfectly—maybe just I didn't get it, but I didn't get the words of the oral agreement, the contents of the oral agreements. Because therefore depends my answer, what they actually said.

Q. The hypothesis is that the father says to the son, "I will give you the shares, but we need more time to arrive at a proper agreement. So you go now and sell the shares under the power of attorney. When you come back we will draw up the instrument and predate it so that it will look as if we entered into a written agreement today." A. If such language is used, especially as the words "I will make you a gift", and there are questions open to be discussed, there is no complete contract and there 542 no title would pass. So it depends entirely on this point what the agreement is.

Q. But on my hypothesis title would not pass? A. No, on this hypothesis, title would not pass.

Q. And, in fact, title would not pass, assuming the oral agreement and the subsequent written agreement, unless every provision of the gift agreement were in fact agreed upon on October 5? A. Every essential.

Q. Every essential. But if there was any provision left open for further discussion or for further investigation of the law, then title would not pass? Is that true? A. Any essential provision. Understandings in regard to minor things would be different. But the essential thing that has to be covered, there has to be an oral agreement covering all the essential things.

Q. Assuming that there was no such oral agreement on the 5th, which covered every essential element, and assuming that the instrument which is Plaintiff's Exhibit 5 were executed in November and predated, then you have agreed that the gift would be void? A. Yes.

Q. And if it would be void, the title remained in Wilhelm von Opel, did it not? A. Since the property was 543 not situated in Germany, but in the United States, it isn't a question I can answer as an expert on German law.

Q. The property was shares of Adam Opel, A. G. Is that right? A. It doesn't make any difference—

Q. Is that right, Doctor, whether it makes any difference or not? A. Yes.

Q. And Adam Opel, A. G. was a corporation existing under the laws of Germany, was it not? A. Yes.

Q. And under the hypothesis, Wilhelm von Opel was a citizen and resident of Germany, was he not? A. Yes.

Q. And under the hypothesis, Fritz von Opel was a German national, was he not? A. Yes.

Q. And under the hypothesis, both men were acting in Wiesbaden, Germany, were they not? A. Yes.

Q. Now, is it your position that if the father made a gift to the son, which was declared void, that is, the hypothesis again is that this happened in November. A. Yes.

Q. And that was declared void by Section 12 of 544 the decree of August 1, 1931, the German Court would nevertheless say, "We don't know who has title"? A. The German Court?

Q. That is right. A. So far as the question what the German Court would say, the German Court would not recognize transfer of title.

Q. That is what I am asking you, as a German expert. And under the German law, the title remained in Wilhelm von Opel? A. Yes, under German law the title remained in Wilhelm von Opel.

Q. Thank you. Now, you were asked by Mr. Boland yesterday about how, assuming that a right arose under the usufructuary provision in Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, how such a right might cease to exist. I want you to direct your attention to the hypothesis that a valid usufruct in Wilhelm and Marta did arise under Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, coupled with delivery of the key to Hans Frankenberg. A. It is again your assumption that that is in Switzerland?

Q. In Zurich, yes. A. Then the question of how this right in sem would be waived or became terminated, is a matter of Swiss law.

Q. A German Court would say that it could not 545 determine— A. It could determine it, but it would look to the Swiss law for certain information.

Q. I see. A. Because if the property is situated in Switzerland, under German law—and I can only answer you under German law what the result would be, if it is applicable.

Q. Let us examine that a little. I will vary the hypothesis. Supposing the alleged delivery had taken place in Wiesbaden instead of Zurich. A. And the property is situated in Wiesbaden?

Q. That is right—a safe deposit box in Wiesbaden, rather than a safe deposit box in Zurich. Then how would it be possible for the usufructuary right to come to an end? A. Section 1604. For the purpose of abandonment of Niessbrauch, the statement of the Niessbraucher is sufficient, the statement that he waives or abandons the Niessbrauch is sufficient.

Q. Again assuming that the property was situated in Wiesbaden, the usufructuary had a right in rem in the property, did he not? A. If the right in rem is established.

Q. Under the hypothesis that I have given you, Wilhelm and Marta von Opel would have a right in rem in the Uebersee shares.

Now, again assuming the property to be situated 546 in Wiesbaden, they could not dispose of or transfer that right in rem to foreign securities, without a license, could they? A. You can never transfer a Niessbrauch. The Niessbrauch is strictly a personal right of the person who has this right. It can never be transferred or assigned.

Q. I don't mean to quibble with you, and I hope that is reciprocal. Dr. Kronstein, if A has a Niessbrauch in property, and B is a title holder, and A abandons the Niessbrauch— A. Yes.

Q. That transfers that interest back from A to B, doesn't it? A. Certainly. Whatever interest the beneficiary had is now merged with the title holder.

Q. So that that interest moves from A to B and is transferred, isn't it? A. Yes.

Q. And you couldn't transfer an in rem interest in foreign securities without a license, could you? A. You could not, I suppose, of foreign securities—exactly your question, you could not do that. You couldn't dispose of rights in foreign securities without license.

Q. So that Wilhelm and Marta von Opel could not have abandoned their usufructuary interest without a license, could they?—the usufructuary interest in Uebersee, a Swiss corporation? A. In my opinion, this 547 transaction would require a license.

Q. Thank you. A. But there are other opinions to be found.

Q. I am asking your opinion, Doctor.

Mr. Gallagher: Your example is with the property in Wiesbaden? Is that not correct?

Mr. Burling: So far. I am coming to the next step.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. And if they didn't have a license, and if they purported to abandon the usufruct, that purported abandonment would be void under Section of the decree of August 1, wouldn't it? A. Yes.

Q. Now, then, you have had some judicial experience in Germany? A. Yes.

Q. What is your opinion of what a German Court would have done if the situation had been that the property, the shares of Uebersee, were in a box in Zurich and the key was in the hands of Wilhelm's agent in Zurich? Then could Wilhelm and Marta, under German law, effectively transfer an interest in foreign securities? A. Pardon me, Mr. Burling. Please don't use the word "transfer" of securities, because they could not transfer these securities.

Q. Isn't an abandonment a transfer? Wouldn't it transfer from A to B? A. By waiving the right, the right coming at the end.

Q. And by the abandonment, the interest in the property moves from Wilhelm and Marta to Fritz, doesn't it? A. Well, if you want to call it that it moves, yes, sir.

Q. Isn't that a transfer? A. No, it is not a transfer, because the statutes say a transfer can be done—I am not too much impressed by the words of the statute—but we can perfectly agree that we have the right, and by the German courts it would be considered void under the foreign control.

Q. So there isn't any doubt in your mind, is there, that under the hypothesis that a valid usufruct arose and that the shares were in a box in Zurich and the key to the box was in the hands of Wilhelm's agent, then Fritz and Marta could not waive or abandon the usufruct without a license? A. Under German law, no.

Q. That is what you are testifying about, as an expert in German law. And if they purported to waive, under the hypothesis I have given you, that purported waiver 549 would be void? Isn't that true? A. Yes.

Q. Is it your opinion, Doctor, that in considering the question of whether a waiver had taken place, a German Court would take into consideration the fact that the two people who had the capacity to waive, Wilhelm and Marta von Opel, had both testified in the particular proceeding and neither of them had mentioned—and this is a hypothesis—neither of them had mentioned that waiver? Would the fact—

Mr. Boland: I didn't get your question, Mr. Burling. Would you mind restating it?

Mr. Burling: Yes. My question is—

Mr. Boland: What is your assumption, again, please?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. My assumption is that a German Court is endeavoring to determine the fact whether or not Wilhelm and Marta von Opel waived or abandoned their usufruct, of course again assuming a usufruct validly arose.

My question is, on the further assumption that neither Wilhelm nor Marta von Opel testified—and both of them were called in the case, but neither testified in any way—that they had in fact waived, would the Court consider the failure of the two witnesses who could possibly testify to a waiver, to testify to that effect, as being an im-550 portant fact?

Mr. Boland: I object to that question, Your Honor. I don't see that it is necessarily connected to anything Dr. Kronstein has testified to.

The Court: I am a little afraid it may be outside the German law, Mr. Burling.

Mr. Burling: May I have a moment, please?

The Witness: Your Honor, I would like to have the right to make a little statement. Mr. Burling has, I believe, attacked my honor. He made an implication which I cannot accept silently. I believe that Your Honor cannot have the impression that I made biased testimony.

The question in regard to my payment is especially, I believe, improper, since the Government knows very well that I do not accept more than a Government expert; that I took this case and I told both parties that I want to be perfectly—

The Court: Mr. Kronstein, there isn't any testimony reflecting on your honor before me, and I assure you I won't draw any conclusions from it. So you needn't bother about that.

Mr. Burling: I would like to state, Your Honor, my purpose in seeking to find out about the funds related to something wholly unrelated.

The Court: I got the drift of that.

551 He was talking about another point, on the money.

Mr. Boland (to Mr. Burling): Have you finished your questioning?

Mr. Burling: May I have just another moment, Your Honor?

I have no further questions.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Boland:

* * * * *

554 Q. Doctor, are you familiar generally with the foreign currency regulations which were in effect in Germany in 1931? A. Certainly.

Q. Would you give us a slight detail on your familiarity with such regulations? A. The law practice between 1931 and November, 1935, when I left, was unfortunately up to 90 per cent connected, at least in my office, connected with foreign exchange control.

Q. So that you would say you were extremely familiar with the foreign exchange regulations? A. I don't want to say "extremely familiar". I am very well familiar with the problem.

Q. Would you direct your attention again, Doctor, to Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, and state whether or not there is anything set forth in that agreement which violates in any way any foreign currency regulations which were in force either as of October 5, 1931, or—

Mr. Boland (to Mr. Burling): What date are you using in your assumption? November 24?

Mr. Burling: No; my assumption is a date after Fritz returned—November 9.

By Mr. Boland:

555 Q. Or on November 9, 1931? A. This agreement written here was perfectly lawful under foreign exchange control and, as far as I can see, until the control statute number, I believe, 53, of the Military Government, overruled the currency statute and substituted a new statute for it.

Q. And would you explain to the Court exactly why this was legal, under German foreign currency regulations? A. The object of the gift were German shares, shares of a German corporation. Under German law, shares are personal property. The rules of currency decrees do not cover this property, and for good reasons.

Q. So that the main factor in this case is that it deals with the transfer of German bearer shares? A. German bearer shares.

Q. And that is why it was not within the foreign currency regulation? A. Yes.

Q. Addressing your attention now to Plaintiff's Exhibit 7, which purports to be a letter from Dr. Hachenburg, in which he discusses the problem, what conclusion does he come to, Doctor? A. The same conclusion, that the procedure is lawful.

Q. Thank you. Yesterday, during Mr. Burling's assumptions, he asked you a question as to taking the 556 gift agreement itself, October 5, 1931, as to whether the only thing left which would preclude the immediate establishment of a right in rem, as he put it exactly, "No other defect except delivery remained to the establishment of an immediate right in rem"? A. Yes.

Q. I think ultimately your answer was yes. That answer is based upon the assumption, is it not, that you interpret the language of the contract to create an immediate right in rem; that the intent of the parties was to establish an immediate right in rem? A. Would you repeat this question? I didn't get the question.

Q. Mr. Burling asked you whether on the basis of the gift agreement itself, whether the only defect to the immediate establishment of a usufruct was delivery, and I believe your answer was yes. A. I said, without this conveyance contract, the Dinglicher Vertrag, there can be no Niessbrauch. If there would be such a conveyance in the contract, then I wouldn't suggest that they here establish rights in personam, but I would certainly suggest they establish a right in rem.

Q. Yes, sir. Yesterday Mr. Burling also gave you the case of the Rembrandt. I am not sure who gave the Rembrandt to whom, but at least it was in issue for quite some time. And as I recall the case, it was that of the do-557 nor who gives the Rembrandt to a donee, with the understanding that the picture will return upon the happening of certain conditions. A. Yes.

Q. Under such a case, Doctor, and before the happening of the condition, would the donee be free to transfer good title to a third person? A. Yes.

Q. And where does that leave the donor? A. He would have a claim for damages.

Q. He would have merely a claim for damages? A. Yes.

Q. So that until the happening of the condition, the donee has full power, full title, and full power to dispose of the particular object of the gift? A. Yes.

Q. Do you believe that the Rembrandt analogy has any relationship to the case at bar, that is, using October 5, 1931, Plaintiff's Exhibit 5? A. If you take this contract, you have the provision that in case of Fritz von Opel's death without legitimate issue, and the fact that he predeceases his parents, the gift will become void.

You have furthermore this provision that the 558 shares should be sold or exchanged against other property.

You have furthermore no right in rem established by the usufruct.

And if you take that all together, it was a completely uncertain and undefinite and unspecified property.

If I would take the position, the other position, because in my direct I tried to interpret the contract, to give the Opel parents as many rights as possible under this language, and I suggested that this provision had established a right against Fritz von Opel's estate in case these two contingencies occur, for the return of the remainder.

If you interpret this section here as having in effect as a right in rem, then it has absolutely no effect the moment the first shares are sold, and it loses any effect then whatsoever.

That was the reason I tried in my interpretation to give the most possible number of rights to the people who make this contract, with their intention, following their intention.

I made this suggestion, as I believe, in the interests of Mr. Burling.

Q. So that your testimony is to the effect that this does not affect the passage of title? A. No.

Q. And, number two, that it merely creates a right
559 in the donor in the estate of the donee, if the son predeceases both the mother and father, and dies without legitimate issue? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe it has been stipulated that the father has died. Assume, Doctor, it is established in the course of this case that the mother, the co-donor, so to speak, is 77 years old, and assuming further that the son is in his forties, as a German lawyer and looking at this gift instrument what value would you attribute to the rights of the mother at this particular time? A. I am afraid—

Q. I don't mean dollar wise, Doctor. A. I am afraid it goes a little bit beyond my possibility of an expert's testimony.

Q. I think we both agree they were not very much.

Mr. Burling: I would like to object, on the ground that the relevant date is the date of vesting, and not today.

The Court: I think that is true.

Mr. Boland: That is all, Your Honor.

Mr. Burling: I have two or three questions, if Your Honor please, arising out of the redirect.

The Court: Very well.

564 Mr. Gallagher: I would like to now offer the vesting orders, which have been in custody of plaintiff's counsel. Give them different numbers.

(The documents referred to were marked Plaintiff's Exhibits 48-A to 48-E for identification.)

Mr. Gallagher: Mr. von Opel, take the stand.

Thereupon—FRITZ VON OPEL was called as a witness and, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Mr. von Opel, you were in the courtroom the day that this proceeding began, were you not? A. Yes.

Q. At that time you heard Mr. Burling—

The Court (interposing): You better give his full name.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Your name is Mr. Fritz von Opel? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are the owner of the stock of the Uebersee Korporation? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were in the court on that opening day of this proceeding, were you not, Mr. von Opel? A. Yes.

565 Q. And you heard Mr. Burling's opening statement at that time; is that true? A. Yes, I did.

Q. I would like to refresh your recollection for a moment as to what he said, on page 28 of the opening statement:

"As I have said, the regulation came out on October 2nd. On that very same day Fritz went to Mannheim and consulted Dr. Hachenburg—and I agree with Mr. Gallagher's statement that he was one of the most eminent lawyers at the German Bar at that time. He agreed to prepare a draft of an agreement which would put the legal title in the name of Fritz von Opel. And he did mail it the next day, October 3rd. And the calendar will show that October 2, 1931, fell on a Friday. So Hachenburg mailed his draft on October 3rd, on a Saturday; and the presumption would be that it was received in Wiesbaden Monday morning, October 5. He also said he would look up some tax problems associated with this transfer.

"Incidentally, under the schedule of the escrow agreement, Wilhelm von Opel was to receive $3,700,000 if he put the stock to General Motors at this time, and I think it is not disputed that that sum equalled approximately half of the entire fortune of Wilhelm von Opel.

566 I might interpolate: That is disputed.

"It is our contention, of course, that the father and the son both understood it was not a gift of half of Wilhelm's estate to the son, but merely that this was a way in which the family was going to go around the foreign exchange regulations, by purporting, by feigning a transfer to the son, so that he would hold it immune to the foreign exchange regulations.

"We will prove through the words of Fritz von Opel himself that he and his father were on exceeding bad terms at the time of this gift and, in fact, at all relevant times, the father and son were not at all friendly.

"The significance of the days of the week is that although Hachenburg was one of the most distinguished lawyers of the German Bar, and said he would report on tax matters on Monday—and here my friend I think was in error; it was not Fritz von Opel on behalf of his father, but Wilhelm von Opel, who cabled the general counsel of General Motors, asking if he would be in New York, and saying that either the father or the son would come to New York, sailing the following Wednesday, to confer with him.

"We contend that the agreement which bears the 567 date October 5 was not signed on that date, but that, on the contrary; what happened was that Hachenburg's letter was received on Monday. They knew that the Europa was sailing from Bremerhaven two days later, on October 7, and that it would be necessary for either Fritz or his father to leave for Bremerhaven the very next day, on the 6th, to get on the boat.

"So they knew there just wasn't time enough to look into these problems."

Now, Mr. von Opel, for how many days did you and your father discuss Dr. Max Hachenburg's suggestions? A. We discussed it for several days.

Q. I will ask you: On the date October 2nd, three days before the Hachenburg draft, Plaintiff's Exhibit 8 was received, you were given Plaintiff's Exhibit 9, which the Government has admitted was given to you on that date, on October 2nd; is that not a fact? A. Yes, it is.

Mr. Burling: I object. I did not object during the examination in chief of Dr. Kronstein to the fact that leading questions were used because of the complexity of the problems. I do not think even if this is an equity court that Mr. Gallagher should be allowed to lead—

Mr. Gallagher (interposing): I will reframe the question.

568 Mr. Burling: This is not a hostile witness.

The Court: I agree with you on that.

Mr. Gallagher: I will reframe the question.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. It has been stipulated by the Government, Mr. von Opel, that Dr. Max Hachenburg gave you this draft, Plaintiff's Exhibit 9, on October 2nd, which they state is the Friday preceding the Monday on which Plaintiff's 5 was purportedly executed.

I will ask you: Did Dr. Hachenburg give you that letter? A. Yes; certainly.

Q. That draft? A. Yes.

Q. Now, I will ask you: Did you have any discussions with your father within the light of the suggestions contained in that draft? A. Yes; definitely.

Q. Did you discuss—at what time did you discuss them? A. I came home in the evening of the 2nd. It is only about an hour or an hour and a half drive from Mannheim to Wiesbaden. So that same night I discussed it with my father, also the next day and the following day, what is called in English, fundamental considerations forming the basis of Dr. Hachenburg's final draft.

569 Mr. Gallagher: I would like at this point if Your Honor would refresh your recollection as to 9 for a moment, and then I will commence with Mr. von Opel's interrogation. Will you compare it with 8? 8 is the one received Monday, and which is stipulated by the Government. 9 is the one they themselves stipulated was given to Fritz three days before, and which has been testified to by the expert as containing the same information as in Plaintiff's Exhibit 7?

You will note that Dr. Max Hachenburg in the second line states: I gave the memorandum to Fritz.

The Court: Go ahead, Mr. Gallagher.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. So, if I understand you correctly, your father and you had at least two days and an evening in which to discuss the suggestions of Dr. Hachenburg, which appeared later in a formal draft of a deed of gift; is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. Now, to return, Mr. von Opel, where were you born? A. In Ruesselsheim.

Q. In what year? A. May 4, 1899.

Q. Where is your present residence? A. St. Moritz, Switzerland.

Q. When did you acquire that residence? A. I bought the house in 1933 and rebuilt it, and made St. Mo-570 ritz my permanent residence in 1934.

Mr. Ingoldsby: A little louder, please.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. A little louder, Mr. von Opel.

When did you give up your residence in Germany? A. In December, '29, when I left for the United States.

Q. Of what country are you a citizen? A. Liechtenstein.

Q. And when did you become a Liechtensteinean citizen? A. In November, 1939.

Mr. Gallagher: Now, Your Honor, I wish to offer a stipulation between the defendant and the plaintiff with respect to one, Dr. Joseph Henggler, who represented Mr. von Opel in obtaining Liechtenstein citizenship, and the stipulation states that if Dr. Henggler had been called as a witness, which we proposed to do in Europe, this is the testimony he would have given.

Will you identify that?

(The document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 49 for identification.)

Mr. Gallagher: This is Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 49. Would you look at that briefly, Your Honor?

I now offer that, Your Honor.

Mr. Burling: I think I stipulated that that wit-
571 ness would so testify but I didn't stipulate as to the admissibility.

Mr. Gallagher: That is correct. The Judge will see that, Mr. Burling, in the stipulation.

Mr. Burling: However, I make no objection.

The Court: All right.

(The document previously marked for identification Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 49 was received in evidence.)

Mr. Gallagher: I might state, Your Honor, it has been stipulated further that he is a Liechtenstein citizen.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Where was your domicile at the time you acquired or became a Liechtenstein citizen? A. In Switzerland.

Q. Did you ever file with the proper authorities in Germany any application to retain your German nationality? A. No, I did not.

Q. When did you come to the United States for the last time? A. In the spring of 1940.

Q. And would you state for what reasons you came to the United States at that time? A. I had several reasons.

Q. A little louder, please. A. I had several 572 reasons.

One of the reasons was that in 1939 I had received a certain mobilization order, meaning that I had to report back to Germany for military service. I was at this time not a Liechtenstein citizen, and I was very much afraid that if the German armies would enter into Switzerland that I might get caught and shot.

This danger was especially great in the spring of 1940. At this time the so-called phony war was going on, and the Germans were sitting in front of the Maginot Line, and everybody would expect they would go through Belgium or Switzerland, around this line.

Q. After you arrived in the United States in 1940, what work did you engage in? A. I came practically every year once or twice to the United States. In the summer of 1939 I could not come. I had a compound leg fracture, so I was already a year late, and I was on the board of several American corporations, and I wanted to oversee this business.

Q. When you speak of several American corporations, are you speaking of corporations owned, the stock which was owned by Uebersee? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did you limit your work to these corporations? A. No. I began some new enterprises. I established a small finance corporation.

573 — Q. What was the name of that? A. Westminster Finance Corporation, and I also had an interest in a machine shop.

Q. Would you state the name of that? A. It was called the Ergo Machine Works.

Q. Will you state what product or products did the Ergo Machine Works make? A. At the time I acquired it, they produced molds for plastic manufacturing, and it had subcontracts for airplane manufacturers, especially for aeronautics.

Q. Were those products ultimately for use in plane production? A. Yes, you can say that. In the beginning, I think most of it went to England.

Q. Were there any patents involved in the Ergo Machine Works proposition? A. I gave them one of my patents. I at this time had designed a fastener. I had read in the newspapers that fasteners were a bottleneck.

Q. What do you mean, a fastener? A. Small metal pieces where several sheets of metal, flaps, or cowling, are fastened together, and on every airplane they have several hundreds of them.

Q. You designed that? A. Yes, and at this time only one fastener existed, the Tods fastener, invented by 574 a Russian who came here in '28, and, in my opinion, it was poorly designed and expensively designed, and I thought I did it somewhat better.

Q. What was done with that fastener patent? A. I offered it to the Air Force, and it was taken on a shakedown test in Wright Field, and it was a 40-hour test, and it stood up as well as the other one, and it was so much lighter and less expensive, and they wanted me to go ahead with it and manufacture it.

Q. Do you know whether or not these fasteners were used in airplane production? A. The Air Force wanted Ergo to build some of them. In the meantime, I had been interned, and Ergo had been taken over by the Alien Property Custodian, and they refused to cooperate, and the fastener was then built by the millions by car-manufacturing and bus companies.

Q. What happened to the Ergo Machine Works that you are speaking about? Is that still active today? A. No; that was liquidated.

Q. Who was it liquidated by? A. It was liquidated. I never could quite understand why it was liquidated because at this time I was working on another process, a torch process, in cooperation with the War Production Board, and they even had given me A-1 priority so I could build my research equipment, and the tests 575 came out better than we thought, but in the meantime the APC took over and sold the whole thing on the auction block, and that was done over the protests of the War Production Board representatives.

Q. Now, do you know how much they got for it? A. I had invested, if I remember correctly, about a hundred and ten or a hundred and twenty thousand dollars in that, and they got about fifty thousand dollars out of it.

Q. What was your estimate of its real worth? A. I would not have sold it for half a million because it was a patent matter pending, and we had running contracts, and we had just begun to make profits.

Q. Now, Mr. von Opel, you stated the fact you were interned.

Do you remember approximately when you were interned? A. In February, '42.

Q. While you were in internment, did you continue your patent research? Did you go into it immediately? A. Not the first few months.

Q. Was there any reason for failing to do that? A. Yes, because we were kept in quite miserable circumstances.

Q. Where were you kept? A. In Miami, in the so-called Professional Building. It was only small rooms and 60 or 70 men in it, and it was rather unpleasant there.

576 Q. When did you, or did you commence further patent research? A. I was then transferred to Canton, Texas, and there I had room for myself, and I could go to work again.

Q. Did you remain in Texas thereafter or were you again transferred? A. Only for about half a year or, I think, about approximately a year.

Q. Where were you transferred then? A. Then I was re-transferred to Miami.

Q. While you were in Miami what work did you do while you were in internment? A. I worked with the Army Intelligence in Miami.

Q. Who did you work with? A. I remember in particular a Colonel Mettler. He was an Ordnance officer, and there was some work I was again interested in.

Q. In this connection, did you have occasion to confer with scientists and others at the request of the Army? A. My work consisted of, so to say, of several parts, partly covering new devices, partly they gave me a problem and I worked on it, and in other instances they had solutions and they asked me to review some and give my opinion on it.

Q. Now, did you continue to remain in Miami or 577 were you again transferred? A. The Army tried to keep me there, but the Immigration authorities wanted to send me back to Texas, but after investigation it was found it wasn't quite safe there, and I wasn't transferred.

Q. Why weren't you safe there? A. It was a Nazi camp.

Q. The Texas camp was a Nazi camp? A. Yes.

Q. Where were you transferred? A. I was transferred to New Orleans.

Q. What kind of camp was it in New Orleans? A. It was called, a so-called Jewish camp because most of it were German refugees.

Q. After your release from internment, did you do any particular work for the Army? A. Yes, I did.

Q. What was it? A. They asked my opinion on some matters concerning the German automobile industry, and industrial rebuilding in general, and I wrote several memorandums for them.

Q. Mr. von Opel, where were you educated? A. I went to school in Meintz, in high school, and as you call, as you say junior college, and then I went to technical hoch schule, which means the Institute of Technology 578 in Darmstadt.

Q. What degree? A. I was a graduate of mechanical engineering.

Q. What work was your family engaged in? A. My family, four branches of the family, originally four brothers, owned the Opel Automobile Company.

Q. What was the Automobile Opel Works? A. It was the biggest in Germany, if not the biggest concern in Europe, and after I had goten in, the biggest bicycle plant in the world.

Q. Were you ever connected with the Opel Works? A. Yes; definitely.

Q. For what period of time? A. It is hard to say because we were living right in the factory grounds. The factory got larger and larger and built around the house of my father.

Q. And the house was in the center of the plant proper? A. Yes, sir.

Q. While you were in the Opel Works, what were your duties in the plant in general? A. While I was still in high school, my father asked me to go through the regular routine of work, up through the ranks, and I was an apprentice there, and kept busy with all kinds of machine tools, and learning the trade, and even before graduation, I was already connected with the factory.
579 At first I had a position as foreman, and then superintendent, and later on as manager. I started in the factory plant, in the bicycle plant, and my father offered for me to go to the body division, but I could see at that time in the bicycle division, it was kind of neglected as part of the factory—

Mr. Burling (interposing): We cannot hear the witness, Your Honor.

Would you speak a little louder?

Mr. Gallagher: Speak louder, please.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now, do I understand you then, that the nature of your work took you into all branches of the factory? A. In the beginning I was mostly in the bicycle plant, busy with the bicycle plant, and at the time I took over we made 300 a month, and after two years, it was 1,000, and after four years, 3,600; twelve times the former production.

Q. Did you also work in the automobile part? A. Yes, sir. My father used me as a trouble shooter, so to say, in all kind of things, and later I was going to the truck division, and later on as designer of the big passenger cars, which was a special division.

Q. Now, in addition to the work in the plant proper, did you do any work for Opel outside of the plant? A. Racing. My family had always done it in Germany. It 580 is different from here now nobody pays any attention to any racing, but all through Europe the automobile sales are based upon racing research, and we had to go into that, and this kind of thing at this time.

Q. Did you operate Opel cars in these races? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Opel name appearing on it? A. Yes; certainly.

Q. In addition to the standard type car, did you develop or drive any other type of car? A. I designed the first eight cylinder in line. It was quite a success at the Berlin exhibition of 1928.

Q. Did you have anything to do with rockets? A. Yes. I may say so. I started this whole development, more or less. I was the first one to build it into an automobile, and the first one to design and fly a rocket airplane.

Q. Did you drive a rocket car, too? A. Yes, and I also built the first jet engine.

Q. The first jet engine? A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. von Opel, directing your attention to the year 1928, what was the legal setup for the plant? Was it a partnership or was it a corporation? A. Up to 1928 it was a partnership. In 1928 Adam Opel was in-581 corporated with 60,000,000 reichsmark capital.

Q. Now, after it was incorporated, what position did you then have with the plant? A. I was what is called—

Mr. Burling (interposing): Before you show it to the witness, will you show it to us?

Mr. Gallagher: It is in German.

Mr. Burling: I assume I know what you are going to use it for, but I must object to it with the name von Opel struck out.

Mr. Gallagher: I haven't offered it. I am going to ask the witness to identify it.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Will you state what this document is, Mr. von Opel? A. Yes, sir; the so-called notarized copy of the registration, the corporate registration of the State of Prussia, and it refers to the Adam Opel Korporation in Wiesbaden.

Q. Does it have any reference to you in there? A. Yes. It says: Vorstand, which means manager, and it states my name, and I was the only person, and I could sign for the enterprise solely.

Q. What was meant by that title that you mentioned in German, comparable to the United States? A. It is called vorstand, which means sole manager here,

582 Mr. Burling: I move to strike out the testimony on the ground that a description of the document is unnecessary if it is admissible, and improper if it is inadmissible. Fritz von Opel is underlined in red, and it is struck out.

By the Court:

Q. Tell me from your memory the position you had and what it meant. You remember what position you held at that time? A. Yes.

Q. Just tell us. A. Vorstand. I was vorstand for Adam Opel, A.G.

My father at the time was chairman of the board of directors, and my uncle also, but under German law no member of the board can be an officer of the corporation, and I was the sole officer.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. What was your salary at this time? A. This is the year 1928 and '29, and I got 4,000 marks a month, and three-quarters of one per cent of the net earnings.

At this time the corporation was making between twenty and thirty million reichsmark, and my total income was about two hundred to two hundred and fifty thousand marks.

Q. At that time did you have a contract with 583 the plant? A. Yes, I had a yearly contract.

Q. A yearly contract? A. Yes.

Q. Now, in '28, were negotiations commenced with General motors to sell the Opel plant? A. Yes.

Q. And did these negotiations result in a sale? A. Yes; after half a year.

The Court: 1928?

Mr. Gallagher: No; this will be '29. That was the sale. They commenced in '28, and the sale was in '29—April of '29, it has been identified.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now, at the time of this sale did you have any conversations with your father? A. Yes; I had many conversations concerning the sale.

Q. What was the nature of those conversations? A. I was the only one of the entire family who was against the sale.

Q. Can you state the reason why you were against it? A. Because it was my life business. I was educated for it, and I certainly didn't want to lose it.

Q. What was the result of the conversations you had with your father? A. He at the time told me he 584 would later on, if I so desired, he would set me up in business independently, but the trouble was, in this sales contract I was excluded from using my own name. That was part of it, so the Opel name could not be used by the Opel family in any competitive enterprise with General Motors as for a period of ten years.

Q. So, therefore, you were excluded from using your name to advertise products? A. Yes.

Q. Well, after General Motors had assumed ownership and control of this plant, what position did you occupy then? A. I still was manager, and then an American was appointed co-manager, and we were assigned jointly.

Q. Was this a satisfactory status from your viewpoint? A. No.

Q. Will you state why not? A. It was always a clash of opinions.

Q. Do you remember any? A. The American management had entirely different viewpoints on all kinds of things, but to give you a small example: At this time General Motors promoted Opel motors, and the very first thing they did was to scrap the eight cylinder in line because they thought that the design, because of heat expansion and so forth, was no good.

Q. We have eight cylinder in line motors in many 585 cars today? A. Yes, you could say so.

And they also changed the policies in regard to the bicycle dealers, and after three or four years, this whole business was entirely wrecked and they had to give it up.

Q. Did you have any discussions with your father about these difficulties with the General Motors staff? A. Yes; certainly. He had the same difficulties.

Q. What was the result of these discussions with your father? A. I told him that I would like to quit right away, and start a shop of my own somewhere.

Q. What was his reaction to that? A. He insisted that I should try to go on, and I would get my position back after a certain time, and it was just a matter of time of getting along with them, and I should go to America and study their methods, and if I still would find and decide that would not do, I would not like to go back in the corporation, he would then provide for me.

Mr. Gallagher: Would you like to recess at this time, Your Honor, because we are now about to set sail for America.

The Court: All right.

(Thereupon at 12:30 o'clock p.m., the luncheon recess was taken until 2 o'clock p.m.)

586 AFTER RECESS

(The trial was resumed at 2 o'clock p.m., at the expiration of the recess.)

Accordingly, FRITZ VON OPEL resumed the witness stand pursuant to the luncheon recess and testified further as follows:

Direct Examination (Continued)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I think when we left for the recess, that you had stated after further discussions with your father in 1929, you left for America.

Let me ask you this: At that time were you married or single? A. I just had married in October, '29.

Q. Where did you live with your bride at that time? A. I took an apartment in Wiesbaden.

Q. And after you left for America, did you maintain that apartment? A. No; I gave it up.

Q. Did you maintain any home there? A. No.

Q. Did you file any papers with respect to your departure? A. Yes; certainly.

587 Q. What was the nature of those papers? A. It is called abmeldung, meaning registration of departure.

Q. Does that state you are leaving the country, or what else? A. It says—you always have to register when you move from one place to the other in Germany, but abmeldung means I was registered for leaving for a foreign country.

Q. When you arrived in America, where did you live? A. I worked in different units of the Chevrolet Corporation. First I worked in the foundry in Saginaw, then in the forging plant, in Detroit, and in Toledo, and also the motor plant in Flint, Michigan.

Q. Did you maintain an apartment during your stay in America? A. No, I was living in hotels.

Q. Living in hotels? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long were you in America in toto? A. For about a year.

Q. After you left America, where did you go then? A. I went to Antwerp, Belgium.

Q. While you were in Antwerp, did you have occasion to go further to your father's home and have dis-
588 cussions with him? A. Yes. I was working with the General Motors Export Division in Antwerp, and I was staying in Brascard; near Antwerp. I rented a house there for a year.

Q. Where was your legal residence at that time? A. My legal residence was in Belguim. I had quite some difficulty in getting it.

Q. You stated you had some discussions with your father during the period that you were living in Antwerp? A. Yes.

Q. Directing your attention to the spring of 1931, and this is shortly after you had returned from America, did you have any discussions at that time with respect to your father's statements to you in 1929 about staying with General Motors for a while and if it didn't work out that he would set you up in business?

Mr. Burling: I again request that counsel not lead the witness. After all, this is Mr. Gallagher's witness.

Mr. Gallagher: Strike the question.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. You stated you had discussions with your father during the spring of 1931? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state the nature of those discussions? A. It was along that same line, and I told him now another year has passed, and I really think it is getting 589 time I get settled for myself.

Q. As a result of those discussions was any action taken by you? A. Yes.

Q. Will you state what that action was? A. At this time I wanted to start there an international patent exchange, swapping patents between Europe and America, and I friend of mine was also interested in it, and I acquired an option on a corporation for this purpose.

Q. Would you state the name of that corporation? A. It was Overseas Finance Corporation.

Q. Now, did you have an agreement with or discussions with your father about procuring that option? A. Oh, yes, definitely because otherwise—

Mr. Burling (interposing): May I inquire of counsel: Is Overseas Finance Corporation the same thing as Uebersee Finanz Korporation?

Mr. Gallagher: Yes, it is.

Mr. Burling: They are identical?

Mr. Gallagher: Identical.

Read the question.

(The last question and answer were read by the court reporter.)

A. (Continued) Otherwise, I would not have been able—
I didn't have money of my own and I would not have 590 been able to acquire the corporation.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. State what the nature of the discussion with your father was about that option. A. Yes. He told me, he said he was willing to give me a loan of about three and a half million Swiss francs.

At this time there was no foreign currency control in Germany, and he was free to dispose of money he had in Switzerland.

Q. Now, did he make those funds available to you in the spring of '31? A. No. I had an option running for about a year until, I think, it was from April until December, and I didn't intend to return to Switzerland, to go to Switzerland definitely before the end of the year, so I just waited before I exercised the option.

Q. Did he participate in the option in any wise, by way of guarantee or otherwise? A. Yes; that is what I just have told. He promised me to put at my disposal some money necessary to fulfill my obligation to finance this corporation.

Q. Now, directing your attention to the summer of 1931 —strike that.

Was there any action taken immediately at that time with respect to going forward with exercising this 591 option? A. No, but all of a sudden the foreign funds control came in, and he had to report to the German authorities, and he was also told to file application, that he could not dispose of the funds we had promised.

Q. I show you a letter of September 9, 1931, identified as Defendant's Exhibit No. 1, a letter to the Revenue Office in Wiesbaden, from your father, together with an exhibit identified as Defendant's Exhibit 1, an enclosure attached to Defendant's Exhibit No. 1, and ask you if that is the application that your father filed with the Foreign Currency Control authorities with respect to the Swiss francs? A. That seems to be the translation of it.

Q. That seems to be the translation of it. A. Yes. That is the translation of this application.

Mr. Gallagher: Have you seen this, Your Honor?

The Court: I do not think I have.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now, during that period of August, 1931, and September, 1931, you were still living in Antwerp; is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any further discussions with respect to the general economic situation in Europe at that time and foreign currency legislation? A. Yes, with many people. The situation got worse and worse, and 592 I finally decided to go to Ruesselsheim to see my father about it.

Q. Did you go to Ruesselsheim to see him? A. Yes.

Q. Did you have any discussion there with him? A. Quite a long discussion.

Q. What was the substance of that discussion? A. I just went over all these former discussions again, and I gave him all my reasons why I didn't want to stay with General Motors, and why he should look after me now. Especially I was afraid that we would not get to transfer all these Swiss francs to me permitted.

Q. You are referring to Defendant's Exhibit No. 1? A. Yes.

Mr. Gallagher: Will you mark these?

(Two documents were accordingly marked as Plaintiff's Exhibits Nos. 50 and 51, for identification.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I show you now a cablegram, dated September 16, 1931, stamped September 17, 1931, addressed to John Thomas Smith, vice president, General Motors, and I will ask you if you sent that cable, which bears the signature, Fritz von Opel, Geconanver, Antwerp? A. That was the cable address of General Motors, Antwerp. I sent 593 it from there.

Q. Was this sent as the result of a discussion with your father? A. Yes.

Q. I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 51, a cable dated September 21, 1931, addressed to Fritz von Opel, Geconanver, Antwerp, and signed by John Thomas Smith, and ask you if you received that cable? A. Yes; that was his reply.

Q. This was the reply to Plaintiff's Exhibit 50? A. Yes.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer these in evidence.

(The documents previously marked for identification Plaintiff's Exhibits 50 and 51 were received in evidence.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Did you have any further discussion with your father now after the forwarding and receipt of these answers from John Thomas Smith? A. I went to Buesselsheim or Wiesbaden at the end of September and looked into this so-called escrow agreement.

Mr. Gallagher: Let me have number 6, Plaintiff's No. 6.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. You are referring to Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 6,
594 which has previously been introduced (handing a document to the witness)? A. No; that is not it.

Mr. Gallagher: Strike that. I am sorry.

By the Court:

Q. I want to take you back a minute. Where was this Overseas Finance Company, Limited. Where was that organized? A. It was organized—it was a Swiss corporation.

Q. A Swiss corporation? A. Yes; in Zurich, Switzerland.

Q. When did it come into existence? A. It was founded in 1922.

Q. And what was the purpose of that company? A. They were doing financial transactions in general. It belonged to a friend of mine and it had become dormant, and they wanted to use it for other purposes.

Q. Financial transactions where? A. I could not tell you. I didn't own the corporation at the time.

Q. I thought you said financial transactions— A. Yes; financial transaction, but I don't know the details of those financial transactions.

Q. But the home of the corporation was in Zurich, Switzerland? A. Yes; it was a Swiss corporation.

595 Mr. Gallagher: It has been stipulated that the corporation is Swiss, Your Honor.

The Court: Now, I understand from Mr. Burling's question, that you came to the point where they became merged, merged in the plaintiff's corporation?

Mr. Gallagher: No, that is not quite so. The option was never exercised.

The Court: I understood him to ask you the question if this Overseas was the same as the plaintiff.

Mr. Gallagher: It is.

The Court: Are you going to bring that out later and in what respect?

Mr. Gallagher: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Gallagher: I might explain that Mr. Ingoldsby suggested, and I think it might be proper to explain to Your Honor that this option agreement, giving the parties the right to sell, or buy Overseas, was never exercised because in our proof, subsequently, we will show the father never did obtain a license with respect to the Swiss francs, and therefore the option was ended.

The Court: All right. I was not following it. I have it now.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now, I believe you stated that on arriving in 596 Ruesselsheim or Wiesbaden the end of September or the beginning of October, you became aware of the escrow agreement; is that correct? A. Yes. If I remember correctly, I told you my father a day or two previously had sent me a copy.

Q. And that is Plaintiff's Exhibit 3, a translation of it, or is that the English? A. No, it was—it seems to be a copy of the original.

Q. Now, after discussing this escrow agreement, as you have stated, with your father, what action did you next take? A. I read the foreign currency regulations, and I found out, at least as far as a non-lawyer could say, that it was permissible for him to make me a gift of these Opel shares, and that is what I asked him to do, and I gave my reasons for it.

Q. Would you state again the reasons, Mr. Opel? A. First I told him that the entire family of my seven sisters and cousins were taken care of, and that I was the only one who had not a penny to his name, and I had given up my contract, which had paid me a quarter of a million marks a year, and I said I would not like to return to Germany, and that this, apparently, was the last chance for him to set me up outside of Germany, and I also told him
597 that, after all, this contract would not mean very much, as if it was exercised by General Motors, he would get reichsmarks and he had plenty of reichsmarks, and he would have to keep them inside of Germany, whereas for me, as I was called deyisen auslander, I could get that in dollars and stay in America or Switzerland—anyhow, outside of Germany.

Q. How many reichsmarks did your father have in Germany at the time? What was his wealth at that time, forgetting about the option? A. Yes. I think he declared property in Germany, and you have to declare your property in Germany every second year, and at this time I think it was around twenty-one or twenty-two million reichsmarks.

Q. That was the tax assessment value? A. That was only so to say taxable value, and the real value was considerably higher.

Q. What would you say the figure approximately would be? A. It depends on the amount of real estate. I would say at least twenty-five million, if not more.

Q. In the course of this discussion with your father about the escrow agreement, and the situation that you have just pointed out, was any reference made at that time about the Swiss franc situation and his application? A. Yes. That is what I told him.

598 I said to him: If you had given me the Swiss francs outright in April, I would not be here. They would be mine, but now this regulation came in between and the only thing you promised me was a loan, and even if we get permission, I would have to return that money after a year or two, and it would be no good to me anyhow.

Q. Now, as a result of those discussions with your father, what steps did you take? A. He told me, he said if I would prove to him by a competent lawyer that this gift was legal, he would make it to me, and a number of provisions.

Q. Did he make any suggestion as to whom you should see? A. Yes. Our family lawyer at the time was Dr. Hachenburg, and he even insisted that I should pay for this visit to Hachenburg.

Q. He even insisted what? A. That I should pay for the visit to Hachenburg; I should pay the lawyer's bill.

Q. Pursuant to this discussion, did you see Dr. Hachenburg? A. Yes; I went there on the afternoon of October 2nd.

Q. And as you previously testified, it was on that occasion that he gave you this document, which has been offered in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit 9, entitled Fundamen-

599 tal Considerations; is that not true? A. Yes; he dictated that at the end of our discussion in the afternoon.

Q. How long did you have a discussion with him? Do you have any recollection at all? A. It was a quite lengthy discussion because we went into all the different angles, and we discussed, as you say, the impositions my father wanted made in the contract, and he was mostly concerned getting me on an even basis with my sister, and he said: If I make you this gift, you will have an income of three or four hundred thousand dollars a year, which is much more than your sister, and if you get fifty or sixty thousand for this, that was about the salary I had in the factory, and the rest I should, he said, account for with my sister.

Q. By account, what do you mean by that, Mr. von Opel? A. It should be added to the capital, and in case of my parents death, it should be considered as given to me, not only the capital but also the 80 per cent; not used by me.

Q. That is the example that Dr. Kronstein gave His Honor here in court? A. Yes.

Q. As a result of this conversation with Dr. Hachenburg, you returned, if I understand you correctly, from Mannheim to your father's home with this Exhibit 9 in your possession? A. Yes, I did.

600 And as you previously testified, you then discussed this outline and the suggestion of Dr. Hachenburg? A. Yes, and he told me immediately that the outline was too long, and he said he didn't like this complicated lawyer's language, and it should be simplified.

Q. Did your father make any statement at that time with respect to any of the provisions referred to in this outline which Dr. Hachenburg had given you? A. Yes. I think there was mention made of a holding corporation, and he didn't like this word holding corporation for some reason of his, and he wanted that stricken out.

Q. Do you recollect any reason he stated at the time? A. I think holding corporations under German viewpoint of tax declaration were was unpopular in Germany as at the time in the beginning of the New Deal.

Q. After having had discussion with your father, can you state what action was thereafter taken? A. This letter of October 3rd arrived.

Q. You mean by that, Plaintiff's Exhibit 7, which has heretofore been introduced? A. Yes, and the only paragraph my father was interested in, that Dr. Hachenburg stated it was a legal transaction.

Q. What was then done, and we are talking about October 5, 1931, Mr. von Opel. What action was taken by you 601 or your father or mother or all of you? A. My father gave the two documents, the letter of Hachenburg, and this what you call, fundamental considerations, to Dr. Wronker-Flatow, and he told him to cut out the whole provision and shorten it somewhat and put it in a little bit more easily understandable language, and he said it should not have more than a page or a page and a half, and he should not spend too much time on it, the details are not so important.

Mr. Gallagher: Let me have Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 5.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Did Dr. Wronker-Flatow prepare a gift agreement thereafter? A. Yes; the same day.

Q. The same day? A. Yes.

Q. When during that day? Do you recollect?

Mr. Burling: Will you fix what date this is?

Mr. Gallagher: This is October 5, 1931.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Was it in the morning or in the afternoon? What is your recollection on that? A. There was one mistake made this morning. I think this mail, the letter of Dr. Hachenburg, wasn't addressed to Wiesbaden, but to the office in Ruesselsheim and received there in the morning.

602 Q. In the morning of October 5th? A. Yes.

Q. Will you state when Dr. Wronker-Flatow prepared this gift agreement, which is in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit 5? A. That was prepared on October 5th.

Q. Will you state whether or not that document was signed on that day? A. That is, of course, an English translation. It is not the original.

Q. Yes; we have substituted that. A. My father signed it first, and I signed it second in his office in Ruesselsheim at the factory.

Q. And you note thereon that your mother's signature appeared there? A. Yes.

Q. I, the wife, Marta von Opel, agree to the above agreement, and signed by her? A. Yes; she signed it in the afternoon, after our return home to Wiesbaden.

Mr. Gallagher: Let me have Plaintiff's 4.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. After the signing of this agreement on October 5, 1931, did you have any further discussions with your father 603 or mother or Dr. Wronker-Flatow? A. Before we went home; certainly, yes.

Q. And, now,— A. (Interposing) I spoke to my father too about the necessary secrecy. I was afraid at the time that the Government would put in some retroactive legislation making this gift impossible retroactively, and I asked of him not to speak to anyone about it, so that it would not become known.

Q. When you speak of retroactive legislation, just what do you mean by that, Mr. von Opel? A. Legislation which here you call, I think, ex post facto. That means it doesn't work from the day the legislation is published, but retroactively, covering a period back.

Q. Do I understand you correctly, that you mean you feared if this gift became known, that the foreign currency authorities would issue some regulation as soon as they knew it and make it effective to a date in the past? A. Yes. I thought, of course, they would not do that for many years, but I thought for a short period back they may do that, and that is the reason I asked my father especially not to report the gift tax, but to wait until the last day possible.

Under the German laws there is a three months period within which the gift tax has to be paid, and I asked that my father wait until the last day with payment for the reports.

604 Q. Did you ever later hear or at that time were you aware of any legislation which was retroactively adopted and enforced in Germany? A. I think the most spectacular case was the case of Van der Lubbe, a Dutchman, who alleged fired the Reichstag, and I know some outstanding Americans went to Germany to protest against the procedure.

Q. Getting back to the signing of the gift agreement, Plaintiff's 5, in the afternoon or early evening of October 5, 1931, what was the nature of your discussions, if any, thereafter, and I will now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 4.

I also hand you 4-A in evidence, which appears to be a certification by the United States counsel with respect to Plaintiff's 4, which is the power of attorney to cover this.

Now, will you continue, Mr. von Opel, and state what the discussions were after the signing of the gift agreement? A. Yes. The discussion concerns the escrow agreement itself, I explained to my father that it was ridiculous not to immediately contact General Motors and put the gold clause into this contract, and there was no safety clause in the contract. It read it was based on reichsmarks, and at this time it was apparent that the reichsmark might be inflated, and that is the reason that I suggested to immediately contact Smith, and upon second consideration, I thought it might be better that instead of me wiring

605 Smith, because I know he was coming to Europe anyhow, I thought it would nail him down at that time if we would say that myself or my father was coming, and that was the reason that my father's name appears in the—

Q. (Interposing) Just a minute, please.

Now, the cablegram you just spoke about was to John Thomas Smith of General Motors, signed by your father, and sent on the 5th of October, 1931; is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I will show you now Plaintiff's 52 for identification and ask you if that is the document? A. Yes; that is it.

Q. Did you receive an answer to that? A. Yes.

Q. I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 53, purporting to be a cablegram, dated October 5, '31, and addressed to Wilhelm von Opel by John Thomas Smith, and ask you if that is the answer received. A. Yes.

Mr. Gallagher: I offer them in evidence.

Mr. Burling: Are these documents that have been obtained from the defendant and by arrangement with them?

Mr. Gallagher: Yes.

Mr. Burling: I have no objection.

606 (The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit Nos. 52 and 53.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Will you tell me the nature of the wire or cable, Plaintiff's Exhibit 52? Is that a night letter or a straight wire? What would you term that? A. That is apparently a straight wire.

Q. Was there any particular reason for sending a straight wire? A. Oh, yes, because I knew from the former exchange of cables that Mr. Smith was about to sail for Europe on October 15th, in the middle of October, and I tried to intercept him in New York before he sailed.

Q. After you received the answer from Mr. Smith—what date was that that you received that? Do you recollect? Was that the 5th or 6th? A. It was, I think, it came in October 6th.

Q. October 6th? A. Yes.

Q. And after you received the cablegram from Mr. Smith, what did you next do? A. We already the day before, on October 5th, Dr. Wronker-Flatow had suggested a power of attorney, which I should take along should I go to 607 America, and this power was signed in Frankfort in the American General Counsel's office by my father on October 6th.

Q. And Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 4 and 4-A, which have been heretofore offered, are the documents you refer to? A. They seem to be copies.

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, we have a whole series of some ten or twelve exhibits, if you will give us an opportunity for a minute or two, and we will have the clerk mark them, and we want them to interrogate the witness.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now, did you have any discussions with respect to reasons for procuring a power of attorney, which is Plaintiff's Exhibit 4? A. Oh, yes; definitely.

Dr. Wronker-Flatow, before he became counsel of General Motors, was counsel of duPont, of Kodak, and other American corporations in Germany, and he had quite a lot of international experience, and he told me, he said, I should not depend too much upon a German gift contract in America, but should take a power of attorney along to accomplish my purpose a little speedier, and in my opinion speed and secrecy is the two principles we had to attend to.

Mr. Gallagher: Now, these documents which are going to be submitted, and which will be identified and then 608 offered, have already been answered by the notice to admit of both parties.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now, those were the reasons you stated why the power of attorney was procured? A. He also advised us to have sent our signature card there, too, to the National City Bank so our signatures would be available at the National City Bank.

Q. And was that done? A. Yes; it was also done.

Q. Did you leave thereafter for America? A. Yes; immediately after.

Q. On what date? A. I don't remember whether I boarded the boat in Bremen or in Cherbourg. One can gain about one and a half days in boarding it in Cherbourg because the steamer goes from Bremen to Southampton, and from Southampton to Cherbourg, and from Frankfort, where we were living, is about an even distance.

Q. Did you take any documents with you when you left for America? A. I took the gift deed, yes. I took the power of attorney, and the signature card was sent by mail.

Q. While you were on the boat on your way to America, did you have occasion to send any cablegram to 609 America? A. Yes. From the steamer I sent a cablegram to the trustee of the escrow agreement, to the National City Bank.

Q. I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 54 for identification, a cablegram to the National City Bank in New York, dated October 13, 193., signed Fritz von Opel, and ask you if that is the cablegram which you sent? A. It is a radiogram sent from the steamer, not a cablegram.

Q. That was sent by you? A. Yes.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer this Plaintiff's 54 in evidence.

Mr. Burling: There is a mix-up, Your Honor. There are two Plaintiff's 54.

Mr. Baum: There are books which were 54 to 57.

Mr. Gallagher: I am sorry. Change this to Plaintiff's 58.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. You have been speaking about what is now identified as Plaintiff's Exhibit 58; is that correct, Mr. von Opel? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer 58 in evidence, a cable to the National City Bank.

You will have to change all those numbers, Mr. Clerk.

The Deputy Clerk: Why can't you call them "A"?

Mr. Gallagher: We want to keep the same order of numbers as long as possible.

The Court: Take your time and correct them.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Inasmuch as a couple of numbers were omitted, it necessitates changing the numbers of all these.

What is the last exhibit you now have?

The Deputy Clerk: 82.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Oh, no, no.

Mr. Gallagher: 58 is the last.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Should not the next number be 59? In other words, as I understand it, the books and records, which were the last documents identified, were Plaintiff's exhibits before the papers which have been shown to Mr. von Opel.

The last number was what—57?

The one just handed to the clerk should be 58, and this should be 59 and run chronologically from there on.

Mr. Gallagher: That is correct.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Would you mind changing the number on this, for example, 55 should be 59, and so on through the list. Do you understand that?

The Deputy Clerk: I took it from your last exhibit number, which was 50, and I handed you back 50, 51, 52, 53, and so on in rotation.

Mr. Gallagher: You have to renumber these be-611 cause we have already got Plaintiff's 54, 55, 56, and 57. We are keeping the same numbers as in the deposition.

The Court: Suppose you take five minutes to straighten it out. I will take a recess.

(Thereupon a short recess was had, during which Mr. Gallagher asked that the following statement be shown in the record):

Mr. Gallagher: The cablegram referred to of October 13, 1931, to the National City Bank, from von Opel, identified as 57 and 58, has been offered in evidence as Plaintiff's 54, on correction by the clerk.

(At the conclusion of the recess, the following occurred):

612 Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, I wish to take the burden off of the clerk, where the mistake came from our error in originally having the books and records identified.

The Court: All right.

The Deputy Clerk: Thank you, Mr. Gallagher.

Mr. Barling: Your Honor, Mr. Gallagher is very courteous in taking the burden off of the clerk. May I ask him also to take the burden off of us? We are now confused as to what exhibit is what. But rather than take up the time now to straighten it out, may I suggest, Your Honor, that the plaintiff furnish us with a table of exhibits, the way they are now numbered?

Mr. Gallagher: We will be glad to do so.

I might say, Your Honor, that last document is now in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit 54.

(The document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 54.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. That cablegram, Plaintiff's Exhibit 54, Mr. von Opel, requests that you have a conference on a confidential matter: that you are arriving on the following afternoon, the 14th of October.

When you arrived in New York, what did you do? A. I went immediately to the National City Bank to find out the name of the officer who was in charge of this 613 escrow agreement.

Q. Did you find out who he was? A. Yes, I tried to find out, and found it out.

Q. What was his name? A. His name was vice president Pratt, of the National City Bank.

Q. And did you have a conversation with him? A. Yes.

Q. And what was the nature of that conversation? A. I asked him whether it would be possible for the trustee to accept me as a new party to the contract.

Q. Did you discuss with him the power of attorney, you state, which has previously been offered in evidence? A. No; I asked him first whether he would accept me as a new party. I told him about the deed of gift, and he asked me if it was an instrument made in America. And I said no, it was a German deed of gift. And he told me it would be rather complicated, that not only his lawyers but some German expert would have to go into the matter to find out the extent of this gift agreement.

I asked him how long that would take, and he said a number of days or weeks. So I immediately said, "I have taken a power of attorney along." I said I had expected it, and was so advised by counsel. And I showed him the power of attorney.

614 Q. Did he state to you what action you should take, or what action did you take after the conversation? A. After this conversation, either the same day or one of the next days, I filed this power of attorney with the National City Bank. But the next day I went to General Motors and used this power there.

Q. Whom did you see at General Motors? A. I saw General Counsel John Thomas Smith.

Q. And you had a discussion with him, did you? A. Yes.

Q. What was the nature of that discussion? A. The first discussion was whether General Motors would be willing to put a gold clause into this agreement, meaning to establish a relation between the reichsmark and the dollar, or gold.

Q. And did Mr. Smith give you any information at that time? A. Not immediately. He thought it over, I think, a day or so, and then the corporation refused. And I terminated the conference.

Q. I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 6 in evidence, a letter dated October 17, 1931, addressed to General Motors and signed Wilhelm von Opel, per Fritz von Opel, attorney in fact, and ask if that is the termination letter. A. Yes, sir. It is a copy.

615 Q. Well, it is the same thing in here, Mr. von Opel. I note that in that termination letter, Mr. von Opel, it calls for six separate payments. Was there any reason for that? A. Oh, yes. I saw that the reichsmark exchange rate in New York might be rather unstable, and I didn't want to get the rate of exchange based upon any law day. So I asked the corporation to base it upon the average of six days.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer in evidence Plaintiff's Exhibit 55, Your Honor, a letter of October 17, 1931, addressed to the National City Bank by John Thomas Smith, with respect to this matter.

(The document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 55.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 56 for identification, Mr. von Opel, a letter dated October 19, 1931, to the National City Bank, and signed Fritz von Opel. A. Yes.

Q. Will you state whether or not that letter was signed by you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you address that to the bank? A. Yes, sir, I did.

616 Q. Is that with reference to this same matter? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer this letter in evidence, Your Honor.

(Document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 56.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. In your conversations with Mr. Smith, did he aid you at all with respect to any introduction to the bank officials? A. Yes, I think a few days later he gave me a kind of introductory letter to the bank.

Q. I show you a letter of October 19, 1931, addressed to Mr. E. F. Regan, assistant vice president, National City Bank, and ask you if this is the letter you refer to. A. Yes.

Q. It is identified as Plaintiff's Exhibit 57. A. Yes; it was given to me two days after I terminated the contract.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 57.

(Document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 57.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I now show you a letter, Plaintiff's Exhibit 58, Mr. von Opel, a letter of October 20, 1931, addressed to 617 General Motors, by Wilhelm von Opel, by Fritz von Opel, attorney in fact, and ask you if you sent that letter to General Motors. A. Yes, I did.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 58, Your Honor.

(Document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 58.)

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 59, Your Honor, a letter of October 20, 1931, addressed to the General Motors Corporation, attention Mr. John Thomas Smith, signed by G. J. Kenny, assistant trust officer of the National City Bank.

(Document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 59.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I will now show you, Mr. von Opel, Plaintiff's Exhibit 60 for identification, a letter of October 20, 1931, sent to General Motors by Fritz von Opel. Did you send that letter? A. Yes, sir. I did.

Mr. Gallagher: I will offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 60, Your Honor.

(Document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 60.)

618 By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. And I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 61, Mr. von Opel, a letter of October 20, 1931, addressed to General Motors, signed by Wilhelm von Opel, by Fritz von Opel, attorney in fact, and I will ask you if you addressed that letter to General Motors. A. Yes; it all concerns the matter of the last three letters, the purchase of General Motors stock.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 61, Your Honor.

(Document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 61.)

Mr. Gallagher: I also offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 62, a letter to Wilhelm von Opel, in care of John Thomas Smith, dated October 20, 1931, from J. P. Morgan & Company.

(Document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 62.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I show you a letter, Plaintiff's Exhibit 63, Mr. von Opel, dated October 20, 1931, addressed to General Motors, signed Wilhelm von Opel, by Fritz von Opel, attorney in fact. Did you send that letter to General Motors? A. Yes. I think it must be identical with one of the first letters.

619 Q. It is? I am sorry.

Mr. Gallagher: No. 63, Your Honor—I will offer it.

(Document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 63.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 64 for identification, a letter dated October 22, 1931, signed by John Thomas Smith, addressed to Dr. Fritz von Opel, Plaza Hotel, New York. Did you receive that letter? A. Yes, I received it.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 64, Your Honor.

(Document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 64.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I now show you a letter of October 23, 1931, addressed to John Thomas Smith, by Fritz von Opel, and ask you if you sent that letter, Plaintiff's Exhibit 65 for identification. A. Yes.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 65, Your Honor.

(Document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 65.)

620 By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now, during this period of time, Mr. von Opel, from October 17, 1931, until October 23, 1931, you were acting, as I understand it, under the power of attorney which had been given to you by your father and which is in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit 4, is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 47, which is in evidence, a letter addressed to Fritz von Opel, dated September 22, 1933, signed by Assistant Vice President, admitted by the parties to this action to have been sent and received, and quoting therein a cable received from the Deutsche Bank & Disconto Gesellschaft in Frankfurt, on October 24, 1931, and ask you whether or not that power of attorney was received and whether or not you acted pursuant to it. A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Gallagher: Plaintiff's Exhibit 47, which is in evidence, I believe, and I will offer it if it is not.

(Document previously marked for identification Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 47 was received in evidence.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 66 for identification, a letter dated October 28, 1931, addressed to the National City Bank, attention Mr. Regan, signed Wilhelm von Opel by Fritz von Opel, attorney in fact, and ask 621 you whether or not you sent this letter. A. Yes. It was sent, and it is a new power of attorney.

Q. I see. What was the substance of that letter? What was the purpose of it, Mr. von Opel? A. Under the escrow agreement, General Motors had to make payment within four weeks; and to simplify matters they wanted to pay to my father's account there. And I, as his attorney, instructed them to do it.

Q. And what does this letter do thereafter? A. May I see it again?

Q. Does that letter constitute a transfer from your father's account to your account? A. Oh, yes. This is the second operation.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 66, Your Honor.

(Document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 66.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now, Mr. von Opel, did you at this time give any instructions to the bank with respect to payments of income and dividends and interest and so forth?

Mr. Burling: Will you specify the bank you are referring to, please?
622 Mr. Gallagher: The National City Bank, or the City Bank.

Mr. Burling: Will counsel please specify which bank he is referring to?

Mr. Gallagher: It is my information that by virtue of a merger, it is one bank, operating under one or two names.

Mr. Burling: I think they are owned together, but operated separately, Your Honor.

The Court: I guess perhaps the witness will have to tell us.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. This last exhibit, Plaintiff's Exhibit 66, is addressed to the National City Bank, is it not, Mr. von Opel? A. Yes.

Q. And it asks them to transfer any securities or cash they are now holding, or may hold in the future, for your account to the City Bank Farmers Trust Company? A. Yes.

Q. For the account of Fritz von Opel? A. Yes.

Q. Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. So that we are now talking about moneys in the City Bank Farmers Trust Company, which, however, I understand is the same thing as the National City Bank.

623 A. It is shown here on the exhibit by the A and B.

Q. All right. Now, did you give the City Bank any instructions with respect to your father's account? And I show you plaintiff's exhibit 69 for identification. A. Yes. I instructed them specifically. It was only a transfer account. The money was in there only for a day, going in and going out immediately. And I specifically instructed them not to report anything to my father.

Q. Would that be the City Bank you gave those instructions to, or the National City Bank? A. That was the National City Bank, because my father's account was only at the National City Bank.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 69, Your Honor.

(Document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 69.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 70 for identification, which purports to be a custodian account for Fritz von Opel, Main A/C, City Bank Farmers Trust Company, and ask you with respect to the second page there, or the first page inside the folder, whether or not that is your signature on that document. A. Yes, it is.

624 Q. I note there a line which states "My legal residence is Belgium." A. Yes.

Q. Did you state that? A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Turning to the next page, page 2 inside this folder, I note therein a Custodian account audit sheet. Did you sign this sheet? A. No, I didn't.

Q. Does this sheet contain thereon certain instructions, apparently contained thereon certain instructions? A. Yes; I think I gave those instructions.

Q. And you gave those instructions? A. Yes, I think so.

Q. I note therein it states again "Legal residence," and your residence is stated "Belgium." Is that correct? A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Now, would you state what the substance was of the instructions that you gave to the bank? A. I instructed them to transfer 20 per cent of the balance in the main income account to a custodian account Fritz von Opel, and 80 per cent to the principal von Opel main account. And I further asked them to send the statements to me and one to my father.

625 Q. What would the statement with respect to your father be? Does it state thereon? A. A statement in respect to the income.

Q. With respect to the income? A. Yes.

Q. I note thereon a forwarding address or an address "Rupenhorn 11, Berlin-Spandau, Germany." Could you state what that address is? A. That was a forwarding address I left with the banks. They wanted to reach me by wire, and I told them that would be the first place they could reach me.

Q. I see.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 70, Your Honor.

(Document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 70.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 71, Mr. von Opel, which is stipulated between the parties to be a memorandum from the files of the City Bank, dated November 17, 1931, addressed to Miss Cantrell, of the Remittance Department, and signed by B. D. Shapiro, Custodian Administration, and ask you if you gave to the Custodian Administration or to some other officer of the bank the instructions which appear therein. A. I don't re-

626 member this.

Q. You don't remember it? A. No.

Q. Reading it, did you recollect that that would be the substance of a conversation you might have had or any instructions you might have gvien? A. It might be

Mr. Burling: We will admit that that was kept in the regular course of business; we will not object to your offering it.

Mr. Gallagher: We now offer it as Plaintiff's Exhibit 71, Your Honor.

(Document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 71.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. And I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 68, Mr. von Opel, for identification, and ask if that, which appears to be a transcript of account of Geheimrat Wilhelm von Opel, and ask if that apparently reflects the transactions in General Motors stock. A. Yes, it does.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 68.

(Document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 68.)

627 By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Mr. von Opel, would you not step down from the stand for a moment, and take a look at this chart, which has been identified in smaller facsimile fashion as Plaintiff's Exhibit 80, a copy of which I would like to give to His Honor, and offer.

Mr. Burling: Do I understand this is offered in evidence?

Mr. Gallagher: Yes.

Mr. Burling: I object, on the ground that it contains several errors. It does not accord with the documents—

The Court: I cannot receive it in evidence, over the objection.

Mr. Gallagher: We will withdraw the offer at this time, Your Honor.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now, Mr. von Opel, in the light of the testimony which you have heretofore given, and the documents which have been introduced in evidence, will you stand at this side of this chart and point out to the Court what has happened to the Opel shares up until this time, giving dates as they appear?

Mr. Burling: Do you mean up until 1948?

Mr. Gallagher: No—up until the time we are now at in his testimony, the latter part of October, when he has transferred from his father's account to his own account the funds and securities.

628 The Witness (indicating): We are now here to this account, at the point called B.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. And does this chart reflect accurately where the shares have flown, that originally was to go into this account? A. Some shares in here, and some payment over to the National City Bank (indicating).

Q. And in the account originally by virtue of Plaintiff's Exhibit 4 in evidence, the funds passed through this account? Is that correct? A. Yes; that is a transfer account.

Q. And now by virtue of the notification which you gave to the bank on October 28, 1931, the funds and securities are all in or coming in to this account marked B? Is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is all. (The witness returned to the stand.) Now, Mr. von Opel, did your father ever, at any time then or from that time until his death, ever call on you—

Mr. Burling: I am very sorry to interrupt you. I do have to ask you a question about B.

Mr. Gallagher: All right.

Mr. Burling: I object to the question on the ground that the document which has just been marked—and perhaps I could save time later by stating what 629 my objection is. I contend that the document marked "Fritz von Opel, Custodian."

The Court: I don't believe the matter is in dispute.

Mr. Gallagher: You mean the word "custodian" should be on there (indicating chart)?

Mr. Burling: Yes.

Mr. Gallagher: It is on the exhibits introduced. I will write it in there (writing on the chart). Is that satisfactory?

Mr. Burling: Thank you.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Did your father call on you for any payment of income or payment of dividends, Mr. von Opel? A. No, never.

Q. At that time or at any time until the time of his death? A. No; never.

Q. Did you ever pay any income or dividends to your father? A. No, I did not.

Q. Or your mother? A. No.

Q. Did your mother ever ask you for any payment of income or dividends? A. No, she did not.

Q. Did you ever receive any instructions from your father on how to invest your money? A. No.

Q. Did you ever receive any instructions from your mother on how to invest your money? A. No.

Q. Did you ever consult with your father prior to making investments with this money? A. No.

Q. Did you ever receive any instructions from him as to how or where you were to invest this money? A. No.

Q. Now, Mr. von Opel, we are down to B on this exhibit, Plaintiff's Exhibit 80, I believe it is. Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. To go ahead for just a moment, so that we can get ourselves further down on this chart, I will now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 72, a letter of May 9, 1932, addressed to the City Bank Farmers Trust Company, by the Overseas Finance Corporation, identified as Plaintiff's Exhibit 73, requesting the bank to open an account in their name, and attaching a power of attorney for Fritz von Opel.

And I show you also Plaintiff's Exhibit 74—

Mr. Burling: Would you be kind enough to ask the witness to identify the signatures on that document?

They are somewhat illegible.

631 Mr. Gallagher: I surely will.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Have you any idea whose they are, or can you identify any of the signatures on that document? A. One is Dr. Frankenberg's signature, and the other one seems to be Dr. Meyer's signature.

Q. Dr. Meyer's, you think? A. Yes. It is rather unreadable.

Q. I show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 74, which purports to be a power of attorney to the bank for Fritz von Opel, dated May 9, 1932. A. Pardon me, I think it is Dr. Henggeler's signature.

Q. Dr. Henggeler's signature, rather than Dr. Meyer's? A. Yes.

Q. I also show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 72, a letter of May 31, 1932, addressed to the City Bank Farmers Trust Company by you, directing that they transfer to a custodian account in the name of Uebersee Finanz Korporation all the cash and securities now held by you in your main principal and income account, with the exception of 47,000 shares of General Motors stock which is to remain in your account subject to further instructions. And I ask you to read that and I ask you if you sent that letter. A. Yes, I did.

632 Q. And I also show you a letter identified as Plaintiff's Exhibit 75, dated May 31, 1932, addressed to the City Bank Farmers Trust Company, and signed by you as attorney for Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, and ask if you sent that letter. A. Yes, I did.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer these documents, Plaintiff's Exhibits 72, 73, 74, and 75, in evidence, Your Honor.

(Documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit Nos. 72, 73, 74, and 75.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now, would you step down for just a moment, Mr. von Opel, and point out where, on this chart, Plaintiff's Exhibit 81 for identification, the funds now are? A. They are in this account C.

Q. Thank you.

Mr. Burling: I object to that, Your Honor, on the ground that the documents just offered in evidence on their face disclose that the account was for Uebersee Finanz Korporation, but omits to indicate that the account was for Uebersee as trustee for Fritz von Opel.

Mr. Gallagher: All right; we will strike that for a moment.

Mr. Burling: The chart does not reflect plaintiff's 633 own argument.

The Court: What was the question?

Mr. Gallagher: There is an objection, Your Honor. I had asked Mr. von Opel to identify where the money now was. He stated it had come from this account down to this account (indicating on chart), with the exception of forty-seven odd thousand shares of General Motors.

Mr. Burling objected, on the ground that the evidence we have introduced does not register the corporation as trustee for Fritz von Opel. We will strike that for the moment.

Mr. Burling: Then I will withdraw the objection.

And may the record indicate counsel has stricken the words "as trustee for Fritz von Opel" from Box C?

Mr. Gallagher: Temporarily.

The Court: Mr. Gallagher, you had better let me read these.

Mr. Gallagher: All right, Your Honor.

The Court: You are a little bit ahead of me. All right.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. At that point, then, we have all the cash going into this account? Is that right, Mr. von Opel? A. Yes.

Q. What happened to the forty-seven odd thou-
634 sand shares of General Motors? A. They remained for the time being outside, in several corporations; but they in turn went into the Overseas Finance Corporation account. This chart certainly doesn't show every single account's action.

Q. Yes, I know that—but as a general outline. A. Only as a general outline.

Q. I note you have here you acquired the stock of Overseas in 1931. Is that correct? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And I note here it says the securities were sold, under the arrow, "to corporation 1934 and '35." By that do I understand correctly that all the securities sold and all cash had come into Uebersee as of 1934-35? A. Finally. Some of them even took a detour, to the Frima Corporation; but finally they ended in Overseas.

Q. Will you explain what the Frima Corporation is? A. The Frima Corporation is a corporation under a Liechtensteinean corporation.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer, Your Honor, Plaintiff's Exhibit 76, a stipulation between the parties with respect to what the Frima is. And I think the stipulation itself gives sufficient information as to the documents.

Mr. Burling: I think the record should point out that the stipulation is that a witness, if called from 635 Switzerland, would have testified as follows.

Mr. Gallagher: It states it in the stipulation.

Mr. Burling: Yes; I just wanted the record to make that clear.

The Court: All right.

(The stipulation referred to was marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 76.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now, directing your attention to the latter part of October, 1931—

After these instructions, which are expressed in the documents which have heretofore been introduced had been given by you, did you stay in America? A. No. I returned to Europe.

Q. What did you do? You went to Europe? A. I first saw my father for a day or two.

Q. Yes? A. And then went to see an architect in Berlin.

Q. Yes? A. And then went to Switzerland.

Q. I see. Did you go back to Antwerp? A. Yes. I spent quite a time in Antwerp, to finish up my affairs there.

Q. And did you maintain that home or residence
636 that you had in Antwerp? A. Until the end of the year, until we moved to Switzerland.

Q. And then you moved to Switzerland? A. Yes.

Q. Now, during this period of time, that you were in Switzerland, you might recollect that you had stated that in the fall, or September 9, as I recollect, to be exact, your father had applied for a license to the Foreign Exchange Control authorities, with respect to the three and a half million Swiss francs. Was any further action taken after your return to Europe with respect to this sum of money? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Will you explain to the Court, please, what happened? A. That was a very ticklish affair, because in the application we had filed, my father had stated that he wanted to put me up in business by this loan, and I thought we shouldn't give it up all of a sudden. Otherwise the authorities might ask what else I have gotten in the meantime.

So I told my father we should play along for a while and give it up slowly, and not miss out at least showing a fight.

Q. And as a result, were certain steps taken by you in this regard? A. Yes. I attached the account 637 in Switzerland, and sent after a while and lifted the attachment, and it was then returned to my father's possession.

Q. Were those Swiss francs ultimately returned to German control? A. Yes, ultimately, yes.

Q. Did you continue thereafter to maintain a residence in Switzerland, Mr. von Opel? A. The first year I rented a house there; it was in 1932. And I rented the same house again in 1933, with an option to buy; and I bought the house in, I think, the summer of 1933, and then began to rebuild it.

Q. Did you finish rebuilding it? A. Yes, I finished rebuilding it, I think it was in the beginning of 1934. And at the same time I took permanent residence in Switzerland, and made tax arrangements there, and so on.

Q. During this period of two years, were you making periodic trips to the United States? A. Yes.

Q. Now, I will direct your attention to the month of February, 1933, and ask if you recollect the purchase of a quantity of gold at that time, of about a million dollars value, by the Overseas Finance Corporation? A. Yes, I do.

638 Q. And I will ask you if subsequent to the purchase of that gold, the corporation became involved in litigation? A. Not immediately. We filed, as I remember, an application, and the application was denied us, as far as I remember. I think it was filed. I think first Ladenberg filed an application in behalf of Overseas.

Q. For the release of the gold. A. For the release of the gold. And then later in 1935 an application was filed with the Treasury Department by John W. Davis.

Q. And what was the result of that application? Was it passed on favorably or unfavorably? A. It was denied ultimately. We had delivered gold, and we took quite a terrific loss on it.

Q. You state you took quite a terrific loss. Will you explain to the Court that phase of that transaction, Mr. von Opel? A. As a Swiss corporation, we carry on our books in Swiss francs. And when we bought the gold, it was valued, in our books, with about 6.4 million Swiss francs. And after the dollar was devaluated from, I think, 100 per cent to 59 per cent, it was so much less worth in Swiss francs; and we took a loss of I think close to three million francs—between two and a half and three million francs we had to write off.

639 Q. That would be roughly about four or five hundred thousand American? A. Yes; I should say about $450,000 to $500,000.

Q. I see. Now, if you had gotten the gold out of America and returned it to Switzerland what would that gold there have been worth in Swiss francs? A. Just the same as before.

Q. The same value as the amount that you had brought out originally? Is that correct? A. Yes, certainly.

Q. Now, in the course of that litigation, or rather, I should say first, in the course of the negotiations with the Treasury Department, and after the application had been filed, you signed an affidavit, did you not, Mr. von Opel? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And paragraph 15 of that affidavit reads as follows: "The 97 bearer shares of Uebersee"—

Mr. Burling: Where are you reading, please?

Mr. Gallagher: This is Defendant's Exhibit 8.

Mr. Burling: And will you give me the page number?

Mr. Gallagher: My page reference is 196. That would be page 66 in your exhibits.

Mr. Burling: Thank you.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. That paragraph reads as follows, Mr. von Opel:

640 "The 97 bearer shares of Uebersee which I acquired in the manner above stated are now on deposit in a vault in my name, No. 1917, with the Swiss Credit Anstalt in Zurich, Switzerland, the key to which is in the possession of Dr. Frankenberg. This key is held by Dr. Frankenberg as agent and representative of my father, Wilhelm von Opel, for the purpose of safeguarding his usufruct. In addition I have an oral agreement with Dr. Frankenberg as managing director of Adler & Co. A. G. by which those shares are to secure any existing or future indebtedness on my part to Adler & Co. A. G. This arrangement was made in connection with a credit opened to me by Adler & Co. A. G. up to 1,500,000 Swiss francs, principally for the purpose of fulfilling a joint obligation to my father and myself to the German Reichsbank."

I will ask you, are those facts stated in that paragraph true? A. Yes, certainly.

Q. Now, Mr. von Opel, will you state to the Court the circumstances giving rise to those facts which are there stated and which I have just read to you? A. Just prior to this date, my father has been fined three and a half million reichsmarks by the German authorities, and I had to take steps to protect my own interest in this 641 matter.

Q. You state your father had been fined three and a half million reichsmarks. Will you state what that fine was for?

Mr. Burling: I object, Your Honor. The objection is that there was in fact a proceeding in a German court—I won't state what it was—relating to the gift which is in litigation here. I have prepared, if Your Honor please, a memorandum of law in which we argue that this Court should not receive the record or the judgment of the German court as having any probative value concerning the facts in issue here.

This is a very serious objection on this point, if Your Honor please. If this topic is opened, we will have to go back and read perhaps 300 pages of depositions.

Mr. Gallagher: I don't believe we will, I might say.

Mr. Burling: Might I just finish my argument?

Extensive depositions have been taken from Wilhelm von Opel and from various other persons having knowledge of this proceeding in Germany. If this instrument goes before the Court, then both sides would have to explore what happened.

The Court: I have to go back. Read me that part again, and then I will follow you a little bit better after I get that in my mind. Read me that part you are referring to in the affidavit.

642 Mr. Gallagher: In the affidavit it states:

"The 97 bearer shares of Uebersee which I acquired in the manner above stated are now on deposit in a vault in my name, No. 1917, with the Swiss Credit Anstalt in Zurich, Switzerland, the key to which is in the possession of Dr. Frankenberg. This key is held by Dr. Frankenberg as agent and representative of my father, Wilhelm von Opel, for the purpose of safeguarding his usufruct. In addition I have an oral agreement with Dr. Frankenberg as managing director of Adler & Co. A. G. by which those shares are to secure any existing or future indebtedness on my part to Adler & Co. A. G. This arrangement was made in connection with a credit opened to me by Adler & Co. A. G. up to 1,500,000 Swiss francs, principally for the purpose of fulfilling a joint obligation to my father and myself to the German Reichsbank."

Now, the proceeding, Your Honor—

The Court: And let him finish his argument. What is the question on that? You have asked him first if those facts are true, and he said yes.

Mr. Gallagher: Yes; and I asked him to state what the circumstances were which caused him to take the steps related therein.

We are offering the decree, not for the value it 643 may have as an expression of German law on the part of the German foreign currency authorities; but we are offering it as proof of the primary fact as to why he took certain actions subsequent to the entry of this decree.

The Court: And you want to know what information he had as to what happened over there?

Mr. Gallagher: He was fully aware of it. He was right in the proceedings.

The Court: But Mr. Burling's point, as I understand it, is that what actually occurred over there is not material, and it is not provable here.

Is that right?

Mr. Burling: That is exactly my point. But I think I might be able to come to an agreement with my friend which will obviate this argument. I will concede a proceeding was had before the German courts, as a result of which Wilhelm von Opel was fined three and a half million marks, and Fritz von Opel was required to pay $500,000.

I will go that far.

Mr. Gallagher: Will you agree that a decree was entered?

Mr. Burling: That a decree was entered. The decree raises the basis for making an argument as to what the German court did. We refute that argument with hundreds of pages of testimony.

644 The Court: You haven't gotten to that point yet. I think we may be close to what you want. The question you are asking the witness is what led him to make this statement? Is that right?

Mr. Gallagher: And to take the actions referred to therein.

The Court: And to take that action?

Mr. Gallagher: That is right, Your Honor.

The Court: And Mr. Burling says he will concede that the witness may testify he did that, based upon a decree of a German court which fined his father some three million—what was it?

Mr. Gallagher: Three and a half million reichsmarks.

The Court: And $500,000 of which the witness was required to pay?

Mr. Gallagher: No, Your Honor.

Mr. Burling: No. There was a collateral arrangement with the German Government whereby at the same time Fritz von Opel agreed to pay $500,000.

The Court: Does that get all you want?

Mr. Gallagher: No, Your Honor, it does not. If Your Honor would permit me a moment, here is the situation:

There was an investigation conducted into the whole question of this gift, for two years, by the German foreign currency authorities, a very searching and sweeping 645 investigation of both Wilhelm von Opel and Fritz von Opel.

The result of that investigation was a determination by the authorities, who found that his uncle had engaged in a false transaction, but sustaining the father's position that his gift had been a valid one.

They then fined the father, however, three and a half million reichsmarks, for failing, as they state in the decree, to exercise his contractual right, which Dr. Kronstein spoke about, I know Your Honor will recall, his contractual right to call on the establishment of the Niessbrauch. And that was what the fine was imposed upon his father for.

Now, we are going to show, because of that, and because of the language of the decree itself, what motivated Mr. von Opel in taking the steps that he did during the period of the next 15 months. It is very material and very pertinent to explain his actions.

The Court: I think I would have to sustain his objection to what this witness construed the decree to be—I mean, in so far as its accuracy is concerned. Now, what reaction he had to it, and why he took the steps he did—

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, in view of my friend's statement, may I make a statement as to what our contention is as to the facts? We say they are wholly different.

Our position is that Mr. Gallagher, doubtless in 646 good faith, has wholly misstated what the facts of the German transaction are, and I would like to make a counter statement, if I may.

The Court: It hasn't made any impression on my mind. I don't know if it might not be a waste of time, if I am to put any reliance on the German decree. I will let you gentlemen state all the grounds you want. Now you are stating an objection to a statement by this witness why he took this action. Is that right?

Mr. Burling: I think if Your Honor will listen to me on the facts, I can make our position more clear.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Burling: Our contention is that the German authorities investigated the gift. The prosecutor, first an original investigator, and then prosecutor in the public prosecutor's office at Frankfort, came to the conclusion that the gift was a sham. Therefore the failure of Wilhelm von Opel to report the entire $3,700,000 which was obtained from General Motors was a violation of German law, and he recommended prosecution to his chief; and his chief recommended prosecution to the Minister of Justice in Berlin.

There were conversations between Wilhelm von Opel and the Deputy Minister of Justice in Berlin. At that time it was stated that Adolph Hitler personally had directed there was not to be a prosecution.

647 Mr. Gallagher: Clearly heasay.

Mr. Burling: And an arrangement was to be made, and so it was agreed, with the Minister of Justice in Berlin, that Wilhelm von Opel would plead what is the equivalent of nolo contendere, to a Judge, of not having reported the income under the usufruct, in return for a fine of three and a half million marks, and a collateral agreement running from Fritz to put up $500,000.

So the court, the decree of which my friends wish to put before Your Honor, heard no testimony whatsoever. What happened was that the prosecution came in with a prearranged charge, and Wilhelm von Opel did not contest it.

I say that where there is—and I am sure it does not happen in this Court, Your Honor—but there are criminal courts and there are prosecuting officers where persons are permitted to plead guilty to lesser offenses as a part of a deal.

The Court: Mr. Gallagher, this is not part of your case in chief, is it?

Mr. Gallagher: I think it is, Your Honor.

The Court: What are you trying to establish?

Mr. Gallagher: I would establish the validity of the affidavit and show what steps he thereafter took in 1935 and 1936.

648 The Court: But aren't you anticipating some events?

Mr. Gallagher: No, Your Honor. We are trying to show what he did with the Uebersee shares thereafter, they now being in the Frima, and the steps he took in connection with this, the steps he took in connection with the put and call with the Swiss.

The Court: You can prove what steps he took, without telling all the reasons why, can't you? And if the reasons are impugned, you might come back later on. That is why I say I don't think the reasons are part of your case in chief.

Mr. Burling: I am perfectly willing to concede that there was a prosecution, and that a three and a half million mark fine was imposed. I merely want to keep out any argument about what the German court did or did not do.

The Court: In the ordinary course of events, the thing to do is to prove the transaction. And then if your adversary proves it was not a bona fide transaction, and attacks the reason, you show the reason. You haven't reached that yet.

Mr. Gallagher: We feel in stating the steps this man took, and the actions, to understand them at this time, it is necessary to know what motivated him in his course of conduct.

The Court: I think ordinarily where you take an action, you prove the action; and until it is impugned, it 649 stands.

I am perfectly clear I cannot let this witness give any testimony that I could rely upon as to his interpretation of the decree of the court. That is evidently what Mr. Burling is afraid of. And if he says he interpreted it in such and such a way, and he took these steps for such a reason, that certainly does not bind me. I don't know whether it makes a whole lot of difference what he says on that point.

Mr. Burling: I have failed to make myself clear to Your Honor in one respect. I am not arguing so much what this witness says he thinks the German court did: is inadmissible. I am saying that what the German court did in fact do is inadmissible, since it has no bearing on this case.

The Court: That may be true.

Mr. Burling: If there is some question about motive, I submit a prosecution was had, and his father was fined three and a half million marks. I will concede that. But I am trying to avoid an argument by Mr. Gallagher which I foresee will come in if the decree comes in, that the German authorities made a determination.

I say, as to what the German authorities did, first, I don't know; and, secondly, if we did know, it would be immaterial to this Court.

I have collected the authorities in general, and they are overwhelming, Your Honor.

The Court: I have no doubt about that. The 650 only question I understand he is interested in is trying to explain the fact that he had a transaction and had a reason for it. And what the reason is—

Mr. Gallagher: I am not offering it for the probative value of the decree at all, Your Honor.

The Court: Won't his stipulation give you enough?

Mr. Gallagher: Will you state it again, Mr. Burling?

Mr. Burling: I offer to stipulate that a proceeding was had in which Wilhelm von Opel was fined three and a half million reichsmarks, and that a collateral agreement was made at the time of this fine, between Fritz von Opel and the German authorities, whereby Fritz von Opel agreed to pay to the German Govetmment $500,000.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Do you deny that collateral agreement? A. That is not correct. That is entirely incorrect. I did not pay anything.

Mr. Burling: I said there was an agreement that that be done.

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, could we recess at this point, and we will endeavor to reach a stipulation on that point?

The Court: If you can get a stipulation as to that, it is all right. If not, I will have to sustain the objection.

651 You say the action was taken because of the decree of this court in Germany. That is all you need, in direct.

Mr. Gallagher: Thank you.

The Court: Gentlemen, I am prepared to rule on this proposition about the witness. I have written it out so that you can have copies of it, and my ruling is as follows:

"There has been admitted in evidence, according to Rules of Court, the deposition of a witness named Manfred Stansfield, who resides in New York City. The defendant asserts that his personal presence in Court as a witness is desirable, since he is one of only two persons who have actual knowledge of the transaction the purport of which determines the outcome of this suit. The defendant further asserts that new information has been received with regard to material facts within the knowledge of this witness. Counsel for plaintiff has informed the Court the witness has stated he will come to testify in this Court if requested by the Court. The question is whether the Court should make the request.

"Ordinarily such a request by the Court should not be made, but counsel should be left exclusively to the remedies provided by law. In this case, however, the witness obviously is an important one, there are material questions about which he has not been examined, the witness 652 is willing to appear, and the trial of the case will not be delayed to await his appearance. Counsel for defendants have agreed that the deposition of the witness already read in evidence shall remain in evidence, that any testimony given in open Court by the witness will be considered as supplementary to the deposition and that the costs of the witness' appearance will be borne by the defendant, within usual Government limitations. Upon the basis of these stipulations, and, without indication of any order to the witness to appear, the Court is willing to request and hereby does request the witness to appear before this Court on Monday, December 20, 1948, at ten o'clock in the forenoon. If the witness appears as requested, examinations of him will be first made by counsel for defendant and followed by counsel for plaintiff."

The Court (continuing): I have made copies of that for each one of you, gentlemen. So that is the disposition of that matter, and we will adjourn until tomorrow morning.

(Accordingly, at 4:10 p.m. the trial was adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, Wednesday, December 15, 1948.

656 PROCEEDINGS

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, if I may, I will read a stipulation which the parties have reached with respect to the criminal proceedings in Germany.

"It is hereby stipulated between the parties that a fine was imposed upon Wilhelm von Opel in the District Court in Frankfort, Main, on July 14, 1934, in connection with the gift agreement, in the amount of three and a half million reichsmarks.

"It is further stipulated between the parties that no objection will be made to Fritz von Opel's testifying he thought further payments would be demanded by the German Government pursuant to the provisions of the gift agreement."

The Court: Very well.

Accordingly,

FRITZ VON OPEL resumed the stand and was examined and testified further as follows:

Direct Examination (Continued)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now, Mr. von Opel, you have just heard that stipulation entered into between the parties, with respect to the fine imposed upon your father in the summer of 1934. I now direct your attention to the month of April, 657 1935. State what action, if any, you took at that time, in the light of this fine which had heretofore been imposed on your father. A. At this time I was confronted with a rather difficult situation. The lawyers of my father insisted that the action of the German Government had been entirely illegal.

But it was in 1934; it was a time of so-called blood purge. Thousands or twelve hundred people had been shot, and it certainly was a time where might went before right. And I thought at the time, instead of fighting or trying to fight the Nazis, on a basis of legal opinion, it would be better to set up my affairs in such a way that even if my father would be forced to establish a Niessbrauch, that finally nothing would come out of it.

I had anticipated this situation already in the years previous to this date. Normally an investment of this size took up at least, let me say, one-third in cash, one-third in bonds, and the rest in marketable securities.

I thought, however, that the Nazis might jump on me, and thought it would be better always to stand in a position to throw my books open and show there was nothing of cash or marketable securities they could grab.

In Europe there is a saying, out of the reckless times of the Middle Ages, which says, "Nothing left so that even the Emperor can grab anything."

And I followed more or less, after 1933, this say-
658 ing, by arranging all affairs so that in no moment was there anything of cash or value which could be grabbed by the Nazis.

This economic arrangement, of course, was made—or, rather, let us say it this way:

On top of this economic arrangement, I used many other protective devices which permitted me, in times of need, to use kind of a delaying tactic and to throw the Nazis off my track.

Now, in 1935, I did not agree with Dr. Gross that it would be possible to straighten this matter out on a legal basis. He was of the opinion that the Niessbrauch was merely a personal claim against me.

He was of the opinion that the gift agreement clearly indicated the intention of the parties not to draw the Niessbrauch, and so that it was not only a personal claim against me, but also a conditional personal claim. And it was so reported by my father in all of his official declarations, and as a property tax, and otherwise.

Mr. Burling: I move to strike the testimony concerning the opinion of some German lawyer, Your Honor, on the ground, first, it is opinion testimony; and, second, it is hearsay.

The Witness: We have letters to this—

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Don't state what Dr. Gross' opinion was—

Mr. Galagher: And we have no objection to the striking.

659 The Witness: I have Dr. Gross' letter of 1934—

Mr. Gallagher: We will strike that, Your Honor.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Let us get down to April, 1935, Mr. von Opel. A. At this time I thought it was best to establish a Niessbrauch and to retain all dividends in American subsidiaries, not to pay out anything in the Overseas Corporation. And so if my father would have asked for his Niessbrauch, he would get 80 per cent of zero, or any small amounts I might let pass on to him, if necessary.

I further thought that it might be advisable that I disappeared for some months from the scene of action, because if I was not around, nothing could be done in the meantime. So I agreed with some friends of mine to sail with them, and go on an extended cruise to the Pacific.

At this time I asked that Dr. Frankenberg, I explained to him the situation and asked of him whether he was willing to act as my father's representative in these matters.

and he told me, he said he would be willing to do so, if my father asked him.

I sailed in, I think it was the middle of April, from Bordeaux to Jamaica; and before we really could get started on the cruise, I received a wire from my lawyers in New York to immediately come up to New York.

Mr. Burling: Will you fix the year, please?

660 Mr. Gallagher: This is the spring of 1935 we are talking about.

The Witness: So I had to interrupt my intended cruise, and I had to go to New York, and contacted there Davis Polk, who represented Overseas in the matter pending with the Treasury Department.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. What did you do when you contacted Davis Polk? A. I stated to him all facts in connection with Overseas—the gift agreement, and all the different setups which had taken place.

Mr. Burling: Excuse me. Davis Polk is not a human being, is he?

Mr. Gallagher: John W. Davis. The firm was Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardner & Reed, at the time.

Mr. Burling: Is this Mr. Davis personally?

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. John W. Davis personally, at the time? A. Yes, at the beginning.

Mr. Burling: Thank you.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Alright; you say you made a statement to them of the whole situation? Is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what happened after you made your state-
661 ment to them? A. They then filed an application to the Treasury Department for release of this gold.

Q. Did they prepare an affidavit for you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the affidavit we are referring to as Defendant's Exhibit 8? A. Yes, it is.

Q. And you stated to them the facts that they have incorporated in that affidavit? Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. After you had signed the affidavit, and it had been filed with the Treasury, I believe you previously stated that the negotiations subsequently failed. Is that correct? A. Yes, I think so, yes.

Q. Did you remain in the United States? A. No, I did not. I left immediately.

Q. And where did you go? A. I went first to Switzerland, and then to Germany, to speak to my father about this matter.

Q. Do you remember approximately when you saw him? Was it still that summer? A. It was in the same summer, yes, the summer of 1935.

Q. Did you have any discussion with him at that time about this Niessbrauch and the fact that you had 662 appointed Frankenburg to be his agent? A. Yes, I told him what I had done, and the reasons for it. And he stated that he didn't want it this way, that he in the meantime had made up his mind and said he would rather fight it out than have every year the same problem, not only with the Foreign Funds Control, but also with the property tax and the income tax.

He had in the meantime several discussions with Dr. Gross.

Q. Who is Dr. Gross? A. Dr. Gross was his lawyer. And the political situation had cooled off in the meantime.

Q. Yes? A. And Dr. Gross had convinced him that there was a chance to legally waive all remnants of this usufruct.

Mr. Burling: If your Honor please, I object to any testimony from this witness as to what Wilhelm von Opel said about waiver, on the ground that Wilhelm von Opel was interrogated by the plaintiffs. They took his deposition, and they omitted to ask him any question whatsoever about waiver. The first time there is any testimony about waiver in this case is after Wilhelm is dead.

Mr. Galagher: Your Honor, that is not the fact. The question of the waiver was brought up at the same time at Wiesbaden, with Dr. Gross present there, who is the 663 attorney who expressed to the Reichsbank the entire situation.

The Court: I suppose if he objects to what was told to the witness, I will have to sustain it as hearsay.

Mr. Burling: If you will show me the page reference to the deposition of Wilhelm von Opel, if there is any reference whatever to waiver.

Mr. Gallagher: I didn't state there was a waiver there. I stated that in Dr. Gross' statement taken at the same time at Wiesbaden.

Mr. Burling: If your Honor please, I don't mean to press a mere hearsay objection. I know Your Honor's position. But I do object to hearsay from Wilhelm, when they had every opportunity to get that and didn't do it. And they now bring it in after his death.

The Court: I will have to sustain it, if it is hearsay. I sustain it on that ground.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Were you present with your father and Dr. Gross during the summer and fall of 1935, at the time the question of a waiver of the Niessbrauch was discussed? A. Yes, I was.

Q. Did you discuss that waiver with your father? A. Yes.

Q. Did you discuss that waiver with Dr. Gross? A. Yes, I did.

664 Q. And you were present when it was discussed? A. Yes.

Q. And Dr. Gross was present when it was discussed? A. Yes.

Q. And was your mother aware of this fact, and was she advised? A. Yes, certainly. She wasn't always present, but in some of the discussions.

Mr. Burling: I renew my objection, Your Honor, on the ground that Marta von Opel was examined by deposition and not a single word was asked her about waiver.

The Court: Is this testimony you are trying to bring out an actual waiver that was made by Wilhelm von Opel in his presence?

Mr. Gallagher: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: I thought he was relating what the father told him.

Mr. Gallagher: Oh, no. This was in his presence, and as a result of the discussion by the parents in the presence of Dr. Gross, who also will be a witness here, Dr. Gross thereafter advised the Reichsbank of these facts and, as we will prove through his testimony, did so so that the parents would not get into further trouble.

The Court: You are trying to prove an oral waiver by the father?

665 Mr. Gallagher: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: I think his testimony would be admissible, notwithstanding the fact that the the other man did not testify to it. You could argue as to the weight of the testimony. And the fact that the mother and father didn't testify to it, if they didn't, that would be a subject for you to argue later on. But I think the witness can tell about it.

Mr. Burling: Yes, Your Honor.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Will you state to the Court, Mr. von Opel, the nature of that discussion between your father and Gross, and you, and all the circumstances surrounding that. This is in the summer of 1935 and the fall of 1935, as I recollect? A. Yes. Dr. Gross explained, in writing and in words, the legal position. He emphasized the fact that at the time of the gift no right in rem had been established.

He further emphasized that even this personal claim, which had been established, was apparently a conditional claim, namely, based upon the desire of my parents to receive a payment.

And my father, of course, we are no lawyers and we had to depend on counsel's advice. He gave him free hand in any way to get rid of this Niessbrauch. He told Dr. Gross in my presence:

"It isn't a question for me how you to do that. I 666 am only interested in the result. I don't want to be bothered with this Niessbrauch any more. I don't want to hear of this word Niessbrauch. Get rid of this thing."

And I must say this word Niessbrauch was a main topic in our conversation for years to come, until 1937 the Reichsbank indicated they would take no action in this matter.

Mr. Burling: I move to strike any testimony of this witness as to what the Reichsbank indicated it would do.

The Court: Well—"until 1937". The rest will be stricken.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. As a result of these discussions, was Dr. Gross given any directions? A. Yes.

Q. And, as I understand it, they were to try to get rid of this Niessbrauch? A. Yes, certainly.

Q. Do you know what Dr. Gross did thereafter? A. Yes; I always was informed on the matter. He first addressed letters to the local branch of the Foreign Funds Control.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, this is pure hearsay.

The Court: Yes, I think it is.

667 Mr. Gallagher: All right, Your Honor. I will withdraw it or strike the answer.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Do I understand you correctly, Mr. von Opel, that you and your father and mother, however, had agreed that their rights to the establishment of the Niessbrauch were gone, had disappeared? Is that correct?

Mr. Burling: I am sorry to be so contentious this morning, Your Honor, but Mr. Gallagher should not lead the witness or summarize his testimony.

The Court: I think you will have to let his testimony stand on that, Mr. Gallagher, unless you want to ask him specific questions on it.

Mr. Gallagher: Let it stand at that point? All right, Your Honor.

The Court: What was this date of the discussion with the Doctor and the mother and father?

The Witness: That was the summer and fall of 1935, Your Honor.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Can you state whether or not your parents agreed that the Niessbrauch should be waived or not? A. Yes, certainly.

Q. What did they agree? A. They agreed that they only had a personal claim against me, conditioned 668 upon their own distress. They would only ask for their support in case they would financially be unable to maintain themselves.

Mr. Burling: Will you fix the date of this agreement?
Mr. Gallagher: This is the summer or fall of 1935.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Is that correct? A. Yes.

Mr. Gallagher: That is as definite as we can place the date, Mr. Burling, because the first action we have any written evidence of is Dr. Gross' letters of October, 1935, to the Reichsbank.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now, after your parents had agreed to abandon the Niessbrauch under this gift agreement, is it my understanding Dr. Gross' employment was solely to try to gain approval from the Reichsbank for this waiver? Is that correct?

Mr. Burling: I again object to the repeated leading of counsel's own witness. It is not necessary to summarize the testimony, Your Honor.

The Court: I guess he had better tell it in his own way. Ask him what occurred.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. State the purpose of the employment of Dr. Gross.
A. As I stated it before, his instruction was to get 669 rid of the Niessbrauch in any legal way possible.

Mr. Gallagher: Will you excuse us just a moment, Your Honor?

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. After that period of time, Mr. von Opel, were you informed of the result of Dr. Gross' action in this respect? A. Yes, I was.

Q. And what was the nature of that? A. Dr. Gross considered it—

Q. No, not what he considered.

Mr. Burling: If the Court please, I object to this witness testifying what Dr. Gross or someone else told him that Dr. Gross or someone else did.

The Court: I sustain it.

Mr. Gallagher: All right, Your Honor.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Mr. von Opel, where was the stock of Uebersee at this time? A. In the beginning of 1935, and I think all through 1935, it was kept in a safe in a Swiss bank in Zurich.

In the beginning of 1936 it was taken out and deposited with Adler & Company for the account of Frima.

Q. And did the stock remain thereafter with Adler & Company for the account of Frima? A. No. I sold this stock under a put and call option to about fifteen 670 Swiss people.

Q. I show you a letter of June 25, 1936, signed by the Union Bank of Switzerland, and ask you if you can state what that document is—Plaintiff's Exhibit 78 and 78-A. A. That is a confirmation signed by the Schweizerische Bankgesellschaft, stating again the agreement and their actions.

Mr. Burling: Will your furnish us with a copy of that exhibit?

Mr. Gallagher: Yes. I thought he had furnished you one; I am sorry. That is the June 25, 1936, letter.

I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 78 and 78-A in evidence.

The Court: All right.

(The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit Nos. 78 and 78-A.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 79-A for identification, a statement of Adler and Company stating therein that—

"We notify herewith that we received from Frima Trust Establishment, Vaduz on May 30, 1936

"97 shares of Overseas Finance Corporation, Ltd."

Will you state whether or not that is the receipt for the shares? A. Yes.

671 Mr. Gallagher: I now offer this, Plaintiff's Exhibit 79 and 79-A.

(The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibits 79 and 79-A.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Did you ever repurchase these shares of Uebersee, Mr. von Opel? A. Yes, I did. I regarded the transaction as a kind of insurance. It cost me about $10,000 additional expenses to keep this agreement going. But when war became imminent, I think it was in November, 1941, I then thought that in America, as the blocking had already taken place, and I thought there was no danger that the Nazis might undertake further action against me now. So I repurchased the stock.

Q. I show you what purports to be a deposit statement, Plaintiff's Exhibit 80 and 80-A, of Adler and Company, and ask you if this is a deposit statement, reflecting the repurchase of the Uebersee shares, and the fact that Adler and Company was holding them on deposit to Frima's credit? A. It shows the entire transaction as reflected by the books of Adler. It shows the delivery to the Bankgesellschaft, and also the return of the shares from the Bankgesellschaft.

672 Mr. Burling: I am afraid, if Your Honor please, there is again a mixup in the numbering on Plaintiff's documents. I think the chart is marked Exhibit 80; is it not?

Mr. Kenny: No; that is now 81.

Mr. Burling: Thank you.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer, Your Honor, Plaintiff's 80 and 80-A.

(The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibits 80 and 80-A.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Mr. von Opel, did you ever pay a capital gains tax to the United States as a result of the gift made by your father? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Will you state the amount and what took place, in assessing that amount, and the final terms? A. I was first assessed an amount of eight hundred, I think, $850,000. And my lawyers asked me to go to Germany and prove by documents the value of the shares at the time of the gift; and then, after all those documents were in, tax was assessed, if I remember correctly, around $130,000 or $135,000.

Q. And it was finally paid? A. Yes.

673 Q. Now, Mr. von Opel, was a tax paid on this gift in Germany? A. Yes, certainly. The tax declaration was made three months after the gift, at the end of this three months' period we had under the law.

And a tax of slightly above two million reichsmarks was paid on it.

Q. Now, Mr. von Opel, did the Uebersee Korporation ever engage in doing business with an enemy country or an ally of an enemy? A. No, sir.

Q. Did the Uebersee Korporation ever operate mines directly or indirectly in Hungary after December 6, 1941? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever operate mines directly or indirectly in Hungary after December 6, 1941? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever engage in doing business in Hungary after December 6, 1941? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, did your father or mother ever make any demand on you for income, interest, dividends, or any part of the gift or the proceeds therefrom? A. No, sir.

Q. And did you ever pay to your mother or father any income, dividends, interest, from the gift or its proceeds or any part therefrom? A. No, sir.

674 Mr. Gallagher: That is all.

Mr. Burling: May I ask Your Honor a question as to time? Your Honor expressed the desire or the hope that the case be completed prior to Christmas, that is, prior to the close of business on the 23rd, and said that Your Honor would hold court longer hours if it seemed necessary to accomplish that end.

It seems to me that we can say it will be necessary to sit for longer hours, if we are to be through by the 23rd. My friends have indicated they desire to cross examine at least one of my witnesses at great length, and I am afraid this cross examination will take at least eight hours.

The Court: We will see how we go.

Mr. Burling: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: How many more witnesses do you have, Mr. Gallagher?

Mr. Gallagher: We have two, and Dr. Kronstein on the nationality. I don't believe our witnesses would take over—

I believe but for the cross examination we would be finishing today.

The Court: All right.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Burling:

675 Q. Mr. von Opel, I hand you some pieces of paper and ask you if you can recognize them. A. Yes. These are German so-called paper marks, printed during the time of the German inflation, between 1920 and 1924, apparently.

Q. Those are the old marks which preceded the reichsmarks? Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. Now, will you count them and see if I have not handed you fifteen million marks? A. Yes, it is possible.

Q. Now, fifteen million marks, before World War I, would have been worth approximately three and a half million dollars. Is that correct? A. That is possible. At the time of the stabilization, I think one dollar was worth one billion reichsmarks.

Q. One old mark, wasn't it? Wasn't the exchange a billion on the marks for one reichsmark? A. Approximately. It doesn't make much difference one way or the other.

Q. No, but I would just like the answer to my question, if you please. A. Yes.

Q. In other words, before World War I, the number of marks I hold in my hand would be worth about three and a half million dollars? A. That is possible.

676 Q. And fifteen million old marks, which were stabilized for the new reichsmark in 1924, at a rate which would have made this amount of currency worth one and a half pfennig? Isn't that true? A. Yes, that is possible.

Q. And that would have been less than one American cent? A. Yes, that is possible.

Q. In other words, this paper is totally worthless, except as a curiosity? A. It is a fact that the paper was worth more than the amount printed on it.

Q. Under the escrow agreement between your father and General Motors, before the gift, before October 5, if he had put the 600 Opel shares to General Motors, he would have received back, if he had received marks, about fifteen million marks? Isn't that so? A. Yes, depending upon the day when he exercised the option.

Q. You have testified that in late September or early October, 1931, you and your father had a discussion concerning the escrow agreement. A. Yes.

677 Q. Didn't you and your father have in mind the fact that within the decade preceding that conference, 15 million marks had become totally worthless, due to the inflation? A. Definitely. Every German was aware of this fact.

Q. And the possibility that the assets, the 600 shares of Adam Opel, if they were valued in marks, that is, if he received marks for them, from General Motors, under the escrow agreement, those marks might become totally valueless once more was in your mind, was it not? A. If it wasn't based upon a gold clause or a dollar exchange rates, yes.

Q. Now coming to another subject, you testified, did you not, you were apprehended as an alien enemy in February, 1942? A. Yes.

Q. And this took place in Palm Beach, Florida, did it not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your wife was apprehended at the same time? Is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were taken for temporary detention to Miami? Isn't that so? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then there were proceedings before an alien hearing board in Miami? A. Yes, sir.

678 Q. And, after that, the Attorney General issued an order directing that you and your wife be interned? Is that correct? A. I guess so.

Q. And you and your wife were then taken to a family internment camp at Seagoville, Texas? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Prior to your going to Seagoville, had you not been in touch with Colonel Mittler of the Army? A. No.

Q. When did you first communicate with Colonel Mittler? A. When I was taken back to Miami for my first rehearing.

Q. I see. You testified, did you not, when you were first apprehended and you were in Miami, conditions were very unpleasant? A. Within those quarters, yes. It was not a camp. It was a professional building, and we were living 60 or 70 men with one toilet and one shower. I must say it was rather unpleasant.

Q. When you were taken back to Miami for a rehearing, you found that the detention station had moved, didn't you? A. Not only moved; it was entirely given up.

Q. Well, the place where persons were detained in 679 Miami was a different place, wasn't it? A. Yes; it was the quarters of the Border Patrol.

Q. The Border Patrol, and they were quartered in what had previously been a very large private house? Isn't that so? A. Yes.

Q. It was a house on Biscayne Bay, wasn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there was no fence around the house, was there? A. There was no fence, but there were about 20 or 30 border patrolmen.

Q. But I will ask you just to answer my questions, if you will. A. Yes.

Q. There was no fence? A. No.

Q. And there was a large lawn running between the house and the waters of Biscayne Bay? A. Yes, sir.

Q. With palm trees around the house? A. Yes; I remember it was very pleasant.

Q. And you and your wife had a pleasant bedroom overlooking Biscayne Bay, did you not? A. As well as you can regard a prison pleasant, yes, it was pleasant.

680 Q. I am talking about the physical conditions under which you lived. A. It isn't only the physical conditions which count, but also the moral conditions.

Q. Well, we can discuss philosophy perhaps some other time. Now I want to know about the physical conditions.

Physically, you had a bedroom in what had formerly been a large, luxurious house, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. And you and your wife did a lot of cooking in your room, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. Was the door to your bedroom ever locked from the outside? A. No; but there was a matron sitting in front of it day and night.

Q. All the time you were there? A. Yes. They had three matrons in shifts of eight hours.

Q. Yes; but that matron was wandering around the entire establishment, was she not? A. No; her desk was right in front of our door.

Q. And she was not sitting there day and night, was she? A. I wasn't in charge of the matrons, Mr. Burling.

681 Q. But you and your wife were free to walk around the house or the grounds as you chose, were you not? A. Yes; but the matron was always ordered to follow us out, either the matron or the board patrolman.

Q. And there were no eating facilities for providing you with food in this board patrol station, were there? A. No. The few people which were—

Q. Please just answer my question, Mr. von Opel, and don't volunteer.

The answer was no, wasn't it? A. No.

Q. So that when it came time for you to eat, you were driven in a board patrol car in to a restaurant where you were provided with meals? Isn't that true? A. Yes, and it is also true—

Q. Will you please answer the questions and say nothing further. Your own counsel can bring out anything he sees fit, in addition to my own examination.

In other words, the conditions of detention in Miami were very much more pleasant than they were at Seagoville, Texas? Isn't that so? A. Definitely so, because we were alone and not among others.

Q. I must ask you again to answer my question: Were they not physically more pleasant?

682 Mr. Gallagher: If Your Honor please, I think he had not said that.

(To Mr. Burling:) You added the "physically" and I think the answer ought to stand, Your Honor.

Mr. Burling: I think the answer should be yes or no.

The Court: I don't know the purpose of this line of examination.

Mr. Gallagher: Neither do I, Your Honor.

Mr. Burling: We will come to it again, Your Honor.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Isn't it the fact that while you were in Miami the second time, you gave suggestions to Colonel Mittler for the purpose of causing Colonel Mittler to represent that you should be kept in Miami rather than returned to Seagoville? A. That is not the fact, Mr. Burling—if I can answer the question correctly—

Q. You have answered it. You say it is not correct.

Mr. Gallagher (to the witness): Do you wish to state anything further, Mr. von Opel?

The Witness: Yes.

Mr. Burling: Mr. Gallagher, I wish you would stop interfering in my cross examination.

The Court: I think you will have to object, gentlemen. Otherwise you can make a note of the point and then ask him on redirect.

683 By Mr. Burling:

Q. After a while, it is the fact, is it not, you were moved from Miami and taken to a camp near New Orleans? A. Yes.

Q. You said yesterday it was in New Orleans and you meant to say, did you not, it was in Algiers, across the river from New Orleans? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you referred to that camp as being known as the Jewish internment camp, did you not? A. Yes; that is what it was called, by the people living in there.

Q. Is it not the fact that you were not interned in any camp, anywhere, with any person of Jewish origin who had been residing in the United States at the time of the outbreak of the war? A. I don't quite get this question. You mean all people interned were coming from the outside?

Q. There were no persons, no Jewish persons in Algiers, except persons who were brought from Latin America. Isn't that so? A. Yes, you are right.

Q. Thank you. Now, will you state what your understanding was as to why you were sent to that camp? A. I didn't quite get it.

684 Q. What was your understanding as to why you were sent to that particular camp? A. My understanding was that the Immigration Department had found out that it was not safe for me to go back to Seagoville, Texas.

Q. And what was your understanding as to why the Immigration Service thought it would not be safe? A. I think several people had reported to the Immigration Department to this effect.

Q. You don't claim that at this time you yourself were an anti-Nazi, do you? A. I don't know what you understand by "anti-Nazi". I was a liberal all my life.

Q. From 1933 until the time you were moved to Algiers, you were not opposed to the Nazi regime in Germany, were you? A. I don't understand what you mean by "opposed", you say. It would have been ridiculous to shout from the rooftops in Europe that I was against it. It would only have endangered my father. But everybody who knew me, and all of my friends, knew exactly where I stood.

Q. Now, between 1933 and 1939 you had occasion to be in Germany several times, did you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does the word Parteitrag mean? A. Parteitrag means a yearly gathering in Nuremberg.

685 Q. A yearly gathering of what? A. Of the Nazi Party.

Q. Do you not know of your own knowledge it was the chief Nazi ceremonial demonstration? A. Yes, it was.

Q. And that was held in Nuremberg, was it not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You know, do you not, that your wife had dinner with Adolph Hitler at Nuremberg on the occasion of the Nazi Parteitrag in 1938? A. Yes. She has clearly stated why and how.

Q. You know that also at that occasion a woman named Leni Riefenstahl was present, do you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Leni Riefenstahl was very prominently associated—

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, I would like to interrupt Mr. Burling at the moment and ask what the purpose is of this whole line of inquiry. We don't see its relevancy in this matter, and it is just consuming time, it seems to me.

Mr. Burling: Its relevancy is, Your Honor, that I seek to attack the credibility of the witness. I don't believe persons opposed to Adolph Hitler were also having dinner with him at the occasion of the Nazi Parteitrag in Nuremberg.

The Witness: I never had dinner with Adolph 686 Hitler, and I never met him.

Mr. Burling: Or that their wives were having dinner with him.

Mr. Gallagher: You don't contend this property was owned by Mr. von Opel, do you, Mr. Burling?

Mr. Burling: No. I am coming to the next point, if you will permit it.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. And Leni Riefenstahl was very prominently associated with Adolph Hitler in the papers, was she not? A. She was just denazified, to my own great surprise, I must say.

Q. Will you answer my question? A. What is the question?

Q. Wasn't she very prominently associated with Adolph Hitler? A. I couldn't say so. She was a movie producer and she made at one time a film on the war. But apparently she is not regarded as such; otherwise she would not have been denazified.

Q. Isn't it true that every person familiar with German doings knew that Leni Riefenstahl was very close to Adolph Hitler? A. If you depend upon newspaper gossip, many newspapers called her Adolph Hitler's girl friend.

687 Q. And she visited you at your home in St. Moritz, did she not? A. Yes; I have known her since 1920 or 1925.

Q. And a man named Hans von Bibra was a guest in your house at St. Moritz? A. Yes.

Q. And do you know he was the head of the Nazi Party organization in Switzerland? A. I didn't know it at the time. And you know perfectly well the circumstances how I met this man, namely, to get my release from the German Army after I was mobilized. I tried everything to secure my safety.

Q. Now we will go to another topic. Going back to the questioning which Mr. Gallagher conducted yesterday, relating to your position in Adam Opel prior to the General Motors purchase. A. Yes.

Q. The negotiations for the sale were commenced in 1928, weren't they? A. In the fall.

Q. In the fall of 1928? A. Yes.

Q. And you were 29 years old at that time? A. Yes, I was.

Q. You were one of the most prominent automo-
688 bile racers in all Germany then, weren't you? A. I wouldn't say that. My racing days were between 1920 and 1923. Later on I drove a few speedboat races, but I retired from automobile racing.

Q. I see. You were an airplane pilot at this time, were you not? A. In connection with my rocket experiments, I wanted to fly the plane myself, and I learned to pilot a plane.

Q. And you competed in free balloon races, did you? A. No, with one exception. I made my pilot license because I was interested in all those things. And before the Nazis came to power, I decided to fly a balloon in the Gordon Bennett race, as a co-pilot.

Q. That is the international free balloon race? A. The international free balloon race.

Q. You were the co-pilot of one of the German balloons? A. Yes; this balloon was entered, I think, by the German Balloon Association in 1932.

Q. And you were present when Mr. Gallagher made his opening statement in this case, I take it? A. In regard to what, Mr. Burling?

Q. You heard Mr. Gallagher's opening statement, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. And he stated, I believe, that you were widely 689 regarded as an athlete in Germany at this time? A. Yes, I can say so.

Q. And I don't mean to ask you to be immodest, but would you agree that you had a position comparable to that held by Gene Tunney in this country at that time? A. Our business required to be popular. We had to sell bicycles and automobiles, and it could only be done by a lot of personal advertising.

Q. And you had time to engage in all these activities, and yet by the age of 29 become the general manager of the largest automobile works in Europe? Is that your testimony? A. My sports activities, Mr. Burling, were restricted to Sundays. And I will be pleased to prove by a newspaper clipping that even in the biggest automobile race, the first automobile race after the war in Germany you see, I was in Berlin in 1931, when the race which I won—that they had to install a special training day for the Opel crew, because I had no time to go there and train with the other drivers.

Q. What position do you say you held in the plant just prior to the sale of 1929? A. At this time my father was chairman of the board of directors. My uncle, Fritz von Opel, my godfather, was vice chairman.

Under German law, no member of the board can be an officer of a corporation. And I was, therefore, the legal head of the Opel corporation.

690 Q. What position did you hold? A. As alleiniges Vorstandsmitglied, which means the sole manager—or we will call it "general manager", if you like.

Q. But your father was chairman of the board? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he active in the affairs of the Adam Opel? A. Yes, sir. Normally it would not have been possible. But it was a family enterprise; so certainly there was a close relationship between my uncle and my father on one side, and me as the legal head of the corporation.

Q. Do you think that your father was in a position to know who the managers were, in 1929? A. Oh, certainly.

Q. Have you read your father's deposition in this case? A. Certainly.

Q. By the way, did you say that you raced for Germany in this balloon race before the Nazis came into power? A.

No. I said the balloon was entered before the Nazis came to power.

Q. But you represented Germany after they came to power? A. The race in 1933, in the summer, in Chicago.

Q. After the Nazis came into power? A. Yes;
691 they had come to power previously.

Q. As to your father's testimony in the deposition concerning the position you held, are you familiar with it? A. I don't know.

Q. Then I will read it to you, reading from page 6 of the Wiesbaden deposition—and this is the questioning of your father relating to you:

"And what was his position or capacity at the firm in 1929?

"Answer: In 1929 he was an engineer in the firm.

"Question: In 1929 some interest in the Opel firm was sold to the General Motors Corporation of the United States, was it not?

"Answer: Yes.

"Question: Well, just before the sale of the interest in the firm to General Motors, what position did Fritz have with the firm?

"Answer: A leading position with the firm in the production branch. He was, furthermore, a member of the board of directors."

Now, is that testimony of your father's correct or incorrect? A. I don't remember that I was a member of the board. That doesn't seem possible to me. He must have made a mistake there. Because as I remember under German law, no officer could be a board member. But 692 we always had our meetings together, you see. It was a family enterprise, Mr. Burling. We didn't stick to any formalities. And certainly my father had the say in this enterprise. I never claimed anywheres that I could do anything I pleased, you see. We were all cooperating and working together.

Q. But your father characterized your position there as that as having a leading position in the production branch. Do you think that is an accurate characterization? A. Production was everything with an automobile or bicycle corporation. And if you object to the use of the word "engineer", I always signed, you know, in registration papers, as an engineer, and my father always signed as a "Kaufmann", or you would translate the Kaufmann as merchant. Those were the titles good enough for us at the time.

Q. Now, coming to another topic, after the purchase of the 80 per cent of the Opel shares in 1929, you came to the United States, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. And you and your wife lived in hotels in various American cities for about a year? Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. And then you went to Antwerp? Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. Where did you live in Antwerp? Will you give 693 us the address? A. We lived in Brascard, which is a small town outside of Antwerp. I would rather call it a village. If I am correct, I think the address was Leopold Road, or something of the sort.

Q. Did you buy a house in Brascard? A. No; I rented a house.

Q. You rented a house? A. Yes.

Q. Was it a furnished or unfurnished house? A. It was a furnished house.

Q. And did you rent it on a lease? How did you rent it? A. I really don't know. Those details my wife took care of, and I never signed a lease.

Q. Did you have also an apartment in Berlin at this time? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever have an apartment in Berlin? A. No.

Q. Can you identify the address "Bismarck Strasse 33 Charlottenberg"? A. Yes.

Q. What is that address? A. That is a business and office building. It is called the so-called Elektro 694 Verbands Haus, an office building where all the electrical concerns have their headquarters.

Q. Did you have an office in that building? A. No.

Q. Did you have occasion to go frequently to that building? A. My father had an office in that building.

Q. Did you have occasion to go there frequently? A. Yes, I went there occasionally.

Q. You were asked yesterday about your estimate of your father's wealth in 1931. A. Yes.

Q. Did I understand you to say that you thought that taking out the 600 Opel shares, the remainder would be in the neighborhood of 25 million marks? A. I think I stated that at this time his property tax assessment was in the neighborhood of, I think, 21 million reichsmarks.

And I further explained that under German law that does not represent the real value, but a somewhat lower figure.

Q. I show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 25, which purports to be the 1931 property tax return of Wilhelm von Opel, and ask you to examine it and see if you can state from that what your father's return as his property in the year 1931 was. A. It says the total value of other property, 695 19.9 million, which is close to 20 million. But as it says total value of other properties, there must be something else. So I think it is approximately the figure I gave you.

Q. Is that figure before or after you take out the 600 Opel shares? A. Which is the date of the declaration? It must have been disregarding my 600 shares.

Q. Doesn't that tax return speak as of January 1, 1931? A. It is unquestionably not an original.

Q. I show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 26, which purports to be the assessment.

I show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 25-A and Plaintiff's Exhibit 25-B; and 25-B, in the original, was an exhibit to the return 25-A. A. Yes.

Q. And I invite your attention to the item indicating six million reichsmarks Adam Opel Aktien, valued at one million eight hundred thousand. A. Yes. If you deduct this one million eight hundred thousand, then the value of the other property, as it says here, is eighteen million.

Q. So that as of January 1, 1931, the tax value of your father's property, other than the 600 Opel shares, 696 was 18 million marks? A. Apparently. But as I explained to you, the assessed valuations are considerably lower than the real valuations.

Q. That is your best estimate as to the real value of the property which had the assessed value of eighteen million? A. You see, for instance, here in the Opel shares there you have a good example. The Opel shares are valued at 1.8 million. The escrow agreement said they could be sold at sixteen or seventeen million. So they are at about 10 per cent of the valuation. I don't know how far that goes for other securities listed in it.

Q. What is your best estimate, the best you can do, to estimate what your father's net worth was, not counting the 600 Opel shares, in the year 1931? A. It is beyond me to guess at it.

Q. You did guess at it yesterday, didn't you? A. No. Yesterday I said I thought the tax declaration at the time was about twenty or twenty-two million marks assessed values; and if I remember correctly, it might be the 1932 or 1933 assessment. One of these assessments shows these figures, I am sure.

Q. So that your testimony now is that you are unable to make any estimate as to what your father's real net worth was? Is that right? A. I didn't say any estimate. I gave you the minimum. What the maximum was 697 is just a question of imagination.

Q. You are unable to make any reasonable estimate as to what your father's real net worth was? Is that right? A. The least he had was, as the tax declaration shows, about twenty million.

Q. But you are unable to make any better estimate as to what the real value was? A. That would be mere guesswork. But I thought it considerably higher.

Q. Well, how much higher? A. I would say at least five million, maybe ten millions. It is a mere guess of mine.

Q. So your present statement, if you agree that the tax rate shows a tax estate of about eighteen million, that it would be from twenty-three to twenty-eight million? A. You can figure it out backwards in the following way:

He had 900 shares of Opel of his own. The price he received then was 24 million marks, and of course in addition he had personal property.

So at this time I guess he must have been worth, let us say in round figures; 30 million reichsmarks, less taxes to be paid, of course.

Q. And the 600 Opel shares were worth about fifteen and a half million, under the escrow agreement? Is that 698 right? A. Yes; as I recall, the escrow agreement has had different rates, according to the time of sale.

Q. Assuming you would sell it in 1931— A. At the time of sale, it was 26 million and I guess 650 reichsmarks.

Q. Twenty-six million? A. Pardon me—26,650 reichsmarks per 10,000 shares.

Q. But the total is somewhere between fifteen and sixteen million reichsmarks? A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. And if we add that to your estimate, to your guess that your father's net worth otherwise was thirty million, that would bring you to a total net worth, before October 5, of approximately forty-five million? A. I didn't say thirty million. I said one could imagine twenty-five or maybe even thirty.

Q. I see. A. As a rough guess, I would say forty million.

Q. Now, there were living in 1931 eight grandchildren, either direct heirs of Adam Opel? Is that correct? A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. And there were living two sons of Adam Opel, your father and your Uncle Fritz? A. And my uncle, yes. My uncle was unmarried.

699 Q. He had no children? A. And he had no children, no.

Q. And you have one living sister? A. Yes.

Q. And no brothers? A. No.

Q. And your six first cousins had all taken their shares of the Opel inheritance by inheritance, hadn't they? A. Yes.

Q. That is, by the death of their parents? A. Yes. Some of them had inherited, say, apart, even before the incorporation of the Opel enterprise.

Q. But they took by inheritance? A. They took by inheritance, yes, certainly.

Q. And your sister had received a dowry or marriage settlement of 500,000 marks? Is that correct? A. She was married to a very wealthy man, a friend of our family, and she received several gifts, one in addition to her dowry, in 1933. If I remember correctly, it was an additional million or so.

Q. You are familiar with your father's will, are you not? A. Yes, I am.

Q. And there is no mention in the will of any gift other than the gift of the dowry, is there? A. I think it 700 mentions gifts received. It doesn't stipulate the single gifts.

Mr. Burling: I ask that Defendant's Exhibit 32 and 32-A be marked for identification.

(Accordingly, the last will and testament of Wilhelm von Opel, the English translation, and the German, was marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit 32 and 32-A respectively.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you examine, please, Defendant's Exhibit 32-A and state whether that is a certified copy of your father's will? A. Yes, I think it is.

Q. Will you turn to paragraph 4, please, or section 4. Will you tell me if I am translating correctly—

"In the event that any claims for a compulsory portion are made, the sum of 500,000 reichsmarks plus 5 per cent interest, given to our daughter Elinor as a dowry on the occasion of her marriage, is to be charged against her or her descendants' share of the inheritance, or the compulsory portion, as the case may be." A. Yes.

Q. (Continuing)—

"The same arrangement shall be effective in re-701 spect of the current allowances which our daughter Elinor is presently receiving." A. It doesn't say "allowances". It says "laufenden zuwendungen", which means everything given to her.

Q. I see—

"The gift of nominal 600 shares of Adam Opel A.G. made to our son according to the gift agreement of October 5, 1931, shall be charged against his or his descendants' share of the inheritance, in accordance with the provisions stipulated in the gift agreement with respect to the accounting"—

Then I will not read any more.

Mr. Gallagher: What is the date of that will?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. What is the date of this will? Is it not November 20, 1938? A. Yes, I think it was a new will of my father.

Q. Does this refresh your recollection as to whether your father made a gift, after your sister's marriage, of a million marks to your sister? A. It isn't specifically mentioned in there. I told you from the beginning I don't remember it was mentioned, only it says in a general way that everything given to the sister should be accounted for. And that certainly would include the gift of 702 1933.

Q. What is the gift of 1933? A. A gift of my father to my sister.

Q. What is the amount of that gift? A. If I remember correctly, it was around a million reichsmarks.

Mr. Burling: Will Your Honor give me a moment? I offer Defendant's Exhibit 32 and 32-A in evidence.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

The Court: It will be received.

(The documents previously marked for identification Defendant's Exhibits 32 and 32-A were received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. How do you translate a word in paragraph 4 of the will—"laufenden zuwendungen"?

Mr. Gallagher: Would you mind handing it to him, please?

The Witness: "Laufenden zuwendungen."

By Mr. Burling:

Q. How do you translate those words? A. It is hard to translate.

Q. Well, what does the first word mean? What is "laufenden"? A. If you are asking me for a legal opinion, I don't know what a lawyer understands by it.

703 Q. What do you understand by it? A. I understand by everything—

Q. What do you understand by the word "laufenden" please? A. "Laufenden" normally means something repeatedly given.

Q. And what does "zuwendungen" mean? A. "Zuwendungen" means—it is a very wide word, you see, in a very wide sense. It means everything given to a person.

Q. Does it mean anything more than a gift? A. It includes, as I see the word, it includes everything for which the other person hasn't to return anything. In my opinion, it includes gifts too, certainly.

Q. And will you agree that "laufenden", in this context, means "current"? A. It means repeatedly.

Q. I see. Your father didn't repeatedly, your parents didn't repeatedly give your sister a million marks, did they? A. No, sir. They couldn't even give her any current expenses, because she was living in Switzerland. So what you imply cannot be a fact, on account of the currency regulations. The will was made in 1938, and she was living in Switzerland.

Q. Do you have any knowledge as to why your 704 father referred specifically of 500,000 marks, and did not refer to a gift of a million marks which you say he made? A. He referred to it—not specifically.

Q. In the phrase "repeatedly give gifts"? A. He specifically says "and future donations", or however you translate "zuwendungen". So there was a provision even included for future acts.

Q. I thought you agreed that "laufenden" could be translated "current". A. There is a sentence following it, and you must read both sentences together.

Q. The following sentence reads as follows:

"The gift of nominal or six million shares of the Adam Opel A.G."— A. No; that is not the sentence I mean, Mr. Burling.

Q. Then will you read it to the Court, the sentence you had in mind? A. May I see the German?

Q. That is the German (handing). A. It says here: "Which our daughter will receive or is going to receive."

You see, the word "noch" implies a future act.

Q. This will is made in 1938, isn't it? A. Yes.
705 Q. So a gift made in 1933 would not be a future gift, would it? A. Certainly not, no.

Q. And the gift which you say was made of a million marks in 1933 is not referred to in the will, is it? A. No, it is not referred to, only in a general way. Everything she received before or, say, after should be accounted for.

Q. Is it not the fact that, assuming you were given the 600 shares of Opel as you stated, you were the only grandchild of Adam Opel that took a large part of the Adam Opel wealth by a gift from a parent while the parent was alive? A. Two cousins of mine had gotten even bigger amounts by inheritance.

Q. Will you please answer my questions, Mr. von Opel? You can understand that question. A. You mean by way of gift?

Q. You heard the question, did you not? A. You asked me, if I understood correctly—

Will you read it again to me?

The Reporter (reading): "Question: Is it not the fact that, assuming you were given the 600 shares of Opel as you stated, you were the only grandchild of Adam Opel that took a large part of the Adam Opel wealth by a gift from a parent while the parent was alive?"

706 The Witness: Yes, that is correct.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Thank you. Now, did I understand you correctly to testify that in the conversations of October, 1931, your father said to you that this gift of 600 shares of Opel would put you ahead of your sister? A. Definitely so, yes.

Q. And did he say that what he wanted you to do was to take the capital, which would yield an income of, say, a million marks a year, and keep for yourself the equivalent of what your salary from Adam Opel had been, and to accumulate the rest on behalf of your sister? A. That is not a good expression—"accumulate on behalf of my sister." She never was to receive accumulated amounts. There was just an accounting procedure.

Q. You were not to take more than 20 per cent? Is that correct? A. Approximately, yes.

Q. And the remaining 80 per cent was to be piled up? Isn't that so? A. "Piled up" isn't the proper expression, Mr. Burling.

Q. Fine. Well, what was to be done with the remaining 80 per cent? A. It was to be accounted for.

707 Q. What was to be done with it, sir? A. It was to be accounted for, as stipulated in the gift contract.

Q. Will you tell me what was to be done with the remaining 80 per cent? You were to get 20 per cent. What happened to the rest of it? A. I don't understand your question.

Q. Assume that a million marks is earned in the year 1932, from the investments which are the proceeds of the 600 Opel shares. A. Yes.

Q. Under your father's expressed intention, you were to take 20 per cent, or 200,000 marks for yourself? A. It was understood this way in the beginning, yes.

Q. Thank you. What did your father say to you was to be done with the remaining 800,000 marks? A. I had to account for it with my sister.

Q. Well, will you explain what you mean? A. I am not a lawyer. It is clearly explained through the "ausgleichung".

Q. Where would the money be placed? A. The gift contract does not say anything about where the money has to be kept. It is just as I tried to explain to you, an accounting procedure.

Q. All businesses are carried on with accounting

708 procedures, Mr. von Opel; but an accountant can say where the money is. What was to happen to the money? Would it just disappear? A. I was entirely free to dispose of it as I wanted. Only in the case of the death of my parents, I had to account for this amount.

Q. I see. What did your father tell you he wanted you to do with the 80 per cent, until the death of both of your parents? A. Nothing.

Q. Well, then you were to accumulate it, if you were to do nothing with it? Isn't that so? A. Will you just read the gift contract; everything is clearly stated in there. There is no instruction in the gift contract obliging me to keep any amounts in this way or the other, not a word of that.

Q. I have read that instrument myself, Mr. von Opel. I want to know now what your testimony is as to what you and your father talked about in Wiesbaden and Ruesselsheim, in October, 1931, with reference to the 80 per cent of the income. A. He told me he wanted his both children to be on the same basis; and if he would make quite a considerable gift to me, that I should account for it with my sister. He didn't want her to be put at a dis-
709 advantage. And for this reason there are many paragraphs in regard to undrawn earnings, as it is translated here, which were stipulated into the contract. And Dr. Hachenburg paid specific attention to this paragraph.

Q. Yes, Mr. von Opel. But I still want to know about the 80 per cent. Isn't it the fact that you were to take 20 per cent for yourself, for your living, and that you were to employ the other 80 per cent of the income in some manner? A. There is nothing stipulated in the gift contract.

Q. I have read that many times. I am asking you about your discussions with your father. A. I just repeated to you what he said, namely, he said he wanted both children to be on exactly the same basis.

Q. What did he say to you, Mr. von Opel, again assuming you have a million marks, which is what you testified yesterday, I think, did you not, he said, "You will have an income of about a million marks from this gift"? A. Yes, he figured it out and compared it with my former income at the Opel Corporation.

Q. And he said, "If you keep 20 per cent of the income from this gift, you will have about the same income as you had before."

Can't you tell us at all what he said he wanted you to do with the remainder, except to account for it? A. I can only repeat what is stipulated in the gift con-
710 tract. You must read the gift contract. I am not a lawyer.

Q. I wasn't present in Ruesselsheim, either. I am trying to find out what your father said. I do not know where the 80 per cent was to go.

In the year 1932, assuming your father and mother did not die, were you to deposit the 80 per cent in the bank, were you to invest it, or were you to buy a yacht with it? A. No; nothing was said about it in the gift agreement. I could freely do with it what I wished. But at the end after my father's death, I had to account for it to my sister.

Q. But you testified yesterday you were to take 20 per cent for yourself. A. Yes.

Q. And that leaves the remaining 80 per cent just floating with no instructions from your father as to what to do with it? Is that correct? A. Yes, correct.

Q. Have you ever before stated the contention that the split, 80-20, you have just testified about, was because of your father's interest in your sister?

Have you ever indicated that before yesterday to any official of any Government or in any court proceeding in any country? A. Everybody who reads this gift 711 contract and sees that the biggest part of it refers to this matter of accounting, must naturally see it.

Q. There is nothing in Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, that is, the gift agreement, that says that the reservation that you are to take only 20 per cent of the income is for the purpose of equalizing the treatment of you and your sister, is there? A. It is expressly stated that the undrawn amounts meaning this 80 per cent, are to be added to the capital for accounting purposes. It is clearly stated in the gift contract.

Q. Now, coming to another topic:

You said yesterday, did you not, when you arrived in New York in October, 1931, you went at once to the National City Bank and inquired as to who was the officer who had charge of the escrow agreement with General Motors? A. Yes, I did.

Mr. Gallagher: I don't believe he stated that, Mr. Burling. I believe he said in charge at National City Bank of the escrow agreement.

Mr. Burling: I don't understand the objection.

Mr. Gallagher: I believe you misstated his testimony of yesterday. I am merely trying to correct it. I believe the witness stated yesterday, when he arrived in New York he wanted to find who the escrow agent was at the bank, and not who was in charge at General Motors.

712 By Mr. Burling:

Q. All right, I will take your counsel's question, Mr. von Opel. Didn't you say you wanted to find out who the official of the bank was who was in charge of the escrow agreement? A. That is correct. I didn't know the name of the official.

Q. And then you found the name of the official? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And then you went to see him? A. Yes.

Q. And you told him about this deed of gift, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was Mr. Pratt? A. Yes.

Q. And the escrow agreement was with the National City Bank? Is that right? A. Yes.

Q. Don't you know as a fact that Mr. Pratt was not even an official of the National City Bank? A. I didn't get this question.

Q. Did you not know it to be a fact that Mr. Pratt was not an official of the National City Bank? A. That is per fectly new to me. I hope you don't mix him up with Mr. Pratt of General Motors. There is another Mr.

713 Pratt in General Motors. But I think he is no relative of Mr. Pratt of the National City Bank.

The gentleman I have in mind is vice president Pratt; I forget his initials.

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 33 and ask you if that refreshes your recollection.

Mr. Gallagher: What is that exhibit?

Mr. Burling: A letter from Mr. Sammis, vice president of the City Bank Farmers Trust Company.

Mr. Gallagher: And dated when?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Mr. von Opel, I wish to state to you that this is a letter from Mr. Sammis, the vice president of the City Bank Farmers Trust Company. A. Yes.

Q. To John Thomas Smith, vice president of General Motors Corporation. A. Yes.

Q. The genuiness of which is admitted by the plaintiff. A. The Sammis was City Bank Farmers Trust.

Q. That is correct. And he is admitted to be vice president of City Bank Farmers Trust Company. A. Yes; they have many vice presidents.

Q. I call your attention to the words "Referring to 714 your inquiry of our Mr. Pratt"—

Does that refresh your recollection as to who Mr. Pratt was? A. Yes, that is the name which I mentioned.

Q. This is a letter by the City Bank Farmers Trust Company relating to "our Mr. Pratt". A. Yes.

Q. And that does not refresh your recollection that Mr. Pratt was not an official of the National City Bank? A. It refreshes my recollection that he was, because it refers to him as "our Mr. Pratt".

Q. An official of a different bank refers to him as "our

Mr. Pratt", and that refreshes your recollection he was an official of the National City Bank? A. The National City Bank and City Bank Farmers Trust is one corporation, merged now at this time, I think not merged but certainly under joint management.

Q. They have completely separate staffs of officers, do they not? A. I don't know the relation between the two banks. I only know they are cooperating closely together. And I think it is not unusual that a vice president of the City Bank Farmers Trust refers to a vice president of the other bank as "our Mr. Pratt."

Mr. Burling: I offer Defendant's Exhibit 33 in 715 evidence, Your Honor.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

The Court: Very well.

(The document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit No. 33.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Of what country do you purport to be a citizen, Mr. von Opel? A. I am a citizen of Liechtenstein.

Mr. Gallagher: That has been stipulated, Mr. Burling.

Mr. Burling: I am going on to something else.

Mr. Gallagher: Then the word "purport" should be stricken. It is stipulated he is a citizen of Liechtenstein.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you acquire such citizenship by naturalization? A. Yes, I did.

Q. At the time you were naturalized, did you take an oath of allegiance? A. No; that is not required by law.

Q. You took no oath of allegiance? A. No; it is not required by Liechtensteinean law. It can be taken any time after naturalization and has nothing to do with the naturalization proceeding as such.

For instance, you will find in the laws that all 716 women don't need to take an oath at all to become a citizen. It is only taken for those who, I think people of military age, and in such cases.

Q. Did you ever take an oath of allegiance to Liechtenstein? A. No; I did not.

Q. Do you regard Liechtenstein as your adopted country? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Do you now? A. Please?

Q. Do you now regard Liechtenstein as your adopted country? A. Certainly.

Q. Do you feel allegiance toward Liechtenstein? A. I do.

Q. What kind of a government has it? A. It is a principality.

Q. At the time you were naturalized, what was the name of the reigning prince? A. It was Prince Constantine.

Mr. Burling: Will you stipulate that the correct name is Franz Josef, II?

Mr. Gallagher: I haven't any idea who it may be.

Mr. Burling: I state I can prove it is a matter of 717 judicial notice. I can bring in the textbooks.

Mr. Gallagher: Well, you prove it. I cannot see the relevancy of this, Your Honor, in view of the fact that he is a citizen of Liechtenstein.

The Court: I think that there may be some relevancy.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. When did the reigning prince at the time you were naturalized ascend the throne? A. I think the former prince resigned. It was his uncle.

Q. That isn't responsive to my question, Mr. von Opel.

At the time you were naturalized, somebody was Prince of Liechtenstein. A. Yes.

Q. What is your best judgment as to when that man ascended the throne? A. Prince Leopold, you mean?

Q. Whoever the prince was. A. If I recollect it correctly, it must have been, I think the old prince resigned in the thirties, I think the middle thirties, if I am not mistaken.

Q. Do you regard your allegiance to Liechtenstein such as it would include a duty to fight in defense of your country? A. I am not a militarist, and I am not used to 718 speak in such terms. If I would have to fight, in Switzerland or Liechtenstein, which I regard as one unit, I certainly would fight for them.

Q. Well, you are not a citizen of Switzerland, are you? A. But Liechtenstein and Switzerland are very closely related. In fact we are represented by the Swiss Foreign Office. And as I could not yet become a Swiss citizen, I decided to become a Liechtensteinean citizen, which is the closest I could come to it.

Q. What does the flag of Liechtenstein look like? A. It is blue and red.

Q. Do you know whether during World War II your country was invaded? A. During World War II?

Q. Do you know as a fact, was it or was it not invaded? A. Well, Liechtenstein wasn't invaded, no. It is part of Switzerland; and they have a military union with Switzerland. The Swiss would have fought for Liechtenstein.

Q. Whether or not war was declared or not, did soldiers, not Liechtensteinean or Swiss, enter Liechtenstein?

Mr. Gallagher: Will you state the time, Mr. Burling?

Mr. Burling: During World War II.

Mr. Gallagher: During World War II—does that mean 1942 or 1939? Will you state the time?

Mr. Burling: No, I won't. I think, if this man

719 doesn't know whether his country was invaded—

Mr. Gallagher: He was interned from 1941 on.

The Court: We will let him answer.

The Witness: I am not aware of the fact that Liechtenstein was ever invaded.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Isn't it the fact that in 1945, Russian soldiers who had deserted to the German Army entered Liechtenstein in great numbers, ahead of the— A. Romanian soldiers entered Liechtenstein as well as Switzerland, as deserters, and were interned, and perhaps French soldiers and maybe Russian soldiers. At the time I was not present there. But there certainly was no invasion of Liechtenstein. It would have been an invasion of Switzerland, and everybody would know about it.

Q. As a result of the inrush of Russian soldiers in Liechtenstein, don't you know the towns of Liechtenstein were abandoned—

Mr. Gallagher: If your Honor please, all this witness could possibly know about this situation could be by reading it in the newspapers or elsewhere. He was in the States since 1940, and was in internment at the time Mr. Burling is talking about.

The Court: He is trying to show what knowledge he kept of conditions in this country. I will permit it.

720 By Mr. Burling:

Q. Is Liechtenstein an absolute monarchy, or is some other sort of government? A. It is, as I say, a constitutional monarchy.

Q. Can you tell me within 25 years when the constitution was adopted? A. Before the First World War, Liechtenstein had a loose relation to the Austrian-Hungarian Empire. And after the First World War, they came over to the Swiss side, and I think that about this time certain changes of the constitution took place.

Q. Does it have a legislature? A. Yes, there is a legislature.

Q. What kind? A. An elected legislature.

Q. Of how many houses? A. One house.

Q. How long has Liechtenstein been an independent sovereign principality, approximately? A. That goes back, I think, since its separation from the Austrian-Hungarian Empire. They were part of it and then split under those rulers. I think it was in the beginning of the Nineteenth Century, if I am not mistaken.

Q. In the Napoleonic era? A. That is possible.

721 Mr. Burling: I advise counsel, and if they refuse to stipulate, I will prove the correct answer to that is 1866.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. What is the approximate population of your country? A. Ten thousand inhabitants.

Q. What is the approximate population of the capital of your country? A. I should say Vaduz is, I would say, about—well, you would not even call it a city. It is more or less of a town, a little town—I think about 2,000 or 2,500 inhabitants.

Q. When did you last set foot in Liechtenstein? A. I think I was there last in 1938.

Q. How did you happen to be there? A. I passed through Liechtenstein.

Q. In an automobile, or in a train? A. In an automobile.

Q. And how long did it take you to drive through Liechtenstein? A. It is a very small country. If you really drive fast, you can go through there in, it depends upon which side to which you go.

Q. Well, Liechtenstein, the main road between Austria and Switzerland runs through Liechtenstein, doesn't 722 it? A. Yes, and also the railway.

Q. And if you were going from Austria to Switzerland, you could drive through in less than half an hour, couldn't you? A. Yes, you could do that.

Q. And have you ever been in Liechtenstein except while passing through it? A. No.

Q. And you were not in Liechtenstein at the time you were naturalized, were you? A. No. I could not go, because at the time I was rather sick and could not go personally.

Q. Are you familiar with the Liechtensteinean naturalization law? A. I only know what my lawyers told me about it.

Q. Were you not told that in order to become naturalized in Liechtenstein, it is necessary first to acquire membership in a community in Liechtenstein? A. Yes, definitely. That is the same all over Switzerland and Liechtenstein.

Q. Thank you. And what community did you become a member of? A. The community of Planken.

Q. Is it not true that the law provides that except under special circumstances, an applicant for naturaliza-
723 tion must be a resident of the community for three years prior to naturalization? A. That is not correct. The naturalization law says that in special cases exemption from this ruling can be made.

Q. That is what I said. The law provides that except under special circumstances one must be a member of the community for three years, doesn't it? A. I don't know. I think it says a resident of the community.

Q. All right. Have you ever been in Planken? A. Yes.

Q. When? A. I drove through there. I drove through Liechtenstein quite frequently.

Q. And did you drive through Planken also? A. I think, yes. It is more or less a little village. It is right on a plateau overlooking the Rhine Valley.

Q. Now, what are the exceptions to the rule that you must reside in the community for three years prior to naturalization?

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, I would like to renew my objection again to the length of this cross examination on this particular subject, in view of the fact that the Government has heretofore stipulated that this man is a citizen of Liechtenstein.

724 Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, our position is that as a matter of international law Liechtenstein is an independent sovereign power, and we cannot look behind its rules. And if my pet poodle were to be given citizenship by Liechtenstein, there would be nothing we could do except accept it.

Mr. Gallagher: Absolutely, and that is the right of the sovereign of any nation, and you know that, Mr. Burling.

Mr. Burling: And that is all we have conceded, that Liechtenstein has done this; and I shall come to the motives of that principality in a moment.

The Court: I had the impression that the point was to be made that under certain conditions the German citizenship would not be given up.

Mr. Burling: That is correct, Your Honor. That is what this is offered for.

The Court: And I understand you are trying to establish the conditions which would indicate he hadn't really forsaken his German citizenship.

Mr. Burling: That is exactly what I am trying to establish.

The Court: I will take it, and we can hear you on it at the end of the case.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Do you know what the exceptions to the three-year residence rule are? A. No, I couldn't tell you that.

725 Q. Did you pay anything to the community of Planken? A. Yes.

Q. How much did you pay to the community of Planken? A. The community assessed me, I think, it was the sum of around thirty or thirty-five thousand francs.

Q. That is about seven thousand dollars? A. Yes.

Q. And did you pay anything to the Principality of Liechtenstein, also? A. Yes. The law provides that 50 per cent of the amount paid to the community has to be paid to the Principality.

Q. So how much did you pay in all to Liechtenstein? A. I paid to the Principality thirty-five thousand and seventeen thousand five hundred—or thirty-five thousand to the community and seventeen thousand five hundred accordingly to the Principality. And sent out several registration fees and so on and so forth. I don't remember those figures.

Q. Will you agree with me that the total budget of the Principality of Liechtenstein the year you were naturalized was about two million Swiss francs? A. About, yes, it is a very low budget.

726 Q. So that what you paid to Liechtenstein in the year you were naturalized is equal to about 3 per cent of the entire gross budget of the Principality? Isn't that right? A. No, that is not correct. Because the community keeps what she gets. Because a community, under Swiss law, has to take care not only of its members but also of the dependents of the members. It is quite a heavy obligation, which a community under Swiss and Liechtensteinean law undertake.

Q. But, at any rate, the sum of money you paid into Liechtenstein, either to the Principality or the community, was equal to about 3 per cent of the budget of the Principality of Liechtenstein? A. That is not correct, Mr. Burling. You cannot take any sum and refer to a budget of another unit.

As I told you, what you pay to the community, stays in the community, and then in turn guarantee your livelihood in time of distress.

Q. You have made that point, but what I have asked you seems to me to be a simple question—

The sum of money which you paid, either to the Principality of Liechtenstein or to the community, added together, is equal to a sum which is 3 per cent of the total budget of the Principality? A. Mathematically taken, yes.

Q. Thank you; that is what I asked you.

727 Do you know the approximate population of the community which you bought into? A. I think they have about, I would say, offhand, four or five hundred members.

Q. Would you agree with me if I told you that the books of reference state that it is 100? A. No; I think it is more than 100. It is a very small place.

Q. Now, in addition to the sums of money you paid outright to the community and to the Principality, you lent thirty-five thousand Swiss francs to the Prince of Liechtenstein, did you not? A. That is not correct, either, Mr. Burling. That is another provision of the law—

Q. Do you say it is not correct? A. Yes.

Q. Thank you. Then I ask you, didn't you previously testify you did lend the Prince of Liechtenstein thirty-five thousand Swiss francs? A. That must be a mistake. I investigated into the matter, and I regret these mistakes. And I found out differently. I think there was an amount of 30,000 Swiss francs—

Q. Will you try to answer my question, please?

Mr. Gallagher: Let him finish, Mr. Burling, please.

Mr. Burling: I am repeatedly trying to get the 728 witness to answer a question and not make a general speech. I am not required to let the witness finish, if he goes on beyond the question.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. The question was, did you previously testify you lent the Prince of Liechtenstein 35,000 Swiss francs? A. That is possible. I don't remember, though.

Q. I will ask you if you gave the following testimony in April, 1942, to the Miami alien enemy hearing—

I am reading from pages 60 and 61 of the transcript:

"Mr. von Opel (going on): And on top of that, they expect the Liechtensteinean citizen to acquire some Government bonds; and so I acquired about $10,000 worth in interest bearing but non-transferable Government of Liechtenstein Government bonds.

"So the whole transaction, including these bonds, which I still own, I think the whole thing was about, let me see, about $20,000.

"How many francs would that be?

"Answer: About 90,000 francs.

"Question: Did those bonds represent a loan to the Prince of Liechtenstein?

"Answer: Yes, the bonds, they are worth about, I should say, thirty or thirty-five thousand francs.

"Question: Is it really a loan directly to the 729 Prince?

"Answer: A 3 per cent loan, interest bearing bonds."

The Witness: You said is it a completely correct statement. I stated it was given to the Government of Liechtenstein. I never paid anything to the Prince.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Weren't you asked, "Is it really a loan directly to the Prince?"

And didn't you say—"A 3 per cent loan"? A. It means the Principality, I mean, not to the Prince personally. I never gave a loan to the Prince personally. It is clearly stated it was given to the government of Liechtenstein.

Q. And were you questioned during the Miami hearing about the political ties of Liechtenstein? A. I don't remember it.

Q. Do you remember saying this—and I am reading from page 58:

"About five years ago there was a vote going on, and they had, I think, one or two Nazi members in the Liechtensteinean Parliament, and they were outvoted, I two votes against fifty or sixty." A. Yes; that is what I was told.

Q. Don't you know that the total membership of 730 the Liechtensteinean Parliament is 15? A. That is possible. I only wanted to express—I think there are more than 15, Mr. Burling—

I only wanted to say, I was asked whether Liechtenstein was, or had connections with some Nazi Party, or any connections with Germany. And I said, "No; in fact, they are anti-Nazi, and there is but a small fraction of the population sympathizing with them."

Q. Who handled your naturalization in Liechtenstein? A. I did not get it.

Q. What attorney handled your naturalization in Liechtenstein? A. Dr. Marxer. It was handled between Dr. Henggeler—

Q. Will you examine a full page advertisement in a brochure on Liechtenstein and examine an advertisement from one L. Marxer, lawyer, and state whether or not that is the man who did it? A. Yes, I think that is a Mr. Marxer. He was a former government official and he is regarded as one of the outstanding lawyers in Liechtenstein.

Mr. Burling: Your Honor, I don't wish to clutter the record, but I will ask leave to hand this book to Your Honor.

Mr. Ingoldsby: May we see it first?

(The book having been handed to counsel for plaintiff:)

Mr. Gallagher: Do you have a translation of this?

731 Mr. Burling: No. You don't need one.

Mr. Gallagher: Do you want to put the last sheet in?

Mr. Burling: I wish to show His Honor the last sheet.

(The matter referred to was handed up.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you examine Section 14 of the Liechtensteinean citizenship law for a moment? A. Yes.

Q. Will you see if I translate correctly—

"The Government or an agency authorized by it shall accept the oath after citizenship has been granted.

"The oath of citizenship shall be"—

A. I can't translate it so fast.

Q. I see. A. You see clearly expressed here, Mr. Burling, that the oath has nothing to do with the naturalization.

Q. Will you translate it? A. It is only an additional device which can be taken or cannot be taken. It is entirely up to the government what they do, and it clearly states that all females are exempt from it.

Q. Doesn't it provide that males of age are not exempt from it? A. I cannot tell you in detail what their 732 customs and rules are.

Q. What is your real name, in full? A. Fritz von Opel.

Q. Isn't it Baron Fritz von Opel? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever held yourself out to be a Baron? A. No, sir; I protested it wherever I could.

Q. Isn't it the fact that you repeatedly were addressed as Baron, by business associates? A. No. Many people, for instance, if you will read Miami or Palm Beach newspapers, you will see they always make over any Europeans; they make a "count" or "Baron" out of it. It is a kind of nobility, and if people want to be polite they can even address you as Baron, and it isn't very wrong because it is the lowest rank of nobility.

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 34-A and ask you if it refreshes your recollection as to whether business associates addressed you as "Baron". It begins, in English, "My Dear Baron", doesn't it? A. Yes, it does.

Q. And did you receive that letter? A. I can't remember it, but it is perfectly possible.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

733 (The document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 34-A.)

The Witness: As I told you, it is a polite way of addressing people of nobility.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 35-A and ask you if that refreshes your recollection as to whether you were ever addressed as "Baron" by business associates? A. Yes, that is again a letter of Dr. Henggeler. If you compare those letters, written before 1936, or I would say 1935, you will see it was given up by Dr. Henggeler, on my wish.

Q. But at any rate Dr. Henggeler in 1934 corresponded with you as "My Dear Baron"? A. Yes, until I protested to him and said he should leave this monkey business out.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Are these offered only as proof of the fact that he was addressed as "Baron"?

Mr. Burling: That is right. These documents are offered only for the salutation. In each case it is "My Dear Baron".

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

(The document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 35-A.)

The Witness: At the enemy alien hearings in Miami, I formally protested the misuse of this word "Baron."

734 Br. Mr. Burling:

Q. Isn't it true you quite commonly told people you were "Baron" until the year 1940 or 1941, until which time or at which time your attorney, Mr. Isadore Kressel, said to you, in words or in substance. "This Baron stuff doesn't go over very well in America, and I advise you to drop it"? A. I do not remember it, Mr. Burling. That is fantastic, because I never used this title, and my name, which was quite famous in sports world, was always good enough for me—Fritz von Opel, manufacturer of households goods.

Q. Did you ever tell anyone Mr. Isadore Kressel or any other lawyer had ever told you to abandon the use of the title "Baron"?

Mr. Gallagher: We object, Your Honor, to that line of questioning.

On what basis are you asking that, Mr. Burling?

Mr. Burling: It will be shown in the next question.

Mr. Gallagher: I want you to particularize it before we answer it.

The Court: What is the question?

The Reporter (reading): "Question: Did you ever tell anyone Mr. Isadore Kressel or any other lawyer had ever told you to abandon the use of the title Baron?"

The Witness: I never used this title; so there was no reason for anybody to advise me differently.

735 By Mr. Burling:

Q. So that the answer to my question is no? Is that correct? A. I am not aware I ever used this title on my own.

Q. Are you unable to answer my question? A. Would you please repeat it?

Q. Did you ever tell anyone that your lawyer, or in particular Mr. Isadore Kressel, had advised you to abandon the use of the title "Baron"? A. That seems hardly possible, Mr. Burling.

Q. Did you ever tell Mr. J. Mason Haughland? A. I never used this title.

Q. Did you ever tell Mr. J. Mason Haughland that Isadore Kressel or some other lawyer had advised you to drop the use of the title "Baron"? A. It is fully impossible, because I never used this title. So there never was any reason for me to tell anybody that anybody else advised me about it.

Q. Whether or not there was a reason, did you tell Mr. Haughland that? A. Never.

Q. Thank you. Have you ever bribed any official in any country? A. I am not aware of this fact, Mr. Burling.

Mr. Gallagher: We will have to ask Mr. Burling to 736 particularize on that question, again, Your Honor.

Mr. Burling: I have a right, I submit, Your Honor, to ask a general question and then come to the particular question.

The Court: I think a bribery of any person would be too remote. I sustain the objection to that.

Mr. Burling: Your Honor, I offer it on two grounds: One, the witness has previously testified inconsistently concerning bribery, and his inconsistent testimony goes to his credibility.

The Court: Well, I am not going to try a bribery case here—not unless you bring it in with something connected with this case. I will have to sustain the objection, on the ground it is general.

Mr. Burling: But, if Your Honor please, the principal purpose of this is to show a series of inconsistent statements concerning bribery, made under oath, which goes directly to credibility, I submit.

The Court: You will have to give me authorities on that.

Mr. Burling: If I can show that the witness has testified under oath, or testified to Government interrogators with two diametrically opposite stories concerning a particular incident involving bribery, then one of those must be false.

The Court: Well, it would not be proper cross examination anyway. If you prove that independently, I 737. will consider it.

Mr. Burling: The independent proof would be to ask him if he did not testify concerning certain matters.

The Court: I don't follow you at all. You say you want to prove by some other witness that he testified?

Mr. Burling: No, Your Honor. I have statements from this witness which it is impossible to reconcile; so that one of them or the other of them must be false. And I say that goes to the general credibility of the witness.

The Court: You mean with respect to bribery?

Mr. Burling: No, with regard to any issue. If this man testified one way at one time, and another way at another time—

The Court: With regard to this case?

Mr. Burling: The bribery relates to the proceedings which are the subject of the stipulation this morning, Your Honor.

The Court: The proceedings where?

Mr. Burling: The German proceedings, the subject of the argument before Your Honor at the close of yesterday's session, and the subject of the stipulation which Mr. Gallagher read this morning, that there was a proceeding in Germany as a result of which a fine of three and a half million reichsmarks was imposed on this witness' father.

The Court: And you want to bring that out in this 738 proceeding, that this man was guilty of bribery? Is that it?

Mr. Burling: No, Your Honor. I want to bring out that this man subsequently has told diametrically opposite stories concerning bribery in those proceedings, for the purpose, and for the sole purpose, of showing that he has testified in inconsistent patterns, so that some of his testimony must have been false. And I say that any showing of false testimony goes to his credibility.

Mr. Ingoldsby: May I be heard on that, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Your Honor, if the credibility of the witness—or let me put it this way:

If Mr. Burling is attempting to show the lack of credibility of the witness, because of the offensive bribery, then of course there are very definite rules governing how that shall be shown. But I don't think he will contend for one moment there was ever any conviction, or that there was evidence of any bribery.

All he wants to examine concerning at this time, apparently from what he says, is two inconsistent statements.

If I might make my point clear, because I think it will undoubtedly arise in connection with further cross examination of this witness, I would like to state that Mr.
von Opel is about 49 years of age. You can see from 739 the testimony so far how involved his activities have been, in taxes, in gifts, in business, and in a thousand and one things.

And I very definitely submit to Your Honor that it is inconsistent to take every return which has ever been filed and try and show that one is inconsistent with the other, for example.

The Court: That doesn't go to the admissibility of it, the age of a transaction. I am perfectly willing to have you gentlemen present authorities on it, if it is that important. I don't recall that we have stopped the trial of a case to prove inconsistent statements in regard to disconnected matters. That is my recollection. If you have authorities on it, and it is important, I will be glad to hear you.

Mr. Burling: These matters are not disconnected, if Your Honor please.

The Court: That is what I want to find out. You started out to ask him, and the question was objected to, if he ever made a statement admitting bribing anybody; and I sustained the objection to that question as too general and too remote. If you will let me know, at the conclusion of this recess, the questions you want to ask, and show the connection, and present to me the authorities I lack to let you go on to prove prior inconsistent statements in regard to other matters in order to impeach his credibility, I will be glad to hear you on that.

I have to go to a meeting of the Court in General Term; but I think I will be back at 2 o'clock, or, if not, perhaps five minutes later. But you can make it 2 o'clock.

(Accordingly, at 12:25 p.m. the luncheon recess was taken until 2 o'clock.)

AFTERNOON SESSION

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, I desire at this time to withdraw the question to which objection was made, without prejudice to my re-introducing it tomorrow, if we can find authority tonight.

The Court: All right. I have had my law clerk do a little research on it, but I have had such a lengthy session with the Court that I haven't had a chance to look into it myself. So that will be all right.

Mr. Burling: I am not going back in general to this topic, Your Honor. But I find I omitted one question on the subject of Liechtenstein.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Is it not a fact, Mr. von Opel, that in the process of acquiring Liechtensteinean nationality there was a special act of the Liechtensteinean Legislature enacted? A. Yes, sir.

741 Q. What does the address Hohenzollern Strasse 6 in Berland mean to you? A. I don't remember this address.

The Court (to the witness): What did you say?

The Witness: I don't remember the address, Your Honor.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Do you know whether or not it is a fact that there was a street in Berlin called "Hohenzollern Strasse," the name of which was changed to "Graf Spee Strasse"? A. That is possible.

Q. Have you ever or frequently been at either 6 or 12, at Hohenzollern Strasse or Graf Spee Strasse? A. I don't remember those street names, Mr. Burling.

Q. You do not recall either address? A. No.

Q. And you never had an apartment in a building having one of those addresses? A. I don't remember it. It is perfectly possible that friends of mine lived there, which I visited.

Q. Is it the fact that you maintained, either in your own name or in the name of someone else, an apartment at that address? A. No, sir.

Q. You are certain that that is not the fact? A.

742 No.

Q. What connection, if any, did your father have with the Nazi Party? A. My father, in 1933, upon the advice of—

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, we object to this line of questioning. We cannot see the relevancy of it. Membership in the party is not at issue in this matter at all.

The Court: I presume he is trying to show some connection between father and son.

Is that right?

Mr. Burling: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: Subject to being connected up with the son, I will permit it.

Mr. Burling: And may I respectfully request the Court to ask that I can examine without interference?

Mr. Gallagher: You don't want to deny to us the right of objection, do you, Mr. Burling?

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, I have no objection to my friends objecting. I do wish they would communicate without interfering with my train of thought, and pass each other notes or talk in a low tone of voice while I am examining.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Your father joined the party in July, 1933? Is that right? A. Yes; I was informed about it in 1945 or 1946.

742 Q. I see. Your father was also a contributing member of the SS? Is that right? A. Yes—what you call a dues paying member.

Q. A dues paying member of the SS? A. Yes.

Q. Will you state briefly what the SS was?

Mr. Ingoldsby: If Your Honor please, may I be heard on this matter?

The Court: All right.

Mr. Ingoldsby: The issue in this case, as I understand it, the Government has conceded or stipulated in the pretrial proceedings, that there was only one issue of fact here, and that is whether or not the property which is the subject matter of this suit is owned or controlled or tainted with an enemy interest.

We submit that if it could be developed by the Government that this property was owned, controlled, or subject to an enemy taint, that is, by "enemy" I mean the term "German" in this instance, it makes absolutely no difference whether he is the highest Nazi, or the greatest soldier in the German Army, or the most lowly non-party member; and I submit, therefore, the matter is completely irrelevant and is only meant to becloud the general overall issue.

If Mr. Burling insists it is relevant, I wish he would state the basis of the relevancy at this time.

744 Mr. Burling: The principal ground of relevancy, if Your Honor please, is that my friend this morning so explained all these complex devices for hiding these real assets, by indicating that it was necessary to hide them because the German Government in 1933, '34, '35, and '36 was putting pressure on Wilhelm von Opel.

I seek to show that it is unlikely this man, who was an SS man, a party member, a man who supported Hitler before he came into power, was being coerced; and that the real reason for all this hiding was not to hide the property from the Germans, but to hide it in other ways, including hiding it from us.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I submit, if Your Honor please, on the statement of Mr. Burling there has been no statement of relevancy.

I might also point out at this time, if this is his theory, we deny there was any such relationship as he states between Mr. von Opel and Hitler.

Now, we don't think in this proceeding to determine whether or not the property is in fact owned or substantially controlled by Wilhelm von Opel it is necessary to go into any relationship with Adolph Hitler or the Nazi Party or anything else. The question is, was it German?

The inference Mr. Burling raises by the statement he has just made is simply this, that he intends to 745 prove that Mr. von Opel was on sufficiently good terms with Adolph Hitler so that he could disobey all German laws with complete impunity. I think that that statement would pretty nearly refute itself. It is inconceivable that anybody is on such terms in any country. It is just exactly like pointing out and establishing that somebody was a friend of Harry Truman in this country, and therefore it was inconceivable that the Treasury Department would be bothering him on income tax here. That is about as close a corollary as we can find.

I might also say, Your Honor, on the very question which is now raised, it was covered by the stipulation which was entered in evidence this morning, namely, that the father, Wilhelm von Opel, was fined a total of three million five hundred thousand reichsmarks—and I don't have a copy of the stipulation before me, and without having the reporter read it, my recollection of the stipulation is that it goes further.

Mr. Burling: It does not, if Your Honor please—not one bit further.

Mr. Ingoldsby: All right; let us get the stipulation.

Mr. Gallagher: The stipulation reads as follows:

"It is hereby stipulated between the parties that a fine was imposed upon Wilhelm von Opel in the District Court in Frankfort, Main, on July 14, 1934, in connection with the gift agreement, in the amount of three and a half mil-

746 lion reichsmarks.

"It is further stipulated between the parties that no objection will be made to Fritz von Opel's testifying that he thought further payments would be demanded by the German Government pursuant to the provisions of the gift agreement."

That is the stipulation.

Mr. Burling: That is not a stipulation as to fact. It is a stipulation that I won't object.

The Court: Gentlemen, I think in this case the motives or reasons for these transfers would be important, and I think I ought to give the Government considerable latitude in developing any possible motive which is contrary to that which you suggest. And I should imagine the ownership in the beginning by Mr. von Opel, who made the transfers at a later time, would be important, that is, at the time he made the transfers; and subsequently, probably, it would be important to know what his relations would be over there in Germany which might make him want to make certain changes.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I think that we might agree to that, Your Honor, that that possibly might have been very pertinent there at the time at which the transfers were made, but the transfers were made in either October or November, whether you accept the plaintiff's position or the defendant's position.

747 The Court: I suppose you could not hold him down to too much exactitude as to time. I think it would be open for you to argue that. But there were certain actions taken in regard to this, weren't they, after 1933?

Mr. Ingoldsby: With reference to the gift itself?

The Court: No—with reference to this entire transaction.

Mr. Ingoldsby: If I might state that, Your Honor—

The Court: Aren't there certain waivers they claim, a relinquishment?

Mr. Ingoldsby: In 1935?

The Court: Yes. It seems to me that that whole atmosphere is proper to go into.

Mr. Ingoldsby: May I ask, if Your Honor please—I don't mean to ask a question—but I simply want to point this out to the Court:

I believe Your Honor has a fairly general picture of what took place which resulted in a summary decree in 1934 against Wilhelm von Opel. The statement was made by Mr. Gallagher yesterday, and another statement was made by Mr. Burling. The only difference, really, that occurs in the two statements is that if one were to accept Mr. Gallagher's statement of what happened, there would be no disagreement with what ultimate determination was made. The Government will agree that that was the 748 ultimate determination in the criminal proceedings.

The place where they differ in the conception of what took place in 1933 and 1934 in connection with these proceedings is found in what the underlings, what some of the people who handled the matter as it progresed along the way, thought about it, and by showing what certain individuals and the German Government thought about the case, such as the prosecutor, or an assistant minister.

The Court: I don't think we have gone into that. As I understood the situation, Mr. Burling objected yesterday to any of that court record of proceedings. He said it was irrelevant and not binding upon this Court, and the like.

I was debating as to whether to permit this witness to say he had certain reasons for making a transfer, you see?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: When you reached the stipulation on the subject—not that that would be admissible for the purpose of my dealing with that situation in Germany, but admissible for the purpose of your asking him a question on it. And I don't understand Mr. Burling is opening that up now.

I understand what Mr. Burling is trying to develop now is that the father of this witness had certain motives by reason of his association with the Nazis, which would lead him to go into these transactions, or acquiesce in them, or have these dealings—not only here, but, as I 749 understand, they went down as far as 1935.

Mr. Burling: You mean as far as 1941, if Your Honor please?

The Court: I mean on down.

I don't think I have to admit it. I think you can argue it a little later on, as to what its significance is. It is a little difficult for me, in these ramifications, to consider the admissibility of all this testimony. I will hear you at the end of the case.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I was merely considering the possibility, Your Honor, if this is gone into, possibly the entire criminal proceedings might have to be gone into.

The Court: Well, that may be. I am not going to rule on that yet.

Mr. Ingoldsby: All right, sir.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I believe the pending question is, will you state what the SS was? A. I am not informed about the Nazi Party organizations, Mr. Burling.

Q. You don't know what the letters SS stand for? A. I know as much about it as everybody who reads newspapers.

Q. Well, can you state what about it you do know? A. There was the SR, and there was the SS.

750 Q. What do you know about the SS? A. I can tell you very little about it.

Q. Well, will you tell us what you can about it, then, please? A. I think it was quite a limited membership in number. I think a much bigger organization was the SA.

Q. What was the nature of the organization? A. I couldn't tell you, Mr. Burling.

Q. You have no idea what the organization was organized for? A. They had so many organizations, and different names; it was of no interest to me, Mr. Burling.

Q. You were in Berlin every year between 1933 and 1939, were you not? A. But I wasn't—

Q. Were you or were you not, sir? A. Yes.

Q. Thank you. A. Yes, I was in Berlin—

Q. Every year? A. Frequently, yes.

Q. You were in Berlin frequently? A. Yes.

Q. And you mean to say you don't have any idea what the SS was organized for? A. I have a general 751 idea.

Q. Will you state what the general idea was? A. It was a party organization of the Nazi Party.

Q. What kind of an organization? A. I couldn't tell you that.

Q. Will you agree with me that it was the Nazi Party Elite Guard? A. I think they were called "Storm Troopers" wasn't it?

Q. What does "Sturm-Abteilung" mean? That means "Storm Troop" doesn't it? A. No; I think SS means—I don't even know what application it has.

Q. You don't know what the word "Sturm-Abteilung" means in English? A. I don't understand your question. Do you want it translated?

Q. Yes, please. What does the word "Sturm" mean, first? A. "Storm."

Q. And what does the word "Abteilung" mean? A. It means "Division", "Echelon".

Q. "Troop"? A. "Troop".

Q. So "Sturm-Abteilung", in German, is "Storm

752 Troops"? A. Yes.

Q. And those were the SA men, the brown shirts? A. I guess so, yes.

Q. And you know very well the SS men wear the black shirts? A. They had black uniforms; I know that, certainly.

Q. And they were the Nazi elite, weren't they? A. I don't know how they were regarded among the Nazis.

Q. You never heard about that? A. I heard about SS, certainly.

Q. And your father contributed a monthly contribution of a hundred marks to this organization, did he not? A. I don't know from my own knowledge, Mr. Burling, because I heard the whole not before the end of the war. And I was quite embarrassed about it, to tell you the truth. And for one year I didn't even correspond with my father.

Q. You learned also, did you not, that your father had been appointed to the National Academy of Law? A. Yes.

Q. And you learned, did you not, that those appointments were made by Hitler? A. He made all appointments inside of Germany.

Q. And you knew, did you not, that your father had his picture published in company with that of Adolph Hitler?

A. He had published in company with the Kaiser,
753 with Marshall Hindenburg, with the Archduke—

Q. Just a moment, please, Mr. von Opel. I have repeatedly asked you to answer my question. If you want to talk about the Kaiser, or Hindenburg, you can testify to that through your own counsel. My question to you is a simple one:

Don't you know your father had his photograph published in the papers with Hitler in the same picture? A. You said "had his photograph published in a paper". That implies that he himself had it published which is not a fact, I am sure of that.

Q. Very good. Was his picture published in a paper standing with Hitler? A. That is possible, certainly.

Q. Is it true? A. I couldn't tell you. I haven't seen the picture, but it is possible, because at every automobile exhibition in Berlin, every leader of the Berlin Government.

whoever it was, conducts at different stands and groups and pictures were taken there.

Q. And do you not know it to be a fact that before Hitler came into power your father signed an appeal to the German people, along with other German industrialists, to vote for Hitler? A. I am not aware of this fact.

754 Q. Have you any knowledge of this fact whatever? A. No, I have not.

Q. You don't know that that was true or not? A. No, I don't.

Q. You are in complete ignorance? A. Yes, I am.

Q. Didn't your father so state in his deposition? A. Please?

Q. Have you read your father's deposition? A. I read my father's deposition.

Q. And didn't he say that? A. He stated it, but I personally have no knowledge of it, except what he stated.

Q. When did you first learn of your father's connection with the Nazis? A. 1945 or '46, after the war.

Q. Under what circumstances did you learn it? A. I don't remember the circumstances.

Q. You mean you don't remember who told you or how you came to learn it? A. Yes, I think I remember now. I think it came to me by a survey of General Motors. It had some connection with General Motors. I think he had to give up his chairmanship of the board.

755 Q. The board of Adam Opel A. G.? A. Yes.

Q. And you think some General Motors official told you why? A. That is possible. I think I heard indirectly about it.

Q. I see. After you heard indirectly, did you write to him and ask him about the story? A. Do not overlook the fact that for about a year or a year and a half there was no connection between the United States and Germany, either by writing or by cables. There was no mail between the two countries.

Mr. Burling: May I have a moment, Your Honor?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. When did you first write to your father after the cessation of hostilities? A. I don't remember when the mail service was opened. I should say it was about the middle of 1946 or the end of 1946, or maybe even 1947. It was closed for quite a long time.

Q. I see. Now, you conversed with your father from time to time in Germany before you left Europe in 1940, did you not? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And he never told you anything at all about 756 party membership? A. No, he did not.

Q. Now, without going into the nature of what we have referred to as the criminal proceedings, your father was in some kind of trouble with the German Government in 1933 and 1934, was he not? A. Yes.

Q. And during those years you were not infrequently with him in his home or in Berlin? Is that true? A. I saw him in connection with this investigation, yes.

Q. You had extensive conversations with him in that connection, didn't you? Isn't that true? A. No, that is not quite correct, because I was in Switzerland, and I even refused to go to Germany. And my mother and my father's lawyer came to Switzerland imploring me to return and to help my father.

Q. Is it your testimony that in none of the conversations which you had with your father concerning the fact that the German Government was taking some sort of measures against him did he ever mention to you the fact that he was a Nazi Party member? A. No; I was completely taken by surprise when I heard such in 1946 or 1947.

Q. When did you first correspond with your father
757 after the cessation of hostilities?

Mr. Ingoldsby: The question has been answered.

Mr. Burling: I want to have it over again, to make sure I heard it correctly.

The Witness: I don't remember the exact date. I don't remember when the postal service was reopened.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. The question of when the postal service was reopened doesn't necessarily determine when you wrote a letter to your father, does it? A. I really don't know what you mean by it.

Q. Did you not correspond before it was lawful to do so? A. Before the postal service opened, you mean?

Q. Yes. A. I tried to get in contact with him, yes.

Q. You did, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. So that your testimony relating to the postal service was designed to mislead us, was it not? A. No, definitely not, because the only thing I could do at the time was to ask a friend who went into Germany to say hello to my father and to tell me how he was.

Q. I will show you—

Mr. Gallagher: Let us see it first, will you please,
758 since we do not have a copy of it?

(The document referred to was handed to counsel for plaintiff.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. While we are waiting, I will go on to another question:

Did your father ever indicate to you in any affirmative manner, either in words or in substance, that he was not a party member? A. I was not aware of the fact that he was a party member, and he even indicated it to me.

Q. He did in fact indicate to you that he was not a member? A. Yes. He—at least to put it in the other way—he apparently did not want me to know that he had become a member. And I was quite amazed when I heard it, because I felt that he kept it away from me because he knows I wouldn't agree to it.

Q. Is it not the fact that in 1940, in the Zurich Railway Station, your father thanked you for having caused him to stay out of the party? A. Yes, exactly.

Q. In other words, your father lied to you in 1940 about his party membership?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object to that, Your Honor. I 759 don't think the witness is required to draw the conclusion.

The Court: I think that is right.

Mr. Burling: I will withdraw the question.

(To counsel for plaintiff:) May we have the document?

Mr. Ingoldsby: May we have a second to look this over?

Mr. Burling: Certainly.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you ever ask your father whether he was contributing any money to the Nazis— A. No.

Q. During— A. No.

Q. But you testified at the Miami hearing, however, you were definite he had never contributed anything, didn't you? A. I was definite that he hadn't, yes.

Q. You were definite he had not contributed anything to the Nazis, even though you had not asked him? A. Yes. He never told me so that he had contributed.

Q. Yes; but you had never asked him? A. I don't know that I asked him, but I always thought I would know about it, if he would do such a thing.

Mr. Burling (to counsel for plaintiff): May I have this letter now? You have had it for two years. I think that is time enough to examine it.

760 Mr. Ingoldsby: Before we go into this letter, I wonder if we might have an opportunity to find out if we have had it for two years, Your Honor? Frankly, I have never seen the letter before. I don't know whether we have it or not. If we have, it is new to me.

The reason I ask for the time at this moment, Your Honor, is that I want to look and see exactly what the order of this Court provides with reference to the Department's turning over to counsel for the plaintiff copies of all documents they intend to use. We will have that in just a moment.

The Court: You want to look at the document again?

Mr. Ingoldsby: That is what I wanted.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. You did testify, throughout the entire enemy alien proceedings, over and over again, did you not, that no member of the Opel family was a party member or associated in any way with the party, did you not? A. Yes, sir; I was convinced.

Q. And you were living in Switzerland for a considerable part of the period between the advent of Hitler and the outbreak of war? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Wasn't your first cousin, Hans von Opel, a prominent leader of the Nazi movement in Switzerland? A. I 761 don't think so. No, I think I would have heard about it.

Q. You never heard about it? A. No. I heard after the war.

Mr. Ingoldsby: If Your Honor please, the reason for taking the time at this particular moment is the fact that we have never before seen this letter which purports to be a copy of a letter written by Fritz von Opel to his father on November 10, 1945. I don't want to be in error. Therefore I cannot state definitely.

But it was either by agreement of the parties or by order of this Court that all copies of documents which the Government intended to use in connection with this case would be turned over to the plaintiff.

I don't want to make a rash statement, as I say, because possibly it has been turned over to us, and in the welter and confusion of documents, for some reason or other we have not seen it. I am simply accounting for the time taken in looking it over. We are perfectly satisfied it is all right, and Mr. Burling may use it for whatever purpose he desires.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, since I didn't come into the case until recently, I would ask Mr. Baum to make the response to counsel.

Mr. Baum: We obtained in December, 1946, Your Honor, a volume of some 200 documents from Wilhelm von Opel—

762 The Court: Gentlemen, I think you are wasting a lot of time now. Mr. Ingoldsby was just explaining why he took a long time to examine the letter. I think in going into that further we are wasting a lot of time on trifles. We will have to get down to the case, now.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 36-A and ask you if that is not a copy of a letter you wrote to your father on November 10, 1945. A. Yes, that is so.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence, Your Honor—Defendant's Exhibit 36 and 36-A.

(The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibits 36 and 36-A.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. How did you cause this letter to be delivered to your father?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object to that, Your Honor.
The Court: What is the materiality, Mr. Burling?
Mr. Burling: I will withdraw it.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you please look at Plaintiff's Exhibit 3, which is the escrow agreement of 1929.

When did you first see that instrument? A. I 763 saw that in connection with talks preceding the gift agreement. It is possible that my father sent me a copy of it to Antwerp.

Q. While you were in Antwerp, you knew in general of the provisions of the agreement, did you not? A. No, I did not know the details. I did not know where the shares were held. And I did not know that there was no provision made for an equivalent between reichsmarks and dollars, or gold, because it was very unusual in contracts of this sort.

Q. But you did know, from 1929 until 1931, did you not, that the 600 shares of Opel stock were in escrow and that General Motors could buy them at its option, or your father could sell them at his option? A. In a general way I knew it, but I didn't know those important details.

Q. Whether or not you knew the details, you knew the essence of the agreement, didn't you? A. I knew my father had retained 10 per cent.

Q. You knew the 10 per cent had been subjected to the escrow and the cross option agreements, didn't you? A. I don't think I knew so much about it. Anyhow, I did not know this most important detail, that they were pledged, put up in New York with the National City Bank.

Q. Did you see this, in the affidavit which you
764 filed in the gold case?—

"Prior to the drafting and execution of the deed of gift"—

Which was Exhibit R to that affidavit? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: This is folio 138, if Your Honor please—

"I had no knowledge of the existence of the escrow agreement, Exhibit Q, relative to these 600 shares of Adam Opel A. G."

The Witness: Yes, that is correct.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. You had no knowledge of the escrow agreement—
A. Yes.

Q. —prior to the drafting of this deed of gift which you said took place on October 5? A. About those details yes, I had no knowledge of it.

Q. You don't say here that you had no knowledge of what bank the agreement is in. You said, "I had no knowledge of the existence of the escrow agreement."

Isn't that right?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Doesn't that go on to say "relative to these 600 shares"?

Mr. Burling: "Relative to these 600 shares of Adam Opel, A. G.," yes, sir.

The Witness: I only knew my father had retained
765 10 per cent, but I did not know there was an escrow agreement, particularly since the word "escrow" was entirely new to me.

Q. You did not know that until October 5? A. No—just prior to the drafting and my talks with Mr. Hachenburg.

Q. That is when you first learned about this? A. Yes, those days. I don't know whether three or four days previous. I don't remember that.

Q. In folio 132, you said as follows, referring to the escrow agreement:

"It provided in substance for the retention of the stock certificates by National City Bank until April 1, 1934, and for an option either to General Motors Corporation to buy or to my father to sell after March 31, 1931, at graduated prices varying between 23,000 reichsmarks and 30,000 reichsmarks per share. I did not know of the existence of this particular agreement until October, 1931, hereinafter stated."

That is the correct statement? A. Yes. I wouldn't say the date October is entirely correct. It might have been the last day of September. Anyhow, in general, in connection with this gift agreement and the drafting of it, in this connection I heard for the first time the details of this escrow agreement.

Q. You were examined by a representative of the 766 Department of Justice in Gloucester City— A. Where, please?

Q. Gloucester City, New Jersey. A. Yes.

Q. In May, 1945. Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. Will you state whether or not you said this at that time—

"Then I was transferred to General Motors Antwerp Continental Assembly Plant, and I worked in the General Motors plant for three-quarters of a year as the manager of that plant."

A. That is wrong.

Q. What? A. It must be a misprint. I was no manager there.

Q. (Reading): And saw a friend of mine by the name of Nicholas Van Sittart, a member of the English Propaganda Ministry, in 1931." A. That is not correct.

Q. (Reading): "The devaluation of the pound was quite a shock to Mr. Van Sittart, because he was an Englishman." A. Yes.

Q. (Reading): "I remembered this agreement my father had concerning this 10 per cent, and I immediately telephoned and my father sent me a copy of this agreement, which I wanted to check and see whether it was 767 proper." A. Yes; that was at the time of the gift agreement. Immediately afterward, I went to Ruesselsheim.

Q. But at this time you said that while in Antwerp you remembered the agreement and telephoned your father and he sent you a copy? A. You will have to get that right. I remember Mr. Van Sittart reminded me there was 10 per cent retained, and he told me to go to Ruesselsheim and straighten that out.

Q. Mr. Van Sittart had knowledge of the escrow agreement? A. Yes; he was one of the managers of General Motors, and he knew in general that General Motors had only taken over 80 per cent, and 20 per cent were left out. I knew that too; but he was the one who told me, "Don't let the same thing happen to your family what happened to mine." He said, "You will lose through devaluation."

Q. He told you, "Don't let happen to your family what happened to mine"? Is that right? A. Yes, certainly. He had suffered a loss. His capital was sequestered in England, as I understood. And he said, "Is there an agreement between the members of your family and General Motors, covering the remainder of the stock sold?"

Q. But your statement made at Gloucester City is 768 that "I remembered this agreement"—and then skipping—"and I immediately telephoned and my father sent me a copy of this agreement." A. That is what I just said.

Q. That you did remember the agreement? A. I remembered an agreement in general, that there was 20 per cent left out of the sale. Everybody knows it.

Q. At any rate, there isn't any doubt now, is there, that this escrow agreement subjugated the 600 shares of Opel to the terms of the agreement? A. Yes, certainly.

Q. And will you agree with me that the 600 shares represented a fair half of your father's fortune? A. It all depends at which time you make this measurement. If you take it in 1931 when the gift was given, I think it then was about 30 per cent.

Later on, after my father had suffered various losses, it then was maybe half.

Now I will say it is even far more than half, maybe 70 or 80 per cent now.

Q. Did you not state, in a memorandum which you handed to the Department of Justice in 1943, as follows?—

"In 1931 he, Wilhelm von Opel, had given me the fair half of his fortune"?

A. That is, looking upon it from hindsight.

769 Mr. Ingoldsby: Your Honor, may I submit that on a memorandum of that type it should be shown the witness so that he might read it in its proper context, if there is such a memorandum.

The Court: If he has trouble with the question, it is all right.

Mr. Burling: There is no doubt counsel knows about the memorandum. It has been furnished to him.

Mr. Ingoldsby: There are a lot of things we don't know.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Going back to the fall of 1931; the fact is that your personal relations with your father were quite cool? Isn't that right? A. No, that is not quite correct, Mr. Burling. If you want to go into this matter, we will have to go into it in detail.

Q. That is what I wish to do, Mr. von Opel. A. And not make general statements. Do you want me to explain that?

Q. No; I shall inquire in detail. A. Please.

Q. Well, starting in 1939, you will agree, will you not—

A. 1929?

770 Q. I am sorry; thank you.

Starting in 1929, you will agree with me, will you not, that the relations between you and your mother and father were severely strained? A. They were very good all through the year 1929, up to October, 1929, when I married. And they remained somewhat estranged for about, I would say, my father met my wife already at Christmas, 1930. So at this time definitely, at least as far as my father and I and my wife was concerned, peace was established again. With my mother, it took somewhat longer.

Q. It never was established with your mother, was it? A. Please?

Q. It never was established with your mother, was it? A. You are very mistaken, Mr. Burling. My mother visited us frequently in St. Moritz.

Q. I see. Isn't it the fact that one of the reasons you came to America in 1929 is that there was discord with your family? A. It was some of the reason, yes.

Q. You have previously so stated, have you not? A. Yes; it was a contributing factor.

Q. Now, in the course of the Gloucester City interrogations, you stated, did you not, that one of the reasons you determined to move your domicile to Switzerland 771 was because you were not on too good terms with your family? A. That relates to the time of, I think, 1932 or 1933. At these times there were still slight misunderstandings with my mother, and particularly with my uncle. I had entirely broken with my uncle.

Q. Were you not asked this question, and did you not give this answer?—

"Well, can you be more specific as to what led you to move your domicile to Switzerland?

"Answer: There were several personal reasons. I wasn't on too good terms with my family, and I wanted to stay away."

A. Yes; it was one of several reasons, as it says there.

Q. And you didn't take up domicile or residence in Switzerland until early in 1932? Is that right? A. I lived there for the first time in 1931.

Q. When, please? A. In 1931.

Q. When? What month? A. I think I lived there from the end of the year to about, I guess about May, I would say.

Q. Is that the time when you said that one of the reasons you moved your domicile to Switzerland was that you were not on too good terms with your family and you 772 wanted to stay away?—

And that relates to a time after the alleged gift of the 600 Opel shares? Isn't that right? A. Yes, definitely. But I explained to you, at this time—

Q. If you wish to testify on an additional matter beyond my question, your counsel will have adequate opportunity to bring it out.

Now, the difficulties between you and your parents, which your marriage caused, continued to exist until you last left Europe, did they not? A. Until I did what?

Q. Until 1940, when you left Europe for the last time. A. Oh, definitely not. You are entirely mistaken.

If you will be kind enough, for instance, to take Defendant's Exhibit No. 27, you will see there a letter written in 1939 from my father to me, where he sends his heartiest regards to my wife and myself, which shows we were certainly on good terms.

Q. Your father and your wife were on good terms in 1939? Is that right? A. I should say so, yes.

Q. When was your father reconciled to your marriage? A. I told you he saw my wife first at Christmas, 1930. When he saw her first, and when he was reconciled 773 to the marriage—then he met her first and accepted her socially, or whatever you might call it.

Q. And, after that, the relation between the various members of the family was friendly? Was that right? A. My relations with my father, so to say, were, irrespective of my marriage, always very good.

Q. And I again ask you to answer the question I ask you, and not something else.

Is it your testimony that the relations between you, your wife, your mother, and your father were all friendly after 1931? A. I wouldn't make such a statement, Mr. Burling. You cannot lump four people together, you see. You see, there are several interrelations, as I told you before.

Q. Was any of those interrelations very unfriendly? A. I tried to explain that to you. My relations with my father, even irrespective of my marriage, and even in the first year of it, were always friendly.

Q. Go ahead, please. A. Yes. Of course, I resented he didn't want to meet my wife, and you can call that a strained relation. But after he met her, and after he accepted her, this relation was then on the old terms. However, with my mother, it took somewhat longer.

Q. How long? A. I don't remember that in de-774 tail, but I should say offhand, two or three years longer.

Q. Is it not the fact that your wife rarely saw your father from the time you were married up to the day he died? A. No, you are mistaken. He very often visited us and always told us he spends the happiest hours of his life with us at St. Moritz.

It isn't normal that a father visits a son whom he hates and stays in the house with the wife he dislikes.

Mr. Burling: I move to strike that, Your Honor, on the ground it is not responsive.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Didn't you say this, to the Miami hearing board?—and I am reading from page 90—

"How long were you there at this time?"

Weren't you asked, first, when were you last in Wiesbaden, and didn't you say 1939?—and then:

"How long were you there at this time?

"Answer: At this time it is hard to say; maybe a week or two weeks.

"Was your wife with you?

"No. She was in Germany once in a while, but she does not see my mother and my father only occasionally."

A. Yes, that is correct.

775 Q. You did say that? A. Yes.

Q. You were present, were you not, in the Miami hearing board when Mrs. von Opel testified? A. Not during her entire testimony.

Q. Well, did you hear Mrs. von Opel say the following words to the hearing board?—

Mr. Ingoldsby: Just a moment, please.

I object to that, if Your Honor please.

The Court: I guess I will have to sustain that.

Mr. Burling: I submit, Your Honor, if this witness was present when there was a joint hearing and Mrs. von Opel made statements in his presence about the family relations and this witness acquiesced in that, that becomes admissible against him.

The Court: I will have to sustain that.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Didn't you say to the Miami hearing board—

"It is not only with my mother, but with my whole family I am not on very good terms. Since 1929 I have hardly seen anybody. My mother accompanied my father a couple of times on visits"?

A. That refers apparently to my entire family. We have quite a large family, at least twelve or fifteen people.

And with the exception of my father and occasional-776 ly my mother, I am practically without any contact with them.

Q. Mr. von Opel, did you or did you not tell the Miami hearing board that you had seen your mother once since 1929? A. Once, no. I saw her—that might be a mistake in the hearing board. That would be a ridiculous statement to make, because I saw her at least—she visited us in St. Moritz at least two or three times.

Q. The question once again, Mr. von Opel, is, did you testify that at the Miami hearing board? A. I cannot remember that, Mr. Burling. But this whole transcript is so full of mistakes and blunders. I can show you the most ridiculous statements on any page of it.

Q. Wasn't it your purpose before the Miami hearing board to indicate that you had substantially no connection of any kind with Germany?—with your own family or otherwise? A. I stated the facts as they were at the time.

Q. Did you or did you not consider yourself on good terms with your family at the time you testified before the Miami hearing board?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object, if Your Honor please. I think that topic has been fully explored.

The Court: I will let him complete this line.

Mr. Burling: I have only a question or two more, Your Honor, on this.

* * * * *

778-780 By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you not say, in the course of the Gloucester City interrogation?—

"I wasn't on too good terms with my family"?

A. I just stated, that that referred to the family in general, to all my cousins, and other members of my family.

781 Q. Mr. von Opel, coming to another topic, Adler & Company is a banking house in Zurich, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You testified on direct that your father in the spring of 1931 was in possession of a bank account with the Credit Swiss, is it? A. I don't remember which bank it was.

Q. A Swiss bank? A. Some Swiss bank, yes. It was not the Adler Bank. One of the three or four big banks.

Q. One of the big banks? A. Yes.

Q. And that credit was 3,500,000 Swiss francs? A. Yes.

Q. And is it not a fact that your father obligated the 3,500,000 Swiss francs in your favor in the spring of 1931? A. Yes.

Q. In the spring of '31 you commenced negotiations with regard to the purchase of the stock of the plaintiff corporation here; is that not so? A. Yes.

Q. At that time the stock was held either by Adler or by clients of Adler? A. That is right.

Q. And the man you negotiated with was Mr. Hans 782 Frankenburg? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it correct that the proposition Frankenburg made to you was to give you an option whereby you could purchase the shares, probably all of the shares of the plaintiff corporation, for 300,000 Swiss francs? A. No, that is not correct.

Q. What is wrong so far? A. You said: All of the shares.

Q. Well, all except the three qualifying shares needed to qualify directors? A. No; all except 40 percent of the shares.

Q. And the option related to 60 percent of the shares? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the further part of the offer was if you were to purchase the 60 percent under the option, you would then lend to the corporation 3,500,000 Swiss francs? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, is it a fact that you obtained the option from Adler & Company? A. Yes.

Q. In the spring of '31? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that time your father obligated himself to put up the 3,500,000 francs in case the option was exercised?

783 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. von Opel, I show you Defendant's Exhibit 37-A and ask you if that is not— A. (Interposing) Yes, that seems to be.

Q. This letter from Adler to you offering to give you an option under certain conditions? A. Yes.

Q. Can you read the signature? A. No, I can't.

Q. But you received this letter? A. Yes, I did.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

(Document previously identified as Defendant's Exhibit 37-A was received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I show you defendant's Exhibit 38-A and ask you if that is a copy of the letter which you sent to Adler? A. Yes.

Mr Burling: I offer it in evidence.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

(Document previously identified as Defendant's Exhibit 38-A was received in evidence.)

784 By Mr. Burling:

Q. And this option was a cross option, was it not? A. That is right; yes, sir.

Q. That is, when you accepted you obligated yourself at the request of Adler & Company to purchase 60 percent of the shares for 300,000 francs and to lend the corporation 3,500,000? A. That is not quite correct. I think the letter refers if I exercised the option that I had to pay 375,000 for the 300 shares.

Q. Yes, but if Adler & Company exercised the option against you, then there would be a legally binding contract, would there not, requiring you both to purchase and to lend the 3,500,000 francs? A. At a considerably lower price, if they exercised, and I only put up, instead of 375,000 francs, 315,000, if I recall.

Q. Yes, but if they exercised it, you were obligated to advance 3,500,000 francs, were you not? A. They guaranteed that the value received for my payment of 315,000 was at least 300,000—

Q. (Interposing): Yes, but my point is: If Adler & Company exercised its option it could require you to advance 3,500,000 francs; isn't that true? A. Yes, if they exercised, yes. It was an underlying idea of the whole deal.

785 Q. And that was your approximate personal net worth in the spring of 1931? A. I had—I think my liabilities were greater than my assets.

Q. At any rate, you didn't have 3,500,000 francs for Uebersee Korporation? A. Oh, definitely not.

Q. And you planned to use your father's money in this transaction? A. Certainly. That is what he promised to give to me. Only on the face of his promise could I do it, or otherwise I wouldn't have signed such a letter obligating me. How could I?

fied the appropriate German authorities of the existence

Q. Isn't it a fact in September of '31 your father notiof the guaranty and applied for a license to dispose of the Swiss francs? A. Yes, certainly. He had to do that under the foreign currency regulations.

Q. I will ask you to examine Defendant's D1A and D2A and ask whether they are not respectively a letter informing the authorities and the application for a license? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was sent to the authorities September 9th, was it not? A. I don't know. It shows the date on the letter.

Q. You have no reason to suppose the date is not correct? A. No, I don't think so.

Q. And was the application acted upon, if so, when? A. I think, already at the time this application was filed, my father was pretty sure that we would not get it permitted, and I at the time, just in those days of the gift agreement, I explained to him that had he made me an outright gift at this time, namely, in April, of this year, I would have had it, and we would need to file applications, but leaving it pending and giving me a loan, so to say, made it nearly impossible now to get it permitted.

Q. My question was: was this application ever acted upon, and if so, when? A. I could not tell you because there must be answering letters, and if you go through, you must find the answers also.

Q. You don't know what happened to this application? A. I know my part of it. I already mentioned that yesterday, and that was drawn out for a long time, and as the time of December approached—how do you say, I attached it in Switzerland.

Q. We will come to that.

You don't know if this was ever acted upon by the German Government? A. There was no positive action taken, and I think even in May, April or May of the following year, that would be 1932, it was rejected.

787

Q. In April or May '32? A. I think so, yes.

Q. Now, I ask you to look at Defendant's 39-A and state whether that is not a letter from the Deutsche Bank und Discounto Gesellschaft, the foreign exchange department? A. That seems to be the reply to the first letter. It is the reply.

Q. And it is dated September 17, '31? A. This one reads to the—

Q. (Interposing) If you would only answer the question. It is dated September the 17th, isn't it? A. Yes; that is correct.

Q. And it asks for additional information? A. I haven't read it yet.

Yes, they ask for additional information, and they say that it will take at least ten days to make a decision.

Q. So that on September 17th, you were advised that the German authorities hadn't decided whether to permit these 3,500,000 francs transfer in Switzerland, and asked for more information, as they said it would 788 take more than 10 days to act on the application? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: I offer this in evidence.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

(Document previously marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit 39-A was received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. And the request for additional information was complied with by your father, was it not? A. I could not tell you that.

I didn't attend to his side of this affair, only to my side.

Most of these papers I saw several months ago for the first time.

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 40-A and ask you if that is not a letter addressed to your father from the Reichs Bank at Wiesbaden? A. Pardon me?

Q. Is that not a letter sent from the Reichs Bank to your father? A. The Reichs Bank at Wiesbaden, the branch of the Reichs Bank.

Q. That appears to be October 22nd, '31, doesn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that indicates that the German financial 789 authorities were still considering the question of whether to give your father a license to transfer the Swiss francs to Uebersee? A. Yes, as I told you before, we were pretty sure we would not get it at all.

Q. Look at page 2 and say if you see some handwriting on the bottom. A. Yes.

Q. The signature is Faust, is it not? A. Yes.

Q. And he was the lawyer at the Opel works? A. I think he is not a lawyer; he is financial.

Q. Assistant treasurer attending to the tax matters of Opel Corporation under General Motors?

Do you recognize that signature? A. If you will tell me it is Faust, I take it for it, otherwise, I wouldn't know.

Mr. Burling: I wouldn't know either.

I offer this in evidence.

(Document previously identified as Defendant's Exhibit 40-A was received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. At any rate, on October the 5th, 1931, when you say your father gave you the 600 Opel shares, you didn't say to him: Then, of course, I will not receive these 3,500,000 Swiss francs, but instead you went on 790 and negotiated for the license to lend the Swiss francs to Uebersee; isn't that right? A. That is right.

Q. That is correct, isn't it? A. Yes, it is correct, but I have to tell you—

Q. (Interposing) You may tell the Court anything that your counsel asks you on redirect examination, but your obligation is to answer my questions now.

Now, on December 17th, 1931, Adler & Company exercised its right to require you to go through with the transaction, did it not? A. Yes.

Q. And that created a legal obligation under Swiss law for you to purchase the 60 percent of the shares of the plaintiff and to advance 3,500,000 Swiss francs? A. So to say, it set the guaranty in motion my father had given.

Q. But the guaranty ran against you? A. Yes.

Q. And your father had guaranteed your obligation? A. Yes, and I had in turn the corporation.

Q. Now, to the best of your knowledge and ability, did your father receive any statement from any German financial office on or prior to October 5th 1931, to the effect that the Swiss accounting transaction would not be permitted? A. No. The foreign fund control had just 791 came in, but it was our general impression that we would not get permission, but up to this date, he hadn't received final reply, and the final reply came in April or May, 1932.

Q. What discussion did you have with your father as to why he thought the license would not be granted that had been applied for? A. The general economic situation, and the foreign funds control laws which had just been issued.

Q. What discussion did you have with your father on the occasion of his making the gift which you say he made on October the 5th, concerning this Swiss account of 3,500,000 Swiss francs? A. At the beginning of the conversation, I told him that—I said: It seems absolutely hopeless that this permission is ever to be granted, and I told him that it certainly was a mistake that he hadn't given it outright to me, because if that had been done, I could have kept it without making obligation, and I further told him that, in my opinion, after he had told the German authorities that this money, this three and a half million Swiss francs were needed to set me up in business in a foreign country, certainly he could not drop the matter all of a sudden because otherwise the German authorities might get suspicious and should ask how it is possible that all of a sudden he gives it up, and what went on there and what we don't know. Do you see?

Yesterday I expressed the fact that I advised
792 my father to keep the matter secret as long as possible to avoid any retroactive action.

Q. But you did come to an oral understanding with your father at the time of the gift agreement that when you could you would give up this Swiss transaction? A. I don't know what I told him at the time. Later on, I think it was after my return from America, if I remember correctly, I told him I would fight some delaying action in Switzerland and ultimately give it up.

Q. What did you say to him on October the 5th about the Swiss transaction? A. On October the 5th I told him what I just have said, that we both had made a big mistake, he not offering me a gift, and I not insisting on outright a gift.

Q. Was it agreed between you whether you were going to keep it secret? Was it agreed between you that you were going to drop the Swiss transaction at that time? A. No, you can't call that an agreement. I merely suggested—it is hard to say—I advised him what to do and I said to keep the matter secret.

It would be better to fight a delaying action and not drop it all of a sudden.

Q. But was it agreed between you, whenever the shares were transferred, that sooner or later the Swiss 793 transaction would be dropped? A. I would not go so far.

Q. It may be that your father intended not only to give you the 600 Opel shares, but also the 3,500,000 Swiss francs? A. That is a misstatement of facts, because it is not—this agreement does not speak about gifts, but speaks about a loan of one year, so ultimately after a year anyhow we would have to give it up, so it was no use fighting a vehement fight for a one-year loan, after I had received everything else.

Q. Did you or not intend at the time of the transfer of the Opel shares to you to go ahead and purchase at least 60 percent of Uebersee? A. Oh, yes.

Q. You did intend that? A. I had this agreement running, which you showed me.

Q. Did you intend to carry out the terms of the agreement, or did you intend to try to back out of it? A. After I had received the gift, I changed my mind in this matter.

As I explained to you yesterday, this original, this corporation was originally intended as an international patent exchange affair in which several friends of mine wanted to take part, and after I had been given the gift of the Opel shares, I thought I should not bother with this matter. It would take too much of my personal time and attention and I already expressed, at this time,
794 I think it was in December, to Adler, that Uebersee—

Q. (Interposing) You aren't answering the question at all. A. I am sorry.

Q. At the time this transaction took place between your father and you, whenever it took place, did you and your father say to each other that we would not carry through the Uebersee transaction, or, on the other hand, did you say: We will go ahead and buy Uebersee shares nevertheless? A. There was no agreement of this sort, Mr. Burling.

I told you before I told my father in general we should not drop the matter all of a sudden.

Q. You have said that many times, but I asked you the same question and I didn't get an answer.

I want to know what was to be done about the Swiss transaction. Was it intended to go ahead and carry it through so that you would buy Uebersee shares, or was it merely intended to fight a delaying action? A. You asked me about October the 5th.

Q. On October the 5th? A. At this time we had other considerations and other things in mind, and the gift meant so much more to me than some loan, that at this time I don't remember if we went into this matter thoroughly.

Q. Whether or not you went into it thoroughly,
795 did you promise your father to go ahead and buy Uebersee? A. There was no promise necessary. He never had any interest in Overseas, so why should I promise it to him. We discussed the situation later.

Q. I am talking about whatever date that is. You said October and I say November, but whatever date this took place.

At that time, did you promise your father to buy the shares of Uebersee?

Mr. Ingoldsby: The question earlier was: Did you express your intention with respect to the Swiss transaction and did your father express his intention.

I think a lot of discussion would be eliminated if it could be determined whether there was any discussion relating to the Uebersee situation on the date of October the 5th.

The Court: Yes, I think so.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. On the date this transaction took place, did you agree with your father that he would buy the shares of Uebersee? A. I think you are mixing up two different things, Mr. Burling.

Q. Will you answer the question yes or no? A. Do you mean Overseas is covered and in the framing of the agreement we are speaking about?

Q. On the date of this transaction, did you make 796 any comment to your father with regard to purchasing the Uebersee shares in any manner? A. No, I did not.

Q. You made no agreement whatever with your father on this date regarding the shares of Uebersee? A. Not in regard to the transaction covered by the Adler agreement.

Q. Did you make any agreement—do you know what the word "any" means? A. Yes.

Q. Any agreement on the date of this transaction with your father regarding the shares of Uebersee in any manner? A. Not on this date, Mr. Burling.

Q. The answer is no; is that it? A. The answer is No.

Q. Thank you.

Did you make any agreement with your father regarding the purchase of shares in any holding company whatsoever? A. My father—

Q. The answer to that is yes or no, isn't it?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Which date is that?

Mr. Burling: Whatever date the purported instrument, Plaintiff's Exhibit 5 was executed.

Mr. Ingoldsby: The conversation he had on the particular day—we contend October the 5th, 1931. If 797 this occurred on that particular date, all right.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I think he has made it clear. Either October the 5th as you contend, or November as I contend. A. What is the question?

Mr. Burling: Will you read the question?

(The pending question was read.)

The Witness: I suggested at the time to my father that I might acquire some Swiss corporation.

I don't know the exact date at which I made such suggestion. It might have been October the 5th; it might have been after my return, and it is more likely that it was after my return from New York.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. So your best recollection is that at the time of the execution of Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, which is the gift agreement, you didn't make any promise to your father with respect to any holding company? A. He didn't want a holding company.

Q. That is not responsive to the question.

Did you or not make such a promise? A. I just answered the question to the best of my recollection.

I mentioned to him that I might ultimately buy a Swiss corporation.

798 Q. But you said you thought that was in November. A. I didn't say in November. I said it was either October the 5th, or more likely after my return from New York.

Q. So your testimony is that it was more likely than not that you didn't agree on October the 5th with your father to acquire the shares of a holding company? A. I think it was no topic—there was no definite promise given by me, if you mean that. I told him about my intentions, you see.

Q. When did you tell him those? A. As I already told you, there on October the 5th.

Q. You testified that you think it is more likely than not it was on October the 5th, but it was most likely November the 5th? A. It could have been both.

Q. Is it more likely, in your opinion, that it didn't happen in November? A. I would not make a guess.

Q. You don't know; is that it? A. I would not make a guess. I am not sure on which date it was, and I certainly didn't make a promise because my father didn't want it. It was exactly as I wished to have it cut out of the gift agreement, so it would be silly for me to procure something which he didn't want.

799 Q. Didn't you make an oral agreement with your father on the date that this Plaintiff's Exhibit 5 was executed agreeing to buy the holding company and put the proceeds of the Opel shares— A. (Interposing) I suggested it to him.

Q. At the time? A. I think so, yes, that is possible.

Q. Of course, it is possible, but didn't you say more likely than not it didn't happen then? A. It was either of two possibilities, before my leaving or after my return. It was only three weeks.

Q. In any event, you did say at folio 138, page 46, in the Gold case, did you not, in connection with the execution on the delivery of this deed of gift:

"My father received an oral stipulation from me which was not included in the document, to the effect that these shares or their proceeds would be transferred by me immediately to a corporation whose shares would be distributed or held so as to safeguard the various interests in the stock or its proceeds set forth in the deed of gift"? A. That is right.

Mr. Ingoldsby: What is the statement? What is the date of the statement?

Mr. Burling: The affidavit of the witness, dated 800 June 7, 1935.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Was that a correct statement? A. Yes. It was my intention that I mentioned it to my father.

Q. Did he receive an oral stipulation from you that you would do this? A. My father, of course, didn't object to my doing it, and I explained my reasons for it, and he told me that he would leave it to me, what to do, and I said I thought I should not hurry things, to wait a little.

Q. Please answer my next question yes or no.

Is it correct that your father received an oral stipulation that you would buy—that you would transfer the Opel shares or their proceeds to a corporation? A. That is what I told him I would do.

Q. I ask you to answer that question yes or no. It can be answered. A. It is an absolutely perfect statement, yes.

Q. It is correct? A. Yes, I think so.

Q. And you had in mind at that time the plaintiff corporation, did you not? A. At this particular time, the plaintiff corporation was—801 Q. (Interposing) I wonder if you would answer this question: Did you or did you not have in mind Uebersee Finanz Korporation? A. No, sir; at this time, not.

Q. Thank you.

But you did think so in the Gold case, did you not, referring to what went on in New York:

"For this purpose I had in mind Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, A. G., an option on which was pending as hereinafter described."

I have read folio 150, page 50, in the Gold case. A. As I told you before, I had first got rid of the obligations. I had only 60 percent of the Overseas Corporation, using my option, so how could I use Overseas as a holding corporation? It doesn't make any sense.

Q. Well, I didn't swear to this; you did.

This is your affidavit, isn't it? A. Yes.

Q. You are not in any doubt I was reading from your affidavit, are you? A. Yes.

Q. I will read a little before to indicate what you said:

"In connection with the receipt of these payments and with these transfers and in accordance with the

802 conversation above described with my father, it was my purpose to transfer the entire amount of cash and securities as soon as possible to a corporation, the stock of which, like the original cost and securities themselves, would be held subject to the terms of the deed of gift, Exhibit R," and then you say:

"For this purpose I had in mind Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, A. G.,"—

A. (Interposing) I spoke about the corporation first, and then so I had in mind Overseas, which was, of course, which implies I could get one hundred percent of the stock, otherwise, I could not use it.

Q. And you had first been told about Uebersee by Dr. Hans Frankenburg, hadn't you? A. Yes.

Q. And ultimately when you did purchase it, he handled the transaction, didn't he? A. He did, yes.

Q. Is it not a fact in December, '31, Adler informed you that it intended to exercise its option? A. Yes; that is what they did.

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 41-A and ask you if that is the telegram which you sent to your father on December the 19th, 1931? A. That is correct.

803 Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence.

(Document previously identified as Defendant's Exhibit 41-A was received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, what happened after Adler advised you that it was exercising its option? A. I told Adler that apparently it was unable—it was impossible to get this three-and-a-half-million-franc loan from my father, but that I would be willing, and instead of acquiring 60 percent of the stock, to go ahead with the setup first intended, to acquire one hundred percent of the corporation for my own purposes.

Q. And Adler agreed with that; is that correct? A. Yes, and they somewhat later but around this time. I paid for the corporation, I think, I think it was around February, 1932.

Q. Again, when you say Adler, we are talking about negotiations carried on by you with Frankenburg; is that right? A. Yes. Frankenburg was the manager, the director of Adler.

Q. Now, ultimately the German Government did refuse your father's application for license to apply the 3,500,000 Swiss francs? A. Yes, sir. In May, I think it was.

804 Q. March, wasn't it? Wasn't it in March. A. Around this time, I think it was a little later. It might be March.

Q. Will you examine Defendant's Exhibit No. 42-A and state whether you don't recognize that as the denial of the license covering the 3,500,000 francs transaction? A. That is correct.

Q. Does the date on this instrument refresh your recollection? A. It was March '31. I thought it was a little later.

Q. Now, after the license was turned down, what did you do with respect to your father's account in the Zurich bank? A. I released it.

Q. What did you do first with respect to your father's—you released what? A. I released the attached account.

Q. You had attached the account? A. I had said so previously.

Q. And when did you attach it? A. At the time when the option expired. I think it was in December, if I am not mistaken, December, '31.

Q. What conversation did you have with your father prior to your attaching your father's bank account 805 for 3,500,000 Swiss francs? A. I don't know whether I had any conversation.

I think he knew what I was doing, that I had suggested to him that I was fighting a delaying action, and that is exactly what I did.

Q. You mean that without any specific conversation with him and two months after he had made a gift to you of approximately $3,700,000, you attached your father's bank account without any further discussion with him about that? A. I told you that I had suggested to him that it would be better to fight a delaying action, so not to arouse the suspicion of the German Government.

For this reason we even retreated two steps. First, he gave the capital, the 375,000 francs, to find an excuse for it. I think he reported that I had gotten that from another group, that I didn't need the capital; then the second step back was that I gave up the attachment.

Q. Will you explain the first step in a little more detail? What did you report and to whom? A. First, my father—I told my father that he should reduce his obligation in steps, and the first step, he told the authorities that he didn't need the 375,000 francs, which I had been promised for acquisition of Overseas.

Q. What else did he say? A. That was the first step.

Q. You said something about another group. Will 806 you explain that, please? A. And I told my father—

Q. (Interposing) Will you explain what you meant when you said you reported something about another group. Just explain that. A. I told my father that not to arouse suspicion of the authorities in this matter, that he had to give some explanation, and he should say that I had been provided with the captial from some friends of mine.

Q. That wasn't true, was it? A. No, not—

Q. (Interposing) In other words, you advised your father to make a false report to the German foreign exchange authorities? A. It wasn't a report. It was just a mention that I had made the statement. He didn't make it; I made it.

Q. To whom did you make it? A. I made—I wrote it to my father's secretary.

Q. You wrote it to your father's secretary? Recommending that your father file a false report; is that correct? A. No; definitely not.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object to the witness being asked to draw a conclusion.

The Court: He said, "No."

By Mr. Burling:

Q. And at this time what government was in 807 power in Germany? A. At this time I think it was General Schleicher.

Q. Wasn't it President Breuning? A. It was '31.

Mr. Ingoldsby: What time is this?

Mr. Burling: At the time that he recommended filing that report.

The Witness: I didn't say that, Mr. Burling.

I wrote a letter to my father's secretary mentioning that I didn't need the capital because I had been provided with this capital by some friends.

Mr. Burling: I see.

The Witness: That is all I did.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. But you hadn't been provided with the capital by friends, had you? A. If you don't call my father my friend—I had the capital in the meantime.

Q. Would you call your father a group of friends? A. No; my mother and my father, maybe.

Q. Do you ordinarily speak of your mother and your father as a group of friends? A. No, not ordinarily.

The Court: He said a while ago what it was.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. At the time you attached your father's account,
808 did you file an affidavit or appear in some manner in a Swiss court? A. I don't know the details.

Q. What is your recollection of how you managed to attach your father's bank account? A. I think I stated the facts to a lawyer, and I gave him several documents, especially the document in which my father had guaranteed this loan to me, and with this document in the Swiss court, he succeeded to get an attachment.

Q. Did you tell the Swiss lawyer—what is the name of the Swiss lawyer, please? A. I don't recall his name.

Q. Did you tell him your father had given you the 600 Opel shares in lieu of this transaction? A. There were two different things. This was a loan, a one-year loan. That had nothing to do with the gift.

Q. Now, what did you intend to do with your father's 3,800,000 francs, if you succeeded in attaching it and getting it away from the bank? A. At the time I attached it, as I told before, that was just a delaying action. I had no intention of using or keeping it.

Q. Wasn't it your intention to endeavor to make the loan to Uebersee and then to hold the funds as your father's agent? A. I could not do that, Mr. Burling, 809 as is clearly stated in the paper, the loan was only good for a year, so that would be really a very short time to go through any troubles of this sort.

Q. Will you examine Defendant's Exhibit 4 and see if it refreshes your recollection as to the name of the lawyer who represented you in the attachment proceedings? Wasn't it Dr. Meyer? A. Oh, yes; Dr. Meyer.

Q. And he was a director of the Uebersee Finanz-Korporation; is that right? A. At this time, I could not tell you.

Q. At any rate, he was or soon thereafter he became one? A. I met him as a lawyer first, but I didn't know at the time if he was a director of Overseas.

Q. And you actually procured a court order directing the sale of the property attached, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. Why did you not go through with the attachment sale, a sale under the court order? A. As I explained to you, it was only a loan for a year, and I didn't want to put up a fight for any loan which had to be returned after a year, anyhow.

Q. And what finally happened to the money? A. It was finally returned. It had been reported to the 810 German authorities, and I think it was later on, if I am not mistaken, and the last part of it was retained by my father with the permission of the foreign funds control for a year or two more.

Q. But ultimately it all ended, and the Swiss francs ended up by being transferred into marks? A. Into marks, yes; definitely.

Q. Now, is it not a fact that until a few days before this transaction, the transfer of the 600 shares of Opel took place, it was your intention when you finished your apprenticeship with General Motors to return to Germany to live? A. My father always wished me to return to Germany. He had, so to say, a head and a heart, and in his heart he didn't realize the corporation was sold, and he was German, and he still felt identical with the corporation, and he always had a wish that I would return into the management, and it was even possible, if political conditions would have worked out, that the Nazis would not have come to power, that ultimately I might have returned to Germany.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you didn't make up your mind to leave Germany until you learned about the advantages of being a devisen auslander? A. Before I could learn about these advantages, I had already left, Mr. Burling.

Q. You had already left, but did you intend to 811 leave permanently? A. Definitely, as you see, from my what is called abmeldung.

Q. If you left for a year, you would have to fill out an abmeldung? A. No. You need not. Any salesman who leaves Germany and goes to work for a year, he would not report himself out to a foreign country. That is not the normal way of procedure.

Q. Well, at the time you went to General Motors in this country, you didn't intend to stay here with General Motors, did you? A. At this time it was left open. My father wanted me to remain with the corporation and ultimately return to Germany, even after the gift was made, he still had some hopes, and if I remember correctly, he even went to his lawyers and even tried to make an application for me to return to straighten out the tax matters in case I would return, income tax matters and so on, but it was never my intention to return.

He always wished me to return. I must state that.

Q. Will you state why and what factors led you in '29 to make up your mind to leave Germany permanently? A. The most important factor was that I could not go into business in Germany.

Q. Was it that you could not go into business or could not manufacture automobiles or bicycles under the 812 name of Opel? A. Those were the lines I was trained for, and especially I was very much interested in the bicycle business and would have very much liked to have acquired a bicycle factory, and at the time it was impossible.

Q. Did the agreement of '28 forbid you to go into the bicycle business or merely forbid you to use the name Opel? A. To use the name Opel, but the name Opel, and especially Fritz von Opel, was the biggest asset I had at the time.

Q. But you didn't expect to manufacture bicycles under the name of Fritz von Opel outside Germany? A. No.

Q. Was the fact you could not use the name von Opel in the manufacture of those machines; bicycles or automobiles, wasn't that the fact that determined your not returning to Germany in 1929? Isn't that so? A. I stated it is the restrictions which prevented me from using my well-known name in Germany for commercial purposes that made it impossible for me to return to build up a business there.

Q. I don't quite understand why you could not have applied to get a different name, National Bicycle Company, or the Fritz Bicycle Company? A. Because, as I tried to explain, it was the strings of the Opel corporation, 813 with which all we Opels had been permanently with the factory, and it was our luck in competition, that the name was also the name of our product, and it is much easier to launch a publicity campaign and all those things. It is just the same as Henry Ford or some name like General Motors. Everything Mr. Ford did reflects upon the corporation and makes its business immensely more easy.

Q. Well, since you could not use the name Opel outside Germany, I fail to understand, and I ask you to explain, what relevance the fact that you could not use the name Opel in Germany has to your determination in 1929 to abandon your German domicile? A. I tried to explain that to you all the time.

Q. But you could not use the name Opel in manufacturing automobiles anywhere in the world, or sewing machines, or bicycles? A. Yes, in all those fields which interested me most.

Q. Anywhere in the world? A. I think that is what the contract said.

Q. Why did you ever leave Germany because you could not use the name Opel for this business in Germany, if you could not use it anywhere else? A. Because it was in Germany where the name was an asset. It was much less known in any other country.

814 Q. I understand you had lost an asset, but why would you be better off in any other country than Germany, since you would not have the asset anywhere?

A. You have to balance the advantages against the disadvantages.

Q. But what advantages accrued to a national character in Germany, a household name, what advantage accrued in 1929, four years before the Nazis came into power, for you to emigrate? A. Maybe you have never been in the position I have been in. I feel like a crown prince after a revolution.

Q. Like what? A. Like a crown prince. I was considered the crown prince of the enterprise and a revolution had taken place, and all glamour was taken from my shoulders, so to say.

Q. But you still were a well-known athlete, balloonist, and an automobile racer, and so forth? A. Yes.

Mr. Ingoldsby: That is becoming argumentative.

The Court: I think it is.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. When you left Germany to go to the United States, where did you intend to reside permanently? A. At this time, I hadn't made up my mind, Mr. Burling.

Q. It was just your intention not to return to Germany; is that right? A. In general, yes. Of course, there 815 may have been some unforeseen circumstances, which would have permitted me to return, but it certainly wasn't my intention to return into any position inferior to the one I had before.

Q. Are you in possession of any documentary evidence, other than this abmeldung, which indicates an intention never to return to Germany for permanent residence, prior to this date? A. I think the only official document which counts in these matters is the document you referred to. That is the abmeldung.

Q. Since I do not agree with you as to the legal significance of the abmeldung, I ask you: are you in possession of any documentary evidence which indicates that before this transaction you didn't intend to return to Germany at the end of your General Motors apprenticeship? A. You just have shown me several documents.

Q. What documents, please? A. For instance, the application of my father to the Reichs Bank, where he mentioned of my living abroad.

Q. You were living abroad in the course of your General Motors apprenticeship. I am not talking about that, but I am talking about intending to return ultimately to Germany to live.

Do you have any documentary evidence that sup-
816 ports that? A. I answered you that the only legal documents which is required for the purposes of emigration is the documents I spoke to you about.

Q. And you have no other documentary evidence as showing intent to emigrate permanently? A. No. I really don't know in which occasions I should have made such public statements.

Q. Well, you didn't intend to remain permanently in the United States, did you? A. It depends on about what year you are speaking, Mr. Burling.

Q. The year that you spent here. A. It is the year 1930. The intention of General Motors was—

Q. (Interposing) I am talking about your intention. A. My intention was to stay with General Motors for a while, and that is the reason I took up legal residence in Belgium.

Q. You didn't intend to remain permanently in Antwerp? A. No.

Q. And you didn't have a domicile in Antwerp? A. I had a legal domicile in Antwerp, and I got it with great difficulty.

Q. What did you get in Antwerp? A. I just told you, my legal domicile.

817 Q. Explain what it is. I am at a loss to understand how you did it because it is impossible under any system of law to get legal domicile in any place where you do not intend to remain. A. You can't take up residence in a country?

Q. Oh, yes. A. As I remember, I had to get permission to do that from the Belgium Government.

Q. But you didn't get a certificate from the Belgian Government that you domiciled in Belgium, did you? A. As long as you are living in a country, you had your legal residence there.

Q. I don't mean to embarrass you. You don't know the difference between domicile and residence. A. I think it is a matter of law and quite complicated, Mr. Burling.

Q. I will pass on then.

Now, did you prepare a memorandum which you handed to the Department of Justice in 1943?

I show you Defendant's Exhibit 43 and ask you if that is not such a memorandum, and I ask you to look at the last page and see if your signature does not appear thereon? A. I think that was the memorandum given to the enemy alien hearing.

Q. And signed by you? A. Signed by me.

818 Q. I want to read you the sentence from page—

Mr. Burling: I offer this in evidence,—

Mr. Ingoldsby: (Interposing) May the record show at the time this was prepared by Mr. von Opel, that he was in an internement camp in the United States?

Mr. Burling: There is no doubt about it. I will stipulate it.

Mr. Gallagher: I would like to request the Government, in pursuance of the instructions of Judge Holtzoff, to tender us the copy of the Alien Enemy Board Hearing, if they have found the copy of the one hearing which is missing.

Mr. Burling: Judge Holtzoff's order was that we turn over the papers we intended to use.

Mr. Gallagher. That is not correct. He said to turn—

The Court: (Interposing) It is getting rather late. Try to get this testimony in.

If you want to make a point of that later, you can do it.

Mr. Gallagher: All right.

Mr. Burling: We cannot do it. We cannot produce what we haven't.

Mr. Gallagher: We have all the other hearings except one.

Do you have the notes of it here?

819 Mr. Burling: I don't know. They may be lost. They may never have been transcribed, but I can say I don't have it, and I don't know where they are. I don't know anything about it.

(Document previously identified as Defendant's Exhibit 43 was received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you say at page 12 of this memorandum: "When I had decided not to return to Germany in 1932, I immediately felt I should change my citizenship"? A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Was it in 1932 that you made up your mind not to return to Germany? A. That meant the time when I definitely was sure I would never return, yes. It was shortly before this political upheaval began.

Q. Isn't it a fact that what led you to determine never to return to Germany as a resident was that you learned in the summer of '31 that by virtue of the fact you lived outside of Germany for a year and a half you had become a devisen auslander? A. It had a certain bearing on it, definitely. It came with all the other reasons.

Q. But the German foreign exchange regulations were one of the reasons that you made up your mind?

820 A. There were personal reasons; there were political reasons; economic reasons; and it was one of the reasons, yes.

Q. Now, at the time that the British pound went off the gold standard, you were in Antwerp? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were told, as you said, that you should see to it that your family didn't get in the same difficulties that the von Sittard family got into due to the devaluation of the pound? A. Yes. Not to consider the family.

Q. And it is your best recollection you telephoned your father and asked him to send you a copy of the escrow agreement? A. It is rather hazy about that, at this time. I asked him in general over the telephone, I think, what agreement there was, and he said, the agreement is in good shape, and you need not worry; and I said: Wouldn't it be better to talk it over with General Motors, and that is the reason we sent this wire of September the 17th, I think, to John Thomas Smith of General Motors.

Q. And thereafter you went to Wiesbaden to carry on the discussion with your father? A. That was, I think, at the end of September, yes; shortly thereafter.

Q. Did you say in words or substance to your 821 father that he could get a bad licking in Germany, and that you and he should find a way to protect, to get financial protection? A. I certainly told him in general the situation in Germany was quite a risky situation, and that I, personally, would not like to have any part in it.

Q. Did you tell him that he should see to it that he had financial protection? A. I suggested to him all the time that he should look out for his financial protection, and through my advice I helped him to consider during those years, and if he would have followed my advice more closely, a much bigger part of his fortune would have been saved.

Q. And you learned shortly before October the 2nd that on October 2nd more stringent foreign funds control regulations were to come into effect, didn't you? A. No, Mr. Burling, you could not state it that way.

You say that before October 2nd I learned that on October 2nd a more restrictive law shall come out.

I am not a mindreader, and I didn't know what the German Legislators were going to do.

Q. Wasn't that decree announced a day or so in advance in the Frankfurt Zeitung? A. As far as I know—I am not a lawyer, but I think, so much I know, that the decree in Germany or law becomes effective on the date of publication.

822 Q. Did you read the Frankfurt Zeitung when you were in Germany? A. We had general discussion—

Q. Was it your custom to read the Frankfurt Zeitung when you were in Germany? A. I read it, certainly. It was the biggest newspaper in Germany.

Mr. Burling: Your Honor, we are missing an exhibit. May I merely note that in the record and come back to it tomorrow?

The Court: Yes.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. At any rate, on the second of October you did drive from Wiesbaden to Mannheim to see Dr. Hachenburg? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And you talked— A. (Interposing) I didn't drive from Wiesbaden to Mannheim. It might have been from Ruesselsheim.

Q. Anyway, you went to Mannheim? A. Yes.

Q. And you had a fairly long talk with Dr. Hachenburg at that time? A. Yes; if I remember correctly, several hours.

Q. What did you say to him that you and your father wished at that time with relation to a usufruct?

823 A. I conveyed to him all the thoughts and wishes and ideas of my father.

Q. Will you tell us just what words you used? What did you say to Dr. Hachenburg? A. I didn't—my father is no lawyer and I am not any lawyer, and I didn't say to him any legal phraseology. I just stated the thing, the principles to him, the two principles being that my sister should not be put at a disadvantage, and that in case of my death without heirs, this gift should fall back into the family.

Q. Did you say anything to him in words or substance which indicated that you and your father did not intend that a usufruct should arise as that term is normally known in the German law upon delivery of a niessbrauch? A. I am not aware of the fact that I at this time used the word niessbrauch, and it is very definite that I don't know all the legal fineries of the word.

It took me about ten years to learn about it, approximately.

At this time my father merely stated and said what I conveyed to Dr. Hachenburg. He said I should not have all the income, but said I should account for about 75 percent, which was later changed to 80 percent, with my sister.

Q. You heard Dr. Kornstein testify here the day before yesterday and yesterday, did you not? A. Yes, I did.

824 Q. And you heard him testify about three complicated possibilities as to the intention of the parties to the gift agreement, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. Did you say to Dr. Hachenburg that you and your father intended an agreement along any one of the three lines suggested by Dr. Kornstein? A. I did not suggest any legal terms to him. I just gave him and repeated my father's thoughts, and I can even remember the words I used.

Q. What were those, please? A. My father at the time had quite a considerable income, and certainly there was no reason for him to have collected any additional income because it would have gone to taxation, 80 or 90 percent of it, and it was rather high at the time, and there was no use for him to get additional paper marks.

From the property he had then, without income, he could live for about 200 or 250 years, and it was all the money he personally needed, and my father made it known to me and I conveyed the same idea to Hachenburg. He said it was never his intention to draw anything, and it was for this reason Dr. Hachenburg in his letter of October the 3rd goes into the question of what he called thesaurierung, the acquisition of capital provision for the undrawn part.

825 And I also repeated what in effect my father wanted, not in legal language, and, for example, my father, the words my father told me, he said: In Paris you find the doorman in front of your door which ten or fifteen years before is a rich prince, and now, all of a sudden, these princes are waiters or taxi drivers, or doormen, and my father wasn't sure what was going to happen in Germany, and so he told me if the day should arrive where he had to flee Germany, and where I might arrive in a foreign country, maybe with nothing in my hand but a paper bag, I then want some legal hold on income, and you at the time might be dead, and I might have to fight it out with your family and so even if you are alive I want some legal strings, and if I have to appear as a beggar and ask you for money, I want some legal strings so that I can legally obtain what is due to me, and these words I explained to Dr. Hachenburg, and he put them into legal language, and the result is this gift agreement.

Q. Did Dr. Hachenburg say anything to you about a niessbrauch or a usufruct? A. He explained to me the meaning of it, or tried to explain it to me.

He told me, he said it was a little involved term, but that in simple language it meant that I should set up a corporation, that all the assets should go into the corporation, and that if my father so desired, he could get 826 some income.

Q. In other words, your father could draw income by permitting it to accumulate in the corporation at his option, is that right? A. That is not quite correct because I was to run the corporation, and the gift contract didn't provide for any limitation of my activities. There is not one word.

Q. I am talking about what Dr. Hachenburg said to you.

He didn't explain about rights in personam or rights in rem? A. He gave me a general outline.

Q. Did you know what those terms meant on October the 2nd of 1931? A. I think only in a very vague way.

I think that I always understood that niessbrauch in the strict legal sense means a right in rem, and I also know that I discussed it with Dr. Hachenburg, and he said to establish a right in rem on securities and to deal in the securities in a foreign country makes such an obligation and makes administration and investment policy so difficult, that certainly, he said, it would be the last thing that he would recommend.

Q. Now, Dr. Hachenburg said to you that this was a very involved matter? A. As all lawyers are inclined, he told me, he said, he would have to think it over and make up his mind, and he even said that he wanted 827 more time, and so you find on the first page of the letter, he said he regretted very much that he could not draw a more elaborate letter.

Q. Did he not say, and I show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 7, in the fourth sentence:

"I am sorry that I didn't have more time at my disposal for study of the rather complicated matter"? A. Yes; that is what he said, but I told him we are in a hurry to act, and he realized this fact and so he got to work the same night and the next morning, and made this draft.

Under normal circumstances, he would not have done it, but he was our family lawyer for 30 or more years, and he did us a favor to hurry a little bit.

Q. Well, you understood that he mailed you a draft on the 3rd which was received on the 5th; is that right? A. The letter itself; yes.

Q. And the letter enclosed a draft? A. That was a draft; yes.

Q. Now, did he not state in the letter—I withdraw that question.

Will you state when you saw Plaintiff's Exhibit 10 for the first time? A. This letter, I think I saw it, if at all, after my return in November.

828 Q. Will you look at page 4 of the letter and state whether or not it is not a fact that you and Hachenburg on Friday agreed that there should be a meeting next week between your father and Hachenburg to talk over some complexities of the matter? A. That is what he suggested. That is correct, and that is what my father rejected, and he, in fact, asked me to pay for the entire consultation with Hachenburg.

Let me express it this way: he disliked lawyers and all these complicated matters, and he was a go-getter and he wanted action, and when he read the statement he thought it is just another device to make another couple thousand marks.

Q. Did you tell your father on October 2nd, when you went back to Wiesbaden that Dr. Hachenburg wanted to have a meeting with him and talk over the matter? A. Yes, to my father.

Q. You did tell him? A. It was Hachenburg's suggestion, but I thought it wasn't necessary.

Q. A man you knew to be one of the great lawyers of Germany said he wanted to have a further conference, but you made up your mind it wasn't necessary; is that what you say? A. Yes. Even great lawyers are inclined to proceed to complicate matters some time, more than absolutely necessary, and my father was perfectly satisfied solutely necessary, and my father was perfectly

829 satisfied with those, what is called fundamental considerations.

By Mr. Baum:

Q. What is your brother's name? A. Erich Deku.

Q. And what was the date or the approximate date when you went to Berlin as you have described? A. I came to Berlin in the spring of 1934.

Q. And for whom did you work in Berlin? A. I worked in the office of my brother, where the Company for Industrial Counsel and Trade and the Union Bank were.

Q. Well, for which company did you work?—the 837 Union Bank or the Company for Commerce and Trade? A. I mainly worked for that company.

Q. Did you also do any work for the bank? A. From time to time I transmitted orders of my brother.

Q. Was the Union Bank a Berlin bank? A. The Union Bank was a branch of the Union Bank of Darmstadt.

838 Q. What was his employment there? A. He was counsel for my brother.

Q. Did he have his office in the offices of the bank? A. Yes. My brother had made available to him office space, personnel and everything else that was necessary for the conduct of a practice.

Q. How did you meet Mr. Wilhelm von Opel? A. My brother introduced me to him when he was present there.

Q. Can you remember approximately when you met him for the first time? A. That was in the spring of 1934.

Q. Did you meet him at the bank more than once? A. Yes; I saw him there now and then.

Mr. Baum: If Your Honor please, I would like to make a statement at this time. The next few questions which I will ask this witness, I am asking only for the purpose of impeaching the witness Gross who will testify for the plaintiff later on. This is somewhat irregular, since this witness is out of turn. But I am offering this for no other purpose, in view of the stipulation we entered into yesterday concerning the proceeding in Germany.

839 Mr. Ingoldsby: That is all right. Let us hear the question.

By Mr. Baum:

Q. Mr. Dekt, did you ever have a conversation with Wilhelm von Opel in which the name Daniel Gross was mentioned? A. Yes, such a conversation did take place.

Q. Will you tell us how this conversation came about?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Just a minute. I object if this witness intends to go into an explanation of what his conversation was about a third party, about some other party, and what Wilhelm von Opel said about Dr. Gross.

The Court: I will have to take the testimony subject to motion to strike later. I cannot tell the connection at this time.

(The question having been read by the reporter:)

The Witness: I was with my brother in one of the office rooms, and Mr. von Opel entered.

Mr. Ingoldsby (to the witness making a further untranslated statement): Just a minute; there is no question pending.

By Mr. Baum:

Q. By the way, Mr. Deku, do you see Mr. Daniel Gross sitting in the courtroom today? If so, will you point him out for the Court? A. Yes, he is sitting over there.

840 Q. Will you tell us in words or substance what you recall of this conversation with Wilhelm von Opel to which I have referred?

Mr. Ingoldsby: If we are going into a conversation, I think we might find out at least the year it took place.

The Court: The time and place and circumstances may be necessary.

By Mr. Baum:

Q. When, approximately, was this conversation with Wilhelm von Opel to which you are referring? A. It took place in the spring of 1934.

Q. And will you now tell us in words or substance what you remember of that conversation?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Just a moment, please.

The Court: You had better fix the place.

Mr. Baum: He said, Your Honor, in the bank.

The Court: And who was present?

Mr. Baum: His brother and Wilhelm von Opel were present. I believe that is in the record.

The Court: All right.

(The pending question having been read by the reporter:)

The Witness: Wilhelm von Opel stated that he was about to be punished on the ground he had taken assets outside of Germany in violation of the German Foreign Exchange Control regulations.

841 He requested my brother to be of assistance to him before the authorities concerned, and to intervene in his behalf.

My brother agreed and suggested to send Mr. Daniel Gross to Switzerland to see Fritz von Opel there and to discuss the matter with him.

By Mr. Baum:

Q. Thereafter did you have occasion to have a conversation with Daniel Gross concerning this matter? A. Yes.

Q. When did this conversation take place, and where? A. This conversation took place when Daniel Gross returned from his trip to Fritz von Opel and reported on the matter in the offices.

Q. Who was present at this conversation? A. My brother, Gross, and I.

Q. And will you please tell us in words or substance what you recall of that conversation?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object to that. This, I submit, Your Honor, is even worse hearsay than the hearsay to which I have heretofore objected, because in this instance even Wilhelm von Opel is not present.

The Court: As I understand, this is offered to contradict a statement that is anticipated.

Mr. Baum: That is correct, Your Honor.

The Court: Now, if he doesn't make it, it won't 842 become material. I will rule on it later on.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Very well, sir.

Mr. Baum: Will you please translate the question to the witness?

(The pending question having been read by the reporter, as follows:)

"Question: And will you please tell us in words or substance what you recall of that conversation?"

The Witness: Mr. Gross was evidently dissatisfied with the results of his conversation with Fritz von Opel.

And he stated that in his opinion it would be difficult for Wilhelm von Opel to prove to the German authorities the bona fide character of the agreement which he had concluded.

Mr. Baum: Your Honor, I now conclude the series of questions which are offered for impeachment. The balance are offered for whatever purpose they may serve.

Mr. Ingoldsby: May I have the last part of that statement?—Gross was quoted as saying—

The Reporter (reading): "That in his opinion it would be difficult for Wilhelm von Opel to prove to the German authorities the bona fide character of the agreement which he had concluded."

Mr. Ingoldsby: All right.

By Mr. Baum:

Q. Mr. Deku, did you ever have dinner with Wil-
843 helm von Opel? A. Yes, once.

Q. And when was that? A. This was in the summer of 1934.

Q. Where did you have dinner with Wilhelm von Opel? A. The dinner took place at the Newa Grill in Berlin.

Q. Were you alone with Wilhelm von Opel? A. No; there was present Major von Mudra, Com. von Schwerin, and my brother.

Q. What kind of a restaurant was the Newa Grill? A. It was a very good restaurant.

Q. What do you mean by the expression "very good restaurant"? A. Well, it was the kind of a restaurant which could be frequented only by people who had money.

Q. Did you ever have a meal at the Newa Grill on any other occasion? A. No.

Q. Did you pay for your meal on this occasion? A. No; I was invited.

Q. By whom? A. By Wilhelm von Opel.

Q. Did you have your dinner in the public dining room or in a private room? A. We didn't sit in the midst 844 of the crowd. It was a semi-detached room—semi-private room.

Q. Now, Mr. Deku, will you please tell us in words or substance what you recall was said by Mr. Wilhelm von Opel during the course of this dinner? A. As a result of my questions, and as a result of the questions of the others, the discussion arose over the payment of a fine of three and a half million marks by Wilhelm von Opel.

We were astonished that he had submitted to such a severe fine, without fighting through a regular procedure.

And we asked him how it came about, how he happened to do that.

He stated that it was well worth three and a half million marks to have his assets outside of the German locked safe.

Q. Did he explain what he meant by the expression "German locked safe"? A. That wasn't necessary. We all understood that.

Q. Did the conversation during this dinner deal entirely with this fine you have referred to, or did it cover other matters? A. Of course, we talked about many other things. We talked about polities, and jokes were told.

Q. Did Mr. Wilhelm von Opel ever say during the course of this dinner—

Mr. Ingoldsby: Just a minute. I object. Does he 845 want to quote the conversation to his own witness?

The Court (To Mr. Baum): You can mention the subject.

By Mr. Baum:

Q. Did Mr. Wilhelm von Opel say anything about Nazi pressure during this conversation? A. He didn't talk about that.

Q. Did he refer to the German authorities at all? A. Yes, he did mention them. He poked fun at the German authorities, because they could be so easily deceived.

Q. Was Mr. Wilhelm von Opel in a cheerful mood or in a sad mood during this dinner? A. He was in excellent spirits.

Q. During the course of this conversation, did he refer to a gift to his son Fritz von Opel? A. No.

Q. While you were employed in the office in Berlin, did you ever have occasion to meet Mr. Fritz von Opel? A. Yes.

Q. Do you see Mr. Fritz von Opel in the courtroom today? A. Yes, he is sitting right here.

Q. Did you see Mr. Fritz von Opel in Berlin once or more than once? A. I saw him several times.

Q. Did you ever have any business discussions
846 with him? A. Yes, I did have business discussions with him.

Q. What was the approximate date of these discussions? A. This was in the year 1936, several months before the collapse of the bank.

Q. And when did the bank collapse? A. In the summer of 1936.

Q. What was the subject of these business discussions with Mr. Fritz von Opel? A. The problem involved was the purchase of bauxite mines in Hungary.

The intention was, which was partly realized, to establish there a corporation.

The intention was to have as partners in this enterprise my brother, Mr. Fritz von Opel, and a Mr. Fayer in Budapest.

I was supposed to become the manager of this enterprise.

And I had already received a formal appointment to this position.

Q. Do you remember the name of this company you have referred to? A. There were several names, but later the name of Transdanubia was mentioned.

Q. Do you know whether that corporation was actually formed? A. Yes; articles of incorporation were drawn up.

Q. And where was this corporation incorporated?

847 A. It was established in Berlin.

Q. Under the laws of Germany? A. Under German law.

Q. Did you ever have occasion to make a trip to Budapest? A. Yes; I was there several times.

Q. Was any of those trips in connection with this company you have referred to? A. Yes, I was supposed to make arrangements there for the establishment of an office.

Q. Can you tell us approximately when that trip took place? A. This was a few weeks prior to the collapse of the bank.

Q. I believe you testified that the bank, referring to the Union Bank, failed in the summer of 1936. Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. And what did you do then? A. I was unemployed and I tried to obtain a job elsewhere.

Q. Since the time you left the Union Bank in Berlin, have you ever seen Wilhelm von Opel again? A. No.

Q. From the time you left the bank, until you

848 came into this courtroom, have you ever seen Fritz von Opel again? A. I saw him yesterday for the first time here.

Q. And from the time you left the bank in Berlin until you came into this courtroom, have you ever seen Mr. Daniel Gross? A. Yes; I saw him once when he was a witness in a proceeding.

Q. How did you come to be in that proceeding? A. I was indicted for the reason that I had advised somebody to enter into a stock exchange transaction with the bank, although I was supposed to have known that the bank was about to collapse.

Q. And will you please tell us what was the final result of that proceeding? A. I was acquitted.

Mr. Baum: That is all.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Mr. Deku, do you speak any English at all? A. I speak very little English.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Let me talk to him just a minute.

(To the witness directly): Can you understand my questions? Will you answer me in English, please?

The Witness (speaking in English): I have understood what you have said.

849 Mr. Ingoldsby (to the witness directly): You do understand what I said?

The Witness (himself in English): Not all what you have said.

Mr. Ingoldsby (to the witness directly): Do you understand what I just said?

The Witness (himself in English): Yes.

Mr. Ingoldsby (to the witness directly): Will you answer this question in English:

Are you the brother of Erich Deku?

The Witness (himself in English): I am.

Mr. Ingoldsby (to the witness directly): And is your brother Erich the same man who in 1936 was sentenced to a term of imprisonment in Germany for three years and three months at hard labor in connection with the bank failure?

(The witness having spoken in German:)

Mr. Ingoldsby (to the witness directly): Do you understand the question I just asked you?

The Witness (himself in English): No.

Mr. Ingoldsby (to the witness directly): You do not?

The Witness (himself in English): No.

Mr. Ingoldsby: All right; we will go into the German.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Will you ask the witness, please, Mr. Laufer, if he is the brother of Erich Deku, who in 1936 was sen-
850 tenced to serve a term of imprisonment at hard labor for three years and three months for grand larceny from his brother's bank? A. Yes.

Q. Now will you ask him, in connection with that imprisonment, wasn't his brother charged with stealing about five million reichsmarks from Wilhelm von Opel? A. I don't know. I don't know the indictment.

Q. Ask him if he knows the reason why his brother was imprisoned. A. Fritz von Opel told me on the day of the collapse of the bank that my brother had committed embezzlement on the largest extent.

Q. All right. We will come back to that in a mirute. How long have you been in the United States. A. I arrived here on November 28.

Q. And did the Government pay your transportation? A. Yes.

Q. And they are paying your return transportation, are they not? A. I hope so.

Q. How much have you been paid per day since November 28th? A. I am supposed to receive $15 per day.

Q. Do you have any other financial arrangements with the Government? A. No, I do not.

851 Q. Will you ask the witness how old he is at the present time? A. I am now 52 years of age.

Q. Now, Mr. Deku, isn't it a fact that you first became acquainted with Wilhelm von Opel in the year 1932? A. No.

Q. I want to ask you about the first quotation which you attributed to Wilhelm von Opel. A. Yes.

Q. When did that conversation first take place? A. In the spring of 1934.

Q. Can you place that conversation any more definitely, from the standpoint of time? A. No.

Q. You do not know what month? A. No.

Q. And where did this conversation take place? A. It took place in the offices of the Union Bank in Berlin.

Q. And who was present? A. My brother and Wilhelm von Opel.

Q. So your brother heard the same conversation which you have just repeated? Is that correct? A. Yes.

852 Q. Is he here? A. No.

Q. Where is he? A. He is in Germany.

Q. When did you last see your brother? A. I saw him shortly before my departure.

Q. Do you see him frequently? A. No; I haven't seen him for ten years.

Q. How did you happen to see him on the occasion just before you left? A. He was called for to attend an interrogation at the Department of Justice in Frankfurt.

Q. And how did you happen to be there? A. I happened to be there because I got the documents for the trip to America there.

Q. And it was just a matter of chance, was it, that your brother happened to be there the same day? A. No. I had been requested, since I went to Frankfurt by way of Cologne, to bring him along.

Q. And is it your testimony that that is the first time that you have seen your brother in ten years? A. I didn't see him for ten years, and I saw him again for the first time this year.

Q. Do you communicate with your brother by mail? A. He has written me a letter through my daughter.

853 Q. Just one letter? A. Yes.

Q. Only one letter in ten years? A. He did not write me during the ten years.

Q. Now Mr. Deku, am I correct in quoting you when I say that you attributed the following statement to Wilhelm von Opel—

In the spring of 1934 he said that he was about to be punished because he had taken funds outside of Germany?

Is that correct?

Mr. Burling: I object to the question, Your Honor. In the first place, the record speaks for itself as to what the witness said. In the second place, the question is not in accord with our recollection of the testimony of the witness.

The Court: He has a right to check him on cross. I will permit it.

(The pending question having been read by the reporter:)

The Witness: Yes, that was the substance of his statement.

Mr. Burling: If your Honor please, I agree that ordinarily a witness may be checked on cross. But where the witness is being examined through an interpreter, and where the difference is one of fine shadings and meanings of words, I submit the objection is appropriate. That 854 is to say, I suppose Mr. Ingoldsby is endeavoring to bring out the fact that Wilhelm said he had taken funds outside of Germany, rather than transferred, which is what the witness first said.

The Court: I suppose you can straighten that out on redirect.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I am only endeavoring to bring out the answer of the witness is pretty pat and can't stand much cross-examination.

The Court: It can be brought out in redirect.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Now, did Mr. Wilhelm von Opel make any further statement by this time—and "by the this time" I mean the spring of 1934—regarding what he meant by taking funds outside of Germany? A. I do not recall the details.

Q. So you don't know what Mr. von Opel was talking about when he said that he expected to be punished because he had taken funds outside of Germany, did you? A. I knew that the proceeds from the sale of shares to General Motors, of General Motors, were involved.

Q. How did you know that? A. That was mentioned on that occasion.

Q. At the time of the conversation, in the spring of 1934, were the General Motors shares mentioned? A. I think they were mentioned.

855 Q. Just two questions ago didn't you tell us that there was no conversation further than what you had indicated? A. I said that I did not remember all the details.

Q. Well, now, I want to ask you if you remember any additional details to the details which you have already told us? A. No, I do not recall any further details.

Q. Did Mr. von Opel make the statement, to which you have just testified, in a loud voice or was he telling this as a secret? A. No; he was rather excited.

Q. Now, Mr. Deku, your brother Erich was president and owner of the Union Bank of Berlin and Darmstadt, was he not? A. Yes.

Q. And you were employed in the Berlin branch of that bank, were you not? A. No; I was an employee of the company.

Q. What company? A. The Company for Trade and Industrial Counseling.

Q. Was that company a part of your brother's bank? A.

It was a limited corporation which was owned by my brother.

Q. And what was the nature of the business of that 856 corporation? A. This company attempted to engage in import and export business and to establish itself in the sale of automats.

Q. You also worked for the bank, didn't you? A. Only on occasion.

Q. You did rather odd jobs for the bank, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. What salary were you being paid at that time? A. I was paid 400 marks a month.

Q. That is about $100 a month, is it not? A. Not quite.

Q. Not quite $100 a month? A. It is about $130.

Q. About $130. So you were just a clerk in the bank, were you not? A. I wasn't in the bank.

Q. All right. I won't labor that point.

Now, before you came to Berlin to work for your brother, you lived in the Rhineland, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. And after you went to work for your brother in Berlin, did you move your family to Berlin? A. Yes.

Q. How much of a family did you have at that time? A. I had a wife and three children.

857 Q. And you felt that this position with your brother was reasonably secure, did you not? A. I was glad I had that position.

Q. And you expected that position to continue, did you not? A. I would have preferred to have another job.

Q. Well, you didn't expect to lose that one, did you? A. I have tried to get another job.

Q. All right. Now, Mr. Deku, the way you left that job was that the bank went broke and all the employees got fired, did they? A. No. I left the bank on the same day when I heard that these charges were being made against my brother.

Q. Was Wilhelm von Opel a client of your brother's bank? A. Yes.

Q. And he was considered by your brother a very substantial client, was he not? A. Yes.

Q. And as a result of having Wilhelm von Opel as a client, the bank was able to attract other large clients, was it not? A. I do not know the internal connections.

Q. From 1932 until the latter part of 1935, your brother and Wilhelm von Opel were quite friendly were they 858 not? A. Yes; that was the appearance.

Q. And the only way that you ever got to see Wilhelm von Opel was because you happened to be along with your brother? Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. Now, things were going pretty well at the bank around the 1935 period, were they not? A. So far as I could judge it, yes.

Q. Now, in 1936 the bank failed, didn't it? A. Yes.

Q. And in the spring of 1936 your brother was sent to the penitentiary, wasn't he? A. In the spring? I think it was in the fall.

Q. Well, all right; possibly he was convicted in the spring and sentenced in the fall; but we won't labor that.

In any event, between the spring and the fall of 1936, your brother went to the penitentiary, didn't he? A. In the summer of 1936.

Q. And he was sentenced to serve three years and three months at hard labor, was he not? A. Yes; I read about it in the papers.

Q. That was a very sensational case in Berlin, was it not? A. I was no longer in Berlin at that time.

859 Q. Do you know whether or not this was a sensational case in Berlin, whether you were there or not? A. I must assume that, because it was printed in the newspapers.

Q. And it was given widespread publicity in the newspapers, wasn't it? A. I did not read the Berlin papers.

In the newspapers of the Rhineland, it wasn't unusually big.

Q. What wasn't unusually big? A. The treatment of this lawsuit in the newspapers.

Q. I show you a newspaper dated April 10, 1937.

Mr. Burling: I object, unless the newspaper is identified.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I don't propose to offer them in evidence.

Mr. Burling: I still object, unless the newspaper is identified.

The Court: Well, unless he knows something about the newspaper, too.

Mr. Ingoldsby: In fact, I don't think I will use the newspapers at all.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. You know, do you not, that the man who swore out the warrant of arrest against your brother was Fritz von Opel, right here, wasn't he? A. I do not know that.

860 Q. You do not know that? A. No, I did not know that.

Q. Well, do you know that Fritz von Opel was the principal witness against your brother? A. No, I do not know anything about the lawsuit—the proceeding.

(Thereupon a short recess was had. The following then occurred:)

861 By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Mr. Deku, we were just talking about the trial of your brother. It is your testimony that you did not know that Fritz von Opel swore out the warrant of arrest against your brother? A. I do know that a warrant was taken out against my brother, but who made an oath in connection with it I do not know.

Q. And it is your further testimony that you do not know that Fritz von Opel was the principal witness against your brother at the time of his trial? A. No, I do not know that. I had so many troubles of my own that I did not, I was not concerned with the proceedings against my brother.

Q. You were not concerned with the troubles of your brother? A. No.

Q. And did you know that your brother took an appeal from his conviction? A. I do not know that.

Q. And you do not know that the Supreme Court of Germany sustained your brother's conviction and he was forced to serve his sentence? A. I do not know that my brother spent in jail during that period—spent time in jail during that period.

862. Q. And it is your further testimony that you read nothing about this case while it was going on in the newspapers?

Mr. Burling: I object, Your Honor, that is not the witness' testimony.

The Court: Ask him if it is his testimony.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Is it your testimony that you did not read about this case in the newspapers? A. No, I didn't say that.

Q. What did you say? A. I said that all that I do know about the trial I know from the newspapers.

Q. Did you ever discuss your brother's troubles with him after he was released from prison? A. I have seen him again for the first time in 1948 and the matter had gone by for such a long period of time that it was no longer of interest to talk about it.

Q. So your testimony is that you never saw your brother from 1936 until 1948. A. No, I said that I didn't see him for ten years. I visited him once in Butzbach. That is the penitentiary.

Q. When was that that you visited him in the penitentiary? A. That must have been some time in 1937 or 1938.

Q. And on the occasion of your visit to the penitentiary to visit your brother, you did not discuss the reason why he was in the penitentiary, is that your testimony? A. I called on him in order to discuss with him matters which concerned his family.

Q. Would it be a correct statement to say that Wilhelm von Opel, the main client of the bank, lost between five and six million reichsmarks as a result of your brother's manipulations? A. I do not know that.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Mark that plaintiff's exhibit whatever the next number is for identification, (handing document to clerk).

(Accordingly, the document referred to, a copy of a newspaper clipping, was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 82 for identification.)

Mr. Ingoldsby: Will you show him that, please.

Mr. Burling: Just a moment, Mr. Laufer, will you show it to us first, please.

Mr. Ingoldsby: In order that you do not have to read all that, I will state my next question now.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. If I show you a newspaper clipping which states that the damage to the main client is 6.8 million reichsmarks, would that refresh your recollection as to what loss 864 Wilhelm von Opel suffered. (Plaintiff's Exhibit 82 for identification was handed to the Witness.) A. At that time so many figures were mentioned that I do not recall—that I do not know how big, actually, the damages of Mr. Wilhelm von Opel were.

Q. Mr. Deku, I want to take you back for a moment to the dinner which I believe you said you attended with Wilhelm von Opel. Will you again state the date of that dinner. A. It was in the summer of 1934.

Q. And will you again state who was present at that dinner? A. Major von Mudra, Count von Schwerin, and my brother.

Q. Your brother was there? A. Yes.

Q. You failed to mention the presence of your brother when you were testifying on direct examination, did you not?

Mr. Burling: I object to that on the ground that it is a direct misstatement of the testimony. The witness did mention that his brother was there.

The Court: You may ask him if he mentioned it, to the best of his recollection. He objects to your making an assertion; you will have to ask it in the form of a question.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I did not understand Your Honor's ruling. I will put it this way.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

865 Q. In your direct examination did you or did you not mention that your brother was present at that dinner? A. I think I stated that he was present.

Q. Are those the only people who were there? A. I think so, yes.

Q. Is it not a fact that Dr. Gros was present at that dinner? A. No, Dr. Gross was not present there.

Q. Are you absolutely certain about that? A. Yes.

Q. If I told you that your brother reported to the German authorities after he was in prison that Dr. Gros was present at that dinner, would that refresh your recollection? A. Then I must say that my brother was in error. My brother had dinner on many occasions with Mr. Wilhelm von Opel, and I had only one.

Q. That dinner, again, was in the summer of 1934? A. Yes.

Q. And yet today, in 1948, you are absolutely positive about who was present at that dinner? A. I am certain about the fact that Dr. Gros was not present there.

Q. Will you state again the statement which you attribute to Wilhelm von Opel at the time of that dinner? A.

866 He said that upon the question how it happened that he was willing to pay such a substantial fine, he stated that it was well worth to him to pay that in order to have assets outside of the German locked safe.

Q. Did he say anything else? A. He also poked fun at the German authorities which could be taken in so easily.

Q. Did he say anything else? A. He talked a lot, but I do not recall.

Q. The only portions of the conversation through the entire dinner that you remember are the conversations which you have just stated, is that correct? A. Yes, because that was the most striking thing for me.

Q. And do you recall that he used the words that he wanted to have his money outside of the German locked safe? A. Yes, this pregnant expression struck my attention.

Q. And did you know what he was talking about? A. Yes.

Q. What was he talking about? A. He talked about the payment of the fine and the transfer of the money abroad.

Q. When you say transfer of money abroad, what money are you talking about? A. What I am referring to is the proceeds from the sale of the Opel Works.

867 Q. And is that what Mr. von Opel was referring to? A. Yes, to my recollection.

Q. How do you know that? A. That is what I remember.

Q. Do you now remember that Mr. von Opel at that dinner said something about the proceeds from the Opel sale? A. I do not believe that a detailed discussion was had about that.

Q. I am not asking if there was a detailed discussion, I am asking if there was any mention of the Opel proceeds. A. I believe it was mentioned.

Q. Are you sure that it was mentioned? A. I must conclude from the context that it was mentioned.

Q. You will agree that if it was not mentioned, then the conversation did not make any sense at all, did it? A. That is why I said that I believe that I am convinced that it was mentioned.

Q. Was your deposition taken in Germany while Wilhelm von Opel was still alive? A. I was questioned for the first time about two or three months ago.

Q. When did you first go to the American authorities in connection with this case? A. I did not call upon 868 the American authorithies. The American authorities called on me.

Q. Did anyone tell you to say that? A. No.

Q. Do you know how they happened to call upon you? A. No, I do not know.

Q. Where is Count von Schwerin at the present time? A. I do not know.

Q. When was the last time you saw him? A. I do not remember exactly. It may have been 1936 or 1937. I think it was in 1937.

Q. What is the name of the other individual whom you said was at this dinner? A. Major von Mudra, M-U-D-R-A.

Q. And when was the last time you saw him? A. I saw him for the last time in 1941 or 1942.

Q. And to your knowledge, neither of these individuals are in the United States now, is that correct? A. I do not know that.

Q. When you talked to the American authorities about two months ago did you mention the name of your brother, Erik Deku? A. The American authorities have mentioned the name of my brother.

Q. The mentioned your brother's name to you, 869 not you to them? A. Yes.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Will you mark this Plaintiff's Exhibit the next number (handing document to the Clerk).

(Accordingly, the document referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 83 for identification.)

Mr. Ingoldsby: Strike that number, will you please, I don't think I want to use that.

(Accordingly, Plaintiff's Exhibit 83 for identification was withdrawn.)

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. When you talked to your brother just before you came here to the United States, did your brother tell you about any communications which he has had with the Opel family? A. He only mentioned to me that a few days before Dr. Gros had addressed a letter to him requesting him to pay his old debts.

Q. I am going to read you something and ask you if this refreshes your recollection about who was present at the dinner.

* * * * *

870 Q. I wanted to ask you one other question. Did you make a statement to the American—what—military authorities? A. In this matter?

Q. In this matter. A. Yes, I made a statement to the agent of the Department of Justice in Frankfurt.

Q. When? A. Two months ago.

871 Q. Was that statement reduced to writing? A. Yes.

Q. Did you sign it? A. Yes.

Q. And in that statement did you say anything about a discussion of Nazi pressure during the dinner in 1934? A. No.

Q. I want to ask you, Mr. Deku, how old you were in 1934. A. I was 38 years of age.

Q. Do you know how old Wilhelm von Opel was at the same time? A. I do not know that.

Q. Would you not estimate him to have been a man about 60 or 65 years of age? A. I believe him to be about 60 years old.

Q. And at that time he was one of the leading industrialists in Germany, was he not? A. Yes.

Q. And he was the principal client of your bank, was he not? A. Yes.

Q. And is it your testimony now that he made a statement to you, a bank clerk, which was punishable by death —which could be punishable by death? A. Yes, he 872 was excited, and I was the brother of my brother.

Q. And he made that statement in a public restaurant? A. The statement that he was about to be penalized he made in the office.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I have no further questions.

By Mr. Baum:

Q. Mr. Deku, on your direct examination in referring to the conversation with Wilhelm von Opel in the office of your brother in the spring of 1934, did you say that Wilhelm von Opel said that he had taken assets out of Germany, or had transferred assets out of Germany? A. The question, whether I said that or not just now?

Q. I am asking you what you said on your direct examination. A. I cannot recall the precise term, because I didn't, I wasn't concerned with the difference.

Q. I ask you now, Mr. Deku, in the conversation in your brother's office in the spring of 1934, at which your brother and Wilhelm von Opel were present, did Wilhelm von Opel state that he had taken assets out of Germany, or had transferred assets out of Germany? A. I cannot recall the precise terms that we used.

Q. Referring to your dinner with Wilhelm von 873 Opel and the other gentlemen in the Newa Grill, was there any circumstance of that dinner which fixed it in your mind? A. Yes, that was the only time that I ever had dinner with Mr. Wilhelm von Opel.

Q. And I believe you testified in response to Mr. Ingoldsby's questions that you knew that Wilhelm von Opel was a very prominent man in Germany is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. And did you ever have dinner with Wilhelm von Opel at any other time? A. No.

Q. Now, Mr. Deku, Mr. Ingoldsby asked you about being questioned in Germany some two months ago. You were questioned by representatives of the Department of Justice, is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. Did any attorney of the Department of Justice who questioned you in the United States question you in Germany? A. No.

Mr. Baum: That is all.

Mr. Ingoldsby: No questions.

The Court: You are excused.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. Burling: Your Honor, I am not going on indefinitely about Liechtenstein, but yesterday my friends re-
874 fused to stipulate some facts which I think the Court will take judicial notice of, to compare against the Witness von Opel's testimony concerning the country of which he claims to be a citizen.

At this time I request the Court to take judicial notice, on the basis of a standard book of reference, the Information Please Almanac for 1947, that Liechtenstein became independent in 1866, and the reigning prince is Franz Josef II, who succeeded to the throne in 1938, and that the Landtag, or legislative chamber of Liechtenstein has 15 members.

The Court: Any objection?

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

The Court: All right, I will take judicial notice of that. Is there any reason why Mr. Deku may not return to Germany?

Mr. Ingoldsby: We have no further need for him.

Mr. Burling: We will make arrangements, then, to return him as soon as we can.

The Court: All right. Mr. von Opel, I believe, will resume the stand.

Whereupon—FRITZ VON OPEL, resumed the stand, and having been previously duly sworn, was examined and testified further as follows:

Cross Examination—(Continued)

Mr. Burling (To the Clerk): Will you mark this? (Hand ing a document to the Clerk)

875 (Accordingly, a document purporting to be a copy of the Frankfurt Zeitung, was marked Defendant's Exhibit 44 for identification.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Do you recall, Mr. von Opel, that you testified yesterday, that while you were in Germany you customarily read the Frankfurter Zeitung? A. Please?

Q. Did you not testify yesterday that it was your custom to read the Frankfurter Zeitung when you were in Germany? A. Yes, definitely.

Q. Now I will ask you to look at Defendant's Exhibit 44, and I will ask you if you will agree that that is a photostat of a page from the Frankfurt Zeitung for August 1, 1931. A. Yes, I definitely read that.

Q. I invite your attention to an article appearing in the middle of the page, "Verschaerfung der Devisenvorschriften". A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you think that you read that? A. I don't remember this, but it was common knowledge.

Q. And will you read the article now, to yourself. (Pause) A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: I am sorry, I misspoke myself, if Your Honor please, I meant to say the date of this is October 1, 1931.

876 By Mr. Burling:

Q. And the substance of this article is that it is expected that more stringent foreign exchange regulations — A. Not exactly, Mr. Burling.

Q. Will you state what the substance is? A. In some part of it says that one expects the reflow of capital into Germany.

Q. But is it not true that in so far as it relates to foreign exchange regulations, it states that a tightening of the regulations is expected to come momentarily? A. This article you referred to plays both possibilities one against the other.

Q. Do you think you read this article? A. I can't remember that.

Q. What is your best judgment now as to whether you knew on October 2 either that new foreign exchange regulations had been promulgated, or were about to be promulgated? A. I think it was generally expected.

Q. Going back to your conversations in Wiesbaden after your return from Mannheim, what did your father say to you, or what did you say to your father about calling in a new lawyer? A. We discussed this summary draft of this gift agreement in detail.

Q. You did not have a draft, did you, on the 2nd of 877 October? A. Definitely, yes; this draft I am referring to is the one Dr. Hachenburg gave me. It is called Grundgedanken.

Q. Dr. Hachenburg did not hand you any draft on October 2, did he? A. I am speaking about the paper called Grundgedanken, which Mr. Hachenburg gave me on October 2.

Q. That is translated, the heading of that, "Fundamental Considerations"? A. That is the English translation, yes.

Q. You call that a draft? A. I call it in so far a draft as this was used essentially for the final gift agreement. My father even called this draft too long, and wanted it cut.

Q. What was said about calling in a new lawyer? A. I don't remember exactly at what time my father mentioned Dr. Wronker-Flatow, it might have been prior to the 5th, or it might have been in the morning of the 5th.

Q. What is your best judgment as to the day on which he mentioned calling in Wronker-Flatow? A. It would be difficult to make a guess after so long time.

Q. At any rate, what did your father say to you, and what did you say to him about calling in this person? A. As I just stated—

878 Mr. Gallagher: Just a minute.

Mr. Burling: May I ask counsel not to interrupt. If there is an objection, it should be addressed to the Court. It is not proper to call out.

The Witness: As I just stated, my father went over this draft, he checked so all the provisions he wanted were in it, and then I guess it was Monday morning when he asked Dr. Wronker-Flatow to shorten it a little bit and put it in proper shape.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did your father say anything to you about why he wishes to abandon the draft prepared by the leading lawyer of Germany, and have some other lawyer put it in proper shape? A. This, what we now call draft, and what you translated "Summary Considerations" were the paper along which Dr. Wronker-Flatow finally drafted the gift agreement. In some parts it nearly verbally follows his outline.

Q. Mr. von Opel, you have no trouble understanding English, do you? A. Sometimes, a little bit.

Q. When you fail to understand my question, will you indicate it, and when you do understand my question, will you answer it. I said, what was said by your father as to why the draft prepared by one of Germany's greatest lawyers should be set aside and another lawyer called 879 in to put the matter in proper form. A. As I explained to you before, there was a certain hurry, and he thought it—

Q. I asked you what was said, please—"My father said" — A. I told you that I do not remember those details.

Q. Do you have any recollection as to what your father said on this subject? A. I stated it yesterday, that he didn't want so much legal language, and so long a draft. He wanted it simplified and cut.

Q. Did he say anything about your going back to Mannheim to ask Dr. Hachenburg to prepare a simpler and shorter draft? A. No, he did not. He said to me the opposite. He said even Dr. Hachenburg, whom he knows so long, he wants to make money and wants to write two or three or four different agreements. This short one, this outline is good enough for me.

Q. What did he say about who would pay Wronker-Flatow for his services in drafting the instrument? A. He didn't mention it to me.

Q. Did you say anything to him about it? A. No.

Q. Was there any discussion at this time with Wronker-Flatow about who would pay his fee for this legal 880 service? A. I think it was not the intention of either party to pay or accept any fees for this short and quick redrafting of this summary consideration draft.

Q. At any rate, Wronker-Flatow was called in, you think, on the 5th? A. Yes, that's what I remember.

Q. Did you tell him that Hachenburg had expressed a desire to confer with your father about the legal problems involved? A. That's what I told my father right away when I came from Hachenburg.

Q. Again, you can understand my question, can you not? Did you tell this to Wronker-Flatow? A. To Wronker-Flatow, no.

Q. You didn't mention to him the fact that Germany's greatest lawyer wanted to have a conference on that subject? A. No, that was none of Dr. Wronker-Flatow's business, he was just asking to shorten this specific draft.

Q. He not only shortened it, he lengthened it in at least one respect, did he not? A. He put it into legal language.

Q. Did he not put in new provisions that were not in the Hachenburg draft? A. I do not recollect that.

Q. Do you not recollect that he inserted provisions
881 about the male line of descent in the Opel family?
A. Oh, yes.

Q. That was not in Hachenburg's draft, was it? A. That was not in Hachenburg's draft. That was done upon my wish.

Q. When was it decided that you should sail on the Europa which sailed from Bremerhaven on the 7th of October? A. The purpose of the straight wire to Mr. Smith had to do with that, I think.

Q. I wonder if you will answer the question. When was it decided that you should sail on the Europa? A. I do not understand what you mean by "decided." It was my intention to go to America as fast as I could go.

Q. You and your father must have come at some time to a decision that you should sail on the Europa, is that not true? A. At a certain point, certainly, the Europa was leaving, as you said, on October 7, so, of course, it was necessary for me to make this boat, either in Bremen or Cherbourg.

Q. When was it decided between you and your father that you would take the boat? A. I do not know the exact date, but it must have been on the 5th or the 6th.

Q. And is it not the fact that the reason Hachen-
882 burg's draft was abandoned and Wronker-Flatow told to get up a quick draft on the 5th was because you had to leave Wiesbaden on the 6th in order to catch the boat? A. There was plenty of time to redraft this short agreement.

Q. Is that not the real reason for abandoning the Hachenburg draft, and having Wronker-Flatow get up another draft? A. The real reason, if you ask for the real reason, it was my father's wish that not unnecessarily large amount of lawyer fees would be spent, and he even asked me, he said I should pay for the draft of Dr. Hachenburg.

Q. What was the reason for the great haste in preparing the Wronker-Flatow draft of the gift agreement? A.

There was no great haste, Mr. Burling. I think it wouldn't take any lawyer longer than, let's say, half an hour or an hour to take this summary considerations, or the principal points were in it, and put it in proper legal form.

Q. You knew that Dr. Hachenburg thought it desirable to give further consideration to the matter, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. Thank you. A. He expressed his wish.

Q. That is what I said. The answer is, yes. A. Yes.

Q. Thank you. You have been in contact with 883 lawyers a great deal in your life, have you not? A. No, I can say unfortunately—fortunately not, if began here in America.

Q. You are not familiar with lawyers? A. No, definitely not.

Q. Well, you have been in legal proceedings in connection with your father's fine? A. That was after the drafting of the gift.

Q. I say now. A. Now, yes, certainly.

Q. You have been involved in litigation since 1931 off and on right down to date, is that not true? A. No, you couldn't say that.

Q. In 1933 and '34 you were involved in the proceedings leading up to the fine? A. Pardon me, Mr. Burling, I was not involved personally.

Q. You were associated with lawyers at that time, were you not? A. I talked to my father's lawyers, if that's what you mean.

Q. Yes, that's what I mean. And in 1936 you were involved, you were the principal witness in the Erik Deku prosecution, I believe. A. Yes.

Q. And in 1935 you had Isidor Kresel and the firm of Davis, Polk take a case through the Treasury, through the District Court, and to the Circuit Court of Appeals 884 in New York, did you not? A. Yes, that is what the lawyers did.

Q. In 1937 you were sued by someone, were you not, in this country? A. Yes, it was what you call a nuisance suit.

Q. How much did you settle it for? A. I was sued for—

Q. How much did you settle it for? A. It was settled, I think, for 13 or 15 thousand dollars.

Q. Was it not closer to a hundred thousand? A. About which suit you are talking, Mr. Burling?

Q. The suit in which you evaded service of summons by going to Montreal in 1937. A. Do you mean the suit of Mr. Cole?

Q. Yes. A. C-O-L-E?

Q. That's right. A. He sued me, as I endeavored to tell you, for half a million dollars.

Q. I asked you what you settled it for. A. And it was settled, if I remember correctly, between 12 and 15 thousand dollars.

Q. It does not refresh your recollection if I suggest to you that it was closer to a hundred thousand? A.
885 Any suit which was settled for a hundred thousand?

Q. Yes, that suit. Is it not a fact that it was settled for about $100,000? A. That is the first thing I hear, Mr. Burling.

Q. And you had lawyers in connection with the attachment of your father's account in Switzerland, did you not? A. Yes, I employed lawyers in Switzerland.

Q. And you had lawyers off and on in connection with these various American investments which are the subjects of this action, did you not? A. Not to a great extent. Of course, if you set up a corporation a lawyer has to do the incorporation work, and the statutes and all those things.

Q. You had lawyers in connection with your internment, did you not? A. Lawyers, as you know, you yourself, they are not admitted in those proceedings. They only could appear as so-called friends of the accused.

Q. Did not Isidor Kresel file briefs in your behalf? A. Yes, he did.

Q. This case has been going on for years, has it not? A. Yes, unfortunately.

Q. And you have had lawyers in this case? A. Yes, definitely.

Q. Have you ever seen a lawyer, except Wronker-
886 Flatow, who would draw up, who told you that he could draw up an instrument transferring an estate of $3,700,000, setting up complicated reserve entries in the space of half an hour from the time he is called in on the problem? A. There are no complicated interests to protect. You are implying something complicated. There was nothing complicated.

Q. Did you hear Dr. Heinrich Kronstein testify the other day in this case? A. Yes.

Q. Did you consider his testimony on the law, German law, relating to the terms of the gift agreement complicated or very simple? A. I think for a German lawyer rather simple.

Q. Are you sure, are you absolutely certain that the gift agreement was executed on October 5, 1931? A. I am definite.

Q. Please let me finish—and not on any other date? A. I am absolutely definite about it. I would not remember, of course, this exact date, but I saw the document and I a day later I got the power of attorney.

Q. Have you always been absolutely clear in your mind that the date was October 5, 1931? A. No, sir, I only knew, if anybody asked me, when was this gift made, I only 887 knew that it was about the end of September or beginning of October. I never could remember any specific dates, and all dates I mention now, I had to refresh my recollections; that is over 17 years ago.

Q. There was a time when you were uncertain as to when this had been executed, is that not so? A. I did not get your question.

Q. Was there not a time when you were uncertain as to the exact date? A. As to the exact date, that is possible, that I gave an answer that it was about September or October. It is absolutely possible that this exact date offhand was not in my memory.

Q. You were released from internment shortly after V-E Day, were you not? A. Yes.

Q. And at that time this litigation was very important to you, was it not? A. At this time? I think the litigation did not start yet, or did it? Oh, yes, the first suit, I think, was brought in '44, wasn't it?

Q. I believe so. A. Yes.

Q. When you were released from internment, did you not at once go and look at the documents, or try to get the documents together and consult counsel about this 888 lawsuit? A. I personally had very, very few documents, and we got most of the documents from the Department of Justice, and I certainly discussed those documents with my lawyers.

Q. And as late as October 17, 1946, you were unable to state the date of the transfer correctly, is that not true? A. At this time I have not yet received, seen those documents. The documents, most of them, were received by my lawyers about half a year ago, some even only a few months, some even a few weeks ago.

Q. And it is correct, is it not, that you were mistaken as to the date on which the transfer took place, when you were interrogated on October 17? A. You imply something which is not correct, Mr. Burling, I was asked without having any documents, without having any opportunity to refresh my recollection.

Q. You made that statement. The question is simply, is it not true that you were mistaken? A. I was not mistaken. I gave the date, September or October.

Q. Now, Mr. von Opel, when did you see the gift agreement which is Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, for the first time after your release from internment? A. Are you speaking about copies, or are you speaking about photostat of the original, or the original itself?

Q. I am speaking about any copy which you be-889 lieve to be a true and correct copy. A. I couldn't offhand make a statement of the sort. It might even be that I had one in my files.

Q. Don't you know that you had one in your files? A. That is possible.

Q. Is it not Exhibit B to your affidavit in the gold case? I show you now from Defendant's Exhibit 8 page 138 a document, Exhibit R; is that not the English translation? A. I think that is the translation of it, yes, done around 1934 or '5.

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Q. But that was available to you at all times in New York after you were released from internment, was it not? A. Oh, certainly.

Q. And didn't you refresh your recollection as to the terms of the gift agreement and the date of the gift agreement after you were released from internment? A. When I saw the document and read it, and it was dated October 5, I of course knew that the date of the gift was October 5.

Q. Then will you explain why you said the date was something else, when you were interrogated on October 17, 1946, by Government counsel? A. At this time—

890 Mr. Gallagher: I object. The record does not reflect that he gave any other date. The record reflects the latter part of September or October. The record does not state a date.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Mr. von Opel, were you asked this question when you sold these shares, the proceeds were deposited first in the name of your father, and did you give this answer: "Those shares were given to me by virtue of this gift agreement. I think it is September 31, is it not?" A. On which date?

Q. September 31. Is that not what you said when you were interrogated on October 17? A. That was my recollection, without seeing any documents. I told you I only knew the about time.

Q. You had the document available at that time. A. Pardon me, no. You always make surprise parties. You all of a sudden ask questions, and I said an about date.

Q. But at this time you were very much concerned with this lawsuit. You had taken it through the District Court, and it was in the Circuit Court here, is that not true? A. But I had not yet gone into the details.

Q. You did not take the trouble to look at the gift agreement, which was available to you in the record of the gold case, is that right? A. That is a rather general question, Mr. Burling.

891

Q. Will you answer it, please? A. What do you mean by that? Certainly I had an opportunity to see it, but it's at the time I didn't pay any attention to refresh my recollection.

Mr. Gallagher: I would like to ask Mr. Burling a question: Was the record of the gold case with Mr. Looney or Mr. Worthington in New York.

Mr. Burling: The record of the gold case was obviously available to defendant and defendant's counsel, who argued this case.

The Court: I think we will have to adjourn at this time until two o'clock.

(A recess was accordingly taken from 12:30 o'clock, p.m., to 2:00 o'clock, p.m. of the same day.)

895 FRITZ VON OPEL resumed the stand and was examined and testified further as follows:

Cross-Examination (Continued)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Just before the luncheon recess, Mr. von Opel, the question was raised as to whether you had access 896 to the gold case affidavit at the time you were examined by Mr. Looney and by Mr. Worthington in New York in 1946.

Did you have that gold case affidavit before you at that hearing? A. I don't remember it.

Q. I will read you these questions and these answers and see if it refreshes your recollection.

Mr. Gallagher: Will you indicate the page, please?

Mr. Burling: Starting at page 45—

By Mr. Burling:

Q. (Reading) "Question: When did you first become connected with Uebersee?

"Answer: I think all of those details are stated in my rather exhaustive affidavit in the gold case, and offhand I can only say I acquired control in the early thirties.

"Question: In the early thirties?

"Answer: Yes. I think all the details as to how much was paid, and how it was paid, are all mentioned in this affidavit."

Does that refresh your recollection as to whether you had access to the gold case affidavit at the time of that interrogation? A. It is possible that Mr. Connor had it.

Q. But you referred to the affidavit as "this affi-897 davit", in that proceeding, didn't you? A. I don't remember whether the book itself was present at the time.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, Mr. Gallagher asked me to state as a fact whether the book was present. I am advised, whether or not Mr. von Opel produced it, Mr. Worthington did have it at that time.

Mr. Gallagher: I asked on what page that portion about Plaintiff's Exhibit 31 was read from. Was that before page 45, or after?

Mr. Burling: I don't know. We will tell you in a moment.

Mr. Eaum: It is page 51.

Mr. Gallagher: Had the affidavit been shown at the time?

Mr. Burling: Are we conducting a lawsuit, or a general conversation?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge, Mr. von Opel, whether on October 5 Wronker-Flatow consulted any law books before drawing up Plaintiff's Exhibit 5? A. I couldn't tell you that. Mr. Wronker-Flatow had his own office.

Q. If you don't know, the answer is no, and let 898 us proceed. A. No.

Q. Do you know whether he gave any study to the provisions of the German income tax law? A. I do not know that.

Q. Did you have any discussion with him on this day as to who would pay the tax on the income which might accrue from the proceeds of the gift? A. I don't think that this question at this time was discussed at all. We all knew that ultimately some income tax had to be paid. The only question was whether my father paid it when he sold it, or whether I paid it when I sold it.

Q. Are you talking about income tax now, or what we call a capital gains tax? A. You asked me about an income tax, and I thought you both meant a capital gains tax.

Q. I am talking about income which might accrue in the future from the proceeds of the 600 Opel shares.

Was there any discussion between you and your father and Wronker-Flatow as to who would be liable for the income tax on that income? A. As no income was stipulated in the contract, I don't know what you refer to, Mr. Burling. What income do you mean?

Q. Income which would accrue. You have testified already, Mr. von Opel, that your father told you that 899 the proceeds of these 600 shares would bring in an income of nearly a million marks a year. That income would be taxable to somebody, wouldn't it, under German income tax law? A. No. I think, Mr. Burling, you are mixing things up. We speak about a million income just as a matter of speaking. If those shares would be sold against dollars, of course, the income would be in dollars.

So it was only in a manner of speaking we said 20 per cent I should keep and the other 80 per cent I should account to my sister. Whether the income was in marks or in dollars, it didn't make any difference. It was an accounting process.

Q. Whether or not it was in pengos or dollars or marks or pounds, it would be income and somebody would have to pay the income tax on it—isn't that so? A. No, Mr. Burling.

Q. Will you explain why the income, which in the marks equivalent would be a million marks a year, would not be taxable to somebody? A. It depends upon how it is taxable. If the securities were put into a corporation, it would be different.

Q. Fine. And did you have any conversation with Wronker-Flatow about this income tax problem? A. I think not. I don't remember it. It might have been; I don't remember it.

900 Q. You don't have any present recollection of any talk at all about the problem of who would have to pay the income tax on the income? A. I think it was not one of the matters with which we were concerned at the time, Mr. Burling.

Q. Did you have any discussion as to what effect, if any, upon income tax liability the so-called usufructuary provisions might have? A. I think in the letter of Dr. Hachenburg—

Q. The question is conversations between you, Wronker-Flatow and your father. A. I don't remember these conversations.

Q. So far as you know, you did not have any? A. My father never wanted to draw any income. So it was impossible that he figured income taxes for himself, on an income he didn't want to draw.

Q. A lot of people don't want to pay income taxes that do have to pay them. Isn't that so? A. Yes. But I was the one, you see, concerned with this question, and not my father.

Q. And did you and Wronker-Flatow discuss the possibility— A. I don't think so.

Q. Let me finish the question, please.

Did you and Wronker-Flatow discuss the possi-
901 bility that you would have to pay the income tax on the entire income, even though you were allowed to keep only 20 per cent of it for yourself? A. I think you don't see, Mr. Burling, the provisions of the gift agreement.

Q. You are absolutely right. A. You don't see it.

Q. I certainly don't. But did you have any such discussion with Wronker-Flatow? A. I don't think I had, because he wasn't my lawyer.

Q. And you don't think your father did, either, do you? A. I am certain that my father didn't ask him about income taxes on an income he never intended to draw.

Q. But the income did accrue. What was going to happen to the income? A. I would have to pay the taxes, if there was an income.

Q. All the tax? Is that right? A. It depends if it is incorporated in a corporation, or it depends upon the state of it.

Q. But somebody was going to own these assets. A. Certainly.

Q. And somebody, therefore, would receive the income. Isn't that so? A. Certainly.

902 Q. And you were to receive 20 per cent of the income. Isn't that so? A. No.

Q. Isn't that what you testified to two days ago? A. That is not—

Q. Isn't that what you testified to two days ago? A. I told you it was just an accounting procedure. So I had to account for the remaining 80 per cent with my sister.

Q. But did you not say your father said, "I want you to have 20 per cent, which will be about as much as your salary previously was, and the rest of the money is for the benefit of your sister"?

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, I have to interrupt Mr. Burling. The record, I am certain, does not state that to be a fact, that the rest of the money was for the benefit of the sister.

The Court: He can ask the witness what his recollection was.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Didn't you say that? A. That the 80 per cent was for the benefit of my sister?

Q. Isn't that right? A. How could I say it, when it was for accounting purposes?

903 Q. Who was to be liable for tax purposes, as you understood it? A. For tax purposes, always the owner of the property was liable.

Q. Fine. Who did you understand was to be liable for the tax on the 80 per cent of the income? A. You cannot separate those two groups.

Q. Can't you answer my question? A. No, I cannot. It isn't clear, Mr. Burling. I am sorry; I don't understand it.

Q. Twenty per cent of the income was to be held by you, you testified. That leaves 80 per cent. A. I didn't say it was to be held by me.

Q. Or used by you. A. I said there were those figures to be used for accounting purposes.

Q. Didn't you testify on direct examination that your father said you were to take 20 per cent, which would be about the same as your salary— A. He wasn't—

Q. Didn't you testify to that effect? A. I testified that both children should be on an even footing.

Q. Mr. von Opel, please answer my question, so we will not be here indefinitely—

904 Didn't you testify that 20 per cent was to be used by you as the approximate equivalent of your old salary? A. That is the reason that my father—

Q. Did you testify to that effect? The answer is yes or no. A. I do not recollect—if the record will show it.

Q. You don't know whether you testified to that or not? A. I testified in general about this accounting procedure. You are mixing up two things, Mr. Burling. No income tax authority in the world would accept a division of 80 per cent and 20 per cent. I could not come to the American tax authorities and say I only got 20 per cent. I had to pay the income tax, as the owner of the property, of the full 100 per cent.

Q. Let us talk about the German tax authorities. What did you intend, on October 5, to do with respect to the income tax, in Germany, due on the 80 per cent of the income? A. Pardon me. I was not concerned with any income tax in Germany, because I was living outside of Germany.

Q. All right. A. So no income tax to pay inside of Germany was due.

Q. And it was contemplated that if these shares were sold, the proceeds would be invested ultimately in the United States? Isn't that true? A. It was left to me what to do about it.

905 Q. And you intended to invest in United States properties, didn't you? A. I did that, yes.

Q. You intended to do that, didn't you? A. The intention at this time, Mr. Burling, wasn't clear. There was a chance that if General Motors would have accepted my proposal for the gold clause, that I would have gone on with the escrow agreement.

Q. I said "if"—that if you sold the Opel shares, you intended to buy American investments, didn't you? A. It didn't necessarily mean American investments—some investments.

Q. You knew, wherever you were going to live, you would have to pay an income tax, didn't you? A. Definitely.

Q. And was it your understanding you were going to have to pay an income tax on all of the proceeds? That is, on every cent of income derived from these shares all the shares, it was to be taxable to you? Is that your testimony? A. I think the owner has to pay the income tax.

Q. Fine. Will you answer my question? A. And the law looks to the beneficiary owner.

Q. Fine. I want an answer to my question, and not a lecture on abstract law. A. I do not understand you, 906 Mr. Burling, what you mean. Which country do you mean?—Germany?

Q. Whatever country you were going to settle in and therefore were going to have to pay income taxes in, was it your understanding that you were to be liable for all of the income? A. Certainly. It depends. In some countries you can make agreements on the amount of income tax you pay. That all depends. It is such a general question. If you ask me a specific question, I can answer it clearly.

Q. At any rate, the tax problem was a very involved one, was it not? A. At this time the tax problem didn't bother us at all, Mr. Burling.

Q. Won't you agree at this time the problem of who had to pay the income taxes was an involved problem? A. Not at all. What was involved about it?

Q. You haven't been able to tell me what was your understanding about the income taxes yet, have you? A. I told you that in every country the owner or the beneficiary owner has to pay the income taxes. That was clear to me from the first.

Q. But since we do not know who the owner of this property would be, under the usufructuary provisions, we don't know who was to be liable for the income taxes.

A. Pardon me. The ownership of title was always 907 clear.

Q. It is clear to you that tax liability does not run to the owner of title, but to the person who gets the beneficial interest in the income? A. The beneficial owner, yes.

Q. Who the beneficial owner of this property was to be, under the gift agreement, is by no means clear. Isn't that true? A. No, I didn't say that.

Q. Isn't it true that it is by no means clear who the beneficial owner would be? A. If my parents would not draw any income, I would be the beneficiary, I would have to pay the entire income taxes. I could only claim an exemption for the part eventually drawn by my parents, if they desired.

Q. But you had no discussion whatever with any lawyer prior to drawing up this instrument? A. On income taxes?

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. Did you ask Wronker-Flatow as to whether you could minimize the taxes by assigning the proceeds of the gift to a holding company? A. I think I did not discuss this problem with Dr. Wronker-Flatow.

908 Q. Is it not true that you told Dr. Hachenburg that a man named Faust is concerned about the problem whether or not any income tax may be payable under the provisions of Section 30, subsection 1, of the Income Tax Act, "If your son sells the shares which you transferred to him by way of gift"? A. I think that has to do with the capital gains tax.

Q. I see. But Faust did raise a problem about the capital gains tax, did he? A. Certainly; everybody knows—

Q. Did he? The answer to that is yes or no. A. Yes, I think so. I didn't speak to Dr. Faust.

Q. But you did tell Dr. Hachenburg that Faust was concerned about it, didn't you? A. Yes, that is possible.

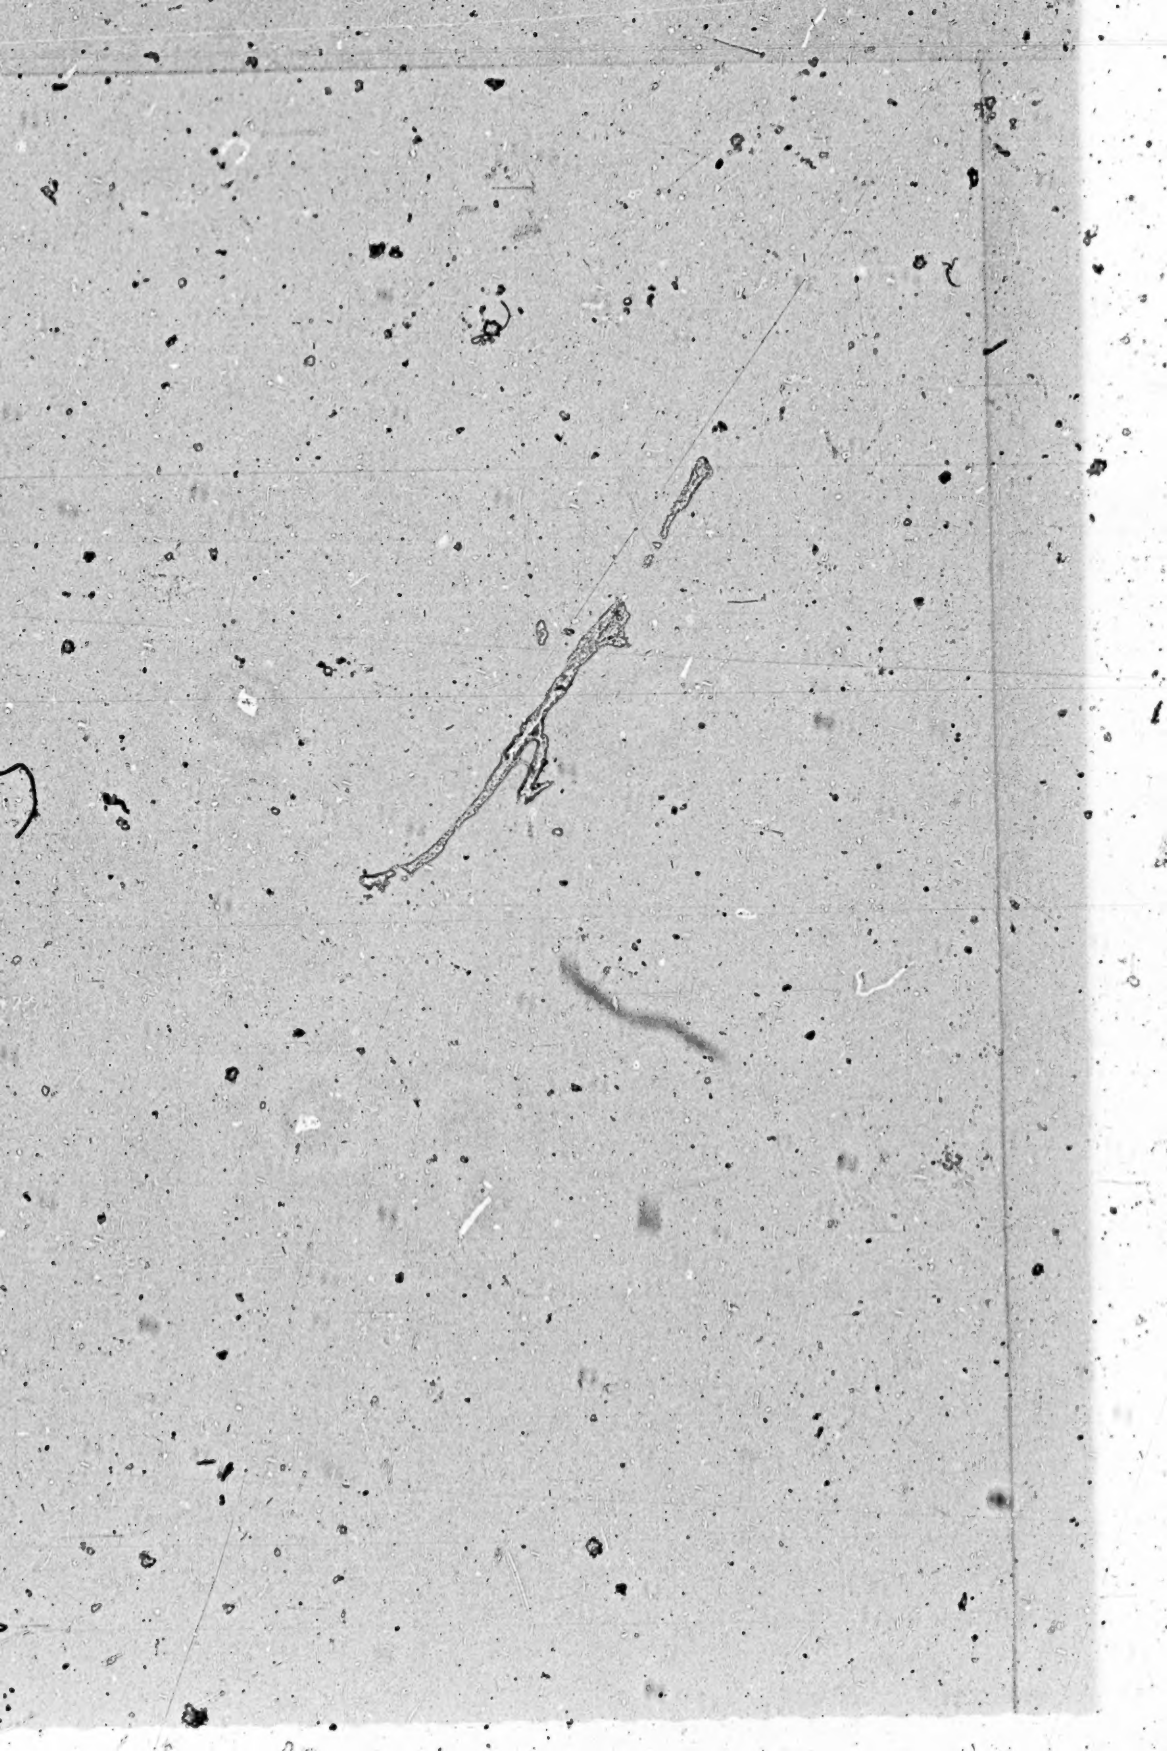
Q. Will you look at Plaintiff's Exhibit 7 and see if you and Hachenburg did not have an extended discussion about income taxes and other tax liabilities (handing)? I refer you to paragraph 5.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Is that paragraph numbered 5?

Mr. Burling: Yes.

May I hand Your Honor the paragraph there (indicating)?

By Mr. Burling:



Q. Does that refresh your recollection whether you had a detailed discussion with Hachenburg? A.
909 Dr. Hachenburg refers to two different kinds of taxes—

Q. Will you again, once more, please answer my question?

Does that refresh your recollection as to whether you had a detailed discussion on October 2, 1931, with Hachenburg about taxes? A. I do not know that. I do not remember it, because this letter was written after I had left.

Q. But does that letter not refer to a matter communicated to Hachenburg by you?

Will you look at Section 5 again? A. I don't find any such reference in paragraph 5. If you will show it to me. I read it all over, but I didn't see it.

Mr. Gallagher: What was that answer, Mr. Reporter?

(The last answer was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Burling: I may have the wrong exhibit.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, will you look at Plaintiff's Exhibit 10. Does this not state—

"Your son informed me that Dr. Faust is concerned about the problem whether or not an income tax may be payable under the provisions of Section 30."

A. On which page is that, please?

910 Q. The first page. A. Yes, I see that.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection that you did have a talk with Hachenburg about tax problems? A. That I referred to him the thoughts of Dr. Faust, yes.

Q. And you didn't talk to Wronker-Flatow about that subject? A. I don't think so, that I talked it over with Dr. Wronker-Flatow. There wasn't so much time left to go into this intricate detail of taxes.

Q. That is my point—there were intricate details of taxes that were just left undiscussed? Isn't that true? A. No, Mr. Burling; you misunderstood me. Taxes had to be paid. So it was of no importance who paid it. Either my father had to pay it or I had to pay it.

Q. Your father was a very rich man, even after this gift, wasn't he? A. Yes.

Q. Aside from this gift, you were insolvent? Didn't you testify to that fact? A. I had no money of my own, yes, that is what I testified.

Q. Wouldn't the question of whether your father had to pay the taxes, or you had to pay the taxes—

911 Mr. Ingoldsby: Just one second, please.

Your Honor, if I may make a suggestion, or an objection by way of suggestion, for the purpose of clarity, we are talking about three different types of taxes here.

Mr. Burling: You are talking about ten different kinds.

Mr. Ingoldsby: At least three—the capital gains tax, the tax on the gift, and the tax on income attaching to the gift.

In order to avoid confusion with the witness, may I suggest that the particular type of tax spoken of be identified?

The Court: I will have to leave that to Mr. Burling.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, my point is that there was a wide variety of tax problems, all of which were ignored.

The Court: I think the question is permissible.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you discuss with Wronker-Flatow any question about American income tax law? A. I don't think so.

Q. In the event you had predeceased both parents, the gift would have reverted to your father and mother. Isn't that correct? A. What is what is stated in the gift contract.

Q. And did you have any discussions with 912 Wronker-Flatow about the effect of that possibility on the estate tax, which either your father or your mother might have to pay? A. I don't think so, because it is obvious under German tax laws that if such a contingency happens, you have the old, prepaid gift tax refunded in some way. You haven't to pay double taxation.

Q. And what was said about the gift tax, between you and Wronker-Flatow? A. I don't think Dr. Wronker-Flatow had anything to do with these tax problems.

Q. I see. A. He wasn't my father's tax adviser.

Q. Your father did have a tax adviser, didn't he? A. He always talked over his tax problems with one of the employees at General Motors.

Q. Who was that? A. I think it was Dr. Faust.

Q. And Dr. Faust was not called in on October 5, was he? A. These tax problems, as I told you—

Q. Was he? A. No, he wasn't called in.

Q. Thank you. Now did Dr. Wronker-Flatow dictate a preliminary draft of your version of the gift agree-
913 ment, or did he dictate the final draft directly to a stenographer? A. I wasn't present. He did that in his own office.

Q. You never saw a preliminary draft, or went over it with him? A. I don't remember, Mr. Burling. I only saw the final copy of which we now regard as the original.

Q. What is your best estimate as to the amount of time which elapsed between the time your father told Wronker-Flatow to revise the Hachenburg draft and the time your father signed the Wronker-Flatow draft? A. That would be a very wild guess, after seventeen years.

Q. Well, give us your best estimate, please. A. At least several hours.

Q. At least several hours? A. I think so. But I think the actual redrafting, as I told you this forenoon, wouldn't take more than half an hour or an hour. It wasn't a very difficult job.

Q. Wronker-Flatow had never previously been your father's personal counsel, had he? A. And not even on this occasion, no.

Q. Had he? A. No.

Q. And not even on this occasion either. A. He acted as an international lawyer present in the building, 914 and my father, who knew him well, asked him to do him a favor and drafted this agreement. You cannot call him his counsel, because he wasn't paid for it, as far as I know.

Q. By the way, under the terms of your father's will, you either could become the executor or you could name the executor? Isn't that right? A. Under the terms I was to become the executor, yes. And I had the right, if I so desired and if I would be absent, to appoint an executor, yes.

Q. Are you familiar with the estate which your father left? A. No; I have no time to go into this matter yet.

Q. Can you tell us whether among the assets of the estate is a debt owing from Wronker-Flatow in the sum of $20,000? A. That is possible.

Q. Well, can you say whether Wronker-Flatow does or does not owe the estate $20,000? A. I think so. But I would not testify out of my own knowledge, because I have not yet seen a list of the assets of the estate.

Q. I see. A. And the estate would not get this $20,000, because all those amounts go to the military government.

915 Q. Is it not true that it was your intention while you were coming to America on the Europa to put the Opel shares to General Motors? A. No, you can't say that.

Q. The answer, then, is no? A. It was my intention to discuss—

Q. The answer, Mr. von Opel, is no?

If you would just answer my question, we would get along much faster. A. All right, yes.

Q. On October 2nd, in the course of your discussion with Hachenburg, you had talked over the creation of a holding company into which to put the proceeds of the gift, hadn't you? A. That was a suggestion of Dr. Hachenburg, as expressed in his letter of October 3, yes.

Q. And at that time, while you were having a discussion with Hachenburg, didn't you contemplate selling the Opel shares and buying new investments and putting the new investments in Uebersee? A. At the time I had my discussion with Hachenburg, I had only one interest in the matter, and that was that title should pass to me, and that the thing would be done as quickly as possible.

Q. But you haven't answered my question, once

916 again.

Didn't you intend, on October 2nd, didn't you expect to sell the Opel shares and buy new investments and put them in Uebersee? A. On October 2nd, I don't think so.

Q. What were you going to do with the holding company? A. Dr. Hachenburg suggested it, as you see out of the letter.

Q. You didn't think you were going to put the Opel shares into the holding company, did you? A. Dr. Hachenburg is talking about proceeds.

Q. Yes. You did not think you were going to put the Opel shares in the holding company, did you? A. If I would keep the Opel shares, there would be no chance of putting them in the holding company.

Q. So the answer to that question is yes, isn't it?

Mr. Gallagher: What is the question?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. You did not intend to put the Opel shares in the holding company, did you? A. I don't think so.

Q. Thank you. At any rate, the possibility that you might sell the shares to General Motors was discussed by you and your father, was it not? A. Certainly; I pointed out to my father that I was very much afraid about this lack of any gold clause in the contract, 917 and that the first thing I would do would be an attempt to get that changed.

Q. The first thing you would ask for would be a gold clause? Is that right? A. That is what I intended first, to put the escrow agreement on a safe basis.

Q. Now, you have testified, also, that one of the considerations that motivated you coming to Wiesbaden and asking your father to make the gift was that the foreign exchange regulations were becoming more stringent.

Now, will you explain what good a gold clause would have done you in the event that General Motors had subsequently exercised its option and bought the shares? A. You just spoke about the date of October 5. They were at this date my shares and I was very much concerned about it, and I had nothing to do with German foreign currency regulations. So I could not understand this question.

Mr. Burling (to the clerk): May I have Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, please—and 5-A?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you examine Plaintiff's Exhibit 5 once again—

Mr. Burling: And may I hand it once more to your Honor (handing)?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. This recites, does it not, in the beginning paragraph?—

"It is our common desire that these stocks remain with the male line of our family in order to preserve a personal connection between the bearers of the name of Opel and the work of our father Adam Opel."

That clause was put in by Dr. Wronker-Flatow? Is that right? A. I think upon my suggestion it was?.

Q. Your suggestion? A. If I remember correctly.

Q. And at that time you did not expect the shares to remain with the male line of the Opel family, did you? A. It was put in for a certain purpose.

Q. Will you state what the purpose was? A. Within three months this gift had to be reported to the government. And at this time the government would know that I was, or they knew before, that I was a devisen auslander and that a gift was made entirely legal from a devisen inlander to a devisen auslander.

Q. Please go ahead and explain the purpose. A. The purpose was to explain to the authorities that no immediate sale was contemplated.

Q. In other words, the purpose was to deceive the authorities, wasn't it? A. It isn't a deception, no.

919 Q. How do you characterize it? A. In any event, Mr. Burling, within three or four years—

Q. How do you characterize it? A. In within three or four years those shares had to be sold anyhow.

Q. I know that. A. So this whole phrasing of this sentence—

Q. Is deliberately deceptive, isn't it? A. If you call it such.

Q. Now, will you explain once more why it is that after your father gave you the shares on October 5, he then on October 6 gave you a power of attorney; and why in New York you acted under the power of attorney as your father's attorney in fact, instead as of owner of the shares? A. This was done on the advice of Dr. Wronker-Flatow, who had a large experience in dealing with American enterprises and banks.

He told my father and me at the time that it would be awfully difficult for me to go over to America and deal under the escrow agreement, based upon this gift agreement, because it was a German instrument.

Q. Well, Wronker-Flatow was in fact General Motors' German attorney, wasn't he? A. He was, I think, 920 yes.

Q. Did he say that he would telephone or cable to General Motors and tell them that the instrument was all right, because he himself had drafted it? A. Why should he?

Q. If he thought there might be difficulty with General Motors as to the validity of an agreement, would he not say, "I am General Motors' German attorney and I will call them up and tell them I drafted the agreement and it is valid." A. We asked him to do just the opposite, to keep it secret. We didn't want to have it shouted over the rooftops.

Q. Did you want to have General Motors know about the gift? A. I don't think so. There was no necessity.

Q. And in fact you didn't advise General Motors about the gift, did you? A. No, I didn't. I thought I had advised them, but I found out it was a mistake; I did not advise them.

Q. Will you explain how it is that your father could give you power of attorney on October 6, 1931, to deal with property when he had no title whatever to that property on that day? A. If you ask me for a legal opinion, I heard an expert on law testify to that that that is usual procedure in Germany, nothing uncommon.

Q. I see; all right.

921 Now, is it true that on Monday, October 5, you and your father were still undecided as to whether he should go to New York or whether you should go to New York? A. Oh, no, Mr. Burling; that is quite different.

Q. It was never thought your father might go to New York? A. No; but I asked him—

Q. Just a moment. Please answer my question and not volunteer. A. No. He did not want to go to America.

Q. I see. Now, Plaintiff's Exhibit 52 reads:

"John Thomas Smith, New York.

"Are you available for interview in personal matter in New York on October 13? If so myself or my son intends sailing Wednesday for New York. Stop. Cable reply will oblige. Kind regards."

Signed Wilhelm von Opel.

Now, did your father send that cable to Mr. Smith on October 5? A. Yes; it was upon my suggestion.

Q. And on that day your father had no intention of going to New York? Is that right? A. I told him—no, he did not want to go, no.

Q. Will you explain, now, why you caused your father to tell Smith he was thinking of coming to New 922 York, when in fact he wasn't? A. Because Mr. Smith intended to come to Europe and, as we had been advised, he intended to sail in the middle of October, and I could not be in New York before the 13th.

So I thought if I announced my visit, he might not have time for me. But if my father announced this visit, he will make it possible to hear him, you see.

Q. And it was your purpose to deceive Mr. Smith? Is that right? A. If you call this a deception, the entire business life is full of deceptions—in order to make sure that he was present in New York awaiting us there and he should not depart before I was there.

Q. Now, going back to the usufruct provisions of the gift agreement, you were opposed to them, were you not? A. That is a rather general question.

Q. Well, you protested against their insertion, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. Now, skipping some transactions here, is it not true that ultimately the proceeds of the Opel shares found their way into Overseas Finance Corporation, or the plaintiff here? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is true, is it not, that with the exception of three qualifying shares, the shares were put into 923 Box 1917 at the Schweizerische Kreditanstalt in Zurich? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is it true that the key to that box was handed by you to a man named Hans Frankenberg, isn't it? A. Yes, I think in 1934 it was, if I am not mistaken.

Q. 1934? A. Yes, I guess so.

Q. Will you fix the date as close as you can, please? A. I think it was 1934, or a little bit ahead of this time. Let us say around 1934.

Q. What is your best estimate as to the month? A. I can't guess at it. It is so long ago. I think it was in 1934; and if I guess roughly, I think in the spring or summer of 1934—some such date.

Q. The spring or summer of 1934? A. I think so.

Q. And will you agree with me that that was box 1917? A. I don't remember this number. It is possible.

Q. And you don't dispute it? A. Please?

Q. You don't dispute my statement that it was Box 1917? A. No, certainly not.

Q. Will you tell the Court in detail just exactly what you did with the key to that box, and all this surrounding conversation you had with anyone to whom you gave the key to the box? A. In this year, you mean?

924

Q. You say you gave the key to Frankenberg? A. Yes.

Q. What did you say to Frankenberg and what did he say to you, when you gave him the key? A. I gave him the key, and I think the box was in my name, in my personal name, and I gave him the key to open it jointly, I think, with Mr. Geng, who is the auditor of the corporation.

Q. How many keys were there to the box? A. I think, if I remember correctly, I had a key, too, and lost it shortly thereafter.

Mr. Burling: At this point I ask that counsel concede the genuineness of a record taken from the records of the plaintiff corporation, produced pursuant to Court order.

(The document was handed to counsel for the plaintiff.)

Mr. Burling: I ask that this be marked for identification.

The Deputy Clerk: Do you want this to be 45-A? This is the German.

Mr. Burling: Yes; I will give you 45, also.

(The documents referred to were marked Defendant's Exhibits 45 and 45-A for identification.)

925

Mr. Gallagher: The original of this is a copy out of our books?

Mr. Burling: I have handed counsel an English translation of a photostat of a document produced pursuant to Court order, as the books and records of plaintiff corporation.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I hand you Defendant's Exhibit 45-A—

And may I hand Your Honor the English?—

Mr. Ingoldsby: We concede the genuineness of it, as requested.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. This is a letter addressed to Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardner & Reed, dated May 21, 1935, and it reads:

"The stock of our company is at the power of disposal of the Adler and Company Aktien Gesellschaft as security for this debt, in that Dr. Frankenberg of Aktien Gesellschaft, delegate to the board of directors, has in his possession the only key for the safe number 1917 with the Schweizerische Kreditanstalt in Zurich."

Does that refresh your recollection as to how many keys there were and who had possession of them, or it? A. May I ask you, whose letter is that?

Q. May I ask you whose letter that is? This is a letter taken from the files of Uebersee Finanz-Korporation. A. This is an unsigned letter.

926 Q. Well, I will call upon any representative of the plaintiff to state whose letter it is. A. I couldn't tell you. It might be a draft of a letter.

Q. Was it the custom in keeping the files of Uebersee Finanz-Korporation to prepare drafts and then put them in the files, without indicating that they were not sent? A. I saw the books of the corporation for the first time after they were sent here, and I found in many instances very many drafts of agreements and so on.

Mr. Burling: I offer the letter in evidence, and I submit, Your Honor, that the plaintiff is bound by its own books and records.

The Witness: This is an unsigned letter.

Mr. Burling: I submit, Your Honor, that an outgoing letter kept in the regular course of business by the plaintiff corporation must be assumed to have been sent, unless proof is adduced to the contrary.

The Court: If there is no objection to it, I will admit it.

Mr. Ingoldsby: No objection, Your Honor.

Mr. Gallagher: As a matter of fact, I might state for your information, Mr. Burling, I think, although I have not seen this, this is probably a letter in response to a wire sent from New York by Mr. von Opel, at the request 927 of Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardner & Reed, in which certain facts were set forth, and asking the Swiss whether those facts were correct—and I believe this is the answer to it. We haven't found the answer. We have no objection to the letter.

(The documents previously marked for identification Defendant's Exhibits 45 and 45-A were received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. In any event, does the reading of the letter refresh your recollection as to how many keys there were? A. I haven't seen this. May I have it back again?

Q. This document recites—

Mr. Ingoldsby: The witness is looking at the letter, Mr. Burling.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Have you found the— A. Yes, I see the reference here, yes.

Q. Does it refresh your recollection as to how many keys to that box there were? A. Apparently at this time, no.

Q. And to the best of your knowledge and belief, Frankenberg had it? A. He was empowered, jointly with Geng.

Q. To the best of your knowledge and belief,
928 Frankenberg had the one key? A. I don't know who possessed it. They both could open the safe.

Q. Could you open the safe without having the key? A. Certainly not. But if two men are empowered, they both have to go together. And I think that was the agreement.

Q. At the time you delivered the key to Frankenberg, what did you say to him, and what did he say to you? A. It was in about April, 1935, after—

Q. What did you say to him and what did he say to you? A. I asked him whether—I described the troubles in Germany and asked him whether he would be willing, if my father so desired, to act as his representative.

Q. Did he say he was already your father's representative? A. No.

Q. Was he? A. No.

Q. What did he say? A. He said if my father wanted him to do that, he would be willing.

Q. And did he take the key? A. He had the key a year.

Q. When did you first give him the key? A. As I told you before, it must have been 1934.

929 Q. My question was what did you say to him and what did he say to you when you handed him the key? A. I told you before, Mr. Burling, I gave him the key, if I could remember it correctly, in 1934, or even prior to this time.

Q. Are you unable to understand my question? I said three times what did you say to Frankenberg and what did Frankenberg say to you when you first handed him the key? A. At this time an agreement was made and I think deposited in writing with the bank, that Frankenberg jointly with Mr. Geng could open the safe. And at this time I myself had a second key.

Mr. Ingoldsby: May the record show at what time that was?

The Court: He said the first time. I think he said in 1934.

The Witness: 1934, or even sooner.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you have any discussion with Frankenberg when you handed him the key?—yes or no? A. The discussion I just described.

Q. You didn't describe the discussion. A. Yes, that the bank was instructed—

Q. Who said what? What was the discussion? Let us see what you said to Mr. Frankenberg, and then 930 what he said to you? A. The bank was instructed—

Q. You said that? A. I was the owner of the safe, and I had instructed the bank.

Q. Won't you tell me what you said to Mr. Frankenberg, Mr. von Opel? What did you say to him? A. Frankenberg?

Q. Yes. A. That he had access to the safe, together with Mr. Geng. I think he insisted upon having Mr. Geng—

Q. And what did he say to you? A. Nothing.

Q. He didn't say a thing to you? You handed him the key, and he didn't say anything? A. There was nothing in the safe but those Overseas shares, and they had been taken out for stockholders' meetings.

Q. But you handed Frankenberg a key to a box in which securities valued at perhaps four million dollars—A. Oh, you are mistaken. Why four million dollars?

Q. All right. You handed him the key to the box in which the Uebersee shares are contained. Did he say nothing at all? A. Those shares had no great value, Mr. Burling.

931 Q. Fine. Did he say anything, Mr. von Opel? A. No, I just—

Q. He was just absolutely silent? A. He asked me, if I remember correctly, that he wanted Mr. Geng as a joint, so to say, how would you express it, that they could both go and get the shares for stockholders' meetings.

Q. I see. And that is all you can remember— A. And that was at the time the purpose—

Q. I wish you would wait until I ask the question, and then try to answer it—

That is all you can remember about the conversation at the time you handed Frankenberg the key? A. Yes. And I think—

Q. Thank you. And at that time you yourself had a key? A. Yes, I think so.

Q. What happened to that key? A. I think I lost this key.

Q. And at a later date you had a conversation with Frankenberg about acting as your father's agent? Is that right? A. Much later.

Q. And what is your best estimate of the date of 932 that conversation? A. I think at least three-quarters of a year, if not more.

Q. When does that bring us to? A. That brings us to April, 1935.

Q. And at that time, as I understand it, you asked Frankenberg to continue holding the key as your father's agent? Is that right? A. Yes; I described to him the situation and asked him—

Q. Is that right? A. Yes.

Q. And did you tell him at that time you had lost your key and the key in his possession— A. I think——

Q. Wait a minute, please. Did you tell him at that time you had lost your key and he had, therefore, the only key outstanding? A. I don't remember this conversation.

Q. At that time was Frankenberg your father's agent? A. In the strict legal sense of the word, as I see it now, I think no.

Q. When for the first time did you tell your father that Frankenberg was holding the key? A. That was about five to six months later, when I had returned from America.

933 Q. Well, fix the date, please. A. This was in the summer or fall of 1935.

Q. Before that time, had you even spoken to your father about Frankenberg's being his agent? A. No.

Q. You had no conversation with your father whatever —A. No.

Q. —indicating that Frankenberg was his agent? A. No.

Q. Now, I will read you one sentence from the gold case affidavit, which was read to you by Mr. Gallagher:

"This key is held by Dr. Frankenberg as agent and representative of my father, Wilhelm von Opel, for the purpose of safeguarding his usufruct."

Was that statement, which comes from your affidavit, true or false? A. At this time I consider Dr. Frankenberg—you are speaking about April, 1935—I considered him at this time as the agent of my father, because I felt that my father had all interest or even would be forced by the Nazi Government to establish something—

Q. Will you answer the question? Is the sentence that I read to you true or false? A. I believe at the time that it was correct.

Q. You now know that it was false, do you? A.

934 I now learned more about the legal detail of a power of attorney, and representatives, and I am now told by my legal advisers that the usufruct only can be established if the usufructuary directly empowers the trustee.

Mr. Burling (to the deputy clerk): May I have this marked the next number, please?

(The document referred to was marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibits 46 and 46-A.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you explain how it was that on June 5, 1935, when you executed this affidavit, you thought that Frankenberg was your father's agent, if you had never spoken to your father about Frankenberg's being his agent?

Mr. Ingoldsby: May I interrupt? I object, Your Honor. The statement relates to whether or not Frankenberg was the agent of the father. The set of facts upon which the statement is based has been stated. I submit that anything from there on is a legal conclusion as to whether or not those facts constitute agency.

The Court: He can explain his statement, and his understanding of his own statement.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you go ahead, please? A. Please?

Q. Will you answer the question, please?

935 (The pending question having been read by the reporter):

The Witness: I thought that my father would be forced to establish a usufruct by the Nazi Government, and I wanted to be helpful. And I was at this time thoroughly convinced that he ultimately would be forced to do so.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. So your statement is that you swore that Frankenberg was your father's agent because you thought or you were thoroughly convinced that in the future your father would make him his agent? Is that right? A. It is not quite correct.

Q. Well, will you state what is quite correct, then? A. I considered him as my father's representative, and I thought I had acted in the best interest of my father, who was at the time heavily threatened by the Nazi Government.

Mr. Burling: I ask at this time that plaintiffs concede the genuineness of Defendant's Exhibit 46-A, which is a photostat of a document from the files and records of the plaintiff.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence.

(The documents previously marked for identification Defendant's Exhibits 46 and 46-A were received in evidence.)

936 By Mr. Burling:

Q. Prior to this agency conversation with Frankenberg, in I think you said April, 1935, it was within your knowledge that Frankenberg was an old friend of your father's, wasn't it? A. "An old friend," I think, goes a little bit too far. My father knew him since very long time, and so did I. But he was not, as you can say, a friend of my father. He was an acquaintance.

Q. And I asked you yesterday, is it not the fact that in the gold case you stated that your father received a stipulation from you at the time of the gift, that you would put the proceeds in a holding company— A. That was my intention.

Q. —to safeguard your father's usufruct. A. That was my intention. At the time my father didn't want it.

Q. Well, at any rate, you had put the proceeds of the gift into a holding company, didn't you? A. For my own purposes, yes.

Q. And that holding company is the plaintiff here, isn't it? A. Yes.

Q. So at the time you asked Frankenberg to hold the key, thereby creating the usufruct, you were carrying 937 out what you had originally told your father was your intention? Isn't that right? A. No, you can't say that, because at this time most of these securities were not yet in the corporation.

Q. Well, in so far as the securities were in the corporation, you were carrying out your announced intention? A. In the corporation in Overseas, where at the time the gold coins valued 6.4 million Swiss francs, the main value in the corporation.

Q. Will you answer the question? A. Would you please read it?

The Reporter (reading): "Question: Well, in so far as the securities were in the corporation, you were carrying out your announced intention?"

Mr. Burling: At this time I ask plaintiffs—well, first I ask that the document be marked for identification Defendant's Exhibit 47-A.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

(The documents referred to were marked Defendant's Exhibits 47 and 47-A for identification.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you answer the question after the reporter read it, Mr. von Opel? A. The part of the values there at this time in Overseas.

938 Q. But that isn't an answer, is it? In so far as the proceeds had by 1935 found their way into Overseas, then the asking of Frankenberg to hold the key for your father was a carrying out of what you told your father you would do, on October 5, 1931? A. It was a part of my original intentions, yes.

Q. Now, I show you Defendant's Exhibit 47-A and ask you if that is a cable sent by you. A. Yes.

Q. And it is sent by you from New York to Adler and Company, or to the cable name for Adler and Company in Zurich, isn't it? A. It is addressed to Adler and Company, yes.

Q. And it begins, does it not—

"Overseas was instrumentality for executing gift agreement"—

Is that statement correct? A. Yes—was the instrument used for purposes of gift agreement, I would say.

Q. And it goes on to say, does it not?—

"Therefore my assignment 1932 was not in trust because made without right to reclaim, since any demand of return would have frustrated concentration and safeguarding of his sister's rights demanded by my father."

939 A. There is a point in between, as far as I understand this cable.

Q. Well, will you read it? Will you translate it and read it as you understand it? A. I think there is a point between the word "Rueckforderungarecht" and "durch."

Q. Well, will you read it, as you understand it, in English. A. It says, "My assignment 1932 is no trust, because there is no right to reclaim."

Q. Go ahead, please. A. "Through reclaiming said concentration and security intended by my father and for my sister, would have been made impossible."

Q. Does it refer to security intended by your father, or security of rights demanded by your father? A. Rights demanded by my father, those stipulations of the gift contract.

Q. That refers to rights which your sister got and other rights which your father demanded, doesn't it? A. Yes, I at the time even thought my sister had some rights to it. And you expressed the same opinion. I now found out that the accounting, that it was only an accounting provision. And I close saying—

"If you share this legal opinion, please tell me 940 so"—no—"please inform us the American lawyers."

It speaks about my opinion on these legal matters, which I wanted to have checked by the Swiss lawyers, to see if they were right or not.

941 By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you look once more at Defendant's 46-A, and I invite your attention to a pencil stroke at the place of signature. Can you identify that? Is that not Dr. Frankenberg's mode of indicating his initial? A. I never have seen that before. That is just a scratch. It might be even in here—

Q. You cannot identify it? A. No.

Mr. Burling: Excuse me, Your Honor, I seem to have the wrong document. (Pause) I have the right document. I just have two different translations.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Is that 48?

Mr. Burling: This is 46-A I am inquiring about.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you look in the middle of this cable, Defendant's 46-A, and see whether it is correctly translated: "—this method was necessary and intended for that reason alone because all assets acquired for sold Opel stock had to be consolidated and safeguarded in the Overseas as executive organ of gift contract between Geheimrat Opel and Fritz Opel." A. Yes, that's what it says.

Q. Did you ever have any talk with Dr. Frankenberg as to whether Overseas was the executive organ of 942 the gift contract? A. I explained to him in general what the gift contract stipulated, and I further explained to him the situation we were confronted with in Germany, and said I wanted to be helpful to my father.

Q. When was it that you learned for the first time that your father did not wish to make Frankenberg his agent? A. That was in the summer or fall of 1935.

Q. And what did your father say to you at this time, and what did you say to him? A. I reported to my father what I had done, and I gave him the reasons why, and I asked him whether he consented to my actions. He told me no. He said he wanted to do the opposite, that he wanted to get rid of Niessbrauch once and for all, because otherwise it would cause new trouble every year not only with the foreign exchange control, but also in regard to income taxes and property tax declarations.

Q. And he said to you that he would not consent to have Frankenberg hold the key to the box as his agent, is that right? A. Yes.

Q. You are perfectly clear about that? A. Perfectly clear, yes.

Q. What month did you say this took place in? A. I couldn't give you the exact date.

Q. As close as you can get to it. A. It was summer or fall of 1935, shortly before the first letters were written to the German Government renouncing these Niessbrauch.

Q. And at that time you understood, did you not, that Frankenberg was not holding the key as agent for your father? A. After my father informed me that he didn't want Dr. Frankenberg to act as his agent, I, of course, in turn informed Dr. Frankenberg.

Q. Promptly? A. I don't know the exact date.

Q. Did you inform him promptly? A. I informed him.

Q. Promptly? A. Promptly, I couldn't tell you any specific date. I mean, this is 12 or 15 years ago.

Q. And did you also inform John W. Davis that your affidavit was in error, and that Frankenberg was not holding the key, and that your father did not have the usufructory interest? A. At this time I think—

Q. Did you or did you not? A. I do not think so, because it was not necessary.

Q. You had filed an affidavit in June in which you swore in a court that you had mere legal title, that the usufruct was valid, that Frankenberg was holding the key to the box in which the Uebersee shares were held, as your father's agent? A. Yes.

Q. Now you say after the conversation with your father you learned that your father was—that Frankenberg was not your father's agent, there had been no valid delivery of possession, that there was no in rem usufruct? A. Correct, yes.

Q. Did you do anything at all to correct the affidavit that you had filed in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York? A. That—

Q. Did you do anything? A. No, I did not do anything at this time because at this time the court was through—it was through the courts.

Q. You know very well that is not so, do you not? A. I think so, yes.

Q. Are you not aware that John W. Davis argued in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in 1936, telling the Court the facts to be as stated in your affidavit? A. As I remember, this action undertaken by John W. Davis had nothing to do with any Niessbrauch, it was a mere level argument on Constitutional rights or safeguards.

Mr. Burling: Your Honor, I am taken by suprise, 945 but I wonder if I could send to obtain 83 Federal 2nd, which will establish this point.

The Court: You can do that at any time.

Mr. Burling: Thank you, Your Honor.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. You knew very well, did you not, that the argument was being made in the gold case; in fact, the principal argument was that the beneficial interest in the gold was in your father, who was not in this country, and that since he was not here, and was not doing business here, he had a right to export the gold. A. Yes, I saw that it was a constitutional question.

Q. Did you or did you not understand that to be the issue? A. No, I think I myself did not at the time understand that properly.

Q. Did you not know that the general Constitutional question as to the validity of the gold embargo act of March 9, 1933, had been decided by the United States Supreme Court at least two years before your case was argued in the Second Circuit? A. There were ten days between the purchase of this gold and the time when export license was needed.

Q. Won't you answer my question, Mr. von Opel? A. I am trying to answer it.

946 Q. I asked you, did you not know that the Constitutional question as to the validity of the gold act had been decided by the United States Supreme Court two years before John W. Davis argued this?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Your Honor, I think that the question assumes a false premise, because there are two gold acts. There is the gold act of 1933, and there is another gold act of 1934. And I think that the case of Norman against the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, if I am not mistaken, sustains only the constitutionality of the act of 1933.

The Court: You are talking about something else. Do you object to his question, is that it?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Yes, I do, Your Honor.

The Court: I think if the witness understands his question, it is perfectly proper for him to ask him. If he does not, he will say so.

The Witness: What was the question?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you not know that the Constitutionality of the gold act had been affirmed at least two years before by the Supreme Court of the United States? A. I don't remember that, no.

Q. Well, you understood, did you not, that the main, at least an important part of your argument—that is, Uebersee's argument—in the Second Circuit in 1936

947 was that the beneficial interest in the gold was in your father because of the usufruct. A. I don't think so. I think it was a legal question on Constitutionality.

Q. You don't think that the question of who owned the gold, that is, whether you had the beneficial ownership—A. I think only—

Q. Please don't interrupt me. A. Pardon me.

Q. You do not think that there was any issue as to whether you held the gold or whether your father held the gold beneficially? A. At the time of the first application I think it had some bearing on it, but later on not.

Q. At any rate, you took no steps to inform either Mr. John W. Davis or Mr. Isidor Kresel, who were your attornies in the gold case, that you found that your affidavit was entirely wrong as to who had the beneficial interest in the gold? A. I don't know at what time I informed Dr. Frankenberg.

Q. I did not ask you a word about Dr. Frankenberg, Mr. von Opel, I asked you about John W. Davis and Isidor Kresel. A. No, I did not inform them.

Q. To this day you have never informed John W. Davis that the affidavit you filed of June 7, 1935 you learned 948 to be incorrect later that summer, is that not right? A. I wouldn't use the word "incorrect."

Q. Well, you said in your affidavit, did you not, that you had mere legal title, that your father had the beneficial interest under a usufruct, that the shares had been delivered to Frankenberg as your father's agent, did you not? A. That was the legal opinion of my lawyers. I did not write the affidavit.

Q. You did not think John W. Davis knew where the key to the box was? A. I stated to John W. Davis the facts.

Q. That's right. You stated the facts, and you stated to him, did you not, that you had mere legal title, that your father had the beneficial interest—let me finish please—under the usufruct, and that the key had been delivered to Frankenberg as your father's agent? That is what you told Mr. Davis, is it not? A. He certainly wouldn't take my legal opinion. It was a gift contract, and let him read the gift contract and study it. I didn't advise John W. Davis on what was the legal—

Q. Of course not, Mr. von Opel, but you advised him as to the facts, did you not? A. Yes, definitely.

Q. Thank you. And you told him that you had delivered the key of the box to Frankenberg as your father's 949 agent? A. My father told me he didn't want him.

Q. Didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. And that question of fact, whether Frankenberg was or was not your father's agent, you understood to term it whether it was or was not in Niessbrauch, did you not? The answer to that is yes or not. A. You are using the word Niessbrauch again, and to which Niessbrauch you mean. There is a right in rem and there is a right in personum.

Q. Whether or not there was a right in rem was determined by the fact of whether your father accepted or did not accept Frankenberg as his agent. A. It is right in—

Q. Is that not right? A. Yes.

Q. So you understood in 1935 and 1936 that the question of fact of whether Frankenberg was your father's agent or not determined, ultimately, whether you had a right in rem to the gold or whether that right in rem was your father's. A. You are asking me for a legal opinion.

Q. I am not. I am asking you if you did not understand that legal fact in 1935. A. No, I didn't see that clearly at that time.

Q. You did not have any understanding that it 950 was important to tell John W. Davis that your affidavit was in error as to the fact of Frankenberg being your father's agent, is that your testimony? A. I think at the time John W. Davis went into the Second, into the Court of Appeals, that didn't play any part in the entire action. That is what I understood.

Q. Although you are not a lawyer, you determined that it was not necessary to tell Mr. Davis of this error in your affidavit, is that correct? You understood that your affidavit was part of the record before the Circuit Court, did you not? A. Affidavit was made for an application.

Q. Will you answer my question, please? A. I didn't know those.

Q. You never saw this book (indicating)? A. I saw this book later, after everything was over, and I always called it the most expensive book I ever have seen.

Q. I hope I will be able to agree with you, Mr. von Opel.

Mr. Burling: I ask that two more documents be marked the next numbers.

(Accordingly, a letter to Dr. Gros dated August 2, 1935, and its translation were marked Defendant's Exhibit 48 and 48-A for identification.)

951 By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you examine Defendant's 48-A, please, and state whether that is a letter which you wrote to Dr. Gros on August 2, 1935? A. Yes, I see it is the answer.

Q. It is a letter you wrote to Dr. Gros? A. Yes, it is.

Q. Thank you. Where were you when you wrote it? A. I was at the time in Germany.

Q. Will you state where? A. In Westerland.

Q. And where is that? A. That is on the island of Sylt.

Q. And that is in the North Sea? A. Yes.

Q. What is Haus Kliemann. A. That is a private house there, where I had a furnished room.

Q. This is a reply to another letter from Dr. Gros to you, is that your opinion? A. Yes.

Q. Do you say as follows: "Your argument that a usufruct had not yet been created did not seem very effective to me at the time, nor do I believe that your opinion will prevail today." Will you state what opinion of Dr. Gros' you were referring to? A. I was referring to Dr. Gros' opinion that in 1934, at the time of the criminal proceedings, we should have tried to fight that out on a legal basis, and I at the time was of the opinion that legal arguments didn't help, it was the time of the blood purge, thousand people killed, and I thought it better to give in at the time.

Q. We turn over about two paragraphs. A. Which paragraph?

Q. About two paragraphs. I am going to read you in English. See if you can find the German: "From a purely legal point of view." A. Oh, the following paragraph.

Q. "From a purely legal point of view the situation, I think, is such that he is not allowed to waive any usufruct which has accrued without a foreign exchange license." Will you explain to whom you are referring when you say he is not allowed to waive? Who was not allowed to waive? A. My father. I am speaking about the probability that an actual payment would be made.

Q. Was it your opinion in 1935 that if a valid usufruct had been created, your father could not waive it without a foreign exchange license? A. No, I didn't say that. I say here in this sentence, if actually a payment would be made, he could not waive this payment under the foreign funds control.

Q. Is not the translation of it as follows: "From a purely legal point of view the situation, I think, is such that he is not allowed to waive any usufruct which has accrued without a foreign exchange license." A. You leave out the most important word in the sentence, which means angefallenen. That means to say the proceeds, the money coming, derived from the usufruct. And I was of the opinion, and still am, that any payments actually credited to my father, he could not waive the right to claim them under the foreign currency regulations.

Q. I used the word "accrued." The translation which we have, and which the parties have stipulated is correct, reads, "He is not allowed to waive any usufruct which has accrued without a foreign exchange license." A. I think the word "accrued" is not the proper translation.

Q. At any rate, it is. A. It says here angefallenen; it means, actually paid in.

Q. Or arisen? A. Arisen, no, the word angefallenen means an actual payment.

Q. Well, the plaintiffs have stipulated, Mr. von Opel, that this is a correct translation.

954 At the time you wrote this letter you had learned from your father, had you not, that there was not any usufruct at all—that is, any in rem usufruct—because he would not accept Frankenberg as his agent? A. I think that was prior to this date.

Q. You already learned this. A. No, no, no. I wanted to say the opposite. I think the discussion with my father took place after this letter. I think, as I said before, in summer or fall, 1935, it was in middle summer, I think, the actual waiving took place about several weeks thereafter.

Q. Did you not testify that as soon as you went back to Germany after having talked to your lawyers in New York about the gold case, you went and told your father about having given the key to Frankenberg? A. Yes, at the first opportunity I saw him, and I think I saw him at the time we filed this report to the German Government.

Q. But before you went to see your father, you went to the Island of Sylt, which is a pleasure resort, is that right? A. Yes.

Q. And took a furnished room there? A. Yes.

Q. You did not go directly to your father and tell 955 him what you had done, and that the usufruct had been brought into existence? A. I don't know whether he was present in Germany at the time. I don't remember that.

Q. As a matter of fact, if you examine this very document, you will see that your father was in Berlin at the time, will you not? Look at the last sentence. Does it not read: "My father is at the moment still in Berlin. You might take the opportunity to discuss with him the different questions I raised in this letter, especially the usufruct question." A. Yes.

Q. So you mean that you were going to have Dr. Gros talk to your father about the usufruct question while you were sitting in a summer resort, without taking the trouble yourself of going to Berlin and telling him what you had done in Zurich and New York? A. I think that was Dr. Gros' business to attend to matters inside of Germany, that was not so much my concern.

Q. Had you told Dr. Gros at this time that you had delivered the key to Frankenberg as agent for your father? A. Dr. Gros knew nothing about that.

Q. So how could Gros talk intelligently to your father about the usufruct question when you had taken the important step of delivering the key to Frankenberg 956 as your father's agent? A. It was a mere legal question, to explain to the German authorities the gift agreement, and the stipulation.

Q. I know, it was a legal question, but Dr. Gros could not do that without knowing about the facts, could he? A. He learned the facts shortly thereafter.

Q. But here you are, while you are at a summer resort, the Island of Sylt, writing a long letter, a six-page letter to Dr. Gros, suggesting that he talk to your father about the usufruct question, and yet neither Gros nor your father had been told at this time that you had given the key to Frankenberg to hold, as your father's agent. A. As I have stated—

Q. Is that statement a fact? A. Yes.

Q. Now, will you explain how you thought your father and Gros could talk intelligently about the usufruct when neither of them knew the important fact that you had brought it into being by delivering the key to the box to Frankenberg? A. At this time I did not know what action my father would take, and I advised Dr. Gros to inform my father about his legal opinion on the matter.

Q. But how could he have a legal opinion without knowing the facts? A. He knew all the facts necessary.

Q. But he did not know about your delivery of the 957 key to Frankenberg, did he? A. That was of little interest to the German Government.

Q. Well, would it not make all the difference between whether a usufruct had arisen, and whether one had not arisen? A. The question is—

Q. Wouldn't it? A. I don't get your question.

Q. You say you asked Dr. Gros, a lawyer, to discuss with your father the legal question of the usufruct, and you have testified over and over again that you understood that the usufruct would be created by delivering the key to Frankenberg, as your father's agent, and you testified that you thought that your father would make Frankenberg his agent, and yet you did not tell either your father or Gros this essential fact. A. I was about to see my father shortly thereafter.

Q. Why did you write to Gros, telling him to go and talk to your father without telling him the essential facts? A. So that he would get Dr. Gros' unbiased opinion on the matter.

Q. What conceivable good would Dr. Gros' unbiased opinion on a matter be if he did not know the essential facts of the matter? A. That was only a small part of the entire problem, Mr. Burling. We were concerned—

958 Q. We all agree that Mr. Gallagher is a very learned man. Do you think that I would pay him very much for his opinion as to the validity of the title to my house, right this minute? I am trying to make you understand what my questions are about. That is why I ask you this hypothetical question. Do you not understand that Mr. Gallagher's opinion as to the validity of title to my house is worthless because he does not even know where my house is, or whether I have title or whether I rent it? Is that not clear to you? A. Yes.

Q. And is it not also clear to you that a lawyer's opinion is worth something only if he knows the facts which he is talking about? Is that not clear to you? A. In this specific—no, it is not.

Q. It is not clear to you that a lawyer has to know the facts in order to have an opinion that is worth something? A. I didn't say so, Mr. Burling.

Q. Is that clear to you, sir? Is it clear to you that a lawyer has to know the facts in order to express an opinion about a situation? A. He has to—

Q. Is that clear to you? A. He has to have the legal background.

Q. Does he not also have to know the facts? A. And I told him the facts.

959 Q. Where in this letter is there a word about your having—A. I told you so, that I saw him shortly thereafter.

Q. Who? A. Dr. Gros and my father.

Q. But on this occasion you suggest that Dr. Gros talk to your father. A. About the entire matter, yes.

Q. But you do not tell him the most important fact in the entire matter, do you? A. My father was the one who had to make up his mind, it was not myself only.

Q. But your father did not know what you had done with the key to the box at this time. A. At this time he didn't know yet, no.

Q. And Gros did not know, and you did not go to Berlin to tell them? A. No.

Q. Thank you. I will go on now. Will you look at the paragraph before the last. Do you see the sentence, "Nobody would regret that more than I myself, for I, too, am waiting for my 20 per cent." A. You cannot pull that out the entire—

Q. I asked you if you saw it. You see it, do you not? A. Yes, certainly.

960 Q. Will you point out to me in German? A. Here (indicating), and here.

Q. Does it not say "meine"—what is this? A. Percentages.

Q. The word before that is "meine"? A. Yes.

Q. So 20 per cent of the income you regard as "meine?" A. Yes.

Q. And "meine" is the German word for "mine?" A. Yes, definitely.

Q. Whose were the other 80 per cent? A. The other 80 per cent had to be accounted for with my sister.

Q. And that accounting was to take place when your parents were dead? A. Yes, as it is stipulated in the last will.

Q. Who owns the other 80 percent until that event should take place? A. I could really dispose of them.

Q. Whose were they? A. They were mine, of course.

Q. 80 per cent is yours, but you are still waiting for "my 20 per cent?" A. You are mixing up an accounting figure with the actual income and ownership. You can't throw those two things together.

961 Q. Did you ever tell any agency in the year 1942 that your father had a usufruct?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object. The question is much too broad, "Did you ever tell any agency." I think if he intends to impeach the witness, he should establish—

The Court: If he has any recollection of it, he may answer.

The Witness: Should I answer the question?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Yes. A. I don't recollect that.

Q. You were questioned by the Miami hearing board on this matter, were you not? A. Yes. I don't recollect any details.

Q. Was this question asked you, and did you give this answer, at page 94: "Why did you want the total of this 1,250,000 in gold to be vested in the name of this corporation?

"Answer: Because I wanted it—you see, I spoke about this usufruct, about this income, this 80 per cent, the usufruct agreement. My father was entitled to part of the income, and I knew I would not keep this gold because it was only gold temporarily. I knew I would acquire stock of some corporation, and that is the reason that everything was put over into this corporation's name."

Is that correct? A. Yes.

962 Q. So in 1942 you stated that your father was entitled to part of the income. A. Pardon me, that refers to 1934 or '5.

Q. You were being questioned— A. About the gold, in connection with the gold.

Q. You were being questioned in 1942. A. In connection with the gold.

Q. The transaction that you testified to in '42, "My father was entitled to part of the income." A. At this time of the gold, yes.

Q. Your father was entitled to it, yes. A. It was the gift agreement, certainly.

Q. That is, he had title to part of the income, is that right? A. He could, if he so wanted, before he waived, restore up to 80 per cent of the income, yes.

Q. You did not say in your gold case affidavit, did you, anything to the effect that you were to have full use of a hundred per cent of the income unless your father were to demand a part of the income? You did not say a word about that in that affidavit, did you? A. That is a gift agreement, I did not explain the stipulations of the gift agreement.

963 Q. There is nothing that appeared in the face of the gift agreement that indicates that your father is not to have an immediate usufruct, and immediately to have 80 per cent of the income, is there? A. I can't read that out of the gift agreement. It means that he has—

Q. There is not a word in it that indicates, is there, on the face of the instrument, that your father was to receive the income only if he demanded it, and that if he did not, you were to have the right to a hundred per cent? A. No, you have to—the instrument is not quite clear on the point, but it stipulates what has to be done about those 80 per cent, and it therefore indicates that my father never wanted to draw anything.

Q. It does not indicate on its face, does it? A. Certainly. Otherwise, all those prohibitions would not be in it.

Q. Do you now testify that from the face of the gift agreement one can see that you had a right to a hundred per cent of the income unless your father should make a demand? A. You are speaking about the face of the gift agreement. What do you mean by that?

Q. What the words say, the text. A. It is not only what the text says, but what the text implies, and what the intention of the parties is, all those factors have to be taken together.

964 Q. My point now is that in your affidavit you did not say a word about the fact that you had the right to a hundred per cent of the income unless your father demanded 80 per cent, and you then replied, "The District Court could not tell that from the gift agreement." I now say they could not, because there is nothing on the face of the agreement that spells that out. Now, do you agree with me? A. I did not interpret the gift agreement to any American authorities.

Q. Yes, but you did say that you had mere legal title plus 20 per cent of the dividends and interest, did you not? A. That is what the lawyers explained to me.

Q. Now you say you understood on October 5, 1931, that you were to have a right to a hundred per cent of the income unless your father made a demand, is that right? A. I didn't say that, on October—which date?

Q. October 5, '31. A. October 5, '31, you mean that is the date of the gift agreement?

Q. Yes. A. What did I say, sir?

Q. I wasn't there. I am asking you what you said was said there. Is it not true that you have testified before that you and your father agreed that you were to have the right to a hundred per cent of the income subject to an accounting at his death, unless he made a demand for 80 per cent of the income? A. I said this morning that, when you spoke about the income and income payments, that I, of course, had to pay the entire income as long as it—

965

Q. Will you please answer my question, Mr. von Opel? A. I didn't quite get it.

Q. Did you not say this morning, or yesterday, that you and your father agreed that you were to have all of the income subject to an accounting at your father's death, and subject also to his right to demand up to 80 per cent of the income? A. That is what is stipulated in the contract, yes.

Q. That is certainly not the terms of the contract. But did you say that that was agreed between you and your father? A. I said that there was no paragraph in the contract preventing me from using the entire income.

Q. But you did not see fit in making out your gold case affidavit to say a word which indicated that you had the right to use the entire income. A. I only gave the gift contract to the lawyers.

Q. You did not say that you had the right to the entire income, did you? A. And it is not so stipulated in the gift contract. It is only implied.

Q. You did not say that it is implied. You said, did you not, "Before accepting, however, I protested to my father against the insertion of the restriction, the reserva-

966 tion of usufruct," etcetera, "which left me with a mere legal title plus 20 per cent of the dividends and interest. My father, however, insisted on these terms." A. Yes, he wanted an accounting with my sister.

Q. But will you not agree that any reasonable and fair-minded man would read this as a statement by you that all you had as a beneficial interest was 20 per cent of the income? A. That is what it stipulated in the contract, that I have to account with my sister for 80 per cent of it.

Q. After your father's death? A. The gift contract does not mention a single line how and when I have to pay my father. If he had wanted an income, there certainly would be a specific stipulation that I would have to account for him at the end of each business year, and that he then within four or six weeks would have to ask for payment. Nothing of this sort is in the contract.

Q. You knew, did you not, that also filed on behalf of the plaintiff here in this gold case was an affidavit by Wronker-Flatow? A. I think so.

Q. You read it before it was filed, did you not? A. I don't think so.

Q. Did you ever hear the expression "Consortium O"? A. What is it, please?

967 Q. Did you ever hear the expression, "Consortium O"? A. I think that was used in connection with some loan by the Adler Bank.

Q. Is it not the fact that quite large accounts were carried in the books of Uebersee under the heading Consortium O? A. At what time, Mr. Burling?

Q. I don't know, at any time, so far as you know. A. That is possible.

Q. To the best of your knowledge, were there accounts for Consortium O, or weren't there? A. That is possible.

Q. Of course it is possible, it is possible that I had an account in this book. A. I don't remember the books of Uebersee, any phase of it.

Q. The name Opel begins with the letter "o", does it not? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: I ask that a photostat of the Aasland Verwaltungs-Conti Conto Corrent, which we translate "Foreign Management Accounts—Current Accounts" be marked for identification as one number, and then the sheet A, B, C, etc.

(Accordingly, the above-referred to documents were marked Defendant's Exhibit 49A through J, inclusive, for identification.)

968 By Mr. Burling:

Q. What does the word "Consortium" mean in German? A. It is a German word.

Q. What does it mean? A. You mean in English?

Q. No, as used in German, what does it mean? A. The English translation—

Q. Were the books of Uebersee kept in English? A. No. If you are asking me to explain what the word means—

Q. That is right, please do. A. I'm not quite clear on this point. I think this name was used by Adler Bank.

Q. Just in general, if you read the word "Consortium" in a German book, what would it mean to you? A. Mostly it means large assembly of people.

Q. Does it not mean syndicate? A. A bank might use it in this way.

Mr. Burling: I ask the plaintiffs to concede.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

Mr. Burling: I offer in evidence Defendant's Exhibit 49-A through J, which are photostats of what in English is a book called "Foreign Management Accounts-Current account."

(The documents above referred to, heretofore identified as Defendant's Exhibit 49-A through J, inclusive, were received in evidence.)

969 By Mr. Burling:

Q. I ask you to hold that and then to look at page 16. In your years of business experience you understand simple bookkeeping, do you not? A. Not this kind of bookkeeping. It is rather complicated and old-fashioned.

Q. Would you look at page 16 and see if there is not, if there was not credited to Consortium O, between September 12, 1932, and September 30, 1934, dollar amounts equaling $2,613,840.21? A. Which entry is it on this page?

Q. I will ask my accountant. (The entry was pointed out to the witness by Mr. Baum.) A. You spoke about '32?

Q. Between the years '32 and '34. A. Yes, every year a different entry.

Q. Is not the total the figure I gave you? A. I don't think that one can total all the years. It must have been the total of '34.

Q. All right, that settles that. Does that not indicate that in the year 1934 Consortium O was credited $2,613,840.21? A. And also debited at the same time, if I understood it correctly. Isn't that just an offset account?

Q. Will you show me what the withdrawals are?

970 A. I don't understand it. I would have to ask a bookkeeper.

Q. Is it not the fact, Mr. von Opel, that Consortium O is the code name for the 80 per cent of the income which was credited on Uebersee's books to your father, or your father and mother under the heading Consortium O? A. How can there be an income of 2.6 million. No, you are entirely mistaken.

Q. Could there not have been over a period of three years? A. I think that this name was used in the beginning before Frima was formed.

Q. What was it used for? A. Just as a name, an account name.

Q. An account name for what? Apparently I made an accounting mistake, myself. Is it not true, Mr. von Opel, that Consortium O represents that part of the principal which was reserved under the usufruct provisions of the gift agreement? A. Definitely not. It's fully out of the question.

Q. And what, to the best of your knowledge and belief, did the account represent? A. It was just an account name or number. Some banks use numbers, other banks use names.

Q. Do you think the words Consortium O were 971 selected by whimsy? A. I do not know who put that name into it; I didn't do it?

Q. You have no explanation at all to offer as to what this item on the books is of the plaintiff? A. I have to look it over. As far as I could see, it is an offset item, debited and credited.

Q. The original is in the possession of your counsel. Will you agree to do so tonight, please? A. Yes, I will be pleased to do that.

Q. Is any person, so far as you know, who is familiar with the books and records—that is, who kept the books and records of the plaintiff corporation—going to testify in this case? A. The bookkeeper is in Switzerland, Mr. Gaeng.

Q. Will you answer my question, sir?

Mr. Gallagher: Just a moment. Your Honor, we will advise the Government at this time that we have a Swiss accountant who is going to testify with regard to the books.

Mr. Burling: May I inquire of counsel if this Swiss accountant has kept the books?

Mr. Gallagher: No, but he has studied all the books, and he will be able to explain any discrepancies or inaccuracies.

Mr. Burling: I am not inquiring as to discrepancies or inaccuracies, I want to know what the Consortium O account was. I will ask the witness.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Is any witness going to testify here, so far as you know, who will be in a position to testify of his own knowledge as to what Consortium O represents in the accounts? A. We can find out every detail you like, Mr. Burling.

Q. I want to know if anybody is going to testify to that under oath. A. I don't know what my lawyers intend to do.

Q. You have been working with them daily, and often nightly for weeks, have you not? A. Yes.

Mr. Ingoldsby: We will certainly agree that the accountant is going to testify, and he will be able to identify the account.

Mr. Burling: I can identify the account myself, if Your Honor please. I am trying to establish that the plaintiff corporation is failing to bring any witness whomsoever who can tell us what Consortium O means.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I do not happen to know offhand, but as soon as I find out, we will certainly agree.

Mr. Burling (Handing document to the Clerk): May this be marked.

(Accordingly, a photostat copy of a document signed Overseas Finance Corporation, dated November 27, 1935, was marked Defendant's Exhibit 50 for identification.)

Mr. Burling: I ask for a concession as to Defendant's Exhibit 50-A, which is a photostat of a document signed Overseas Finance Corporation, dated November 27, 1935, taken from the books and records of the plaintiff.

Mr. Gallagher: Yes.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I show you 50-A and ask you if you have ever seen that. That is a letter from the Overseas Finance Corporation, is it not, to the Swiss Federal Banking Commission in Berne? A. Yes.

Q. And does it not recite in numbered paragraph one, "The entire capital of our company comes from a single group which also has a controlling interest in the capital stock"? A. Yes.

Q. Will you identify the members of the single group therein referred to? A. That was I, myself.

Q. Now this time you are a group, is that it? A. Yes, in banking terms this word is very often used.

Q. It did not mean the Opel family? A. No, sir, it definitely did not.

Q. Going back to October, 1931, you sailed on the 974 Europa, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. And you know, do you not, that your father made a long-distance telephone call to John Thomas Smith the 8th of October, that is, the day after the Europa left Bremerhaven? A. I don't know, it's possible.

Mr. Burling: Will you mark this, please (handing the Clerk a document).

(Accordingly, the document above referred to, a telegram signed Wilhelm von Opel, was marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 51 for identification.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I will read you a telegram, the genuineness of which has been admitted by the plaintiff.

"John Thomas Smith"—and then the cable address of General Motors, New York. "Unless advised otherwise, telephone you the 8th 10 a. m. New York Standard Time." —Signed, "Wilhelm von Opel."

Does that refresh your recollection as to whether you ever heard that your father had called Smith while you were at sea? A. There was an exchange of wires around this time. This telephone call I don't remember. I was at sea, as you say.

Q. Did either Smith or your father ever tell you what the substance of this telephone call was? A. I don't remember. It must have some reference to those 600
975 Opel shares. At the time, as you know, we tried to get General Motors to put a gold clause into the escrow agreement, and my father assisted me in this endeavor.

Q. And you landed in New York on the 13th, is that right? A. Yes—I am not sure of the date—13th, 14th, around this time.

Q. And you first went to the National City Bank, as you testified? A. Yes.

Q. And then you went and talked with John Thomas Smith and asked for a gold clause to be put in the escrow agreement? A. Yes, some safety against the devaluation.

Q. You did not tell Mr. Smith, did you, at this time, about the gift? A. No, I thought so previously, but now I find out through this wire from the bank that it was not General Motors but the National City Bank. I asked about technicalities.

Q. On October 17 you put the shares to General Motors? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And that was under the power of attorney which we have previously discussed? A. Yes, sir.

976 Q. Then is it true that you opened a series of accounts on October 19 with the City Bank Farmers Trust Company? A. A series of accounts? I don't remember that.

Q. Or else one account broken down into various subaccounts? A. Oh, that was much later, Mr. Burling. It was not at this date. You spoke about October 20 or so.

it was done a few days later. I guess it was around October 28, if I am not mistaken.

Q. Will you examine plaintiff's 17 and see if that refreshes your recollection as to when you opened an account or series of accounts at the City Bank Farmers Trust Company? I gave you the wrong exhibit number, I am sorry, it is plaintiff's 70. That is your signature at the bottom, is it not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you examine the date of that? A. October 19.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection as to when you opened the accounts? A. Yes. But that was secondary accounts, it was not yet the transfer account.

Q. Now, is it true that whenever these were opened one account was called Fritz von Opel main account principal? Do you recall? A. Yes.

977 Q. And one account was called Fritz von Opel special income account? A. Yes.

Q. And is it not true that instructions were given the bank that income on any securities which were deposited in these accounts was to go 80 per cent into the principal account and 20 per cent into the Fritz von Opel special income account? A. For accounting purposes, yes. May I say, this date, October 19, does not refer to the opening of an account. It is kind of an increment in case an account should be opened. The date on here is November 6, 1931.

Q. You could not have opened it on November 6, 1931, could you? A. That was the date.

Q. You did not open that account on November 6, 1931, did you? A. That is apparently the date at which this instruction—

Q. But you did not give the instruction on that date, did you? A. As I tried to tell you, the first account as to my best recollection was opened around October 28.

Q. At any rate, this date in November is clearly wrong, is it not? A. I don't know.

978 Q. You could not have given instructions in the New York Bank on November 6, could you? A. I think this page does not bear my signature.

Q. I just say you did not do anything at the City Bank Farmers Trust Company on November 6, did you? A. I think that was filled in by the bank.

Q. Won't you answer my question, please? A. I didn't do it, I don't think so.

Q. You could not have done it on that date. A. No, I was not there.

The Court: Have you about finished that subject?

Mr. Burling: If I could ask about two more questions, I will be through with these accounts entirely.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you not instruct the bank at this time to prepare duplicate statements on the main account, one of which was to be sent to your father, and one of which was to be sent to you? A. In regard to the income, yes. May I explain this matter a little further.

Q. Yes. A. The payments from General Motors in return for the sale of this 600 Opel shares went into an account for Wilhelm von Opel, which I had opened with the second additional power of attorney. This money

979 remained—let's try to put it this way: I gave instructions already on October 1928 that everything which later on in the middle or the end of October should come into this account should immediately be transferred to my own account. So I do not understand, as there was no money available at the time, how an account could have been opened on October 19. There must be some mistake. The transfer to my account took place after November 16, 1931.

Q. In any event, with regard to the main account you executed an instrument, did you not, authorizing the bank to follow any and all written instructions given the bank by your father, Wilhelm von Opel, for the disposition of any of the securities deposited. A. Pardon me, from which power of attorney are you reading?

Q. Did you not sign an instrument handed to the City Bank Farmers Trust Company in which you say, "I hereby authorize and request you to follow any and all written instructions given by Wilhelm von Opel in respect of the sale or exchange or other disposition of any or all of the securities which you as custodian or otherwise now or in the future may hold for my account," etcetera, "Very truly yours, Fritz von Opel."

Mr. Ingoldsby: May I ask whether or not you are reading from a bank form or from something prepared by Fritz von Opel?

980 Mr. Burling: You may inquire, Counsel.

Mr. Ingoldsby: That is what I am inquiring.

Mr. Burling: If you will consult documents which have been at your disposal for months, you will find the answer to your question.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I have had so many documents at my disposal for so many months—

The Court: He may look at it.

Mr. Burling: I have no more questions, Your Honor, on this topic.

The Court: Did you want to know if he signed this?

Mr. Burling: Yes. (To the Witness) Did you sign this?

The Witness: That is my signature, yes.

The Court: Tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Accordingly, at 4:30 p. m. the trial was adjourned until 10 o'clock the following morning, Friday, December 17, 1948.)

983 Mr. Burling: May I proceed, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Burling: I ask Your Honor to take notice, at Volume 83, Federal (2d), 225, the case of Uebersee Finanz-Korporation against Rosen, et al., which was decided—

I am sorry, Your Honor, I have forgotten the date.

The Court: April 6, 1936.

Mr. Burling: Thank you. And thereafter, as appears from 298 U. S. at 679, Uebersee Finanz-Korporation petitioned for certiorari to the Supreme Court, and the Supreme Court denied the petition on May 25, 1936.

I have sent for a copy of the petition for certiorari, if Your Honor please. I don't have it available at the moment.

The Court: All right.

Whereupon, FRITZ VON OPEL returned to the witness and was examined and testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. As a result of your negotiations with the General Motors officials, in October, 1931, you received payment for the Opel shares partly in cash and partly in stock 984 of General Motors? Is that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the General Motors shares were deposited with the City Bank Farmers Trust Company? A. Yes.

Q. And you instructed the bank to hold these shares subject to your father's further instructions, did you not?

Do you recall, Mr. von Opel? A. They were to be treated under the escrow agreement between General Motors and my father.

Q. No; I am talking about the General Motors shares you received in payment for the Opel shares. A. They were received on an account of my father; and, after two days, transferred to my own account.

Q. But at any rate, when they were first received, you instructed the City Bank Farmers Trust Company to hold the shares subject to your father's instructions? Is that not right? A. Certainly, because there was no other way—

Q. Thank you. Then that is right? A. Yes.

Q. Will you look at Defendant's Exhibit 52 and state whether that is not a document signed by you? A. Yes, certainly.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence.

985 (The document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 52.)

The Witness: That was the purpose of this power of attorney of my father, to simplify matters.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I again ask you not to volunteer. Just answer my questions, please.

And on October 21 your father instructed the National City Bank, or informed the National City Bank that you were authorized to do certain things with the General Motors shares and the cash. Is that not right? A. Yes. There was some exchange of wires, and a second power of attorney was given to me, which is not yet a definite one.

Q. I ask you to examine Defendant's Exhibit 53 and state whether that is not a wire giving you additional powers? A. That is more or less a repetition, as I remember, of the first power.

Q. But you recognize this as a power of attorney given to you? A. Yes; I think more or less a repetition of the first one.

Q. It was a cable received on October 21? Isn't 986 that so? A. It is addressed to the bank, yes.

Q. And this power of attorney limited your power to withdraw the shares, or the securities, so that you could withdraw securities only if you replaced them with the purchase price or with other securities? Is that right? A. Yes; I told you it was just a repetition of the first power.

Q. Is that right, Mr. von Opel?—on October 21 your power of attorney given by your father was limited so that you could withdraw securities only if you replaced them with other securities or with the price? A. Yes.

Q. You did not at this time get a full power of attorney? A. No. I got the full power on October 24.

Q. On October 24? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: I offer Defendant's Exhibit 53 in evidence.

(The document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 53.)

Mr. Burling: I ask that a group of twenty photostatic pages be marked as one exhibit, please.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. After you received the full power of attorney, 987 you transferred the cash from the National City Bank to the City Bank Farmers Trust Company? Is that correct? A. Not quite, Mr. Burling. I received the full power of attorney on October 24, and I instructed the National City Bank Farmers Trust that if General Motors would make payment, those payments would have to come in between November 16 and November 24; that those payments should then immediately, these future payments, be transferred to my own account.

Q. Then at some point there was a transfer to the City Bank Farmers Trust Company? Is that correct? A. I gave this order about three weeks ahead of the time when the proceeds were received.

Q. Wasn't the account transferred to the City Bank Farmers Trust Company? A. You mean, were the proceeds paid?

Q. The entire account, was it not transferred? A. There was no account yet, because payments were not made before November 16.

Q. All right. At some point the account was opened at the City Bank Farmers Trust Company? Is that correct? A. At which point do you mean?

Q. When did you open an account with the City Bank Farmers Trust Company? A. It must have been around the same time.

988 Q. When was that, please? Will you fix the date?

A. I think I gave the order on October 28, if I am not mistaken.

Q. All right, sir. A. And it had to do with those future proceeds.

Q. And you gave instructions, did you not, that one-fifth of the income was to be deposited in one account, and four-fifths in another account? Isn't that true? A. No, that is not correct.

Q. Well, what instructions did you give? A. That one-fifth had to be set aside for me, but no disposition was to take place with the remaining four-fifths. They were not separated. They were kept in the account. Only one-fifth was separated for myself.

Q. One-fifth was set aside for you, and the remaining four-fifths remained in another account? Is that right? A. No—remained in the main account. They were not taken out of this account.

Q. Well, did you not instruct the City Bank Farmers Trust Company in the following words?—

"On the 6th day of each month transfer 20 per cent of income collected to Fritz von Opel Special Account Custodian, with advice to him, and 80 per cent to principal main account, duplicate statements of main account to go to Wilhelm von Opel, Wiesbaden, Steubenstrasse 34,"

989 A. I think you left out part of the statement, because you began to say something about proceeds, and then you continued to say something about accountings.

Q. Did you give these special instructions?—

"On the 6th day of each month transfer 20 per cent of income collected to Fritz von Opel Special Account Custodian with advice to him, and 80 per cent to principal main account, duplicate statements of main account to go to Wilhelm von Opel, Wiesbaden, Steubenstrasse 34"?

A. I don't understand the words "advice to him".

Mr. Ingoldsby: If Your Honor please, may the witness see the entire document, so that the portion is not read out of its context?

The Court: He has a right to see the document he is reading from.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 70, and call your attention to some words under the printed heading "Special Instructions". A. Yes; that is exactly what I said.

Q. Thank you. A. The 20 per cent set aside for me—

Q. Thank you, Mr. von Opel; that is what I want

990 to know.

When you gave those instructions, it was your understanding, wasn't it, that your father had given you all his interest in the Opel shares? He had given it away?

He didn't have any ownership or title in the Opel shares? A. Definitely not, but—

Q. All right. A. But he had certain rights

Q. But he didn't have any definite title? A. Title—definitely not, no.

Q. Did your father ever tell you that on October 21 he had a conference with Mr. Mooney? A. I heard about it later, yes.

Q. He told you that when you got back to Wiesbaden? Isn't that right? A. Yes, and I think—

Q. Thank you. And you knew Mooney was the president of General Motors Export Corporation? A. Yes.

Q. And you knew that Mooney had direct personal responsibility for General Motors' dealings with Adam Opel A. G.? Isn't that right? A. Only on a management basis. He had nothing to do with this financial dealing.

Q. No; but Mooney was the General Motors man
991 who was in charge of the Opel operation? A. Of the operations, yes.

Q. Now, did your father at any time tell you that in the course of a conversation with he had with Mooney, that in the course of this conversation he told Mooney that he, Wilhelm von Opel, would be willing to retain his interest in Adam Opel A. G. and to agree to hold his share until January 1, 1936, on condition that it be agreed that payment be made in gold rather than in marks?

Did he tell you that? A. I came to New York—

Q. Did he tell you that, sir? A. Yes, I knew about that, sir.

Q. Did he tell you he had said that to Mooney? A. You can't put it that this way.

Q. Well, he either did or did not tell you that. Which is it? A. I heard about it first from John Thomas Smith.

Q. I want to know if your father told you he had that conversation with Mooney.

Mr. Gallagher: Will you make the time a little more definite, Mr. Burling?

Mr. Burling: When he returned to Wiesbaden.

The Witness: I think this matter was discussed.

By Mr. Burling:

992 Q. Thank you. So he did tell you he had this conversation with Mooney? A. And other people with General Motors.

Q. Fine—including Mooney? A. Including Mr. Mooney, yes.

Q. Thank you. On October 22, 1931, did you have a conversation with John Thomas Smith? A. I had several conversations in those days. I don't remember each single one.

Q. You had known Mr. Smith since 1928, had you not? A. Yes.

Q. You were well acquainted with him? A. Yes. And I had several conversations with him on those days. To which one do you refer, Mr. Burling?

Q. To the conversation of October 22nd. You know you had a conversation with him around that time; is that correct? A. As I told you, several conversations.

Q. Thank you. And in the course of one of these, did Mr. Smith tell you that your father had communicated with him and said he would be willing to hold his Opel shares for a little more than five additional years, if General Motors would insert a gold clause in the escrow agreement? A. Yes.

Q. When Smith told you this, on or about October
993 22nd, did you tell him that that was impossible, because your father had already given away all his Opel shares? A. No, I didn't tell him so. And I had my reasons, as I explained to you yesterday. I had asked that my father would keep his secret.

Q. So you were dealing with Smith— A. Under the power of attorney, yes.

Q. And you knew that your father had told Smith that he, Wilhelm, would be willing to hold his, Wilhelm's shares, even though Wilhelm didn't have any shares to hold? A. I acted under the power of attorney at the time, and the escrow agreement still stood between my father and General Motors.

Q. Well, will you explain how your father could offer to hold his shares on October 22nd, if he gave away the last share he had on October 5? A. He wanted to assist me in getting a gold clause.

Q. So he, Wilhelm, offered to hold onto shares which he had already given away. Is that your testimony? A. No, Mr. Burling, that is not my testimony. You must read this wire, and you will see from this wire that he left it to me to make the decision.

Q. But the negotiations between your father on the one hand, and Mooney and Smith for General Motors for the other, looked to your father's retention of Opel 994 shares? Isn't that so? A. General Motors was immensely interested in keeping at least 5 per cent away from a sale, yes.

Q. And, again, for perhaps the one hundredth time, I implore you to answer my questions.

Isn't it true there was a negotiation carried on, while you were in New York, between General Motors on the one hand and your father on the other, whereby your father was offering to hold, to keep in his hands, the Opel shares, even though you testify now he had given them away on the 5th? A. The decision was left to me.

Q. Will you please answer my question? Isn't that the situation? A. No, that is not the situation, Mr. Burling.

Q. Well, you have just testified, haven't you, that you knew your father had communicated with John Thomas Smith, offering to hold his, your father's shares? A.

That was only a way of speaking. I was acting on the power of attorney.

Q. I am not asking you how you were acting. Your father offered to hold his shares, didn't he? A. No; you imply something that isn't in it.

Q. Wait a minute. Didn't you testify a moment ago that Smith told you your father had offered to hold his shares for five additional years, in return for a gold 995 clause? A. The shares mentioned in the escrow agreement.

Q. Did you or did you not? A. You are implying something that is not in it.

Q. Didn't you testify just a minute or two ago—and please answer my question—

Didn't you testify that Smith told you that your father had offered to hold his, Wilhelm von Opel's shares, for five additional years? A. You must take the entire—

Q. Did you or not so testify, sir? A. I did not testify that these shares were my father's shares.

Q. I didn't ask you that. Didn't you testify your father offered to hold his shares? A. No. He left it to me.

Q. Oh, Mr. von Opel. Really you can answer my question. A. I can't answer this question. You are implying something which isn't in it.

Q. Whether or not I am implying something, or what inference should be drawn from this transaction, is a matter for His Honor, after argument by counsel. I just want to know now what the facts are.

The Court: I understood him to say, Mr. Burling—and it can be correctly by any of you if you want to—I 996 understood him to say that Mr. Smith told him around about that time that his father had said he would hold it a certain period of time if he could get the gold clause written into it. I understood him to say that.

Mr. Burling: Thank you, Your Honor. That is my understanding also, and I will go on without laboring it.

The Court: If it is something different, Mr Gallagher can bring it out.

Mr. Burling: Yes; thank you, Your Honor.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, after Mr. Smith told you this, you sent your father a wire dealing with this subject, did you not? A. That is possible.

Q. Do you remember what you said in that wire? A. No, I don't.

. . . . . .

1009 Q. Now, did you have a conversation with Mr. Smith about an offer which your father made to hold his shares, in return for a gold clause? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state, as best you can remember, what you said to Smith and what Smith said to you? A. He told me about this exchange of wires, and, if I remember correctly, about this telephone call.

And I told him that my termination of the contract made on October 17 would stand.

Q. You did? A. Yes.

Q. You did not tell him you would have to go back to Wiesbaden and talk to your father about it? A. No, definitely not.

Q. You are sure of that? A. It just meant send-1010 ing a wire to my father telling him I would come to discuss it with him; that I had told Mr. Smith there was no way of getting this termination reversed.

Q. You are sure of that? You are sure you did not tell Smith that you would have to go back to Wiesbaden and discuss the problem with your father? A. Mr. Smith suggested that—

Q. But are you sure you told him you would not do that? A. I am sure I told him the termination would stand.

Q. By the way, you know Mr. Smith is dead, do you not? A. I heard so about six weeks ago, yes.

Q. Now, you knew, did you not, that Mr. Smith on October 30 wired your father—and I am reading from Defendant's Exhibit 7.

You saw this wire? A. I have seen it later, yes.

Q. Didn't you see it when Mr. Smith sent it? A. No.

Mr. Burling: If your Honor please, this is already in evidence. It is a cable—

"Wilhelm von Opel, Wiesbaden, Germany.

"Your proposition in regard to one-half acceptable to us. Stop.

"Your son Fritz thinks he would like to confer with you about it further. Stop.

1011 "Sailing Europa, in Wiesbaden November 9."

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you tell Smith you would like to confer further with your father about his proposition? A. I told Mr. Smith I would explain to my father why I had cancelled, and why I would stick to it.

Q. Well, now, will you answer— A. And I further told him it was a ridiculous and silly proposition.

Q. But you did not tell him you wanted to confer further with your father about it? A. No, definitely not.

But I also say that Mr. Smith still hoped the deal could be made. They were all very much interested in keeping my father in the corporation.

Mr. Burling: I would like at this time, if your Honor please, to read Defendant's Exhibit 6, which is already in evidence. It is an incoming radiogram from Wiesbaden, addressed—

"Mr. Sloan, General Motors, New York City.

"Would like confirm position covered with Mr. Mooney. Stop. Personally would gladly continue connection and seriously believe more in your interest regarding business here that I hold Opel stock than G. M. stock. Stop. Propose following basis: Quote: 'I keep fifty percent 1012 of my Opel stock until at least January first 1936. Stop. Having right to ask you then to purchase my stock at rate of Reichsmark' "—

The Witness: Twenty-six thousand five hundred.

Mr. Burling: Thank you. The word seems to be in German—

"'per share as provided in present agreement regarding stock. Stop. However you guaranteeing currency to the effect that the amount payable to me on January first 1936 is not less than goldmark 26,500 per share on local basis of one goldmark being equal to one two thousand nine hundred seventieth of one kilogram fine gold. Stop. For explanation quote should I sell to you today I would receive about same amount now as I ask you to guarantee per January first 1936.' Unquote. Should you at any time before January first 1936 decide to reduce stock capital of Opel such reduction should not affect total amount payable to me in case you purchase mo, m-o stock"—

I guess that is "my"—

"Stop My son Fritz is authorized conclude on this basis. Kindest regards.

"Wilhelm von Opel."

And the date of that is October 23, 1931.

By Mr. Burling:

1013 Q. Did Mr. Smith show you this cable I have just read? A. It is possible he mentioned it.

Q. Did he show it to you? A. I can't recollect. It is possible.

Q. And did you in fact sail on the Europa, did you not, back to Germany? A. Shortly thereafter, yes, sir; I think around October 30.

Q. And Mr. Smith went with you to talk to your father, didn't he? A. I don't know whether he went on the same boat. It is possible.

Mr. Burling: I offer in evidence a certified copy of portions of the manifest of the Steamship Europe, which sailed from the Port of New York, October 31, 1931, in so far as it relates to Fritz von Opel and John Thomas Smith, the original of which is contained in the records of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

(The document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 57.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you examine the second sheet of this exhibit, which is the passenger manifest of the Europa? A. Yes.

1014 Q. And see if you see your name. A. Ye.

Q. Now, do you see a column, in Column 6, which says "Country where you are going to live". Do you see that column? A. Yes.

Q. And what does it say for Fritz von Opel? A. It says "Germany ditto". It says where you were going to go.

Q. Where you were going to live, wasn't it? A. No. I did not make out this manifest, Mr. Burling.

Q. Did you ever tell that to any official? A. No.

Q. I show you the first sheet and ask you if you see there the name John Thomas Smith. A. Yes.

Q. And your remember Mr. Smith was on the board, don't you? A. It is possible. I don't recollect it. But he went back about the same time.

Q. And did you not have conversations about your father's gold proposal while on the boat? A. That is possible, certainly. There were very much interested to keep my father in it.

Q. And you and Mr. Smith traveled together to 1015 Wiesbaden, didn't you? A. I don't know whether he went by the same boat I went. Anyway, we further on were at the same time in Ruesselsheim at the factory.

Q. And didn't you and your father and Mr. Smith have a discussion about whether he should keep either 300 or 600 shares of Opel stock in return for a gold clause? A. I told Mr. Smith that that deal was out; that I would not reverse the contract.

Q. Isn't it a fact that Mr. Smith was not told by anybody that that deal was out, until after you and Smith reached Wiesbaden? A. I had already terminated it, October 17. There was no reason to tell him anything further.

Mr. Burling: I offer in evidence, as admitted by the plaintiff, Defendant's Exhibit 58.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

(The document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 58.)

Mr. Burling: This is a cable, signed "Smith", dated November 10, 1931, and it is addressed to General Motors in New York:

"Bradley Geheimrat under Fritz's advice has withdrawn proposition to retain one-half. Stop. Settlement should be carried out pursuant to letters of instruction."

1016 By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, isn't it true that after you and Smith reached Wiesbaden, you had a discussion with your father and told him that he should tell Smith that he would not go through with his proposal to hold onto the shares in return for a gold clause? A. I told my father I had terminated. I told him why I had terminated, that it was absolutely silly to go on at this low rate of interest, 2 8 per cent; and that I had no reason personally to do General Motors a favor, so that they could save taxes in Germany.

Q. And so your answer to my question is no, you did not tell your father or persuade your father to tell Smith that he withdraw the— A. There was no reason for me to—

Q. Fine. But will you answer my question, Mr. von Opel?—Isn't it true that your father, in your presence, told Smith that you had persuaded him to withdraw his offer? A. I don't get your question. —

Q. Your father did not speak to Smith in your presence? Is that right? A. I don't remember that. I think, if I remember correctly, I told my father the termination was made, and he should tell the General Motors people that he reversed his former stand.

1017 Q. I see.

Now, your present testimony is, is it not, that when you arrived in New York you first asked that a gold clause be inserted. Then, on the 17th you found you could not get the gold clause inserted, so you sold the stock; you put the stock to General Motors.

And then later, around the 22nd, Smith told you your father had talked to Mooney and had cabled to him offering to hold a part of the shares, in return for a gold clause. Is that right? A. That is the way I understood it, yes.

Q. That is the sequence of events? A. I think the first event is, it may have been between October 15 and 17, that I asked General Motors to put in a gold clause.

Q. That is right. A. A gold clause for the full value.

Q. That is right. Well, didn't I state the sequence correctly Mr. von Opel?—

First, between the 13th and the 17th, you negotiated for a gold clause? A. Yes, sir; that is the way I remember it.

Q. On the 17th you put the stock to General Motors, and on the 22nd you had a discussion with Mr. Smith.

1018 A. I don't remember the dates of these discussions, because I was in General Motors pretty nearly every day, day.

Q. But, at any rate, the discussion about your father's offer to hold the shares came after you put the shares to General Motors, wasn't it? A. That is the way I understand it. It is possible my father was in contact with them sooner than that.

Q. But you have no knowledge that that is not the way it happened? A. I don't; I don't recollect.

Q. Now, I want to read from folio 141 of your gold case affidavit:

"Within the next few days I left for New York. Upon arriving in New York in October, 1931, I entered into negotiations with John Thomas Smith, vice president and general counsel of General Motors Corporation, in New York, for a modification of the escrow agreement, Exhibit Q, so as to place the Reichsmarks payable thereunder on a gold or gold equivalent basis. I received no definite answer on this proposal, but after several days I was told by Mr. Smith that my father had agreed by cable with Mr. Sloan, president of General Motors Corporation, to modify the escrow agreement so that the price of 300 shares of Opel Motor Works stock, that is one-half the total number, should be payable in Reichsmarks on a gold or gold 1019 equivalent basis. On receiving this news from Mr. Smith, I considered the matter for a while and then told Mr. Smith that I did not agree and would call for payment under the escrow agreement in the exercise of my rights as attorney-in-fact. I then cabled my father stating in substance what I had done, giving my reasons, and adding that I should discuss the matter with him on my return to Germany.

"On or about October 17, 1931, I gave written notice to General Motors Corporation of my election to deliver to it the shares described in the escrow agreement, Exhibit Q, at the price therein stated," and so on.

Now, in your gold case affidavit you indicate that the discussions with Smith about your father's proposal came before you put the stock to General Motors, and not after. A. No, sir. Will you please read that again?

Q. Well, your counsel can read it. I have read it once. A. That is not covered.

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, I think the witness is entitled to have a copy of this before him, instead of trying to follow all the reading.

The Witness: Well, I follow it.

1020 The Court: He has asked him a question, and he has answered it.

The Witness: May I answer your question, Mr. Burling?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Please do. A. On the gold case affidavit, it stated I negotiated on the gold clause, and a few days later my father made another proposal, which is absolutely correct. You stated my father made this proposal around October 22. And I negotiated with them on the gold clause between 15 and October 17, when I cancelled. So there are several days in between—five days.

Q. In any event, you are clear you never told John Thomas Smith about the gift, aren't you? A. I am rather sure, yes, sir. But as I told you yesterday, for a time I was under the impression that it was John Thomas Smith and not the National City Bank with whom I had talked about the technicality of substituting me in the escrow agreement.

Q. You did say in the New York interrogation in 1946, did you not, as follows:

"And I asked General Motors whether they would prefer to work under the gift agreement or under the power of attorney, and they answered that the gift agreement would require a long time to check into and to properly

1021 establish my rights under it. So it would be much simpler if I would act under the power of attorney, which I did."

A. That is correct. At this time I had not seen the wire yet which I sent from the steamer to the National City Bank. I thought at the time I had sent this wire to General Motors.

Q. All right. Now, in 1931, you purchased all of the shares of Uebersee Finanz-Korporation from Adler and Company, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. And the entire purchase price was derived from the proceeds of the Opel shares? Is that right? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know a man named Theodore Hoffacker? A. Yes.

Q. You knew him in 1931, didn't you? A. Yes, I think I met him for the first time in 1922.

Q. And he was an investment counsellor, was he not? A. In New York, yes.

Q. And he had a company called Theodore Hoffacker Company, is that right? A. Yes.

Q. And did you arrange that the proceeds of the Opel shares were to be invested and managed by Hoffacker 1022 & Company? A. Yes, I had a contract with him of this kind. I don't remember the details. I think he operated this account.

Q. And he bought and sold securities for Uebersee? A. Yes.

Q. In 1932 and 1933? Right? A. Yes, it is possible.

Q. And in the spring of 1932 you authorized Hoffacker to acquire the majority interest in an American corporation called Spur Distributing Corporation, didn't you? A. In the spring of 1932?

Q. Yes; wasn't that when it took place? A. Yes, it is possible.

Q. I am not asking you whether it is possible, I am asking you if that is not when it happened. A. I think prior to this time I had already acquired about five or ten thousand shares. And later on I acquired the majority. That is correct.

Q. But you completed the acquisition of the majority in the spring of 1932? A. I completed—that is the right word, yes.

Q. And you knew at that time Spur operated a string of gasoline filling stations? A. Yes.

Q. And didn't you then cause Uebersee to give Hoffacker proxies so he could vote the Spur stock? A. Yes 1023 Q. And do you not know that Hoffacker then voted himself in as vice president of Spur, and put a person named von Klemm, and another person in the office, on the board of directors? A. He was from Hallgarten & Company from which I acquired the majority. I am speaking about Mr. von Klemm. I bought the first stock of Spur from Mr. von Klemm.

Q. I see. And you have attended neither a stockholders or directors meeting of Spur? A. It is very difficult for me to tell you that offhand. I would have to check my records.

Q. You have no present recollection of having attended such a meeting? A. I think directors meeting, I attended several of them, because I was always on the board of directors of Spur.

Q. You were always on it? A. I think so. At least, I think I went on the board in 1934 or 1935, and remained on the board, I think, until about 1941.

Q. And you didn't meet the president of Spur until the summer of 1934, did you? A. That is possible. I met him some time after the majority was acquired.

Q. And you first met him in Paris? Is that right?

1024 A. What do you say?

Q. You first met him in Paris? Is that right? A. Mr. Houghland?

Q. Yes. I do not recollect it; and I rather doubt it.

Q. There isn't any doubt that the president of Spur from the time you acquired it, from the time it was vested, was Mr. Mason Houghland? A. Always the same president, yes.

Q. And that was Mason Houghland? A. Yes.

Q. Thank you. A. But that doesn't mean I met him in Paris.

Q. Where do you think you first met him? A. I think I first met him here in America.

Q. Well, where? A. It is possible that he came to New York. It is also possible I met him first in Nashville, Tennessee, where the headquarters of the corporation are.

Q. Of course, it is possible; but which do you think it was? A. After seventeen years, I really couldn't tell you that.

Q. At any rate, at one time you did meet Mr. and Mrs. Houghland in Paris? Isn't that so? A. I do not 1025 recollect it. Of course, it is possible. If you give me the year—

Q. It is 1934 I am talking about. A. And I can refresh my recollection. Of course, it is possible.

Q. 1934, it is possible. Well, perhaps I can refresh your recollection a little more. Didn't you call for Mr. and Mrs. Houghland and take them to a very good restaurant in Paris, and then take them to the Follies Bergiere? A. It is absolutely possible.

Q. And at any rate you do not recall having any business discussion— A. I do not recollect it.

Q. You do not recall having any business conversation with Houghland in Paris, do you? A. In which respect? Would you refresh my recollection?

Q. I say, you did not have—I can't refresh your recollection as to what you did not do.

Isn't it true you did not have any business discussions with Houghland in Paris? A. It was fifteen years ago, and I just told you I didn't even remember I met him in Paris. How could I make such a statement?

Q. The answer, apparently, is no. Is that right?
1026 A. I could not say I had no business discussion with him.

Q. The question is, you don't now recollect any? A. I don't recollect any business discussion right now.

Q. Thank you. You have spent a great deal of time, haven't you, in the past five years, trying to recall all of the aspects of your relations to Mr. Houghland? A. During the past five years?

Q. That is right. Haven't you thought a great deal about your relations with Mr. Houghland? A. You had better turn it the other way, Mr. Burling.

Q. Well, if there is some other question to be asked, your counsel could ask it. I ask you this question. A. I found out that he was disloyal to me.

Q. I am not asking you that. I am asking you a yes or no question—

Haven't you spent a great deal of time thinking about your relationship with Mr. Houghland? A. No, Mr. Burling.

Q. You have not? A. I have better things to do than thinking all day and night about Mr. Houghland.

Q. You haven't talked to your lawyer at great length about Mr. Houghland? A. Within the last two or 1027 three weeks, yes.

Q. Haven't you tried to go back over all the transactions you and Mr. Houghland had together? A. Certainly. We even made a motion in court in this respect.

Q. Fine. Isn't it true that the first time you saw Houghland in Nashville was in 1935? A. That is possible. I was in Nashville several times. I should say offhand about three or four times.

Q. But, at any rate, from 1932 until 1935, it is true, is it not, that you let Hoffacker manage your investments in Spur? A. I wouldn't say that. I supervised the activities of Mr. Hoffacker.

Q. But Hoffacker supervised Spur? Is that right? A. I don't know the exact year when I went to the board, you see. But, for instance, I remember that in 1933, or even 1932, it was shortly after I had acquired the majority of Spur, I gave Mr. Houghland a seven years contract.

Q. But you hadn't met Mr. Houghland at that time, had you? A. I would rather say that I must have met him somewhere, because it is very unlikely that I would have given him a contract without meeting the man first.

Q. Whether or not it is unlikely, the fact is you 1028 had never met him before you gave him the contract, did you? A. I never made such a statement. I said I did not recollect it.

Q. Do you recall meeting Mr. Houghland prior to or at the time you gave him the contract? A. I do not remember that, but it is very likely that I saw him.

Q. That is an argument which your counsel can make to His Honor. A. Pardon me.

Q. But you have no recollection— A. I have no recollection, no.

Q. Thank you. Now, will you state whether or not Hoffacker didn't say to you in 1932 that since Spur is a gasoline retailing enterprise, it would be profitable to invest some of your money in properties producing gasoline, that is to say, oil wells and refineries? A. Yes, we had discussions along this line, and I actually did do it.

Q. And Hoffacker commissioned the Crittenden Engineering Company to prepare a report on available oil properties, didn't he? A. I remember that, yes.

Q. And he then invested about four hundred and fifty thousand dollars of Uebersee money in oil properties, 1029 did he not? A. Yes, I think so.

And the way this was done was to incorporate Oil Production, Incorporated? Isn't that true? A. I think that was the name, yes.

Q. And Hoffacker became president, and a man named Crittenden became the vice president of that company? Isn't that so? A. Yes, to the best of my recollection.

Q. And then Oil Production, Inc. made a management contract with Crittenden whereby Crittenden was to manage the property? Is that right? A. That is not quite correct. I think the management contract was made with Mr. Grogan and Crittenden.

Q. G-r-o-g-a-n? A. G-r-o-g-a-n, yes, sir.

Q. Crittenden and Hoffacker also incorporated a thing called Oil Refineries, Incorporated? A. Yes, I think so.

Q. And invested $95,000 of Uebersee money in purchasing a small refinery? Isn't that correct? A. In East Texas.

Q. When did you first meet Mr. Crittenden? A. That must have been around this time.

Q. You didn't supervise the activities of Crittenden, did you? A. No; he was a chemical agent here and he was running the refineries.

1030

Q. But Hoffacker was watching your investment in this property, was he not? A. Yes.

Q. And Hoffacker also put Uebersee money in a brewery in Lowell, Massachusetts, called the Harvard Brewing Company? Is that correct? A. I think the deal was originally made through Hallgarten & Company, in New York.

Q. But Hoffacker became the president of Harvard Brewing Company? A. After I acquired the majority. He wasn't the first president. There was first another president. In the beginning, if I remember correctly, I had only 30 or 40 per cent, and the rest was held by clients of Hallgarten; and in the years to come I then acquired majority.

Q. Well, in those early years, Hoffacker supervised your investment in the brewery? Is that right? A. Not he alone. I also had other people in it. For instance, my accountants were represented, partly as officers and partly as directors.

Q. I see. How many times did you see Crittenden at the time you started to invest money in oil properties? A. Before I invested it?

1031

Q. At the time. A. At the time—I saw Crittenden, I should say offhand, not more than four times in my life.

Q. Will you identify the four times you saw Crittenden in your life? A. I think I saw him in Overton, East Texas; and I can even give you the time, because this terrible explosion had happened where 500 children had gotten killed.

Q. That is the New London school disaster you refer to? A. Yes. About this time I came, for the first time, I think it was—but I am not quite sure on that; it is so many years ago—but I think that is the first time I came into East Texas.

Q. And that is the first time you met Crittenden? A. I am not sure. The headquarters of the corporation were in Shreveport.

Q. In Shreveport, Louisiana? A. In Shreveport, Louisiana, and it is possible I had been in Shreveport.

Q. You saw Crittenden at the time of this disaster. What are the other three times you saw him? A. I saw him several times.

Q. Well, tell us about each occasion on which you 1032 saw him, will you please? A. I can't do that, Mr. Burling.

Q. Well, do the best you can, will you please? A. I was in Shreveport several times, and in the East Texas field, if I remember correctly, only once; and I think I met him in New York.

Q. Did you ever meet him in any foreign countries? A. Oh, I traveled with him over to Germany when we wanted to acquire this Burgess process.

Q. The what process? A. The coal-into-gasoline process.

Pardon me; no, it wasn't the Burgess process. It was too expensive. It was the process called—I forget the name of this process. It was a competing process to Burgess, and Crittenden thought we could use it to make gasoline out of natural gas.

Q. Did you on any other occasion see Crittenden in any foreign country? A. I don't recollect that.

Q. You spent two weeks with him in Zurich, didn't you? A. With Crittenden?

Q. Yes. A. I do not recollect that. At what time?

Q. Did you ever spend two weeks in Zurich with Crittenden, in the same hotel?—and I will identify the 1033 hotel as the Baur au Lac? A. I think the Crittenden family traveled through Switzerland, and it is possible I met them in their traveling.

Q. You spent two weeks in a series of business discussions with Crittenden in Zurich, did you not, at the offices of Hans Frankenberg? A. No.

Q. You deny that? A. I can't remember that, because there was nothing besides technical matters I had to discuss with Mr. Crittenden.

Q. And you also saw him in Montreal, didn't you? A. Yes, I remember that. He came up to Montreal. I think that must have been in 1935 or 1936.

Q. Wasn't it June, 1936? A. Yes, that is possible, yes.

Q. You and Frankenberg were in Montreal together at that time, weren't you? A. No, I don't remember that. I think Mr. Kressel, my lawyer, was there.

Q. Wasn't Frankenberg there? A. It is possible, but I think Mr. Kressel was there.

Q. Who did you see while you were in Montreal? A. At this time I wanted to immigrate to the United States.

Q. I didn't ask you what you wanted to do, Mr.
1034 von Opel; I asked you who you saw at Montreal.

A. I just tried to refresh my own recollection.

Q. Please think, and then tell us who you saw in Montreal. A. I think Mr. Kressel was there. I think he had even taken his wife along, if I remember correctly. And some of my accountants were there.

Q. How about Mr. Guyette? Was he there? A. That is possible, yes.

Q. And how about Mr. Houghland? A. Mr. Houghland, I don't recollect. It is possible.

Q. Will you state why you were in Montreal at this time? A. Because at this time by lawyer, Kressel, advised me not to enter into the United States, on account of this nuisance suit.

Q. That is, you didn't wish to be served with a summons and complaint, in a lawsuit? Is that right? A. Yes, this nuisance suit of Cole.

Q. Isn't it the fact that you had Guyette, who was also at that time the head of Harvard Brewery— A. Yes.

Q. —come up for a day? A. That is possible. All my business associates I think were there for a few days.

1035 Q. Now, did you at any time after October 5, 1931, did you or any member of your family own a house at Kampen, on the Island of Sylt? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you or any member of your family rent a house during the period I have specified, at Kampen? A. My wife had rented a cottage there, a small two-room cottage.

Q. What was the name of the cottage? A. I don't remember that. She was very sick at the time, and her physician had told her to go to the seaside to a cool place.

Q. When did this take place? A. I don't remember the year exactly.

Q. What is your best judgment as to the year in which your wife was so ill? A. I can't recollect the date.

Q. Now, will you state whether or not it is correct that in August, 1937, you learned that Mr. Houghland and his family were in Europe on a pleasure trip? A. Mr. Houghland went to Europe quite frequently for horseback riding, yes, sir.

Q. I didn't ask you why Mr. Houghland went to Europe. I asked you if you learned he was in Europe in August, 1937. A. That is possible.

1036 Q. Is it not the fact that you wired him in August, indicating a desire to meet him in Europe? A. It is possible. He came there frequently.

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 59 and ask you if that is a cable you sent Houghland? A. That is possible.

Q. It bears the signature "Fritz von Opel, Kampen, Sylt", does it not? A. Yes.

Q. Doesn't that refresh your recollection as to whether you did or did not send this? A. Yes; I think I sent it, yes.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

(The document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 59.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. And then you sent him another wire asking him to meet you Hamburg? Isn't that right? A. Where, please? I didn't get it.

Q. Hamburg. A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: I ask that this piece of paper be marked.

(The document referred to was marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit No. 60.)

1037 Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, this is on a telegraph form, which has some gaelic, which I am unable to read. I therefore intend to offer the document only in so far as there is English written on it.

The Witness: What is it?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I ask you, Mr. von Opel, is that a copy of a cable which you sent Houghland? Perhaps I can read it to you, if you have difficulty in reading it. A. Yes (returning the paper).

Q. The address indicates redirected at Wicklow, and then an illegible number; then "Houghland", and then the name of a hotel, an Irish name which I am unable to pronounce. The message is:

"Would your plans permit seeing me in or new Hamburg any date after August 25."

Then I take it the next is in French, the words "Beaucoup, B-e-a-u-c-o-u-p, de d-e, planir, p-l-a-n-i-r"— and then "regards, Opel, Zurich, Dolder Hotel."

Does that refresh your recollection as to whether you sent this message? A. Yes; I think I sent it.

Mr. Gallagher: What is the date, please?

Mr. Burling: The date is August 4.

Mr. Gallagher: What year?

1038 Mr. Burling: 1937.

I offer that in evidence, Your Honor.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

(The document referred to, previously marked for identification Defendant's Exhibit 60 was received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. And then you subsequently sent him a letter, did you not, dated August 23, 1937? A. Around the same time?

Q. August 23, 1937.

I show you Defendant's Exhibit 61 and ask you if it is a letter signed by you. A. It is my signature, yes. May I read it?

Q. Certainly (handing the letter). Will you examine the letter and state whether it is not a letter which you wrote to Houghland?

Can't you tell whether that is a letter you wrote to Houghland? A. Yes; I would like to read it to refresh my recollection.

Q. Are you unable to tell whether you wrote that to Houghland? A. No; but you might ask me questions, and I would like to read it.

1039 Q. If you will let me have it, I will read you any portions I want to ask you about.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

(The document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 61.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I want to read you the first paragraph:

"Many thanks for your cable informing me about the trip you intend to take to Tyrol. I hope very much you enjoyed the journey you had and that your route took you from Frankfurt or Mainz either through the Black Forest (Baden-Baden and Freudenstadt) or via Rothenburg and Nuernberg, where the Party-Congress is just being prepared."

Did you write that? A. Yes. I gave him on two pages suggestions how he should travel, and he was very much interested to see all what he could see in Switzerland, Italy, Germany, and so on.

Q. Including the Party-Congress in Nuernberg? A. Yes; many Americans went there because they wanted to see it.

Q. Now I want to read you the last paragraph on page 2:

1040 "A fortnight ago I had a conference with Crittenden and Bayer in Zuerich."

Does that refresh your recollection as to whether you had a conference with Crittenden in Zurich? A. Yes; I recall Crittenden and Bayer, my accountant, were on a visit in Zurich.

Q. Do you now remember you had a conference in Zurich? A. Yes.

Q. Finally you send Houghland a wire asking that he meet you in Hamburg, Germany, on the 14th of September, 1937? Isn't that correct? A. I don't recollect it. If you show me the cable, I think I can identify it.

Q. All right; I show you Defendant's Exhibit 62. Did you send that wire? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence.

(The document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 62.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. What business did you expect or at the time discuss with Houghland in Hamburg? A. Business in general.

Q. Well, what business? A. The Spur Distributing business.

1041 Q. Did you expect to discuss any other business with Houghland in Hamburg? A. I had no other business with Mr. Houghland.

Q. You did not intend to discuss any other business with Mr. Houghland; but the selling of gasoline by Spur Distributing? Is that right? A. Yes; it was the same topic of our conversation.

Q. Did you intend to discuss any other business with him? A. How can I recollect that after ten or twelve years, Mr. Burling, what I in this time intended to discuss with him?

Q. Why did you select Hamburg as a meeting place? A. Because that was the place, I think, where he wanted to board the ship. He either spent most of his time in Ireland; so I thought it would be convenient for him to either to come in to Hamburg or go out from Hamburg.

Q. Is it not the fact that you wanted Houghland to come to Hamburg because you wanted to discuss the question of investing in a German synthetic rubber proposition? A. With Mr. Houghland?

Q. Yes. A. That is fantastic.

Q. Well, whether or not it is fantastic, is it cor-
1042 rect or incorrect? A. It is incorrect.

Q. Did you tell Houghland you were interested in producing synthetic rubber tires, and you wanted to know what he thought of the possibility of selling them through the Spur stations? A. He at the time—

Q. Did you or did you not say that? A. You are mixing up two things. We discussed the tire business in Spur. But I certainly didn't propose anything so fantastic as the business of exporting German tires to America. That could not be done.

Q. Did you speak of acquiring a German process for manufacturing synthetic rubber? A. No.

Q. Did you ask Houghland to inspect anything? A. Houghland is not a mechanical engineer or a chemist.

Q. Whether or not he is, did you ask him to inspect anything? A. You mean anything in a technical line?

Q. Yes, in Hamburg, Germany. A. In Hamburg, Germany, I cannot remember that.

Q. Didn't you ask him to go with you to inspect a truck which had been equipped with synthetic rubber tires and had been run many thousands of miles, to show him how satisfactorily the tires had held up? A. It is pos-1043 sible that I showed him a truck. I mean, every American is interested in those things.

Q. You have no recollection, however, of having asked him to go with you to a place in Hamburg and inspect the tires on a truck? A. I don't even recollect that I met him in Hamburg. If you will give me the name of the place, or where I went with him, I then would be in a position to answer that question intelligently.

Q. But you have no recollection at the present time? A. No. Of course, it is possible that I discussed synthetic tires with him. They were just coming out; they were new on the market; and it is possible he asked me about it.

Q. Now, you now recall having seen Crittenden in Zurich in 1935; don't you? A. Yes, but not, as you say, for fourteen days. He might have been there fourteen days. I certainly saw him only occasionally, because we had very little to discuss.

Q. You had been dealing with Crittenden in Germany earlier that same year, hadn't you? A. He went there—

Q. Where? A. I think it was Mr. Hoffacker, if I am not mistaken, Mr. Crittenden, and another American 1044 who was head of or one of the biggest builders of refinery equipment.

Q. What was his name? A. I forget the name. It was quite a big concern.

Q. Was it Koch?—K-o-c-h? A. That is possible; yes. It sounds familiar to me.

Q. When did you first see Crittenden in Germany in the year 1937? A. If I remember, they went to Berlin.

Q. Where and when did you first see Clittenden? A. I do not recollect that.

Q. Wasn't it in Berlin in the spring? A. That is possible.

Q. And Crittenden had gone to Berlin at your request; had he not? A. No; it was vice versa. He thought it was a big chance getting some "dope", as you say technically, on some German process which we could then in turn employ for our refineries in Texas and Louisiana.

Q. I see. And the process was being experimented with or on by a German company called Ruhr Chemie? Is that right? A. That is correct. They had this big experimental plant, yes.

Q. And you had been requested to get in touch with the officials of Ruhr Chemie, so that Crittenden and 1045 Koch could inspect the process? Is that right? A. Yes. There were two processes, Burgess and this Ruhr Chemie process, and Crittenden thought the Ruhr Chemie process was a more practical one for America.

Q. The name of the process was the Fischer Tropp process? A. Yes, the Fischer Tropsch, isn't it?

Q. I see. And isn't not the fact that Hoffacker, Crittenden, and Koch met you in Berlin? A. That is possible. I think they went first to Beriln, and from Berlin we went to the Ruhr to inspect this plant.

Q. They met you, and all four of you stayed at the Bristol while in Berlin, for about a week? Isn't that so? A. That might have been.

Q. And during this time you were seeking to arrange meetings between the Ruhr Chemie officials and Crittenden, Hoffacker and Koch? Is that right? A. That is possible.

Q. And is it not the fact that you four men then went to Essen? A. I think it was near Essen where this plant was.

Q. But you stayed in a hotel at Essen, did you not? A. Well, we had to stay somewhere. We stayed there a day or two; I think so.

1046 Q. Wasn't it closer to a week you stayed in Essen?

A. I don't recollect. We inspected the plant, and I think I can say what Mr. Crittenden's impression was. He thought it was just peanuts.

Q. Fine. But I didn't ask you that, Mr. von Opel. Just answer my questions. A. Your question was how many days we spent?

Q. Yes. A. If I recollect that correctly, only a very few days. I think we only went to the plant, I think, once or twice.

Q. You made several trips between Essen and the plant, which was at Oberhausen, did you not? A. That is very close to Essen, yes.

Q. I didn't ask you how close it was to Essen. I asked you if you made several trips between Essen and the plant at Oberhausen? A. Yes, I think the plant was there.

Q. I didn't ask you whether you thought the plant was there, either. I asked you didn't you make several trips between Essen and Oberhausen? A. That is most likely.

Q. And you made them by automobile, did you not? A. That is the easiest way to go there, yes, sir.

Q. And I didn't ask you what was the easiest way to go there, either. Just answer me. A. Yes.

1047 Q. And isn't it true that the Ruhr Chemie people stated they were not in a position to give you or Crittenden final word as to whether they were to give you a license on the process? A. If I remember correctly, Mr. Crittenden immediately thought that the process was much too expensive. And, of course, they were eager to license an American firm.

But, if I remember correctly, their demands were so far out of any possibility, that nothing came out of it of any sort.

Q. Now, on the occasion of your last return from Oberhausen to Essen, is it not true that you and Hoffacker got into a fight in the automobile? A. What do you mean by "fight"?

Q. Into a quarrel. A. Of course, that is different. A fight is some boxing.

Q. I will come to the boxing.

Did you first get into a quarrel in the car? A. If you refresh my recollection, I had quite a number of quarrels with Mr. Hoffacker. That is the reason I dismissed him.

Q. Well, on this occasion didn't you have the chauffeur stop the car, and didn't you and Hoffacker get out, 1048 preparatory to this boxing? A. I don't remember this incident.

Q. Do you remember that after you returned to Essen, Hoffacker went off by himself, and you asked Crittenden to have dinner with you? A. That is possible.

Q. And on this occasion, did you not tell Crittenden 1049 that your father had caused reports to be prepared on Hoffacker, on Crittenden, and on another business associate of yours? A. I don't remember that.

Q. Do you think you did or did not tell this to Crittenden? A. Oh, I now remember, one of the General Motors people—I don't recall the name—had heard about my connection with Mr. Hoffager, and he had at the occasion of the visit in Germany given my father, made some remarks to my father about Mr. Hoffager.

Q. I see. Did you tell Crittenden this in a hotel in Essen in 1937? A. And I think I told Mr. Crittenden that I had gotten a financial statement on Mr. Hoffager, and his dealings, and that it looked not too rosy.

Q. You did not say that your father had done this A. No.

Q. Did you say that your father had prepared reports on Crittenden? A. No.

Q. You did not tell Crittenden? A. My father did not even know the name Crittenden.

Q. Did you tell Crittenden on this occasion that your father was very angry with you, because you had intrusted Uebersee's business affairs to Hoffager? A. No.

1050 Q. You had no such conversation? A. No.

Q. You did not tell Crittenden that your father was satisfied with the report that he had received—your father—on Crittenden? A. As I told you before, my father didn't even know the name Crittenden.

Q. The answer to that is no, then, is it? A. No, definitely—yes.

Q. Is it not a fact that you told Crittenden on that occasion that you were administering your father's funds? A. Definitely not.

Q. You are absolutely sure of that? A. Absolutely sure.

Q. I am glad to get a clear answer. Did you not tell Crittenden in Essen that in return for your administering your father's funds you were entitled to keep a part of the proceeds? A. No, definitely not.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Crittenden along this line? A. Definitely not. With Crittenden I had merely technical conversations.

Q. After you left Essen, where did you personally 1051 go? A. I don't recollect that.

Q. Did you not go to Berlin? A. If you would refresh my recollection.

Q. I am refreshing your recollection. Did you not go to Berlin? A. That is possible.

Q. At a time thereafter, did you and Frankenberg discuss a plan to merge Oil Production, Inc., and Oil Refineries, Inc. with an outside refinery named Rodessa? A. I had two refineries.

Q. Did you have such a discussion with Frankenberg? A. I don't remember any details.

Q. Can't you answer me yes or no, did you have such a conversation with Frankenberg? A. About merging my three refineries?

Q. Yes. A. You must give me the date, first, because—

Q. In the summer of 1937. A. I don't know when I acquired the Rodessa refinery, and therefore I cannot tell you—I had two small refineries in East Texas

Q. Did you ever have a conversation with Frankenberg on this subject? A. That is possible.

Q. Did you and Frankenberg not decide to call a 1052 conference in Zurich on this subject, and did you not decide to call Crittenden over to Zurich to discuss this? A. There was no need.

Q. Did you or did you not? A. I do not think so. He was a technical head here, he had nothing to do with financial matters.

Q. Will you please stop volunteering and try to answer my questions. Now, the auditors of the various corporations in America which Uebersee held at this time were Bayer and Clauson, is that right? A. They were my accountants, they are certified public accountants, and they were doing all my business.

Q. The answer to that question would have been yes? A. Yes.

Q. And you decided to send for Bayer, of the firm Bayer & Clauson, at this time, did you not?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Where is this, now, at what time?

Mr. Burling: Zurich, summer of 1937.

The Witness: I do not recall that I asked Mr. Bayer to come to Zurich for this purpose, because it would have been a tremendous expense, but it is possible that at the occasion of Mr. Bayer's trips to Europe that he stopped in Zurich and we discussed financial matters.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. You did not call a conference in Zurich to be attended by Frankenberg, Bayer, Crittenden, and you? A. You mean call Mr. Bayer from New York for the purpose of this conference?

Q. Yes, that is what I mean. A. I don't think so, because that is not the way I did business. It would have cost a lot of money.

Q. If you did not do it, do you know whether Frankenberg did it? A. I don't think so.

Q. In July, 1937, you stayed at the Hotel Baur-au-Lac, is that correct? A. Yes, that is possible.

Q. And Mr. and Mrs. Crittenden, and Mr. and Mrs. Bayer also stayed there? A. Yes, that is a place I recommended to them.

Q. And is it not a fact that the discussions of merger went on in Zurich for about two weeks? A. That sounds rather fantastic to me, Mr. Burling, because if I wanted to merge, all I would have to do is to give the orders.

Q. Is the answer not no? A. It is possible that before they went on their trip that we had a discussion, and after they came back, but certainly it sounds—

Q. Weren't the Crittendens and the Bayers in Zurich for a period of two weeks, during which off and on you had conferences in Frankenberg's office? A. Now you say off and on, that is different. I only object to the implication that for 14 days we were discussing this tiny matter. Off and on, certainly that is possible.

Q. Did you not have conferences extending over a period of two weeks? A. It is possible that within a period of two weeks we had several conferences.

Q. And these were held in Dr. Frankenberg's office, is that right? A. In the office of the Adler Bank.

Q. It was in Dr. Frankenberg's private office, was it not? A. No, it is a conference room of the Adler Bank.

Q. I will try to refresh your recollection. Do you remember that Dr. Frankenberg has a Degas collection of paintings in his private office? A. They are owned by the Adler Bank.

Q. Where are they? A. They are in the conference room of the Adler Bank.

Q. During these discussions was it not said that a million dollars additional capital should be put into the merged companies? A. That was what Mr. Crittenden 1055 wanted. He was quite a great spender in refining.

Q. Didn't you and Frankenberg say that you thought that you would do that? A. That is not very likely. Mr. Frankenberg was always against my investing in refineries. He always said it was too big and too risky a job, and he was right in the end.

Q. When the conferences were finally over, is it not a fact that you and Crittenden walked out of the building and walked down the street together? I will try to refresh your recollection. Did you not say on that occasion that you were very glad that Frankenberg had agreed to Crittenden's proposals? A. That seems very unlikely to me, because Dr. Frankenberg always was against all these investments in refineries.

Q. Was it not agreed at the end of the conference that you and Frankenberg together would come to New York in the fall of 1937 to discuss further the merger of the refineries? A. That is possible, though not very probable.

Q. At any rate, you and Frankenberg did come to New York in the fall of 1937, did you not? A. It is possible. I don't recollect the occasion, but I came to America quite often, at least once or twice a year.

Q. And is it not true that in the autumn of 1937
1056 you and Frankenberg and Mr. and Mrs. Crittenden had dinner together at the Plaza Hotel in New York? A. That is possible, that's where I always lived.

Q. And that is where Frankenberg is customarily staying, isn't it? A. No, he has always stayed at the Ritz-Carlton.

Q. In 1937 he stayed in the Plaza, did he not? A. I can't recollect that.

Q. This dinner was purely a social event in which no business was discussed? A. If a lady is present, one does not discuss the merger of refineries.

Q. And you didn't, did you? A. It is very unlikely.

Q. In fact, you personally did not engage in any business conversation with Crittenden in New York in the fall of 1937, did you? A. I wouldn't make such a statement, Mr. Burling.

Q. Did you or didn't you? A. If I met Crittenden, I certainly discussed our refinery problems. They were difficult enough, and it was very likely that whenever I met him personally, outside of a party, that I discussed business matters with him.

Q. Did you have any business discussions with him
1057 in New York in the fall of '37? A. If I met him there, if he was there and if we met, we certainly had business discussions.

Q. You recall that he was in New York, because you testified that you had dinner with Crittenden and his wife at the Plaza, did you not? A. That is what you stated, and I told you it was possible that we had such a party.

Q. You don't know whether you had any business conversations with him in New York or not? A. I didn't say I don't know. I said the opposite. I said it is very likely that whenever we met we discussed those urgent problems of the refinery.

Q. Is it not a fact that Frankenberg told you that he, not you, had had a talk in the afternoon before this dinner, with Crittenden, and that he, Frankenberg, had told Crittenden to go ahead and consolidate the oil companies; is that not the fact? A. That sounds very unlikely, because I was the one who made the decisions, and Dr. Frankenberg was against investing any more money into the refineries.

Q. Did you ever suggest to Crittenden that he defraud the United States? A. That he—?

Q. That he defraud the United States.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object to that question.

1058 The Witness: Definitely not.

Mr. Ingoldsby: All right.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you not in fact make that suggestion to him, and did he not reply to you that you had no idea of the long arm of the United States Government? A. I do not recollect that. And I think it is quite an impossible statement for me to make, Mr. Burling.

Q. Under the management contract you had with Crittenden, he was entitled to keep a percentage of the profits, is that correct? A. Mr. Koch and Crittenden, I think they had formed a partnership, and they got, if I remember correctly, a certain percentage of sales and also a share in the profits.

Q. Did you not suggest to him that he should not take out this percentage, but remit the entire profits to Switzerland, and that you would then arrange to take his share, to have his share of the profiits deposited in Switzerland, and in that way he could avoid the United States income tax? A. I don't recollect to have made such a statement, but what I suggested to him was that he should not draw out his profits but leave them in the corporation and take shares for it.

Q. You said nothing about making deposits to his credit in Switzerland, which would get around the United 1059 States income tax? A. I had no interest in—

Q. Did you say anything like that? A. No, I don't think so.

Q. Going back to the Plaza Hotel in the fall of 1937, did not Houghland also confer with Frankenberg at the Plaza? A. I think he never conferred with Dr. Frankenberg alone, without me or anybody else present.

Q. Did he confer with you and Frankenberg at the Plaza in the fall of '37? A. That is different, that is possible.

Q. The fact is, is it not, in 1937 Houghland had a proposal to set up a series of small subsidiaries, to run smaller-sized gasoline stations? A. If I remember correctly, at this time Mr. Houghland was concerned about a certain chain store taxation, and I think it limited the number of Spur filling stations in various states, and he at this time felt he couldn't expand freely enough, and he thought that Spur, or as the stockholders of Spur, should form several other units. And I think it was done in one case, I think Spur owns the Yinn Oil Corporation.

Q. W-I-N-N? A. Y-I-N-N.

Q. Houghland came to New York in October, 1937, 1060 for the purpose of discussing this with you, did he not? A. You mean this chain store taxation?

Q. Yes, the proposal to set up a number of subsidiary corporations. A. I don't recollect any details.

Q. Is it not a fact that you met him at his hotel and walked with him to the Plaza Hotel, and while you, during the walk he outlined the proposal to you? A. That is probable.

Q. And is it not the fact that when you reached the Plaza you talked to Dr. Frankenberg's room, and he came down, and you introduced Houghland to Frankenberg, and then the three of you went into the Palm Court and had a drink? A. That is possible, if Dr. Frankenberg lived at this time in the Plaza, and we called for him there, that is possible.

Q. And is it not a fact that before you had reached Frankenberg you told Houghland that he would have to make a full explanation of the proposal to Frankenberg? A. No, Mr. Burling.

Q. The answer is no? A. No.

Q. Is it not the fact that at the Plaza Houghland made a full explanation of his proposal, and Frankenberg said he would not accept it? A. That is ridiculous, because I was—1061 Q. All right, the answer is no. A. No, definitely no.

Q. Is it not also the fact that you walked away from the Plaza with Houghland, and you then told Houghland that you were sorry that Frankenberg had turned down the proposal, because you thought it was a good one? A. That is perfectly ridiculous.

Q. And did you not also say that Frankenberg was your father's financial representative, and that your father had great confidence in him, and that Frankenberg's decision was final? A. That is outright untrue, Mr. Burling.

Q. You are sure that that was not said? A. Definitely sure.

Q. By the way, where is Frankenberg, to the best of your knowledge and belief? A. I think he is in New York.

Q. He did not sail to Europe last Wednesday, as far as you know? A. I think he had to postpone his trip, or couldn't get a reservation, but I think he either sails today or tomorrow.

Q. You have been in touch with him this week? A. Oh, certainly, yes.

Q. When did you last communicate with him?

1062 A. I telephoned him last night.

Q. And when was the last time before that that you communicated with him? A. He visited me.

Q. When? A. Here in Washington.

Q. When? A. I think the day before yesterday.

Q. The day before yesterday—that is on Wednesday, the day he was supposed to sail. Where did you see him? A. I met him at the airport.

Q. What time of the day did you meet him at the airport? A. The plane came—

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object to this. What is the relevancy of this?

Mr. Burling: This man Frankenberg is the managing director of plaintiff corporation. He obviously has, as the testimony that I have just gone through shows, a very important role in this case, and I am seeking to explore the fact that Frankenberg was here in Washington being met by Mr. von Opel, that we could have been told that, and his testimony could have been taken.

The Court: You have established that. The time is immaterial.

Mr. Burling: Yes, Your Honor.

1063 By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you not go to Nashville, or to a place near Nashville, Tennessee, in the spring of 1938, and stay for several days in Houghland's home? A. Yes, Mr. Houghland invited me.

Q. On this occasion is it not true that Houghland asked you to tell him the nature of the Uebersee Company, and did you not tell him that it had been set up when Adam Opel stock was sold to General Motors, and that the Opel family had been very clever in avoiding foreign exchange regulations in connection with Uebersee? A. That is ridiculous.

Q. You did not say that to him? A. No, definitely not. Don't forget that I was warned against the loyalty of Mr. Houghland.

Q. Did you not tell Mr. Houghland on that occasion that the Uebersee shares at that time had been put through a purported sale, but that the shares were bearer shares in the possession of the Opel family? A. That is ridiculous, no.

Q. Did you suggest to Houghland that he himself could reduce his income taxes by becoming a Swiss national? A. That is fantastic, an American citizen living—how can he become a Swiss national? He has to live in Switzerland 12 years. I couldn't even become a Swiss national.

1064 Q. Did you say anything to him about how he could avoid taxation? A. I was never concerned with other people's taxations.

Q. Did you discuss any business involving the Spur Distributing Company on the occasion of this visit? A. Certainly, that was the purpose of my visit.

Q. Did you do more than drop in for a few minutes at the Spur offices on that occasion? A. I don't recollect the length of times I spent in the office, or in Mr. Houghland's home.

Q. Coming to the summer of 1939, which I will fix in your mind by saying that was just before the war broke out, you were again on the Island of Sylt, were you not? A. Yes.

Q. Before you went to Sylt you sent Houghland a wire—I am sorry, you had received a wire from Houghland in Sanct Moritz, is that correct? A. At which date?

Q. July 20, 1939. A. I must check this date.

Q. Did you receive a wire from Houghland indicating that he was coming to Europe and wanted to see you? A. I think he said that to me. He wired, because at this time I was at some other place.

Q. Where were you? A. Let me see the dates

1065 and I can tell you.

Q. The date is July 20, '39. A. It is possible that I was in Sanct Moritz at this time. It is possible.

Q. What is your best judgment as to where you were? A. At this time I had a compound fracture and was very sick, and it is possible that I was in my home.

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 63 and ask you if you received that wire. A. Yes, I think he wanted to get in contact with me.

Mr. Burling: I offer this in evidence.

(The document above referred to, a copy of a telegram dated July 20, 1939, was accordingly marked Defendant's Exhibit 63 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. You replied, did you not, inviting Mr. and Mrs. Houghland to visit your family's estate near Cologne? A. I don't remember, sir, I invited him very frequently to Switzerland.

Q. Did you not invite him to a place you referred to as "our family estate"? A. It is possible. If you show me the wire, I can tell you.

Q. Strike out the word "family." Did you not invite him to "our estate" near Cologne? A. That is pos-1066 sible. What date is that?

Q. July 22, the day after the preceding wire. A. May I see it?

Q. Sure (handing a document to the Witness). Did you send this wire? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Does this refresh your recollection as to where you were on July 22 or 21? I invite your attention to the words following the signature, "Opel"; and then it says "Kampen Sylt." Does that refresh your recollection as to where you were? A. What is the date of this wire?

Q. July 22. A. No, I think that is not correct, it was sent from this place called Koerbecke.

Q. Where is that? A. That is near Cologne.

Q. You now think you were at Koerbecke at this time? A. At this date that is possible, yes.

Mr. Burling: I offer 64 in evidence.

(The document above referred to, a telegram dated July 22, 1939, was accordingly marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 64 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. What were you referring to by the words, "our estate"? A. My father had quite a large forests there.

1067 Q. Where? A. Near Koerbecke, the place mentioned on this wire, and as Mr. Houghland, who was interested in hunting and had expressed his wish to see how that was done in Germany, I told him he could come there and see that.

Q. What is the name of the estate? A. It is called Wilhelm von Opelsche Forstverwaltung.

Q. What is the name Wilhelmsruh? A. That is correct, Wilhelmsruh.

Q. What is that? A. Wilhelmsruh—ruh you call in German, how should I say, a place where you take a rest. Ruh means resting.

Q. And Houghland accepted this invitation, did he not? A. I don't recollect it, because I think there was—he couldn't arrange that.

Q. You do not recall that Houghland accepted the invitation? A. I don't recollect the details, because I, if I remember correctly, Houghland wanted to spend some more time in Ireland or England.

Q. Did you have any communications with Houghland about this? A. You just showed me the wire.

Q. No, I showed you a wire, what you said asking him to come to your estate. A. No, it doesn't say so, says to come to Hamburg or to this place.

1068 Q. Did Houghland accept the invitation? Incidentally, you say, do you not—

Mr. Ingoldsby: Just a minute, please. May I ask what you are reading from?

Mr. Burling: Yes, Defendant's Exhibit 64, which is already in evidence, Counsel.

Mr. Ingoldsby: That is all we want to know.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. "Would meet you any time Hamburg but would like both of you to come to our estate near Cologne after August 18. Regards." A. Yes.

Q. My question is, did Houghland accept that invitation? A. I do not recollect it, I think it did not fit in with his plans, hunting in Ireland.

Q. How did you learn that? A. He must have sent me a wire or a letter informing me.

Q. Do you recall how you were informed that Houghland would not come to your estate? A. No.

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 65 and ask you if you did not receive this telegram. A. Yes.

1069 Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence.

Mr. Gallagher: What date is that?

Mr. Burling: July 22.

(The document above referred to, a telegram dated July 22, 1939, was accordingly marked Defendant's Exhibit No. 65 and received in evidence.)

The Witness: I invited him for the 18th, and he said he would come August 25th.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. So on July 22 he said, "Delighted to accept invitation. Suggest about August 25 if convenient to you. Address American Express, London." Signed, Houghland. Did Houghland come about August 25? A. No, he did not come because this time was not convenient for me, I had invited him for August 22.

Q. And how did you communicate that fact to him? A. I don't recollection. There must have been an exchange of wires.

Q. Did you not call him on the telephone, you in Cologne, and Houghland in London? A. At what time?

Q. After this. A. May I see the date again?

Q. The date is July 22. A. The date is July 22?

1070 Q. Of the wire. Did you not call him on the telephone? A. At what date?

Q. At any date thereafter? I am asking you how you communicated to Houghland the fact that August 25 was not convenient to you? A. I don't recollect that.

Q. Is it not the fact that you called Houghland on the telephone and urged him to some some time toward the end of August, 1939? A. The wire shows that he did not want to come before August 25.

Q. And about August 20, did you not call him on the phone and say, "Fine, come along on the 25th"? A. You mean invited him at the date he had suggested to come there?

Q. To this estate, Wilhelmsruh. A. To the estate, that is quite impossible, Mr. Burling.

Q. Did you have any conversation over the long distance telephone with Houghland on this occasion? A. From which place?

Q. From any place, to Houghland, in the month of August, 1939. A. I don't recollect any conversation, and normally I don't use long-distance telephones.

Q. So if you had made a long-distance call, it

1071 would have fixed itself in your mind. A. If you give me the date and place, I could check on it.

Q. The day was shortly before the end of August. A. What do you mean, shortly before?

Q. Around the 20th. A. Around the 20th?

Q. Did you not telephone him? A. From where?

Q. From the neighborhood of Cologne. A. No, definitely not.

Q. That is where you were at that time, is it not? A. No.

Q. Where were you? A. In Zurich.

Q. When did you reach Zurich? A. Some time before that date.

Q. When? A. That is a very long time ago, Mr. Burling, but I think a few days prior to the 20th.

Q. At any rate, while you were still at Wilhelmsruh, did you not call Houghland and urge him to come to Wilhelmsruh? A. Pardon me, you are implying me that I was prior to the date I came to Zurich in Wilhelmsruh, which is not correct.

Q. Where were you before you went to Zurich?

1072 A. I was in Kampen, because I had a broken leg, and the doctor had advised me to go to the seaside and into a cool climate.

Q. Did you spend the summer in Kampen? A. No.

Q. How long a time did you spend in Kampen? A. I think I was there about, offhand, two or three weeks.

Q. Is it not the fact that Houghland said that he would not come to visit you in Germany, because he thought that there was a war going to start? A. That was ridiculous.

Q. Did he or did he not say it?

Mr. Gallagher: What is this time again?

Mr. Burling: The same time, Counsel.

The Witness: I just told you I did not invite him at this time to come to Germany, because I had already left.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Why don't you answer my question? A. Would you repeat it?

Q. Yes. Is it not a fact that Houghland said to you in words or substance, "I will not come to Germany now, because a war is about to break out"? A. That is impossible, because I did not invite him to Germany.

1073 Q. You can say that much more simply by saying no.

The Court: I think we will have to adjourn here.

(Accordingly, at 12:30 p.m. a recess was taken until 2:00 p.m.)

1074 AFTER RECESS

(The proceedings were resumed at 2 o'clock p.m., at the expiration of the recess.)

Mr. Burling: May I proceed, Your Honor.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Burling: Your Honor, I would like to hand to the Court a copy of the petition for certiorari in Uebersee Finanz Korporation against Rosen, et al., which I have borrowed from the library of the Supreme Court. I cannot have it marked because I promised to return it today to the library of the Supreme Court, and I offer it solely for the filing stamp on the cover.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Burling: May the Record indicate the date, Your Honor.

The Court: Yes, April 17, 1936.

Cross Examination—Resumed

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Mr. von Opel, did you have any discussion with Mr. Davis or with any other lawyer concerning filing a petition for certiorari in the Supreme Court? A. I don't recollect it.

Q. You understand, do you not, that in layman's language filing a petition for certiorari in the Supreme Court is approximately equal to appealing to the Supreme Court?

A. Yes, I think I understand it.

1075 Q. Now, did you have any discussion with any lawyer about appealing to the Supreme Court in the Gold case? A. I think the lawyers were advised to do the best they could. The details I do not understand because it was a very complex legal matter.

Q. Is it your testimony that Mr. Kresel and Mr. Davis went ahead and filed a petition for certiorari without being instructed to do so by you? A. I think they conferred with the corporation overseas and with the officers.

Q. Who did they confer with? A. I think with the officers of—

Q. Who, please. Name them? A. The officers of the corporation are Doctor Henggeler, Doctor Meier, the president, and Doctor Frankenberg.

Q. And you think the lawyers, before they filed a petition in the Supreme Court, conferred with one of those three men? A. The men—

Q. Answer my question, please. A. All the lawyers, I think they conferred with them. I think it was the natural thing to do. But I have no knowledge at this time. I could check the records, of course.

Q. Did you know that a petition for certiorari was being filed in the Supreme Court? A. I do not rec-1076 ollect that.

Q. Did you know that the record which contained your affidavit was filed in the Supreme Court of the United States? A. I do not recollect that. But it must have been because it went, I think, first to the District Court and then to the Court of Appeals and then—

Q. Those are courts in New York, are they not? A. I think so, yes.

Q. And then came down here to the Supreme Court in Washington? A. Yes.

Q. And you testified yesterday you took no steps to tell your lawyers that your affidavit was wrong on an important point before the Circuit Court record was filed, did you not? A. No. I think I didn't testify such.

Q. Well, at any rate, that is the fact, is it not? A. It is not even a fact because the affidavit refers to the time, to all the happenings between this agreement and the time up to this affidavit.

Q. Correct. But did you not testify yesterday that you learned in the summer or fall of 1936 that Frankenberg was not your father's agent and, therefore, that the usufruct had not arisen? A. Yes.

1077 Q. And that is not what the affidavit says, is it? A. The affidavit was filed—

Q. That is not what the affidavit says, is it? A. No. It was filed before this date.

Q. But the affidavit says something which you learned was incorrect, does it not? A. It was not incorrect at the time.

Q. No, but you learned from your father, did you not, that Frankenberg was not his agent and, therefore, that the usufruct had not arisen? A. Yes. My father refused to—

Q. Yes, you learned that, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. Fine. And now I ask you did you take any steps to see to it that an affidavit which contained a misstatement of fact or an error of fact was not filed in the Supreme Court of the United States? A. But this affidavit referred to the time prior to '35.

Q. Yes, but was Doctor Frankenberg ever your father's agent? A. I considered him as such at the time I filed the affidavit.

Q. Did you consider him as such at the time that the record was filed in the Supreme Court? A. Since 1078 the record was filed I hadn't even any idea what was going into this record as far as I remember. It was a mere constitutional question at the time.

Q. In 1935, you say, Meier was president of the plaintiff corporation? A. Yes, I think he was president at the time.

Q. This Eugen Meier, is it not? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: I ask that Plaintiffs concede Defendant's Exhibits 66 and 66-A. 66 is a German memorandum taken from the files of the plaintiff corporation, prepared by Doctor Eugen Meier.

Mr. Gallagher: What is that. I did not hear that.

Mr. Burling: I have not read them yet. Will you just give me a moment to read it.

If Your Honor please, these are documents taken from the files of the plaintiff itself. They have been in counsel's possession for some time.

Mr. Gallagher: I am sorry, Mr. Burling. I have never seen them.

Mr. Burling: May I ask, Your Honor, if counsel now withdraws from the stipulation which we entered into, that the genuineness of documents in the plaintiff's own files would be conceded and that we could use the photostats we made.

1079 Mr. Gallagher: I am not asking to withdraw at all, and I am not objecting, I am just trying to get an opportunity to look at it before you continue your cross examining, so I will know what you are talking about to Mr. von Opel.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, I do not think I should be held up while counsel examines documents which have been in his possession for months.

Mr. Gallagher: I cannot have a photographic memory of every document.

The Court: If you have already so stipulated, I will receive it.

Mr. Gallagher: I am not objecting. I just want to read it.

The Court: Well, I will receive it, and you can be examining it.

(The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibits 66 and 66-A.)

Mr. Burling: I do not intend to examine. I merely wish to read into the Record a paragraph on page two.

This is a memorandum of a conference arising out of the application to the Treasury made by the plaintiff to receive the gold.

The Witness: What date is it, Mr. Burling?

Mr. Burling: This is dated April 4, 1935.

Mr. Gallagher: May I interrupt just a minute,
1080 Mr. Burling?

Are you sure this is out of the Uebersee, or could this be out of Mr. Kresel or Mr. Davis' files?

Mr. Burling: May the Record show that this came from "Blue folder, consecutive No. 22, marked "Gold-Angelegenheit, Mappe IV, 1. Klage (Complaint), etc., 2. Fritz von Opel, 3. Isidor I. Kresel, New York, 4. Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardiner & Reed, 5. Dr. E. Meier, Liestal, 6. Dr. I. Henggeler, Zurich, 7. Theodore Hoffacker & Co., New York, 8. Federal Reserve Bank, New York, 9. Treasury, Washington, 10. Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., New York."

Mr. Gallagher: I do not think our stipulation covers anybody's memorandum as to what took place at some conference.

We merely stipulated as to the fact that these are our records.

Mr. Burling: Are you objecting or making a speech?

Mr. Gallagher: I am speaking to his Honor.

Mr. Burling: I submit that you should make an objection or else let me proceed with my examination.

Mr. Gallagher: I am recalling your statement to his Honor about the stipulation.

The Court: What is the state of the record? Is this offered in evidence?

Mr. Burling: Yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Gallagher: And I am objecting to a lot of statements on the Treasury Department, which are in-1081 corporated in this memorandum which Mr. Burling is trying now to introduce.

Mr. Burling: If I may point out, this is a memorandum maintained in the files of the plaintiff corporation. I desire to read into the record the fact that the president of the corporation made a representation to the Treasury. Surely a representation to the Treasury, made by the plaintiff's own president, is binding on the plaintiff.

That is all I am trying to accomplish.

Mr. Gallagher: There is no signature on this copy you have handed us.

Mr. Burling: I am trying to read, if Your Honor please, the paragraph beginning on page 2 with the words—

May I not be interrupted by counsel.

Mr. Gallagher: His Honor is still considering the matter.

The Court: What is it you are offering?

Mr. Burling: I offer the document but if there is any difficulty about it, I will restrict it to the paragraph on page 2 which Meier, the president of the corporation, is reporting what he told the Treasury about the ownership of the plaintiff's shares.

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, our objection still goes to the point. Until Mr. Burling submits as to who this memorandum is signed by and who prepared it, we still 1082 have objection to it. The fact that it is in our corporate files, in my opinion, is meaningless as to its admissibility.

We are not denying the fact that the memorandum is in our files.

Mr. Burling: I will ask the witness if he can identify the signatures on the document.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you look at this document and see if you can identify the signatures?

(The document was handed to the witness.)

May I meanwhile point out that it recites that those present were B. Bernstein, attorney of the Treasury Department, Doctor Eugen Meier, and Doctor Schlatter of the Swiss Embassy, and it recites that "Bernstein spoke English, I spoke German, Dr. Schlatter interpreted."—

Since I would take it that that made it clear that the "I" must be Doctor Meier.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I ask you about the signatures which are on the last page, Mr. von Opel? A. It seems to be the signature of Mr. Meier. I am not sure of it, but it does seem possible. You could compare it with other signatures in the files.

The Court: Well, I will receive it.

You say, it has already been testified that Doctor
1083 Meier was president of the corporation at that time.

Mr. Gallagher: We have no objection, Your Honor, if it is signed by Mr. Meier, but our difficulty is we did not know who it was signed by.

The Court: I understand the witness to say it was signed by him.

Mr. Burling: May I read again?

"Upon the question as to the stock holdings of Mr. F. von Opel I replied that I did not know since we had bearer shares. I knew positively that no American citizen and no person having residence in America was a stockholder.

"Mr. Bernstein insisted that it should be known to me whether Mr. von Opel had a controlling interest; I replied that a group of which Mr. von Opel was a member had a controlling interest but that I did not know the composition of that group.

"If my information was correct, that group also included other members of the von Opel family. The extent of the participation of Mr. F. von Opel was not known to me."

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, Mr. von Opel, have you ever seen this document before? A. I saw it in the files, yes.

Q. When did you see it first? A. Four to six 1084 weeks ago.

Q. Did Mr. Meier ever tell you that he had made representation such as I have just read to you, to the Treasury? A. No, I do not recollect that.

Q. Did you ever tell Mr. Meier that the shares of Uebersee were owned by a group? A. No.

Q. Have you any explanation as to how the president of Uebersee came to make a representation to the United States Treasury that Uebersee was owned by a group of which you were a member? A. Because these shares were bearer shares, and he had no possibility of establishing correctly who was the owner.

Q. In your opinion, was his statement to the Treasury correct or incorrect? A. As far as he could know—

Q. Will you answer my question? A. I think it was correct, yes.

Q. That is, you think it is correct that at the date of this conference— A. He mentioned—

Q. Wait a minute, please.

April 4, 1935, it was correct that the Uebersee shares were held by a group of which you were a member?
1085 A. No, he did not say so.

Q. Well, I will read it to you again:

"I replied that a group of which Mr. von Opel was a member, had a controlling interest."

Now, is that statement correct or incorrect?

A. But why don't you read the first sentence, Mr. Burling?

Q. Is that statement correct or incorrect? A. It has to be read together with all the other statements.

Q. Well, I understand that he said he was not certain but Mr. Meier states in this memorandum that he had told the Treasury officials, "A group of which Mr. von Opel was a member had a controlling interest," and you say that is correct? A. No, I do not say that. I say you must read it altogether.

Q. Well, how do you read it altogether so that it is not incorrect? A. Please read the first sentence.

Q. I have read it. You read it now and tell me how it is not incorrect. A. "I replied, as we have already stated, by cable that he"—meaning myself—"is a share holder"—

Q. Where do you see this? A. Paragraph first.

1086 Q. That does not say he was the shareholder. It says he was stockholder, does it not? A. "He is stockholder", yes.

Q. I see— A. "Depositor of securities and he advises the corporation in technical matters."

Q. The statement that the corporation was owned by a group of which you were a member, how is that correct? A. Mr. Meier had no possibility of finding out who owned those bearer shares.

Q. So your testimony is that the president of the corporation, when being questioned by the United States Treasury, made representations of fact when he had no possible way of knowing what the facts were. Is that right? A. That is what he stated here.

Q. Mr. von Opel, you can read the words; can you not? A. Yes.

Q. "A group of which Mr. von Opel was a member, had a controlling interest." A. But don't forget about the first sentence.

Q. I read the first sentence. I am talking about this sentence. A. And please read the second para-1087 graph, too.

Q. Yes. A. You are just picking out one sentence out of the group.

Q. Yes, but that one sentence either is true or it is false, or else it is a statement of fact made by a man who does not know anything about it whatever. A. Please, read the entire paragraph, Mr. Burling. You are pulling out just one sentence out of a half a dozen.

Q. Of course I am, and I want to know what does that sentence mean to you, in the context or out of the context. What does that sentence mean to you? Who is the beneficial owner of the shares? A. I can not say that. I have to read the full letter, not just one line.

Q. Would you say that you apply the same techniques in reading this that you have applied in construing Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 5? A. I always try to understand a letter fully. And I think it is impossible to just take one sentence and just read this one sentence.

Q. Is there anything in here which in any way explains a way the fact that Meier represented to the Treasury that Uebersee was owned by a group, of which you were a member? A. He hadn't even any contact with me, and was not in Switzerland. I met him in New York and I told him the facts in New York.

1088 Q. Do you think he came back to the Treasury and said he had been mistaken? A. I don't know whether he did it or not, but we filed—I think he made an affidavit, didn't he?

Q. I do not know. A. Well, yes, you find this in the Gold case book. Why do you overlook this fact?

Q. Did Meier ever file an affidavit in which he said he misrepresented the facts or had been wrong when he told Bernstein of the Treasury— A. He filed a complete affidavit.

Q. No, wait a minute. Did he ever say he had been wrong in the course of this conversation with Bernstein? A. As far as I know it was filed with the same part of the Treasury Department.

Q. Sure, but that does not take back the statement that he made to Bernstein, does it? A. I think definitely it does.

Q. You think it does.

Now, it goes on to say:

"If my information was correct, that group also includes other members of the von Opel family."

He said that, didn't he? A. Yes.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, Meier's affidavit did not take back his oral misrepresentation at the Treasury, did it? A. I didn't read it.

1089

Q. I want to read with you the following—I am reading from page 26 of the record in the Gold case, folio 77:

"It has always been my understanding that Mr. Fritz von Opel, a German citizen and resident of Sanct Moritz, Switzerland, either owned personally or held for members of his family a substantial number of shares of Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, A. G., but I have no personal knowledge on the subject."

A. But would you please leave me the record here.

Q. Sure, yes. A. May I read the next paragraph?

Q. Read anything you think will help you? A. "On May 14, 1935, I heard Mr. Fritz von Opel say that he was the owner of substantially all the stock of said corporation, subject to the right of usufruct reserved in his father Wilhelm von Opel."

Q. But he did not specifically do anything to take back the oral statement he had earlier made, did he? A. It was addressed to the Treasury Department.

Q. Now, coming to another topic you testified, I think, that Doctor Frankenberg was not with you in Montreal in 19— A. I didn't say that, Mr. Burling. I said I didn't remember whether he was there. It was quite possible.

1090

Mr. Burling: Your Honor, we have a telegram here in German and which we have hurriedly translated. I ask leave to have the English translation marked and for permission to substitute a properly typed copy of the translation later.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Burling: This bears penciled corrections.

I do not want anything more than this signature in it.

Mr. Gallagher: Before you go on with the interrogation about it, I wanted to know what the contents of the communication is that you are going to inquire about it.

Mr. Burling: Since counsel keeps stopping me on the grounds they have not seen the documents, I want the record to show that this, again, is something which we borrowed from counsel and photostated and returned to them. It is in their possession.

In view of the great length of this examination, Your Honor, I think we should go ahead, and unless there is an objection to the translation, we should be permitted to proceed. If there is one, we can take it up then.

The Court: If there is any way to make time, I would be glad to do it.

1091 By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you examine Defendant's Exhibit No. 67-A which is conceded to be a document taken from the records of the plaintiff corporation, and see if that refreshes your recollection as to whether Frankenberg was with you in Montreal? A. Yes.

Q. Was he? A. Yes, apparently.

Mr. Burling: I offer 67 and 67-A.

(The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibits Nos. 67 and 67-A.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you have a conversation over the phone with Mr. Houghland in late August, 1939, in the course of which you said to him, "Your refusal to come to Germany is foolish. There will not be any war. We are just going to take a little slice off Poland, and the British won't fight." A. That is ridiculous. I did never make such a statement.

Q. Did not Houghland tell you that he would think it over and call you back in Germany the next day? A. Tha is very unlikely.

Q. Did not Houghland call you the next day and 1092 didn't you tell him again— A. Call me where, Mr. Burling? Could you make that a little bit clearer to me?

Q. Somewhere in the neighborhood of Cologne? A. And when?

Q. I have fixed the date repeatedly. A. What is the date? Between the 25th of August—

Q. Around the 20th of August, 1939? A. After the 20th or before the 20th?

Q. Around the 20th. I do not know the exact date. A. What do you mean by "around." How many days around?

Q. Are you in any doubt as to whether you did or did not have this conversation with Houghland? A. Definitely not.

Q. You did not say to Houghland, again, on a second occasion, the day after a first conversation, that there would be no war? A. If I recollect correctly, I invited him to Switzerland at this time, and I told him—he was very scared that he might be surprised by war, and could not return to the United States.

Q. Are you not thinking of an invitation you made Mr. Guyette? A. At what time?

1093 Q. At about this same time? A. Where was Mr. Guyette at this time?

Q. In Lowell, Massachusetts. A. And you mean in August, 1939?

Q. No, around in the latter part of 1939? A. Now you mean and even say the latter part of '39. I could have invited him before it had broken out.

Q. Did you not write Mr. Guyette and tell him he could come by way of Italy and Switzerland? A. If he wanted to talk to me it is possible.

Q. And you urged him to come, did you not? A. I invited all my presidents of my corporations repeatedly.

Q. I am just asking if you are not confusing an invitation to Guyette with a telephone conversation with Houghland? A. I do not think so because I certainly had no telephone conversation with Mr. Guyette.

Q. And didn't you say to Houghland that he really ought to come to Germany and to meet your father because he was really working for your father? A. That is a ridiculous statement.

Q. Perhaps so, but did you make it? A. No, I did not make it.

Q. And didn't you say to him that it would be 1094 valuable both to your father and to Houghland for the two men to meet? A. No. Because if I had wanted them to meet, the best time was his trip to Germany in '37, and not any date before the outbreak of the war.

Q. You testified this morning that it was not your custom to make long distance telephone calls: Is that right? A. Whenever I could I avoided it and used wires.

Q. In February, 1941, did you have a telephone conversation in West Palm Beach, Florida, with any person in Budapest, Hungary? A. I was asked by wire to telephone Budapest, and I didn't do it.

Q. You did not do it? A. No.

Q. Did you have any long distance telephone calls between Palm Beach—I believe I said West Palm Beach before—I meant Palm Beach— A. Yes. What was your question, did I have any—

Q. —telephone calls in February, '41, between Palm Beach and Hungary? A. No.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, I am sure of it.

Q. At any rate you are sure, I suppose, that you 1095 did not talk for a half an hour on the trans-Atlantic phone? A. That is fully impossible.

Q. Did you ever tell anybody that you had been talking for half an hour to Hungary in February, '41? A. That would have been an outright lie.

Q. I did not ask you that. I said did you ever tell anyone that? A. No.

Q. Do you know a man named Calvin Houghland? A. He is Mason Houghland's boy, yes.

Q. Do you know him? A. I met him once or twice, yes.

Q. Well, he visited you in Palm Beach, didn't he? A. After his marriage he passed through Florida and stopped a day in Palm Beach.

Q. And on that occasion didn't you talk to Hungary for half an hour on the trans-Atlantic phone? A. It is an invention. I never did such.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you had that day talked to Hungary? A. I did not. That is fully impossible.

Q. You did not tell him that? A. No.

Q. You are absolutely certain? A. I am abso-
1096 lutely certain, and the best thing is you check the record in Palm Beach and there you will find it.

Q. I believe you can permit me to direct the preparation of this case. If you want to have your counsel check the record you, of course, are at liberty to do that.

Now, have you ever engaged in any activities related to production of bauxite? A. Yes.

Q. To the best of your knowledge and belief has Uebersee Finanz-Korporation in any way been involved in these bauxite activities? A. Transdanubia is a corporation which is a Hungarian corporation, and which I founded in 1935, and was owned by Uebersee.

Mr. Burling: At this point, if Your Honor please, I wish to read defendant's interrogatories and plaintiff's answers thereto.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did Transdanubia have any interest in any bauxite mines or bauxite mining rights at any time? A. Did Transdanubia, you mean?

Q. Yes? A. Yes, certainly.

Q. And you just now said that Transdanubia was 1097 owned by Uebersee, have you not? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: If your Honor please, we asked at question 28: "State the nature of plaintiff's interest in any corporation, holding or owning bauxite mines in Hungary, at all times from October 5, 1931, to June, 1942."

And this is what we were answered:

"The plaintiff had no interest in bauxite mines or bauxite mining rights in Hungary at any time. The plaintiff has no interest in any corporation holding or owning bauxite mines or mining rights in Hungary from October 5, 1931, to June, 1942."

Mr. Ingoldsby: Your Honor, we will agree at this time that we were in error in making that reply. I must say that the mistake was not known to me until the present moment. I think that the reason for our statement will become perfectly apparent as the testimony develops on this.

The Court: Well, I guess we had better not argue it now. I will hear it later.

Mr. Burling: I want to point out further that the date of the interrogatories, the answer to the interrogatories, is November 26, 1948.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. You organized or caused to be organized a 1098 corporation called Transdanubia Bauxite? A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. And how were the shares owned? A. I think the corporation has a capital of—nominal, capital of 300,000 pengos paid in, if I recollect correctly, were 90,000 pengos.

Q. Yes, and 100 percent of the shares of Transdanubia were held by Uebersee. Is that right? A. They were first—the corporation was founded by me. I held the shares first, and later on they appeared on the books of Uebersee.

Q. When were the shares transferred from you to Uebersee? A. I could not tell that offhand. The books will show. I think it must have been around '37 or '38.

Q. And have you any reason to suppose that Uebersee at any time thereafter, down to June 1942, divested itself of those shares? A. I think they still hold them up to the times they were written off.

Q. When were they written off? A. They were written off, I think, in 1946 as a total loss.

Q. So, until '46, from '38 to '46 plaintiff owned Transdanubia. Right? A. Yes.

1099 Q. Now, will you agree that 90,000 pengos—pengo that is the Hungarian unit of money, is it not? A. Yes.

Q. —was equivalent to approximately 78,000 Swiss francs? A. You mean 90,000 pengo are how many thousand francs?

Q. 78,000? A. Yes. Those rates, they change from time to time. It is approximately correct, yes.

Q. Well, at the time you made the investment, that is approximately right? A. Yes.

Q. And is it not true that Transdanubia then acquired a half interest in certain mining rights, mining property, near Budapest? A. That is not correct, Mr. Burling.

Q. Please correct me? A. It is vice versa. I acquired those rights and later on transferred them to Transdanubia, to the corporation.

Q. When did you acquire the right? A. Around—well, that is hard to say. Before the end of '35.

Q. And the rights you acquired constitute a fifty 1100 percent interest in certain mining properties. Is that correct? A. You cannot express it this way. May I tell you?

Q. Please do. A. Around '34 or the beginning of '35 I went into Hungary and contacted the Hungarian Government and the Hungarian Government offered me some mineral rights on sites which the Hungarian Government owned. And at this time they were very eager to get capital in to build up some competition against Hungarian Swiss bauxite trusts, and I was given option by the Minister of Industry and Commerce for about 4 or 6 weeks, or you better call it "right of refusal"—

Q. Well, without going into the detailed history, you, in some manner or other in 1934 or '35, acquired mining rights, did you not? A. Mining rights is not the proper expression.

Q. Well, state what it is, please? A. It is mineral rights.

Q. Mineral rights? A. Mineral rights, yes.

Q. And where were those mineral rights located? A. In Hungary.

Q. Can you be more specific? A. Near Sumeg.
1101 Q. Will you spell that, please? A. S-u-m-e-g.
It is a vicinity of Lake Balaton.

Q. And you acquired 50 percent of these rights and the other 50 percent were held by someone else? Is that right? A. I have to explain that a little further. Some men who offered me those rights under an option agreement, transferred 50 percent of some small part directly to me without exercise of the option agreement.

Q. And in 1936 you transferred your rights to Transdanubia? A. Yes.

Q. And Transdanubia continued to hold those rights, at least until 1940, did it not? A. That is correct.

Q. And the other 50 percent of the rights ultimately came into the ownership of Giulini Brothers of Ludwig-shafen. Isn't that right? A. The owner, Koranyi, who owns those 50 percent, and who had given me this option agreement, delivered bauxite, made a contract of delivery with Giulini, say it was several hundred thousand pengos, and he stopped delivery, and they sued him for repayment, and in some way or other they owned or controlled these other 50 percent.

1102 Q. Now, on September 1, 1939, Transdanubia held 50 percent of these mineral rights and Giulini held the other 50. Is that right? A. It is not quite clear to me to which extent Giulini was the owner. I think they only had the power of exercising these rights as long as his loan given to Koranyi was not repaid.

Q. And bauxite is the ore from which aluminum is refined, is it not? A. Yes, definitely.

Q. And Giulini Brothers were one of the four or five largest producers of aluminum in Germany, were they not? A. Yes.

Q. And their plant was at Ludwigshafen? A. Yes.

Q. And is it not true that some mines were started which were named Edgar-Margot mines? A. The first mine which was started was Margot. That was a mine I opened and closed because it was not productive.

Q. Well, were there not some mines— A. And I think the Edgar mine, if I recollect, was a mine Mr. Koranyi started and had to let go.

1103 Q. Now, after the original investment of 90,000 pengos, Uebersee advanced additional sums to Transdanubia, did it not? A. Yes. It was as follows:

Mr. Koranyi had started to produce out of his Edgar mine, and he went broke and did not live up to his obligations and I didn't realize it at this time but I, as the co-owner of Koranyi, was held liable for all damages done, even unpaid wages of Koranyi.

Q. Well, at any rate, some 84,146.90 Swiss francs were lent to Transdanubia by Uebersee in the year 1939. Is not that so? A. Yes. I had to repay all these damages done.

Q. And that sum was increased in 1939 to 89,453.40 Swiss francs, was not it? A. I could not tell you that offhand, but approximately those figures seem to be correct.

Q. Now, the bauxite mines continued to be operated at least until 1941, did they not? A. No, they did not operate.

Q. They did not? A. No. They had no capital to operate. That was the difficulty.

Q. I address your attention specifically to the day July 30, 1942? A. July?

1104 Q. July 30, 1941. Were the bauxite mines being operated on that day? A. I could not tell you.

Q. Did you swear on an affidavit on that day that the bauxite mines were being operated? A. I was asked it by some Miami hearing boards.

Q. I am coming to that. But did you swear on July 30, 1941, that the mines were being operated? A. At this time they were still owned by Transdanubia.

Q. That is not the question. The question is did you swear on that date that they were being operated? A. (No response)

Q. I show you an affidavit and ask you if this is your signature on it? A. That is my signature, yes.

Q. In this an affidavit which you submitted to the United States Treasury? A. May I see it?

Q. Yes.

(The affidavit was handed to the witness.)

A. I do not see that anywhere, Mr. Burling.

Q. I just asked you, Mr. von Opel, if you submitted this to the Treasury? A. That is possible, yes.

Q. At any rate, you executed it? A. Yes.

1105 Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence.

(The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit No. 68.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you swear—I am reading if Your Honor please from the bottom of page 4 and the top of page 5—"By far the greater part of the proceeds of the sale of the 10 percent of the Opel stock to General Motors have been invested in various American enterprises which I shall now mention.

"Besides these American interests, Uebersee has only a relative small investment consisting of a plantation in British East Africa, a part interest in a mine in Hungary which is operated under a five-year lease by Hungarians, and a House in Sanct Moritz, Switzerland."

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Now, does that refresh your recollection that as of that date the mines were being operated? A. The last I heard I think was in April or May, 1941, I had an exchange of wires with the Transdanubia corporation, and its two managers and they wanted me to invest capital so that they could go on deep mining—no, so they could go over to deep mining, and I refused it.

Q. Well, if you did not know whether or not the 1106 mines were being operated on July— A. They wired back that they needed funds. I replied that I would not give them any more funds and they, in turn, wired and said since they would be forced to sell out or lease, and send in another wire saying to them how could they lease, and I told them to do anything what was, in their opinion, the best thing to do, and I think the last suggestion was a five-year lease.

Q. Well, so that you did think, on July 30, 1941, that the mines were being operated? A. I was—

Q. Well, did you or did you not? Can't you answer that? A. I was under this impression.

Q. That they were, in fact, being operated? A. That, so to say, some managers had carried out what they had suggested two or three months previously. After that time I had no new knowledge.

Q. We will go on much faster if you will just answer my question.

Did you not think on July 30, 1941, that the mines were being operated? A. Not operated by Transdanubia.

Q. Well, were they being operated by anybody? A. By another party, that is possible.

Mr. Burling: I now offer, as admissible on its face, 1107 Defendant's Exhibit No. 69, which is a certified copy of an affidavit taken from the files of the Treasury Department.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, this is an affidavit, is it not, Mr. von Opel, signed by Isidor Kresel, your attorney, and filed with the Treasury in your behalf? A. May I see it?

Q. Yes.

(The document was handed to the witness.)

I beg your pardon, I made a mistake. It was filed on behalf of the plaintiff corporation Uebersee, was it not? A. I will have to check that, please.

(The witness examined the document.)

Yes, I think it is, Mr. Burling.

Mr. Burling: All right, I offer it in evidence.

(The document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit No. 69.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, Mr. Kresel did not have personal knowledge of the bauxite transactions, did he? A. I don't know, I don't think so, no.

Q. His affidavit was filed on the basis of what you told him about it, is that not true? A. I assume so, or what he heard from Uebersee in Switzerland.

Q. Was Mr. Kresel in communication with persons in Switzerland at this time? A. He was in frequent communication. At this time, I could not say.

Q. And the persons you referred to are officers of Uebersee. Is that right? A. Yes.

Q. At any rate, on October 16, 1941, Mr. Kresel swore as follows:

"The business"—that is to say, the business of Uebersee—"has not since January 1, 1939, nor is it presently affiliated with, owned by, or possessed of any interest in any other enterprise, foreign or domestic, (except as noted under Number "3" above) and except that it has a small investment in a plantation in British East Africa, a part interest in a mine in Hungary, operated under a five-year lease by Hungarians, and a house in St. Moritz, Switzerland."

So that as of October 16, Mr. Kresel was advised either by you or by plaintiff's officers, that bauxite mine was being operated by Hungarians under a five-year lease. Isn't that correct? A. That was the impression I was under after this exchange of cables which ended in either April or May of '41.

1109 By Mr. Burling:

Q. Going back to Uebersee, is it not true that Uebersee's loan to Transdanubia was increased to 102,360 francs in 1940? A. Without seeing the books, I couldn't answer this very well.

Mr. Burling: I ask that a photostat of book called "Inventurenbuch", which is one of the books of account of the plaintiff, which I believe is conceded—

Mr. Ingoldsby: Surely.

Mr. Burling: —be marked.

(The photostat of "Inventurenbuch" was accordingly marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit 70.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. What does the word "Inventurenbuch" mean in German? A. I don't know in which sense it is meant. In Switzerland I think—

Q. What is a "Inventurenbuch"? A. I think it means investment.

Q. Will you look at the sheet marked "Inventur"? A. Yes.

Q. And see if you see any investment in 1938 in Transdanubia. A. In which year is it in the book here?

Q. Excuse me; I opened at the wrong place. A. 1110 I don't see it on this page.

Q. Just a moment. I show you a page which is marked "Inventur", as of December 31, 1938. A. Yes.

Q. Will you look at the first page following that— A. Yes.

Q. And see if there is not an indication of an investment in Transdanubia. A. Yes; it is as I have stated, an investment of pengo 90,000, which is valued at 78,750 Swiss francs.

Q. And do you see any other investment in Transdanubia? A. Yes, there is a so-called current account.

Q. What is that investment? A. That means "loan". I can't read the figure. It is misprinted here. It must be an 8, I guess—84,146.90.

Q. Thank you. Now, will you look at a page beginning "Inventur" as of December 31, 1949. And then look at the second page and see if you can find an account or an investment in Transdanubia as of that date? A. Yes. The shares I think are the same. And the other figure is slightly higher; it is 89,453.40, I guess it is.

Q. Now, will you look at a page marked inventory as of December 31, 1940, and then look at the next sheet following that and tell us what the inventory shows 1111 for that date. A. This is a current account, at this time, it is about 13,000 pengo higher; it is 102,360.

Q. Francs? Or is that pengo? A. Pardon me—Swiss francs.

Q. In other words, the shares remain the same? A. Yes.

Q. And the cash advanced is now 102,000 francs? A. Yes; it is about 12,000 francs more.

Q. Now will you look for the inventory for December 31, 1941, and see what the investment of the plaintiff in Transdanubia was? A. The investment in shares is the same; and as per the date of December 31, 1941, the investment is about 8,000 francs higher, namely, 109,918.50. But I might state here that this date of this balance sheet has nothing to do with the date of the payment.

Q. No; it merely means that during the year 1941. A. Yes.

Q. Now let us take the inventory for—where is the entry relating to— A. I think it is the same.

Q. Let us look now for the inventory for December 31, 1943. What is the investment in Transdanubia? A. It is exactly the same as before—109,918.50 Swiss francs.

1112 Q. By the way, when did Hungary declare war on the United States? Do you know? A. It must have been in 1942.

Q. Wasn't it December, 1941? A. Or late in 1941, or the beginning of 1942.

Q. Now, will you look at the inventory for December 31, 1944, and tell us what the investment in Transdanubia was? A. It is still the same figure—109,918.50.

Q. Let us look now for the inventory for December 31, 1945. A. Still the same figure—109,918.50.

Q. Now, the German Army surrendered when? A. I think it was in the summer, 1945.

Q. So that all during the war between the United States and Germany, plaintiff had an investment of 78,000 francs in the stock of Transdanubia, and advanced to it and hundred and how many thousand, did you say? A. About 109,000 Swiss francs in advances.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Pardon me. Is that clear? The question, I believe, is framed so that it appears the 109,000 was advanced during the period of the war. I want that cleared up, that 109,000 was advanced prior to the war.

The Witness: Yes, definitely so.

By Mr. Burling:

1113 Q. And what is a dollar equivalent of about forty-five thousand, isn't it? A. It all depends at what time you take it. At the time of the investment, it was about forty-five thousand. Later on the pengo went down and now it is about zero.

Q. When the investment was made, it was the equivalent of about forty-five thousand United States dollars? Isn't that right? A. Roughly speaking, yes.

Q. Now, in addition to that, Uebersee guaranteed loans which Hungarian banks made to Transdanubia, did it not?

Mr. Ingoldsby: May I ask at what time?

Mr. Burling: If it didn't at all, the answer is no.

Mr. Ingoldsby: It is very important that the questions be confined to the time, because these questions relate to the question of doing business with an enemy or ally of an enemy country. I don't think there should be any confusion about the dates on it, because on the dates completely depend whether or not the plaintiff corporation was or was not doing business.

Mr. Burling: Counsel perfectly well knows I am going to come to the date. First of all I want to know if there was any such transaction, and then I will ask when the date was.

By Mr. Burling:

1114 Q. Was there any such transaction? A. May I explain it?

Q. Please do. A. Switzerland was a so-called hard currency country, whereas Hungary was currency controlled. That was the reason that in the beginning, I think around 1937, or 1936, we did not put money into Hungary in pengos, but cause a Hungarian bank to loan the capital to Transdanubia. This was the only way to keep the Swiss francs out of Hungary.

Q. Well, in addition, is it not the fact— A. May I finish, and then we clear it up?

Q. Surely. A. Then later on, after those losses had occurred, there was no need going on with this loan, and so we then paid the Hungarian Bank, and that is how this credit balance appears.

Q. But this guarantee of a loan by a Hungarian bank is a separate transaction from the advances which you have just testified about? A. In the beginning, in 1937, it went into those accounts we just spoke about. If you are speaking about a guarantee in later years, that is something different.

Q. I will direct your attention specifically now to the year 1942—Mr. Ingoldsby.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Thank you.

1115 By Mr. Burling:

Q. Isn't it the fact that Uebersee guaranteed an extension of a loan of 32,000 francs, that is, that it guaranteed to hold the Swiss Bank Corporation harmless, and the Swiss Bank Corporation guaranteed to hold the Hungarian Escompte and Wechsler-Bank of Budapest harmless, on a guarantee of 32,000 francs? A. It was merely an extension of a guarantee already put up in 1939 or 1940.

Q. I see. But that is over and above the loan by Uebersee to Transdanubia. That is a separate transaction? Is that right? A. It is an entirely separate transaction, because of the need to pay official fees to the Hungarian Government.

Mr. Burling: I ask that Defendant's Exhibit 71 and 71-A be received in evidence as being conceded by the plaintiffs as coming from their books and records.

(The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 71 and 71-A.)

Mr. Burling: And I would like, if Your Honor please, to read one paragraph.

"Pursuant to the telephoned instructions given by Dr. J. Hengeler on March 20 we have caused the Swiss Bank Corporation to extend until June 30, 1942 its guar-1116 anty of Swiss Francs 32,000 to the Hungarian Escompte and Wechsler-Bank, Budapest. Because of the fact that the time limit expires on March 21, this was done by telegram."

I should say, Your Honor, this is dated "Zurich, March 23, 1942."

It is addressed to "Overseas Finance" and it is signed "Adler & Co. A. G." And it goes on:

"We take the liberty of debiting you, as of today, with a quarterly commission of one half percent for the period from March 31, 1942 to June 30, 1942."

I ask that Defendant's Exhibit 72 and 72-A be received in evidence, as conceded to be from the files of the plaintiff, and I would like to read that.

(The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibits 72 and 72-A.)

Mr. Burling: This is a communication dated June 6, 1942, addressed to Bankhaus Adler & Cie., in Zurich:

"In answer to your letter of the 4th inst. we would appreciate if you extended the loan for the Transdanubia Bauxit A. G., Budapest with the Schweizerische Kreditanstalt, Zurich, in the amount of Fr. 32,000, until September 21, 1942."

I ask that there be received in evidence Defen-
1117 dant's Exhibit 73 and 73-A, as being conceded to be from the files of the plaintiff corporation; and I would like to read it.

(The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibits 73 and 73-A.)

Mr. Burling: This is addressed Overseas Finance Corporation; it is a letter dated Zurich, September 22, 1942, from Adler & Company:

"Subject: Guaranty of Francs 32,000.00 given by the Swiss Bank Corporation, Zurich to the Hungarian Escompte and Wechsler-Bank, Budapest.

"In accordance with instructions, given over the phone by Dr. J. Henggeler on September 19, we have caused the Swiss Bank Corporation, Zurich, to extend until December 31, 1942 its guaranty of Francs 32,000 given to the Hungarian Escompte-and Wechsler-Bank, Budapest. We have requested the mentioned bank to wire the extension in view of the expiration of the period in Budapest on September 21"—and so forth and so forth.

And signed Adler & Company.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. By the way, who is this man Henggeler who is referred to? Do you know? A. Henggeler, as you know, 1118 is the legal counsel of Overseas, and my personal lawyer.

Q. He is also a director of the plaintiff, isn't he? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: I ask that there be received in evidence Defendant's Exhibit 74 and 74-A, as being conceded to be documents from the files of the plaintiff.

(The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibits 74 and 74-A.)

Mr. Burling: This is a letter addressed to Overseas Finance Corporation, from Adler & Company, A. G., dated November 17, 1942:

"Subject: Guaranty of Francs 32,000.00 given by the Swiss Bank Corporation, Zurich, to the Hungarian Escompte-and Wechsler-Bank, Budapest.

"We have been advised by the Swiss Bank Corporation, Zurich, that the Transdanubia Bauxit A. G. has repaid the loan arranged, some time ago with the Hungarian Escompte and Wechslerbank, Budapest, for your account by Fritz von Opel. Accordingly, the guaranty extended by the Swiss Bank Corporation for this loan, in the amount of Francs 32,000.00 has lapsed.

"We have credited, therefore, your general account, as of today with Swiss Francs 32,000.

"We have further debited the security account and 1119 credited the guaranty account with corresponding amounts.

"Very truly yours, Adler & Co., A. G."

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, it was your impression, was it, that Transdanubia was not doing any business in 1941? A. This guarantee arrangement was made in 1939 and 1940, and the guarantee was only continued to prevent our losing these Swiss francs which had been put up as collateral.

Q. Can you explain, if Transdanubia was not doing any business in 1942, how it managed to repay a loan of 32,000 Swiss francs? A. I never said that they were not doing business. I was, as I previously stated, in the spring of 1941 under the impression that they leased the whole mine, lock, stock, and barrel, to Hungarians. In other words, it was my order to the management to get rid of this entire enterprise.

Q. At any rate, as of April, 1942, Transdanubia had extended, in addition to the $45,000 you have already testified about, had extended a guarantee of an additional 32,000 Swiss francs? A. No, Mr. Burling, that is not a correct way to express it.

Q. Perhaps not. A. Because a loan was given, as I earlier stated, in 1939 and 1940.

1120 Q. I mean the investment. A. So it was merely a technical extension of the credit arrangement, as otherwise we would have lost those thirty thousand or thirty-two thousand Swiss francs which we had put up as collateral.

Q. Yes; but addressing yourself now to April, 1942, the direct investment had a dollar value, that is, on the books, it was the dollar equivalent of about forty-five thousand? Is that right. A. Well, yes.

Q. And in addition to the credit which was extended, there was 32,000 Swiss francs? A. About $7,000, which credit already had, run several years, yes.

Q. But the investment and extension of credit which Uebersee had made at that time was about fifty thousand dollars, wasn't it? A. You stated yourself that those two things have to be kept separate. One was a guarantee, and the other one was an advance carried on current account or investment account.

Q. If you add up the guarantee and the advance and the investment in the shares, the total is over $50,000, isn't it? A. You cannot add those figures. That 1121 is an entirely different character.

Q. I understand that. But they all constitute moneys advanced to or invested in Transdanubia, do they not? A. One was an advance. The other one was a guarantee arrangement.

Q. Fine. And the total of the moneys advanced or guaranteed is in excess of $50,000? Isn't that true? A. The guarantee agreement was an agreement covering about $7,000.

Q. All right. And forty-five and seven add together to a number in excess of fifty, do they not? A. But that is not a proper way of keeping books, Mr. Burling. You cannot just add any two figures.

Q. Well, I just want to add these two figures, and they add to a figure in excess of $50,000, don't they? A. Mathematically speaking, if you add thirty-five and seven, you get forty-two—

Q. And if you add forty-five and seven, it is— A. It is fifty-two; it is fifty-two mathematically speaking, yes, sir.

Q. Did you not testify before the Miami hearing board that the total investment in Transdanubia was about fifteen thousand dollars? A. That is correct. As I explained to you before, the pengo had taken a terrible dive, and those figures you mentioned of forty-five 1122 thousand are not the correct figures, but merely, so to say, the official rate of exchange. It had nothing to do with the inner purchasing power of the pengo.

Q. But you had put it up in Swiss francs, which stayed on gold all during the war--you had put up the dollar equivalent of forty-five thousand in an investment, plus a guarantee of seven, hadn't you? A. You cannot express it in this way. The investment was made in pengos, and if anybody asked me in 1942 what its value is in dollars, I have to take the rate of exchange into account. If you ask me today, I would say one million pengo is less than one American penny.

Q. And would you say today, therefore, that the amount invested in Transdanubia was one penny? Is that a fair way of putting it? A. Yes; it is totally written off, and apparently a total loss, because the Russians have taken over the entire Hungarian industry.

Q. Yes. But you didn't think, did you, the Miami hearing board was trying to find out the value of the pengo? It wanted to know, did it not, what you had put into it, what you had invested into the bauxite mines. A. No; they didn't ask me how many pengo or how many Swiss francs went into it. They wanted to know, in a rough 1123 guess in dollars, how much it was worth.

Q. Did they want to know how much it was worth, or how much you put into it? A. I didn't put any dollars into it, you see. It was a pengo investment.

Q. You didn't explain that to the hearing board, did you? A. Please?

Q. You didn't explain that to the hearing board, did you? A. Would you please read me the question, Mr. Burling?

Q. (Reading:) "Question: Do you have any investment other than Overseas stock?

"Answer: No; that is my total investments there in Overseas.

"By Mr. Kressel:

"Question: You spoke of what you have in Overseas." And you say: "All the Overseas are mentioned in the questionnaire."

It must be all the Overseas assets—

"In 1932 or 1933 I acquired some mineral rights in Hungary. It is a German corporation and never paid any dividends."

A. Pardon me. That must be a misprint. It is a Hungarian corporation.

1124 Q. And you said it was operated at more or less of a loss, and the total amount was about fifteen thousand dollars? A. Yes.

Q. But didn't you know the hearing board was inquiring into the amount of money you had invested in this bauxite mine? A. In Miami the people wanted to know how big, so to say, my interest was; they wanted to have it expressed in American dollars. So of course I had to keep the rate of exchange in mind.

It wasn't a dollar investment, from the beginning. If they had asked me, "Did you invest dollars, and how many, into it", I would have said, "I did not invest dollars; I invested Swiss francs, and now I have pengos, and in dollars they are worth so and so much."

Q. All right. You knew, at the time you were being interrogated by the Miami board, that they were interested in the bauxite mines because they considered bauxite a militarily important substance. Is that not true? A. Bauxite—the Opel Corporation was the greatest user of aluminum between the two world wars.

Q. This is during the world war we are talking about—World War II. A. Every metal, whether iron or aluminum or magnesium, becomes armament metal, certainly. And the Opel factory did entirely the work in introduc-1125 ing metal into the automobile manufacture. We were the greatest consumers since before the First World War.

Q. And you understood that in 1939, 1940, and 1941 the bauxite that was being produced by the mines was going to the Giulini factories at Ludwigshafen? A. They were interested in buying it.

Q. And that is where the output of the mines went, wasn't it? A. I think so.

Q. And you were well acquainted with Dr. Edgar Giulini, weren't you? A. I wasn't well acquainted. I saw him when he visited one of the mines.

Q. And you corresponded with him, didn't you? A. I refused to invest money, if you call that correspondence.

Q. Don't you have any other correspondence with him? A. I don't recollect that. I had an exchange of wires. I did not have a correspondence, Mr. Burling. That wasn't possible, because there was a Bermuda censorship. But I sent everything back and forth by wire, and I would be pleased to show you the exchange of wires. There are at least twenty different wires.

Q. I would be pleased to see them, but didn't you
1126 correspond with Edgar Giulini before you left Europe? A. I don't recollect that.

Q. You testified, I think, previously that you were unable to take the oath of allegiance to Liechtenstein, because you had broken your leg and couldn't travel there. Is that right? A. You asked me about this paragraph, and I said it wasn't a "must", under Liechtensteinean procedure.

Q. Didn't you also say the reason you didn't take the oath was because you could not travel to Liechtenstein at that time? A. I said I might have gone there, but I was unable to travel—I wouldn't say "unable" to travel; but all travel I could avoid, I tried to avoid.

Q. And when was it you fractured your leg? A. I didn't get the question.

Q. When did you break your leg? A. I think it was in February, 1939.

Q. February 3, wasn't it? A. That is possible.

Q. I show you what looks a clipping from a newspaper and ask you if that refreshes your recollection as to when you broke your leg. A. The newspaper report says February 3; so I think it was the preceding day, apparently.

1127 Q. February 2? A. Apparently, yes.

Q. And when, after this accident, were you able to travel? A. For the first six or eight weeks, if I remember correctly, I was in a heavy plaster cast. Later on I felt a little better.

Q. When were you able to travel, Mr. von Opel? A. What do you call "travel"?

Q. Going from one country to another. A. You see, I had terrible pains at the time. I had a second accident.

Q. When did that take place? A. Please?

Q. When was that, the second accident? A. I think it may have been in January.

Q. Of what year? A. Of 1940.

Q. I see. In any event, you were well enough to travel to Budapest in June, 1939, weren't you? A. I think I went there, yes.

Q. And you sent a telegram to Edgar Giulini, did you not, from Budapest? A. That is possible.

Q. Will you state whether you did or did not 1128 send that telegram? A. Yes. It deals about this stealing of Mr. Koranyi, and I asked him to straighten this matter out, because he was stealing from my property and I had to pay for it.

Q. But, at any rate, you sent this telegram? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

(The document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit No. 75.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, when you went from St. Moritz to Budapest, you went through Liechtenstein on the train, didn't you? A. I don't know which way I went. I think I went the other way around, if I remember correctly. About which date are you speaking?

Q. When you traveled to Budapest in June, 1939. A. In June, 1939, it is possible I went by train, because I went a second time later in the fall.

Q. And doesn't the railroad pass through Liechtenstein? A. Yes.

Q. Will you explain why, if you were well enough to travel through Liechtenstein in June, you were still unwell enough to go to Liechtenstein in November?

1129 A. Because my condition got worse, Mr. Burling.

Q. Will you examine Defendant's Exhibit 76 and see if it is not your reply to Defendant's Exhibit 75?

Mr. Burling: I withdraw my last question.

1130 A. Yes, I am saying in it that the stealing of Mr. Koronyi is still going on.

Q. I made a mistake, I thought this cable went the other way. This is a telegram which you sent to Giulini? A. Apparently, yes.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence.

Mr. Gallagher: It is clear that the date is June 9, 1939?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. It bears a stamp, does it not, "Received June 9, 1939"? A. Yes, it bears a stamp, Foreign Exchange Control.

Q. It bears another stamp up here, does it not? A. June 9, 1939.

(The document above referred to, a copy of a telegram dated June 9, 1939, was marked Defendant's Exhibit 76 and received in evidence.)

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, could we have a few minutes recess if we are going to five o'clock?

The Court: I am going to stop at four tonight.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you examine the original of which document 77 is a photostat, and state whether that is not a letter which you signed and sent to Mr. Giulini in Ludwigshafen? Just look at the signature. Is there any doubt that it is yours? A. Yes.

1131 Q. And you sent it to Giulini, did you not? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

(The document above referred to, a letter dated July 12, 1939 to Dr. Edgar Giulini, was accordingly marked Defendant's Exhibit 77 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I wish to ask you now to look at the date and the place where it appeared it was written. Will you explain what the words in the upper right-hand corner of the first page mean? A. The date is July 12, '39.

Q. And where does it indicate that the letter was written? A. It is the words we mentioned this morning, Wilhelmsruh.

Q. What does the word "Jagdhaus" mean? A. That means hunting lodge.

Q. I do not intend to ask you further about that. A. Of course, my father's place.

Q. Will you look at an original letter, of which Defendant's Exhibit 78 is a photostat, and way whether this is not a letter which you wrote to Mr. Giulini.
1132 (Pause) Can't you tell from your signature? A. Yes. I just wanted to read it.

Q. You can hold it. I want to read the section headed "Shipments."

Mr. Burling: I offer this letter in evidence.

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

(The document above referred to, a letter dated July 31, 1939, to Giulini Bros., was accordingly marked Defendant's Exhibit 78 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you not write as follows, and the letter is dated Sylt, July 31, 1939: "Upon receipt of an order for about 150,000 tons of which annually 30-40,000 tons would be shipped,—doubling the annual quantity being possible if new mines are opened—I could make shipments at a price of RM 13.20 per ton f. o. b. car or ship Gyoer. Such shipment would be made on the basis of 56% aluminum, 3% silica, and 7% humidity, the price to be increased or reduced," and so on. Did you intend to offer to ship 150,000 tons of bauxite annually on July 31, 1939? A. I asked Giulini why I should bear all the trouble I had through Mr. Koronyi, and I told him if he would get rid of Mr. Koronyi, and if I could take over this 50 per cent of Koronyi, and if he gives a long-term contract, I might make deliveries. It says in this letter, of course, 1133 only if you assign all your claims against Koronyi.

Q. At any rate, you were talking about shipping bauxite in quantities of 150,000 tons a year. A. Under certain conditions, yes.

Q. There was a man named Frick in Giulini Brothers who was active. A. I think one of him managers was Mr. Frick. I think he was his purchasing manager.

Q. And he also communicated with you from time to time, did he not? A. That is possible.

Q. I show you a document of which Defendant's Exhibit 79 is a photostat, and ask you if that is not a file copy of a letter from Frick which you received. A. Yes, it is a report on the trouble between Giulini and Koronyi, and the steps the Hungarians had taken to stop production.

Q. And you received this? A. I remember it, yes.

Q. And it is dated September 8, 1939? A. Yes.

(The document above referred to, a letter dated September 8, 1939, to Mr. Fritz von Opel, was marked Defendant's Exhibit 79 and received in evidence.)

1134 By Mr. Burling:

Q. And you replied to Mr. Frick, did you not, in a letter dated September 11? I show you a document on your letterhead addressed to Mr. Frick, which begins, "Thank you very much for your kind letter of September 8," and I ask you if that is not a letter which you wrote to Frick? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: All right, I offer it in evidence.

(The document above referred to, a letter dated September 11, 1939, to Mr. Heinrich Frick, was accordingly marked Defendant's Exhibit 80 and received in evidence.)

The Witness: I asked him whether it is agreeable to him that I sell bauxite into Switzerland in case the Hungarian Government forces me to produce.

Mr. Gallagher: Does the record reflect, Mr. Burling, that these letters are not from the plaintiff, or Mr. von Opel's files?

Mr. Burling: The record does not reflect anything, either way.

The Witness: They are taken from the files of Giulini.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Do you know that? A. Yes, I see it from those marks.

Q. You said to Mr. Frick on September 11, "The most important question, of course, is what is being done 1135 about resumption of production." A. Are you quoting from this letter?

Q. The middle paragraph, first sentence. A. Yes, but you have to read it together with the next sentence.

Q. Well, read that, please. A. "Out of the report of my managers, I gain the impression that mining authorities demand continuation of production and that they are going to expropriate the mining rights if we do not follow their wishes."

Q. I show you now a document addressed to you beginning with the words, "We acknowledge with thanks receipt of your letter of September 11, addressed to the individual signing below on the right side." I show you a document, of which Defendant's 81 is a photostat, and ask you if that is not a letter which you received from Frick of Giulini Brothers. A. Yes, it says in this letter that it would be of the most importance to Germany if I would invest large amounts in Hungary to start the production.

Q. Well, they say more specifically that you would do meritorious service for the raw materials supply of the German aluminum industry and the entire war economy of Germany if you would tackle with all your energy the resumption of production in the mines. A. That is correct, Mr. Burling, and I did just the opposite.

1136 Q. Well, we'll see.

Mr. Burling: I offer this document in evidence.

(Accordingly, the document above referred to, a letter dated September 16, 1939, to Mr. Fritz von Opel, was marked Defendant's Exhibit 81 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you reply to this letter? A. Would you show me the reply?

Q. I show you a document of which Defendant's 82 is a photostat, and ask you if that is not a telegraphic reply to Frick's letter. Did you send that? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence.

(Accordingly, the telegram referred to, dated "29/27 18 152 1523", was marked Defendant's Exhibit 82 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, Mr. von Opel, Frick wrote you saying that you— A. Would you show me the letter to which—which is mentioned in this wire.

Mr. Gallagher: July 31.

The Witness: Could I see it again?

Mr. Gallagher: Defendant's 78.

Mr. Burling: It is the letter of September 16, 1137 your letter September 16 as before stand by my offer July 31. Upon receipt of order immediately ready to travel Budapest for purpose of starting production.

The Witness: May I see this letter of July 31?

Mr. Burling: Yes.

The Court: Let me see that telegram. (The document referred to was handed to the Court.)

I have to adjourn now.

(Accordingly, at 4:00 p.m., the trial was adjourned until 10 o'clock Monday morning, December 20, 1948.)

* * * * *

1143 MANFRED STANSFIELD, appearing as a witness by request of the Court, and being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Mr. Burling: Your Honor, at this time I would like to introduce to the Court Mr. Harry Keefer, Special Agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who will 1144 assist us and be a witness in this particular phase of the matter.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I understand that according to Your Honor's order, Mr. Stansfield is to be interrogated at the present time on cross examination, the same as though he appeared as a live witness at the time his deposition was read. Is that correct?

The Court: My ruling was that we would supplement whatever testimony had already been given, without striking from the record the testimony offered.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I see.

Examination by Defendant

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you state your name, please? A. Manfred Wronker Stansfield.

Q. And in 1931 did you have some other name? A. Manfred Wronker-Flatow.

Q. And that was changed when you were naturalized? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when did that take place? A. 1946.

Q. Were you educated in the law in Germany? A. That is right—and in Switzerland.

Q. And when did you become a member of the German Bar? A. 1920.

1145 Q. Were you ever employed by General Motors, or retained by General Motors? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When were you first so retained? A. Either 1925 or 1926.

Q. And did you become General Motors' principal German attorney? A. I did.

Q. And in the year 1928 did you negotiate or participate in negotiating any large deal in which General Motors was a party? A. I participated in the negotiations that led to an option for General Motors to purchase the Adam Opel firm, or shares of the corporation, if such corporation be formed.

In the meantime, until the option was exercised, I drew all the agreements in that connection, in addition.

Q. And in these negotiations, which party did you represent? A. At the start I only represented General Motors. After the first meeting in Paris, to my knowledge the Opel brothers did not have a lawyer working for them in these negotiations outside of myself.

Q. Just a moment. Did you represent the Opel brothers, or did you represent General Motors? A. In the negotiations first I only represented General Motors.

1146 Q. Did you ever represent the Opel brothers in these negotiations? A. I would say to these extent—and I will have to go a little bit into this, otherwise it doesn't make any sense, because my position was rather unique.

When the Opel brothers appeared in Paris to negotiate—

Q. When did they appear in Paris? A. In 1928, at the time the first option agreement was negotiated. Then Mr. Hachenburg accompanied them. Mr. Hachenburg brought a very elaborate agreement that he had prepared for the handling of the deal, in case General Motors should be interested in making a deal.

I at that time was of the opinion that the agreement would not be acceptable to General Motors in the form it was made, and I suggested that a new agreement be drawn up which would not just give General Motors an option to buy physically the plant and the firm and everything that went with it, of Adam Opel, which at that time was not a corporation.

But under the German law at that time, something Mr. Hachenburg had not brought out, there was a possibility for the old owners, and particularly in case of a family corporation, for a family to change from a company that was not incorporated, to a corporation, with great savings of taxes.

For some reason or the other, which I do not re-
1147 call at this moment, but probably I did know at that time, the German Government had an interest in creating corporations.

I suggested to the Opel brothers at this time that the right way would be for them to form a corporation and sell the stock to General Motors, instead of selling physically every item of the plant. This saved both for General Motors and for Adam Opel and for the Opel brothers, and that represented millions of marks—I had better speak in marks—and my whole suggestion was very acceptable to both sides, because it simplified the negotiations at that time, and it enabled General Motors and Opel brothers to arrive at an agreement within a rather short time in Paris at that meeting.

Q. This was a transaction involving over a hundred million marks? Is that correct? A. It was somewhere around one hundred and twenty or one hundred and thirty million marks.

Q. And you were retained by General Motors as their lawyer in this transaction? Is that right? A. That is right.

Q. Did you regard yourself also as being retained by the opposite party? A. Definitely not.

Q. So you were not performing professional legal serv ices for Opel at this time? A. At this time in Paris, 1148 definitely not, but I did advise them—and I will explain this whole thing.

Q. All right; thank you. In the course of the negotiations between General Motors and Opel, did you come to represent either Wilhelm von Opel or any other member of the Opel family, as their lawyer? A. During these first negotiations—

Q. I mean thereafter, during the negotiations for the purchase. A. This, my suggestion—

Q. Will you answer my question, please?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Just a second.

I think the witness is entitled to courtesy, Your Honor. He started to answer the question.

The Witness: I am trying very hard to be cooperative.

The Court: What he wanted to know was did you represent them at any time during the negotiations.

The Witness: You see, I don't know whether I should call that "representing" them, but I think I did, and for this reason, and with the knowledge of General Motors, because the corporation then was formed, and in the formation of this corporation I was not representing General Motors, but I was assisting the Opel brothers in forming the corporation, in a way that would afterwards be acceptable to General Motors.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you draw the papers? A. Of incorpora-
1149 tion?

Q. Yes. A. I had something to do with them. I couldn't say for certain at this time whether I drew them entirely—

Q. Who drew them? A. I wouldn't know, but probably it could be Hachenburg who was in that.

Q. Don't you know it was Hachenburg who incorporated Adam Opel, A.G.? A. I do not. I don't deny it could have been Hachenburg, and probably it was. But I cooperated very closely, without ever talking to Hachenburg, I believe, in that connection. But with Opel brothers I had a lot of talk, and with their men, within the six months until it was accepted, the option.

Q. Were you ever retained personally by Wilhem von Opel at any time? A. I would like to make some statement about "retaining." I have formally stated—because I read my deposition now—that I was not retained, and I think I gave a true, narrow interpretation to the word "retained," because there is knowledge of this, of everybody in here, that I did act in a legal capacity for Wilhelm von Opel in a number of cases; and one of them is an agreement that is very much discussed in this Court.

1150 So I have acted, you see. I thought "retained" means you get a retainer, which I never did.

But I acted as a lawyer in a number of cases, which I don't all of them recall, but some I do.

Q. Will you tell us those you do recall, please? A. Offhand, I acted in a legal capacity in many instances in connection with the transfer from Opel to General Motors, where they did not have an additional lawyer acting at all.

Q. Your testimony is that because the Opels did not have a German lawyer in a transaction involving one hundred and twenty or one hundred and thirty million marks, and you were the lawyer for the party on the other side of the transaction, you just helped out and also performed legal services for the Opels? Is that it? A. That is it, very definitely.

Q. That is so? A. That is so.

Q. Have you ever been on any legal transaction of comparable size, where you were representing both parties? A. You see, I don't say I was just representing both parties. I was acting in some capacity, and advising both parties in some respects. That is what I am trying to say now.

Q. Now, Mr. Stansfield, is there a code of ethics which applies to German lawyers? A. Very definitely, 1151 and I was always very much aware of that, Mr. Burling.

Q. Is there anything in the code of ethics, the German code of ethics, relating to representing conflicting interests? A. If both parties agreed to that, using you as a kind of arbitrator, there would be nothing against it. And, in addition to that, I did not act when the interests were conflicting. In fact, when the Opel brothers, after they had seen me in action in Paris and in Berlin and in Ruesselsheim in connection with this thing, asked me whether I could not also take care of their interests, I told them definitely, only in so far as they didn't conflict with the General Motors interests.

Q. Did you ever tell anybody in General Motors that you were performing any legal services for the Opels during these negotiations? A. John Thomas Smith was absolutely aware of it, and I think others are, too.

Q. And you are aware that John Thomas Smith is dead, are you not? A. I was very sorry to hear that, because otherwise he would confirm what I have said, if he hasn't already.

Q. Have you ever told the story which you are now telling in this Court, before?

1152 Mr. Ingoldsby: Just a minute please.

I object to this being stated as telling a story, Your Honor. I think the connotation is entirely incorrect, and it should be, "Have you ever testified?"

The Court: "Have you ever told this narration?"—is that what you mean?

Mr. Ingoldsby: It connotes that he is telling a story.

The Court: You can interpret it that way.

The Witness: This whole, rather unique situation was fully in the knowledge of John Thomas Smith, and I have told it to him, and I feel very sure that he has told it to others in General Motors.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. You have been interrogated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, haven't you? A. I don't know how often. I have been, yes.

Q. And did you ever tell an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation that you have performed legal services for the Opels in connection with the General Motors sale, and that you had told this fact to John Thomas Smith? A. If I had any occasion to tell them, if the questions were such that they would cause me to give a story like that, I definitely would have told them, because I am telling facts.

Q. That is fine. But I want to know if you did 1153 tell any agent. A. I don't know, sir.

Q. Do you recognize Mr. Harry Keefer, here in court? A. Yes, I have met him several times before.

Q. And he has questioned you about your services to the Opels, has he not? A. He has asked me many questions.

Q. Including the nature of your services to the Opels, has he not? A. He has asked me in connection with a known payment to me of $20,000, which was set up as a loan, about my services to Opel. And I didn't feel that the whole questioning about this loan was proper, because I stated to Mr. Keefer that in our procedure, before you start answering a claim, the claim is put up to you. And I didn't think that Wilhelm von Opel ever would ask me for the repayment of this $20,000. So I said, "I will be willing to give a complete statement of facts in answer to a claim made to me, but not before it was made."

Q. In other words, you did not tell Mr. Keefer anything about performing legal services for the Opel family in connection with the General Motors sale. Isn't that true? A. I couldn't tell you that, because I didn't keep any record of what I said, and I have talked with him so often. But if I didn't tell it to him, I had no

1154 reason to tell it at that time, probably; but if he had asked me, I would have told it.

Q. Don't you recall Agent Keefer asked you explicitly to give the services you performed for the Opel family? A. He did, and I explicitly refused to go into any details, because the question was in connection with a loan made to me. And I said I was going to spell out what I had against this loan, before the claim for the loan was made up to me.

I don't understand the procedure at all, that somebody comes in to question you about a so-called business claim against you, and wants you to make all your statements before even the claim has been issued against you—and that is exactly what I explained to Mr. Keefer.

Q. Did you not understand, Mr. Stansfield, that you have been accused of blackmailing Wilhelm von Opel in connection with this gift agreement? A. This is so riduculous. If anybody had ever made such a statement that I have really very few words to say about that. I did not have anything to blackmail him about. I been a lawyer of reputation all my life when I was in Germany, and I never had any need or any reason to blackmail anybody for anything, because I had honest money coming to me and only that I have had all my life.

Q. Didn't you realize that was the purpose of 1155 Agent Keefer's inquiry?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object to that, Your Honor—"Does he know the purpose of Mr. Keefer's statement?"

Mr. Burling: If he does know, he can state it.

Mr. Gallagher: May it please the Court, if I may interrupt at this point, Mr. Burling is talking about a blackmailing situation; and, from his own alleged statement, he never received any statement about a blackmailing until a week before this trial.

The Court: Just a minute. What is the question?

The Reporter (reading): "Didn't you realize that was the purpose of Agent Keefer's inquiry?"

The Court: I guess his realization would be proper.

The Witness: I can answer that question, because if anybody had suggested to me I had blackmailed Wilhelm von Opel, and that Wilhelm von Opel had made any such statement, I would have called him a downright liar if he said Wilhelm von Opel had made such a statement. If anybody was accusing me of blackmail, I would have thrown him out if he had been in my office, and I wouldn't mind who it was.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you now describe all the services which you ever performed for Wilhelm von Opel, which you can recall.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object, Your Honor. I think it is immaterial that the witness should have to go into 1156 each and every service he has performed.

The Court: If he recalls it. As I remember the deposition, there was some attempt to show that this gentleman was indebted to Mr. von Opel or his estate, and, as I gathered it, some of his testimony might be colored by that. And he said, as I recall from the deposition, that that had been extinguished by virtue of services performed.

Isn't that right?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: I think an inquiry as to whether he is biased in this case, or not, would be proper.

Mr. Ingoldsby: What my objection referred to, Your Honor, frankly I don't know the answer, but I assume there were some very personal services involved in there, or services of a personal nature.

The Court: What he is trying to find out is if he had a claim for $20,000; and, if he did, it supports his statement.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Very well, Your Honor.

The Witness: I think I had a very reasonable claim for $20,000.

The Court: What he wanted to know was the nature of your services. You have told of some. Were there any others?

The Witness: There were many others, and it
1157 started almost from the beginning, and other lawyers were not called in. There were many matters of different, where General Motors only knew to sue the Opel brothers, and the Opel brothers said to go ahead. And I settled those differences internally, advising both sides what they should do, and how they should do it.

For instance, I will take one, because I haven't all the facts here with me. I didn't know that I was going to be interrogated about other things than had directly to do with the case.

But immediately after the Opels had sold out, there was a case where the firm called Elite Diamant, where the Opel firm lost millions of marks, and General Motors felt that this should be recovered from the Opel brothers, because it involved a situation which they had known before.

I personally did not feel, I was not convinced, that the Opel brothers knew that events would take the turn they had taken in that case; and I suggested that we settle it. The Opel brothers didn't know how to settle it. And although I was under this pressure from General Motors and from John Thomas Smith to go ahead and sue, I said, "Do you mind if I help the Opel brothers to work it out and settle this, so that we don't go out in the open and drag the name Opel through the courts?"

And John Thomas was absolutely agreeable that 1158 I go ahead.

And I suggested that the Opel brothers set up a fund, a pension, for all the laborers, and that they pay into that fund a certain amount right now, and from then on pay every year a certain amount. And they would not have set up this fund without my advice.

The papers on that are available, and they are all in the Opel plant and you could see it, and also in the files of the Opel brothers probably you will find in my handwriting that I set up the fund for them; I advised them how to handle the whole thing; and I have gone over the facts with them until the whole thing was done. And General Motors accepted it the way that the Opel brothers, under my advice, offered it to General Motors.

That is one case.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. After 1929, when General Motors bought 80 per cent of the Opel stock, you became counsel of Adam Opel, A.G., did you not? A. Yes.

Q. And wasn't the service you just described done in your capacity as counsel for Adam Opel, A.G.? A. No. I would say it was to the benefit, also, of Adam Opel, A.G.

Q. Who was your client in this matter? A. My client was General Motors, or Adam Opel, A.G.

1159 Q. And not Wilhelm von Opel? A. But I asked for them in the legal capacity, advising them how to go about arriving at a settlement.

If they had taken a lawyer for doing this, outside of myself, they would also have had to pay very substantial amounts, because there was a lot of money involved in the whole thing.

Q. Did you ever perform any legal services for Wilhelm von Opel otherwise than as also a General Motors lawyer? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Will you describe those services? A. Well, one of them is in connection with the—well, first I can say in personal matters, his daughter had a lot of family troubles, and in that connection Wilhelm von Opel discussed in detail all the legal and everything that was involved in those personal matters.

Also that would have required another lawyer to do it for him, if he hadn't discussed it with me.

Q. You know, don't you, Wilhelm von Opel had another lawyer named Yaltman handling that marital problem?

A. As far as the outside is concerned, he would have to have another lawyer, because I was not appearing on the records as the lawyer. But I still was advising Wilhelm von Opel internally also on matters that he could discuss with his lawyer. And he would go a little bit wiser in 1160 talking to his lawyer after talking to another lawyer who was very friendly.

Q. Did you perform any other legal services for Wilhelm von Opel? A. I did.

Q. Will you describe them? A. And there were many personal services, legal services, that came up during the time. And a complete list of that I am willing to submit as soon as this claim is brought up against me. I am not in a position at this time, on a minute's notice, without any preparation, to record every detail. But I can give you one very important service.

Q. Please give us as many as you remember. A. Oh, I will give you one very important one.

Q. Please give us as many as you remember. A. All right. Well, my memory at this moment is rather weak, because the way I am interrogated doesn't give me a lot of help in remembering.

Q. Just give us as many as you can remember. A. But I will give you that important case.

Q. Well we will hear that first. A. The moment Wilhelm von Opel had sold out, and in my presence had received for the Opel family the check in payment of the Adam Opel firm, after that we drove home together. And Wilhelm von Opel said to me:

1161 "Now, you know I am not interested in accumulating any more money. It will be difficult enough now to keep what I have gotten. And if you would give that some thought in assisting me in that respect, I will be very thankful, because I would like to keep it for my family and for myself."

A little later he told me how he got the old people together, in telling them about the sale, and handing out the portions to the various members of the family. All, outside of Fritz von Opel, the others—

Q. Just a moment. Did Wilhelm von Opel hand out any portions of the proceeds of the sale? A. Well, he did in his talk. He didn't pull out or give them a check, or however it was.

Q. Did he offer to give any portion to anybody?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Just a minute, please.

I submit, Your Honor, Mr. Burling was quite insistent that Mr. Stansfield tell what legal services he performed and that he tell about this particular one. I suggest that the witness be permitted to continue and tell it.

Mr. Burling: I suggest that counsel stop heckling, by objections and statements.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I am sorry.

I will ask the Court to rule on my objection.

The Court: I think we had better finish that, Mr. Burling, and then take him over the others.

Mr. Burling: Yes, sir.

The Witness: I have to get the whole situation back in mind, and I am trying to say that at that time Wilhelm von Opel said he told the old generation there, of Adam von Opel, told them very specific stories; but he said—

"You would be astonished how little they are interested in these family stories, and their interest is only what they are getting out of it. I hope my son doesn't feel the same way."

He said, "If you will give some thought how these things can be handled in the future, so that I can protect my part for my family, I will be very happy to have your suggestions."

And, off and on, we discussed the ways how that could be done. And finally came up to the way it was done, in 1931, when every day there were new orders raining from the government, that we decided on how matters should be handled now, which finally was to protect Fritz, when all the others already had been protected.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you go ahead and describe your legal services? A. Well, at this moment, there are no more legal services that I want to go into, because in getting them back into my mind, I get into long stories. But, in connection 1163 with that—

Q. Please, I want you to tell us of each legal service you remember. A. Well, at this moment, I don't remember—

Q. You don't remember any other legal service? A. Except this agreement in connection with this, in detail.

Q. Except your work in connection with the gift agreement? Is that right? A. With the gift agreement, and what I have already just said. And if I remember anything while we are going on, I will come back to it.

Q. All right, thank you. You do not remember any other legal services at the time? A. At this moment, no; but I have my papers home, and I think I can pick out quite a number I can put my hands on.

Q. I am interested in what you remember now. You do not remember any legal services after you drafted the gift agreement, which is the subject of this litigation? A. At this moment, no.

Q. Who was the Chancellor of Germany on October 5, 1931? A. I think for the moment that I don't know.

Q. Perhaps I can refresh your recollection. Wasn't it Bruening who was in the Government? A. In 1931?
1164 Q. Yes. A. I don't need any recollection there.

Q. That is what I am asking you. A. It was Bruening.

Q. In other words, you don't remember performing any legal services for Wilhelm von Opel after the National Socialist Government came into power? Is that right? A. I do in connection with the claims that were then brought up against Wilhelm von Opel by the Nazis.

Q. You performed services in connection with that matter? A. Yes, I was very much involved in it, with Wilhelm von Opel—in fact, with the brothers Opel—very definitely. They called me up very excitedly quite a number of times, and at impossible times. So I remember very exciting and hectic times on that, with the Opel brothers.

Q. You were in the capacity of a witness in that matter, weren't you, and not as a lawyer? A. I was in the capacity of a lawyer, when I was talking with the Opel brothers, and I was in the capacity of a witness when I was questioned by the court or other authorities who had a right to question me.

Q. You told Mr. Keefer, did you not, you performed services for Wilhelm von Opel that were very dan-1165 gerous, and you risked your very life for him? A. I doubt I said Wilhelm von Opel; but it is absolutely true that for the family Opel I did.

Q. You risked your life for the family Opel? A. I sure did.

Q. Will you state in what manner?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object. Your Honor, the entire purpose of the—or let me put it in this way:

The only thing that justifies any extensive cross examination of this witness on the matter of legal services performed for the Opels is the matter of what appeared at one time to be an outstanding $20,000 indebtedness.

I submit that the subject has been completely explored, that the witness has established services far in excess of that amount; and I say that additional examination on the question of services performed by this witness is nothing more than for the purpose of annoyance.

The Court: If this is one of the items, it would be material.

Is this one of the items for which you made a charge, this risking of your life.

The Witness: I have not made up any bill for it, Your Honor. I did charge for what I had done—

The Court: In that connection?

The Witness: Well, I would take it as a whole,
1166 for my services I had rendered during that time. I would set that off against the loan. And I feel that any court—

The Court: I understand that. What we are trying to find out now is whether this risking of your life in behalf of the Opel brothers would be one of the items you would actually set off against that claim.

The Witness: I would.

The Court: You would? Then I think—

Mr. Ingoldsby: Your Honor, may I make a further statement on this? The witness, as I understand, is going to reply to a question concerning services which he performed during the period which clearly resulted in the summary decree issued against Wilhelm von Opel. I again point out that a detailed analysis of what happened in those proceedings will again result in our offer to introduce the summary decree which ultimately was issued.

The Court: I am not concerned with that. If you want to offer it later on and he makes it admissible, we will see.

The Witness: Your Honor, may I say, so that I don't have to go into detail of a lot of miscellaneous prosecutions, and those things, that without referring to that at all, I have sufficient material to set it off, and that any court that looks into it from the standpoint of comparing one claim against the other, will accept it. And I don't think that I have any need of putting anything of that—1167 there is nothing in our code as a lawyer that for risking your life you get any extra payment.

The Court: I understand that. But I think what Mr.

Burling is trying to find out is, as I remember in your deposition, you said you were not indebted to Mr. von Opel for $20,000, or for any other amount, as I remember it. I am not sure; but isn't that substantially right, that you said that?

The Witness: Yes.

The Court: Now, what I asked you was, was this one of the items you had in mind? If it was, then I would have to let him inquire about it.

The Witness: Well, I don't remember that I made the statement to Mr. Keefer that I risked my life. At that time I did not have anything specific in my mind where I would say I risked my life, and for that reason I didn't know that I did.

The Court: What I mean is, was that one of the services you rendered von Opel, you see, which made it true that you didn't owe him $20,000, or do not owe his estate today?

The Witness: I would like to put it this way, Your Honor, that even making an agreement under the laws that were not absolutely in order, under the former government, but which in effect took away from the German jurisdiction certain foreign exchange, under the Nazi rules that 1168 would have been something that would endanger any lawyer, whether it was within the rights at that time or not.

The Court: I suppose he is answering your question now, Mr. Burling. Go ahead.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, part of the point of my questioning is that he has testified now he couldn't remember any services, or at one time he remembers any services—after October, 1931. The Nazis didn't come into power until 1933.

The Court: Apparently he has begun to answer your question, right now. So I say go ahead.

Mr. Burling: Thank you, Your Honor. I didn't understand.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you go ahead and explain what this service was? A. When the Nazis got into power, all these agreements somehow came under scrutiny by the Nazis. And at that time the Opels discussed with me in detail those negotiations and everything that had anything to do with it, and in fact I gave them a lot of advice how to handle it with the Nazis.

Q. By the way, when did you leave Germany? A. November 24, 1933.

Q. You gave them advice, you say? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What service was it that you say involved the 1169 risk of your life? A. Dealing with matters like this was risky, whether you were in the right or not. But I was talking at that time of the Opel family, and I was thinking of something specific, and I am not using that at all, let us say, that specific case, in setting off against this claim.

Q. You knew Mr. Keefer was asking you about services you rendered to Wilhelm von Opel, did you not? A. Mr. Keefer, when we spoke at that time, we spoke for quite some time, and we had a very pleasant talk. It was in no inquisitive way. We were discussing the whole situation and the atmosphere, everything of that kind. And during that conversation, which wasn't fifteen minutes, but—I mean, I will have a hard time saying whether it was one or two hours or three hours—I dropped such a remark, and it wasn't every word for the print. I spoke a lot off the record.

Q. At any rate, you refused to describe the services you had performed for Wilhelm von Opel, did you not? A. To offset my claim, because the claim yet had not been properly prepared to me or presented to me as a claim. And I said to Mr. Keefer that I did not believe that Wilhelm von Opel would make such a claim.

Q. But you did refuse to describe the services? A. On that basis that I have just outlined.

1170 Q. Now, when did you last see Wilhelm von Opel? A. In April or May, 1939.

Q. Where? A. In London.

Q. Did you perform any services for him after you left Germany in November, 1933? A. Not that I recollect at the moment.

Q. Yet in 1937 the $20,000 loan had not been written off, had it? A. No. It had not. It had been kept in the status of a loan, for very specific purposes.

Q. And in that year you wrote to Wilhelm von Opel apologizing for not having paid back the loan, did you not? A. Because Wilhelm von Opel needed something for the Nazis, so that he would not sue me; and I told Wilhelm von Opel that if I am sued—I had told Wilhelm von Opel that before—that if I am sued, I will set off all my services, which will show everything that had to go with it. And I had to give him some plausible reason why he would not sue me at this time; so I wrote him this letter.

Q. But you did write him a letter, did you not, in which you acknowledged the debt and said you were not able to pay it? A. Yes, I did.

Q. That is Defendant's Exhibit 29-A. Do you rec-
1171 ognize that? A. Yes, I have seen it before. Could I just have a look at it again?

Q. (The letter having been handed to the witness): In this letter you indicated an intention to pay back the loan, didn't you? A. I did, yes.

Q. And that was false, was it? A. You see, the way it was intended at that time, in case Wilhelm von Opel would request, I would offset it. But this was written mainly for the Nazi situation.

Q. But it was false, even if it was written for the Nazi situation? Is that right? A. What was false, if you will tell me?

Q. Did you or did you not in fact intend to pay back the loan? A. At that time I did not intend to make any definite statement, the way I am making it now.

Q. I can believe that. But did you or did you not intend to pay back the loan? A. I was keeping that open to settle. At the time when Wilhelm von Opel should make any claim against me, I would have set off against it.

Q. You did not intend to pay back the loan at 1172 this time, did you? A. No, I did not.

Q. And so the statement here that you did intend to pay back the loan is false, isn't it?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object, Your Honor.

The Witness: The statement was absolutely understandable for Wilhelm von Opel, and Wilhelm von Opel knew he was not going to ask me to pay it back.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Has the estate of Wilhelm von Opel made any claim against you? A. If it has, I don't know about it.

Q. In any event, prior to October 5, 1931, you were not Wilhelm von Opel's tax expert, were you? A. I wasn't his tax expert, but I knew quite a lot about taxes.

Q. As a matter of fact, wasn't the tax work for both the individual Opels and for Adam Opel, A.G., done by a man named Faust? A. That is correct.

Q. Did you, before October 5, have a discussion with Wilhelm von Opel about the remaining 10 per cent of the Adam Opel shares which he held? A. Would you kindly state that again? I didn't get it.

Q. Before October 5, did you have any discussion
1173 with Wilhelm about the 600 shares of Opel stock which he still held? A. Off and on, quite often, yes, because it was very much on his mind.

Q. And you knew, did you not, that those shares were in escrow in New York? A. I drew the escrow agreement myself.

Q. And didn't Wilhelm von Opel tell you he was concerned about foreign exchange regulations, and that he wanted to keep those shares free of foreign exchange regulations? A. I don't know the details of everything that was said. But I do know the whole atmosphere and the gist of our discussions at that time. And there were several things that always came together. One was to protect the family. One was to take care of Fritz. And the other was, then, that the laws were making it difficult, if you didn't act quickly now, then it might be possible that at some date the door was shut and you couldn't get out.

And, in fact, I was making that very clear to Wilhelm von Opel, because I remembered what had happened to many Russians, and I very well knew how important it was to act at the right time.

Q. And Wilhelm von Opel often used a phrase to you, did he not?—which is, "Money isn't everything, that is, unless you have it invested in Switzerland." A. I 1174 don't remember that Wilhelm von Opel said that. That was a general statement in Germany at that time. It was "Money on loan doesn't make you happy, except you have it in Switzerland," or something like that. I am trying to translate it.

Q. And you told Mr. Keefer that Wilhelm von Opel used that phrase in talking to you, did you not? A. I don't think I did, but it is quite possible. And it is quite possible that Wilhelm von Opel did, because practically it was a joking way of making such statements that went around.

Q. And in the summer and fall of 1931, you considered yourself more or less an expert on foreign exchange matters, did you not? A. Well, I don't have to use the word "expert," but I had to be aware of foreign exchange matters, as a lawyer of a firm that was dealing all the time in exports.

Q. And you knew the term "Auslander" meant, did you not? A. Definitely.

Q. And isn't it true that Wilhelm von Opel said to you that it was convenient that Fritz was an Auslander? A. At the time that Fritz went out, that was already discussed that it would be a very wise thing for Fritz to be outside of Germany and not under the jurisdiction 1175 of Germany, as far as the funds were concerned.

Q. When would you say this was first discussed? A. Oh, I couldn't fix any date at all.

Q. At any rate, during, let us say, the week or two prior to October 5, 1931, didn't Wilhelm von Opel say to you that it was a good thing that Fritz was an Auslander? A. I couldn't recall it. But it was a good thing, in the face of the whole situation. I don't recall what Wilhelm von Opel said in detail in that connection. I mean, we all would have been of the same opinion. He didn't have to say that.
1176 Q. Directing your attention to the time around October 5, 1931, was it your opinion that the relationship between Wilhelm and Fritz von Opel was cordial or uncordial? A. As cordial as it always was, in my opinion.

Q. No more or less than it had been, is that it? A. It was a very natural relation between father and son, nothing specific. They were quite friendly as a rule.

Q. You knew, did you not, that Fritz had married against the very strong opposition of his father? A. His father had discussed that in much detail long before Fritz married, with me.

Q. Didn't Wilhelm say he was very strongly opposed? A. He didn't use those words, but the definite impression was that he was not happy about his son going to marry his wife—his later wife.

Q. Did you not say in your deposition that Wilhelm had told you that he was strongly opposed to the marriage? A. I do not recall every word of my deposition, but in gist he was not for it, so he was opposed to it, and I would repeat that.

Q. When did Wilhelm first tell you anything about intending to make a gift to Fritz? A. I think that started almost immediately after the sale, and I could not go back and make a definite statement when that was, and I 1177 think it was interrupted through the marriage, that it was further pursued, and afterwards it was taken up again actively.

Q. When was it taken up again actively? A. When?

Q. When? A. Some time before the time it was actually made, and I couldn't tell you whether that was one week or two weeks, or two months.

Q. You do not recall how long a period of time elapsed between the time that you heard the gift was in fact to be made and the time it was made? A. I do not recall how much time elapsed, no.

Q. Casting your mind back to October 2, 1931, you did not go to Mannheim with Fritz to talk to Dr. Hachenburg, did you? A. If I did, I don't remember.

Q. You were not even consulted on that day, were you, about a gift agreement? A. I just stated, I don't remember the dates and details as far as that is concerned. I remember that everything happened before Fritz went to the United States at that time.

Q. But you have no more precise recollection than that? A. As far as whether it was on the second or whether it was on the first that we talked about it, I wouldn't 1178 know—probably before Fritz went to Mannheim.

Q. Are you testifying from your recollection now, or an assumption? A. An assumption, I don't recollect that at all.

Q. You were not asked to draft anything until October 5th, were you? A. I don't think I was. Maybe it was discussed before, but that I said I think this is very serious, it should be discussed with Hachenburg first, because I also wanted, felt that there should be a definite opinion about the legality under the foreign exchange laws outside of my own understanding of the laws.

Q. Did you draft an instrument which is Plaintiff's Exhibit 5-A? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And did you draft that unaided, or did you use some earlier draft in preparing this? A. I don't remember that exactly, but I believe there was at that time from Geheimrat —from Dr. Hachenburg some expressed opinion on how the matter should be handled.

Q. Is it not the fact that you used a draft prepared by Dr. Hachenburg? A. Beg your pardon?

Q. Is it not the fact that you used a draft prepared by Dr. Hachenburg? A. Could be quite possible.

1179 Q. And is it not the fact that you did not see that draft until October 5th when it was received in the mails? A. You see, I don't recollect in detail that, but I sure didn't see it, because before it was there—

Q. Is it not the fact that what happened on October 5th was that Wilhelm von Opel and you and Fritz von Opel had a discussion and it was agreed that the Hachenburg draft should be re-written, and didn't you say there isn't time to write a new draft now because Fritz has to leave tomorrow to go to America, and so we will give him a power of attorney and he can use that to sell the shares to General Motors, and when he comes back we will draw up an agreement and pre-date it, using today's date? A. That is a story that has nothing to do with the facts, because I never would suggest that an agreement be predated.

Q. That was not done? A. Definitely not.

Q. You are absolutely sure? A. I am absolutely sure. I know definitely how this matter was handled, and I also know why I suggested that he take a power of attorney with him. That was done, and it was—

Q. Any questions— A. All right, the question is 1180 answered. I was only trying to say it was drawn and signed on that date.

Q. Thank you. The gift involved, according to your understanding, about $3,700,000? A. I don't remember what the amount was, but it was a substantial amount.

Q. What did Fritz say to his father when the instrument was executed? A. Do you really expect me to remember what he said at that moment to his father? Well, I can't tell you. That's all I can say.

Q. You do not remember that he said anything at all? A. Whether he said thank you or anything like that I don't remember. Those are not the things that stuck in my mind.

Q. At any rate, Fritz's gratitude was not so effusive that it fixed itself in your mind? A. I don't remember that he fell around the neck of his father. I have absolutely no such scene in my memory. A lot of things have happened since.

Q. Did you not tell Mr. Keefer here that it was entirely possible that the instrument of October 5 was pre-dated? A. I don't think there is any possibility that I made such a statement, because I never in my whole practice pre-dated any agreement.

Q. So you are also morally certain, are you, that 1181 you did not say to Special Agent Kiefer that it was entirely possible that the instrument was pre-dated? A. I am definite that I didn't say that. It may be that some people pre-date agreements, but I am sure that I never did.

Q. The answer is no to the question? A. I am telling you.

Q. The question is, didn't you say it to Mr. Kiefer? A. No, I know I didn't.

Q. You are morally certain you did not make that statement to Mr. Kiefer, who is sitting at counsel table? A. I stated that, and I repeat it, I did not.

Q. All right. A. If I had made such a statement, it would have been against the facts.

Q. So your testimony is that you drafted this agreement and had it executed on October 5th? A. That is correct.

Q. And on the assumption that the Hachenburg draft was received at Ruesselsheim on the 5th, then your testimony would be that you did the whole thing in one day? A. That didn't mean very much to me to make an agreement like that in one day. I made the whole option in English and German for General Motors and Adam Opel in one day.

Q. You understood, did you not, Geheimrat Wil-1182 helm von Opel was getting out of Adam Opel? That was the sale of the last of his shares. A. I clearly understood that.

Q. And you had been put in as general counsel of Adam Opel by General Motors? A. That is correct, by the stockholders, you might say, and also by Geheimrat von Opel.

Q. But 80 per cent of the stock was owned by General Motors? A. That is correct.

Q. And you had been a General Motors representative before General Motors bought in von Opel? A. That is correct.

Q. And in a sense wasn't John Thomas Smith your superior? A. You couldn't call him my superior. He was the general counsel of General Motors, and I was the general counsel of Adam Opel, and Adam Opel was owned 80 per cent by General Motors.

Q. Did you cable John Thomas Smith telling him that Geheimrat von Opel had sold out its shares? A. I would not have had any right, when Geheimrat von Opel used me as his counsel in this private matter, to give information to anybody.

Q. So the answer is you did not? A. Well, cer-1183 tainly I did not. I was not—under no obligation whatsoever when I was acting as counsel in a personal matter of Wilhelm von Opel to inform John Thomas Smith of what I had done for Geheimrat von Opel and Fritz von Opel.

Q. You did not feel there was any breach of loyalty, or duty to General Motors to tell them that Geheimrat von Opel had given away his shares, and that Fritz von Opel was coming to New York for the purpose of putting the shares to General Motors? A. I do not even follow the line of thought there, so not only I had no obligation to tell them, but I had an obligation to keep anything that happened, where I was acting as a private counsel, secret from everybody who was not directly involved in that deal.

Q. You knew it would be a matter of grave concern to General Motors that Geheimrat von Opel was getting out, did you not? A. I was—

Q. Will you try to follow my questions.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Your Honor, I object to the last question.

The Court: Read the question.

(The pending question was accordingly read by the reporter.)

Mr. Ingoldsby: This question relates to a series, as to whether or not the witness told General Motors 1184 about the gift from Wilhelm to Fritz. I object to the question on the theory that it is completely irrelevant, and I object at this point because it is the first question going into what appears to be a series.

Mr. Burling: I would be glad to make a statement as to the relevancy. This man was a General Motors Lawyer. He had the most obvious obligation to tell General Motors what Wilhelm von Opel had done. He had the most obvious duty to tell them that Fritz was on his way to America to require them to pay $3,700,000. I try to ask these questions to lay a foundation for arguing that since he did not do what he had a duty to do, there is a probability that the thing was not done on the 5th at all.

The Court: The knowledge of that concern I suppose you would know as well as he would. It is an argumentative question. I will sustain the objection.

Mr. Burling: I am not sure I understand Your Honor's ruling.

The Court: I am sure it is an argumentative question. You have enough to argue it on already.

Mr. Burling: Very well, Your Honor.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Is it not the fact that the reason you did not tell General Motors about the gift was because it had not happened yet? A. That is definitely not the fact.

1185 The reason—well, there were a number of reasons. I have stated one of the reasons, but if Wilhelm von Opel had sold his stock personally, which he might have done, that would also have concerned General Motors, and nobody could have stopped him, so it did not make any difference in that respect.

Q. At the time that you first saw the Hachenburg draft, what led you to think that a draft that you would prepare would be better? A. I didn't think that any draft that I would make would be better, except it would better serve the purposes at this moment when every minute there were new negotiations, new orders coming out, and I felt that under the circumstances quick action was necessary, and my feeling was that the draft of Mr. Hachenburg, which might have been very good, and definitely, doubtless was very good in every detail, because all his things were good in every detail, that they didn't serve this particular purpose at this moment.

Q. Why not? Will you tell us in what way you thought you could improve on the Hachenburg draft? A. I thought that one thing was important at this moment, and that was to get, if Wilhelm von Opel wanted to save for Fritz von Opel the property that was outside of the country, he had to transfer title and had to do that immediately, and that all other questions of how matters should be handled

1186 with respect to that, and in connection with Niessbrauch and so on, were secondary questions, and all we had to do at this moment was to take the first step first, and leave the door open for everything else that he wanted to do, or that they wanted to do. And I think my draft did that better.

Q. In other words, the most essential element. A. Agreement of—

Q. Discussion on October 5 was speed, is that right? A. Speed for the transfer of the title from Wilhelm von Opel to Fritz von Opel as a devisen auslaender, to get it out of the jurisdiction of whatever laws there might be coming that hadn't come yet, but could be expected any day.

Q. Do you remember when it was decided that Fritz should take the Europa to America? A. Somewhere around that time.

Q. If speed was of such importance, why not just execute the Hachenburg draft? A. I don't recall the Hachenburg draft, but I was under that impression at that time that that would have been a complication of the whole thing.

Q. Hachenburg submitted a proposed gift agreement, did he not? A. He submitted something at that time that was the basis for my—in some way, also, for my draft. It could have been the opinion or the agreement.

1187 Q. I show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 8-A, and ask you if this is not the Hachenburg draft which you used in preparing your version.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Your Honor, may I make a statement at this point? In view of the fact that this is an incident which transpired about 17 years ago, I don't think that it is quite fair to show only 8 to the witness at this time without also letting the witness know of the summary considerations contained in Exhibit 9.

The Witness: All I could say, this is very probable that I saw that at that time.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Don't you remember that you used this document? A. It could have been entirely different, and you put it before me as of this date, and probably I did see it at that date. I don't remember that I used it.

Q. Will you examine it and see if haste was of such importance this instrument couldn't have been typed in final form and executed even more rapidly than your preparing a new draft? A. Well, there must have been some things that didn't appeal to the parties, and that I also thought might take more time than necessary in finishing the transaction, finalizing it.

Q. Can you recall what elements there were in 1188 this instrument that didn't appeal to the parties?

A. I don't know the details. At that time they didn't want to tie themselves down so exactly as it was in here, I suppose, and for that reason it was made in a more general way to leave the decisions open for a time when things were not quite so hectic.

Q. What was said to you by Wilhelm von Opel about a usufruct? A. When this gift was given, you have to remember the time in which it was given. At that time—

Q. I wonder if you would tell me what Wilhelm von Opel said to you. A. If you want me to repeat any words that Wilhelm von Opel said, I can't repeat them, but I know, I am trying to give you an idea of what his thinking was at that time.

Q. I wish you would give us an idea of what he said to you. A. He said he wanted to protect this part of his family, his son, to have something for him that would take care of Fritz, who had been removed from his position in industry and so on.

Q. That is not in response to my question. A. You will be good enough—you are asking me—

Q. I want to know the substance of what Wilhelm said to you about a usufruct. A. And in that connec-1189 tion, as I just now said, although he was taking care of Fritz, he at the same time wanted to protect himself in case Communists or Nazis should take over, or in case of all kinds of contingencies that nobody could definitely specify at that moment. So he wanted to have a possibility of going to Fritz and saying, "Now, I want a usufruct, and here"—and didn't have to beg for it.

Q. So you put a usufruct into the terms of the agreement, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. You used the following language, did you not:

"The usufruct in the shares is not assigned to Fritz von Opel, it remains with Wilhelm von Opel and his wife, hereafter called the parents Opel, until the survivor of them—"

When you drafted those words, what did you think their legal significance was? A. This would give Mr. von Opel and Mrs. von Opel the right any time to ask Fritz von Opel to create a property right.

Q. And legally how would that property right be created? A. By giving co-possession of the shares, just the way that assignments are made.

Q. That is, that Fritz von Opel would deliver possession or co-possession to the parents, and that would 1190 create the usufruct, is that right? A. That is my recollection how it would have been done under the German law.

Q. Did you give any consideration on October 5 to the question of who would be liable for the taxes on the income under this usufructuary provision? A. What income, the dividends that would fall?

Q. Any income that would arise from the property. A. The fruits of the property?

Q. Well, I will start over again. It was contemplated that Fritz would go to New York and put the shares to General Motors, was it not? A. That's correct.

Q. And it was contemplated that he would invest the proceeds of the sale, was it not? A. It was not contemplated how the whole transaction would take place, it was absolutely possible that General Motors would offer General Motors stock; in fact, at the time the escrow agreement was made, that was foremost in the mind of both parties, that that is how it would be handled. I do not recollect that there was any talk about how that had to be handled when he got to New York, whether he would take money of whether he would take stock, or what General Motors would propose in that respect.

Q. In any event, it was contemplated that the Opel
1191 stock was to be transformed into American securities of some sort? A. Well, it was left to Fritz to do whatever he felt he wanted to do in that respect, and probably in detail discussed with Geheimrat von Opel what they were going to do.

Q. It was therefore assumed that some income would be derived from the property? A. Definitely.

Q. What thought did you give on October 5 to who would have to pay the German income taxes? A. I do not recollect discussing that point, but if I had been asked, I would have said that the party who in Germany got any income out of it would have to pay his income tax on it.

Q. Did you look up the law on who has to pay an income tax where there is a usufruct on property? A. I did not look up the law, and I don't think I would have had to look it up.

Q. Well, what is the law where there is a power to create a usufruct in the future? A. There is no law to that effect, as far as income tax is concerned. In what respect do you mean?

Q. I am talking about income taxes. A. I don't understand the question. If you will be kind enough to word it again.

Q. If Wilhelm von Opel had the right to demand
1192 that a usufruct be created, did he have any income tax liability? A. Under that right alone?

Q. In that situation. A. That right did not incur any income tax at all.

Q. It did not? A. No.

Q. You did not look it up, though? A. I don't think I would have had the idea to look that up, whether having a right would create an income tax if it didn't create any income, because only income is taxable under our income tax.

Q. Did you give any thought to the American income tax law, as to who would be liable? A. I do not remember, and I don't think it was part of what I was asked to perform at that time. But I always gave a lot of thought to taxes in all my dealings. But I do not recollect in this connection that I gave any thought at all to the American income taxes. I knew very little about it.

Q. Did you give any thought to whether this instrument would create any problems in connection with inheritance taxes or estate taxes? A. Well, I knew definitely that a gift involved a gift tax.

Q. I am talking about inheritance taxes. A. Well, the gift tax in that case took the place of the inheritance 1193 tax and the gift tax is very closely connected with it.

Q. And you didn't look up any law relating either to gift taxes or to inheritance taxes? A. If there was any question that I wasn't clear in my mind on, I would have looked up the law.

Q. But you did not look up the law? A. I don't know what I did at that time.

Q. You do not recall having looked up anything at all on this occasion, do you? A. No, I do not recall it, but I do recall that when I drew an agreement that I was pretty clear on what implications it had, and if I was doubtful about any question I used to look up the books. But 17 years back I do not know whether I looked up any certain and specific paragraph at that time, because I knew much more about the law then than I know today.

Q. But you have no recollection of being concerned about any tax problem of any sort in relation to this gift? A. I was also concerned about tax questions in my mind when agreements were made, so I am sure I was in this case, too, but I am sure that somehow I was satisfied by either, by myself looking up the law, or by getting the information from people who were reliable.

Q. Do you think you consulted any people about 1194 this on October 5, 1931? A. In the first place, I think Hachenburg expressed an opinion on that, and I am sure that Dr. Faust did, and I am sure that I always checked those things myself when I did them.

Q. Don't you know it to be the fact that both Hachenburg and Dr. Faust said that tax problems were involved here that would require further research? A. I don't remember that.

Q. Were you told that Hachenburg had said he wanted to have a conference with Geheimrat von Opel about the problems associated with this gift? A. I do not recollect, it could be possible.

Q. You inserted, did you not, in Plaintiff's Exhibit 5, the gift agreement, the following statement in the first paragraph:

"It is our common desire that these stocks remain with the male line of our family in order to preserve a personal connection between the bearers of the name of Opel and the work of our father, Adam Opel?"

A. Yes, I mean it is in there, I can see that.

Q. You added it, did you not? A. I don't remember that, but it's in there, and I drew the whole agreement.

Q. And it is not in the Hachenburg draft, which is Plaintiff's Exhibit 8, is it? A. If you say it's not in it, I 1195 don't want to read the whole agreement for that purpose.

Q. I say it isn't, and I show you Plaintiff's 8. At the very time that you recited that the parents Opel desired to keep the Opel stock in the male line of descent of the Opel family, you knew that Fritz von Opel was going to leave the very next day to sell those share, did you not? A. That is correct.

Q. So that is pure sham, is it not? A. It's not pure sham. It had a very good reason at that time.

Q. But it was not true, was it? A. As far as the Opel father and mother were concerned, I don't even know whether at that time what would happen to the stock later was in any way fixed, but they expressed what their desire was, but they don't say that that's what has to be done.

Q. But it was the expectation and the intent of Wilhelm von Opel that Fritz go to New York the next day and sell the shares, was it not? A. Well, that he transfer them to his name, that was the intent of it.

Q. Have you not just testified that it was also intended that Fritz go to New York and sell them to General Motors? A. To transfer them from the name, from General Motors to him.

1196 Q. Transfer what? A. The stock, this stock.

Q. Opel stock? A. The title, yes.

Q. You drew the power of attorney which Fritz took to New York, did you not? A. That's right.

Q. And that did not say anything about that, did it? A. I don't know what it said.

Q. Will you examine Plaintiff's Exhibit 4-a and say whether that is not the power of attorney. A. This is 2, exhibit 2.

Q. Excuse me.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Your Honor, might we take a couple minutes recess?

The Court: Five-minute recess.

(Accordingly, a short recess was taken.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you examine Plaintiff's Exhibit 4-A and state whether that is not the power of attorney which you drafted and gave to Fritz von Opel? A. Yes, I drafted that.

Q. Does that indicate that Fritz von Opel was empowered to negotiate to take the Opel shares out 1197 from the escrow agreement? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any discussion of having Fritz take the shares out from under the escrow agreement instead of selling them to General Motors? A. He could have—he still had it open to him what he wanted to do.

Q. Will you answer my question, please: Was there any discussion of it? A. I don't remember that it was discussed in detail what he should do. The main thing was to get it into his own, title transferred to himself.

Q. But as long as they remained German securities, the purpose of getting foreign exchange, getting assets out of Germany would be frustrated, would it not? A. I am not quite clear on that, if a devisen auslaender possessed them.

Q. The Opel shares were not foreign exchange, were they? A. No, and the devisen did not only refer, as far as I remember, to foreign exchange.

Q. How would the purpose which you have described here of having assets abroad in case of a collapse in Germany be served if Fritz held on to the Opel shares? A. Well, it wouldn't, but he would have had a chance to do something about it, and a collapse, in a collapse, as a rule, the industrial undertakings like an automobile plant 1198 was worth more than money in that country.

Q. But the whole purpose was to get assets abroad. A. To have the title transferred to somebody outside of Germany, and that somebody happened to be the son of Geheimrat von Opel.

Q. In your deposition you said at page 177: "I felt that the only thing that was urgent was to get it out of the General Motors, and have it under the control of Fritz alone, and nobody else had to decide what would happen to the proceeds of these shares but Fritz von Opel, outside of Germany." Is that correct? A. Yes, that was still my understanding.

Q. In other words, it was your understanding of this transaction that Fritz von Opel was to dispose of the Opel shares, isn't that so? A. That it was wise in my opinion, that that's the way to do it, if he really wanted to protect title for himself and not be subject in any way to German jurisdiction.

Q. So it was understood by you and by Wilhelm and by Fritz that Fritz was going to sell the shares, is that not true? A. It was understood that Fritz could make his decision when he came over to the United States and could negotiate. He could have negotiated anything.

Q. Yes, he could have. A. He could have also 1199 negotiated, for instance, what was discussed later, and had been discussed earlier, to put the shares on a gold basis. Then a financial collapse in Germany would not have affected the value of the stock, because it could always then ask for General Motors to take him over and pay him on the gold value.

Q. Now will you explain why you inserted the statement that it was the desire of the parents to keep the Opel stock in the male line of descent of the Opel family? A. That would have been their desire, and probably was there desire at that time, that it stayed in the—but it also was good to have that in from the German standpoint, because at a very early date this agreement would have to be placed in front of the tax authorities for taxation, for the gift tax, and then the people who were in Germany, Geheimrat von Opel, and Mrs. von Opel had expressed a desire in this agreement that Fritz von Opel keep it in his name; but he was not under any obligation to do that, although he could have done it if he had received, for instance, some protection by General Motors on the exchange basis.

Q. Is it not the fact that this clause about male line of descent was merely put in to deceive the German authorities? A. I did nothing to deceive anybody.

Q. You understood when you drafted this on October 5, did you, that in order to create a usufruct you had 1200 to have first the agreement to create a usufruct, and second, delivery of possession to the usufructuary. A. Right.

Q. Is it not the fact that it was contemplated that delivery of the subject matter, or res, would be made to the usufructuary by placing the proceeds of the sale of the Opel stock in a holding company, and delivering the shares of the holding company to an agent of Wilhelm von Opel? A. I don't recollect that in detail. There was a talk of a holding company, and I was not so much concerned about the carrying out later on; as I stated before in that moment, in making the agreement I considered the detail of how this usufruct was going to be handled secondary nature. It was something that between father and son could be arranged at any time when the question came up. The main thing was to create a right for Wilhelm von Opel to ask for the usufruct whenever he felt like it.

Q. Was it not also agreed that the usufruct would in fact be completed through the holding company, as I have described? A. If that is in the agreement, then it was agreed, and if it wasn't, it wasn't agreed. Maybe there was some talk about it, and there was definitely talk about it, but I kind of pushed that aside as something that could be decided later that didn't concern us at this moment.

1201 Q. And it was also agreed, was it not, that if the Opel shares were to be sold, the usufruct would follow into the proceeds? A. I didn't get the last few words. The usufruct would what?

Q. Would follow and attach to the proceeds. A. Once the usufruct is properly established, then it does follow.

Q. You filed an affidavit, did you not, with the United States Treasury in 1935, in connection with the gold case? A. I did not file it.

Q. You executed an affidavit, did you not, understanding that it was to be filed with the Treasury? A. Yes. I didn't even know exactly where it was going.

Q. I show you page 31 of Defendant's Exhibit 8, and ask you if that is a part of the affidavit which you executed. A. It looks like it, in looking at it.

Q. I invite your attention to the following words:

"In September and October, 1931, I advised Dr. Wilhelm von Opel and his son Fritz von Opel in the preparation and execution of a deed of gift from the former to the latter, of which a copy is attached to the affidavit of Mr. Fritz von Opel herein marked Exhibit R. I participated in the conversations which led up to the execution of these documents. In these conversations it was 1202 stated by Dr. Wilhelm von Opel and Mr. Fritz von Opel that securities covered in the deed of gift or the proceeds of these securities should be transferred to a corporation for the purpose of protecting the interests therein created by the deed of gift."

Let me ask you now, was that statement true? A. If I made this statement, and if there is an affidavit with my signature there on that date, I probably had a better recollection after three years than I now have after 17 years.

Q. Have you any doubt that this is your affidavit? A. I would like to see the original with my signature, and then I could say definitely. I haven't read the whole thing. You present it to me and say it is.

Q. You will agree that this either is your affidavit or it is a fraudulent copy of your affidavit? A. That is correct, that is what it would be, then.

Q. Are you aware that this record which you hold in your hand was filed in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals by the Plaintiff corporation? A. No, I don't, but it says so.

Mr. Burling: I take it counsel will concede that this is not a perjury or manufactured affidavit.

The Witness: I don't speak it to be, I will tell you that, but you ask me something that I haven't read in detail.

1203 By Mr. Burling:

Q. So that on the assumption that this is in fact your affidavit, you believe that you more accurately recalled in '35 than you do now in '48? A. Correct.

Q. Do you now think, on the basis of this, that it was stated by Wilhelm and Fritz von Opel that the securities given or the proceeds should be put in a corporation for the purpose or protecting the interests created by the deed of gift? A. I would say it would be in the way that I stated it there. But I don't remember that now, that that was exactly the case. All I remember now is that there was a lot of talk about a holding corporation.

Q. But you intended when you executed this affidavit to tell the truth in it, did you not? A. I always do, sir.

Q. I go on reading:

"The clauses in the deed of gift relative to the usufruct reserved to the parents of Fritz von Opel were particularly insisted on by Dr. Wilhelm von Opel, who said that he attached the greatest importance to this restriction on and reservation from the gift."

Is that correct? A. Well, I know definitely that Wilhelm von Opel wanted the usufruct for the reasons that I stated before.

1204 Q. He insisted on them? A. That's why it was put in—everything that was in that agreement was insisted on by somebody, and it was Wilhelm von Opel in this case who was getting the usufruct, so that I would say now yes, that is what he wanted, he wanted to have the right to create this usufruct.

Q. You go on to say, do you not:

"In German law the right of usufruct (niessbrauch) was and is recognized to be a separate estate in the thing and to be a real right or right in rem (dingliches recht) in the thing. By virtue of this concept of German law and the deed of gift itself Dr. Wilhelm von Opel and his wife retained an independent property right in the securities described in the deed of gifts and in any and all proceeds thereof, which independent property right gave the parents certain definite rights and powers under German law with reference to said securities and their proceeds."

Was that correct? A. If you read the whole thing, this is correct when you take the whole page here. I think it is not sufficiently clearly expressed. It gave them an independent right to a property, a right, and the securities would have been better.

Q. But that is not what you said. A. But it does follow from what is said in the whole thing, I would 1205 say, if you read the whole page.

Q. You read any part you think makes the point you suggest. A. "The rights and powers thus reserved to the parents by virtue of their usufruct include the right to be consulted with reference to and to prevent the sales of securities or their proceeds by Mr. Fritz von Opel; the right to have provisions for the safeguard of their usufruct . . ." and so on ". . . inserted in any agreement of pledge Mr. Fritz von Opel might make with reference to the securities or their proceeds and the right in general to invoke the jurisdiction of the courts on the question whether or not any funds, proceeds of said securities, are invested in a manner to safeguard the right of usufruct and carry out in a reasonable manner the intention of the parties as expressed in their agreement creating the same.

"In addition, by virtue of this right of usufruct the parents can at any time have the securities or their proceeds put under the joint control of themselves. By virtue of this right of usufruct, the parents can at any time have their securities or their proceeds put under the"—which inferred that they did not, had not done it by that time, and just had a right to do all those things.

Q. Was it your opinion on June 6, 1935, that 1206 Wilhelm and Martha von Opel did have a usufruct, or was it your opinion that they did not have a usufruct? A. From this year I would say that it was my impression that the agreement that was concluded had been carried out, and it had been really created.

Q. In fact, you so swore, did you not? Don't you say that in your affidavit? A. That wasn't my impression. I don't say it had been carried out, no.

Q. You do not? A. I don't think I said that, no. I am sure I didn't say it. And the whole thing, I think, it leaves it wide open as to—because it says they had a right of, by virtue of this right of usufruct, can at any time have the securities, but under their joint control, but it would be my opinion when that hadn't been done, the usufruct was not yet established, and that follows from this, that's in here.

Q. You go on to state, do you not, the "right of usufruct was derived by German law from the Roman law." A. I see.

Q. ". . . and is governed by the following among other provisions of the German Civil Code, drafted in 1896 and promulgated in 1900, which is still the law of Germany." And then you set out portions of the code, do you not? A. That is right.

1207 Q. And then at folio 101 you say:

"I am informed that with part of the proceeds of the securities described the deed of gift Exhibit R Mr. Fritz von Opel purchased shares of a Swiss Corporation, Uebersee Finanz-Korporation A. G. If this be the fact, I am of opinion that under German law the above-described rights and obligations based on the reserved usufruct would attach to the Uebersee Finanz-Korporation shares in the same manner as if these shares had been described in the deed of gift itself."

Isn't that a clear, unequivocal, and flat statement that provided that the proceeds of the Opel shares went into Uebersee, you believe that the parents Opel have a present usufructuary right in the Uebersee Finanz-Korporation shares? A. If the agreement had been carried out as I thought it had been.

Q. But you don't say anything about if it had been carried out. A. I say, if this be the fact, what you are just talking, speaking about now is, I am informed that the proceeds were, and then I say if this be the fact, I am of the opinion that under German law the above-described rights and obligations would have followed.

Q. But the only condition which you leave open as to if this is the fact is whether the proceeds had been 1208 placed in Uebersee. A. Right.

Q. You don't say a word, do you, about "and if delivery has been made to the parents?" A. Well, I was under the impression that that had happened.

Q. You regard yourself as a careful man, do you not? A. I certainly do.

Q. And you have spent many years in the practice of law, have you not? A. That's correct.

Q. And you know what an affidavit is, do you not? A. I think I do.

Q. Do you swear that something is a fact merely because you have an impression that it is a fact? A. Well, at that time I was under that—was really convinced that that was the situation.

Q. And that was because you were told that fact, is it not? A. I would not know at this moment how else I could have known it.

Q. You would not have sworn that the parents Opel had the usufruct unless you had been told they had the usufruct, would you? A. I didn't swear they had it.

1209 Q. You swore they had it if the proceeds had been— A. If it had been carried out.

Q. No, that is not what you swore, is it? A. Yes, sir. Well, that follows from this, that that is what I swore, I would say. Well, that's definitely what I meant to say, because that is the law.

Q. Would it be fair, Mr. Stansfield, to judge your standards of candor and accuracy by saying that we could examine—the Court could read this affidavit, and then determine whether a fair reading of this affidavit is that the usufruct was in the parents? A. Personally, I don't think that I was asked to make an affidavit that the usufruct was in the parents, but to give a legal statement of what the consequences of a usufruct would be if they were.

Q. I wasn't asking you what you were asked to do. Won't you admit that, particularly, an American Government official could reasonably be expected to read from this statement that the usufruct had been created by delivery of the shares of Uebersee to his father's agent? A. I don't at this time recollect that, Mr. Burling, but I say that from reading my own affidavit, I must have been under the impression that it had been carried out, my first agreement had been carried out. I didn't think that was a question of doubt at that time.

1210 Q. When did you arrive in Washington? A. Yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Burling: That is all I have.

Examination by Plaintiff

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Mr. Stansfield, I wish to ask you a question concerning a statement which is contained in what is entitled "A preliminary statement of the Defendant's memorandum in support of a request that Manfred Stansfield be called as a witness of the Court." I am reading from page 4. The statement reads as follows:

"Within a week prior to the commencement of the trial of this case, counsel for the defendant have received a signed statement of a person residing in Germany, which statement was obtained by defendant's investigators in Germany. This statement reads in part as follows:" —and this is quoted from the statement—

"'I remember quite definitely that one day before 1933 Wilhelm von Opel told me, "I cannot trust anybody. Wronker-Flatow has prepared a somewhat crooked contract for us, and now he is blackmailing me. The scoundrel has received 50,000 reichsmarks as a loan and now he does not want to pay them back but wants them as a gift, and I can't do a thing, otherwise I will be in a fix."'"

That is the end of the quote. I wish to further 1211 advise you that the day after this memorandum was filed with the Court we were advised pursuant to the instructions given by the Court that that statement from which I have just read was attributed to one Erich Deku. I ask you if you know Mr. Deku, or if you know anything about that statement? A. Well, the first thing, whether I knew Mr. Deku, I met him, I believe, once for about a half a minute when Geheimrat von Opel passed through the hotel lounge and said, "I would like you to shake hands with Mr. Deku." I couldn't say for certain that the first name was the right name, but I remember the name Deku.

Q. Now will you answer the second part of the question with reference to whether or not you have any knowledge of such a statement. A. This statement for me is so outrageous that I feel a little bit embarrassed that I have to answer such a question. I never drew any crooked agreement for anybody, and certainly not for Wilhelm von Opel. I never asked Wilhelm von Opel to make me a gift. Whenever I discussed the loan at the later date with Wilhelm von Opel, I told him if he had to sue me because the Nazis would make him sue me, I would set off my services against it. And I never at any time gave any basis for such a statement by Wilhelm von Opel.

Q. Mr. Stansfield, the statement which I have just read to you is alleged to have been made, and I quote, "One day before 1933." I wish to ask you what were your relations, what was the status of your relations?

1212

The Court: Do you consider this in evidence?

Mr. Ingoldsby: The statement?

The Court: This memorandum.

Mr. Ingoldsby: No, I do not.

The Court: Has Mr. Deku testified to it?

Mr. Ingoldsby: No, he has not, Your Honor.

The Court: Why do we rebut it then? Are we not just taking up time?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Possibly. I simply wanted to set aside any inference.

The Court: I don't draw inferences from memoranda sent to me by counsel, unless they are in evidence under oath here. I don't want to open up a long line of testimony here as to which there is absolutely none at the moment.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Very well, I will withdraw any further questions on that.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Mr. Stansfield, you testified in your cross examination concerning the unique position which you occupied with General Motors and the Opel brothers at the time of the 1929 negotiations. I wish to ask you to state who in General Motors was familiar with your somewhat dual capacity. A. Definitely John Thomas Smith; I believe I could say everybody who had directly to deal with these, with the negotiations and everything concerned; also, in the Opel family, everybody knew that I was acting in that double capacity.

1213

Q. Who would you say in General Motors was concerned with this transaction other than John Thomas Smith? A.

Are we talking now about the first transaction? Or are we talking about this deal here about the stock, the gift?

Q. I am talking about the first transaction—I believe the year is 1929 when General Motors and the Opel works were conducting negotiations for the over-all purchase of the Opel works. A. Well, my contact on all legal matters was with John Thomas Smith.

Q. Did you have anything to do with Mr. Alfred P. Sloan at that time? A. Yes, he was in the negotiations, himself, and I met him off and on.

Q. Was he aware of what you were doing? A. In what I was doing in general he was fully aware?

Q. I will ask you if there was any reason for keeping the negotiations between the General Motors and the Opel works secret in 1929. A. From September or October, 1928, to about March, 1929, it was very definitely in the interest of the Opel brothers to keep it 1214 secret, because it was a possibility that General Motors did not accept the option, and it would have hurt the standing of the Opel brothers, of the Opel firm if it had been known that General Motors had negotiated to take over the Opel firm but turned it down after investigation.

Q. Were efforts made therefore to keep the entire negotiations secret? A. They went very far. I mean they went so far that on the day that I drafted the agreement for the option I wrote that whole agreement both in English and in German by hand, and the German part was dictated by Rechtsanwalt Hachenburg to my wife, who is not a typewriter, but helped out—does a very poor job on that. And the English was written by the managing director of the General Motors Gmbh, so that no outsider would hear anything about it. And it happened that during the full six months nobody knew anything about this agreement, it never came up.

Q. I wish to direct your attention to the period of time around October 5, 1931, at the time the gift agreement was signed. I will ask you if any efforts were made, either by you or by any of the von Opels, to keep that agreement secret. A. It was very important to keep that agreement secret if we didn't want to defeat the purpose. There was a large amount involved, and the consequence, the effect of a large agreement like that on the lawmakers

1215 might have had quite some influence on the new laws, and it might have been made retroactive if it had come out prematurely.

Q. Did you personally fear that possibility? A. I was just as much—I don't get the English word—I mean aware of that at that moment as everybody else was. It was very much in our mind. In fact, it was one of the reasons why no notary public was called in.

Q. Are you able to state at this time, Mr. Stansfield, what the general feeling was among the German people in 1929 when it first became known that negotiations for the sale of the Opel plant had been concluded? A. There was very much resentment, and that resentment was naturally stirred up by competition, and trying to say that this was now a foreign corporation, and people should buy German cars, and so on, so that we had an uphill fight to overcome that. And one of the statements that we made there to the public, which was true at that time, that there was at least as much German capital in the firm as there was in other automobile plants, and in addition we could state that all the material was manufactured in Germany, that German labor and everything helped, so we had a lot of sentiment there which was always stirred up again by competition. We had to keep that always in our mind.

Q. Did this situation enter into your considerations regarding secrecy at the time that the gift agree-1216 ment was made in 1931? A. We were all the time very much aware of that situation, because it always flared up again.

Q. I would like to ask you, Mr. Stansfield, concerning your testimony regarding statements made to Mr. Kiefer or other FBI agents. First of all I would like to ask you, how many times have you been interviewed by the FBI in connection with this case? A. I would not like to be pinned down, but already while Mr. Von Opel was—during the war.

Q. Interned? A. Was interned FBI men came to talk about this, and I talked about it half a dozen times. But I wouldn't like to give the exact number. It could be five times. It impressed me as being rather often repeating the same things.

Q. On how many occasions has Mr. Kiefer come to see you? A. If I am correct, I think I saw Mr. Kiefer twice. It could be three times, but I once saw him at the offices. But at least twice that I know for certain.

Q. And did he come to your office, or did you go to his office? A. I know for certain that once he came to my house, not to the office, and once on arrangement over the phone I came to his office, downtown office.

1217 Q. Do you recall the last time that you talked to Mr. Kiefer? A. The last time I talked to him very shortly, it was only a few minutes, and I think it was practically to the effect, as he now was talking directly about the loan, that I said that I did not want to discuss the loan, I had so many things to set off against the loan, but I didn't feel that—

Q. May I interrupt you there, when you are speaking of the loan, are you talking about the first occasion or the second occasion when you spoke to Mr. Kiefer? A. I think on the second occasion that was when he mentioned that.

Q. And where did that conversation take place? A. In my home.

Q. In your office? A. In my home.

Q. And was Mr. Kiefer alone or was someone else with him? A. I think there was somebody else with him.

Q. And did you see Mr. Kiefer or the other agent who was with him make any notes on the conversation? A. No, I did not. I always wondered about that, why they don't take notes, and why they don't afterwards present it to the party at some date to confirm that that is what they have said.

Q. I want to direct your attention to the first occasion when you discussed this matter with Mr. Kiefer.
1218 First, are you able to tell us approximately when that was? A. Quite some time ago. I would have a hard time of fixing it at this moment.

Q. Could you give us the approximate year? A. I think it was last year.

Q. Last year? A. Not 1948, but 1947. It could have been even—well, the date must be there, it could have been earlier.

Q. 1947 or earlier? A. That's correct, that is my recollection.

The Court: Are you going to be some little time further?

Mr. Ingoldsby: No, Your Honor, about five minutes.

The Court: Are you going to question after that?

Mr. Burling: Nothing has come up yet, Your Honor.

The Court: All right. Go ahead, then, see if you can get through.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. I want to ask you if you ever had any conversation with any agent of the FBI, Mr. Kiefer or otherwise, regarding the Government's possible assertion of a claim for $20,000 against you as successor in the interest of the property of Wilhelm von Opel. A. I didn't get the last part of that.

Mr. Ingoldsby (To the Reporter): Will you read it.

(Accordingly, the pending question was read by the reporter.)

1219 The Witness: I don't recollect that that was stated that way. It was always when we talked about whether I owed Wilhelm von Opel a certain amount.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. I am going to ask you to state very briefly, Mr. Stansfield, the conditions under which the matter of the $20,000 loan from Wilhelm von Opel to you first arose. A. After I had acted for Wilhelm von Opel and the brother, Fritz Opel, in the whole negotiations and after the negotiations, the brothers felt I had saved them a lot of money, and on account of their confidence in me they had not called in other lawyers to create additional expenses. So they felt they wanted to pay me at that time.

And I told them at that time that I did not want any payment because—I had two reasons why I didn't want them to pay me at that time. One was that I wanted to keep my independence, and the other was that most of it would have been taken away from me in taxes, because I was making a lot of money at that time.

On the other hand, I had some need for some capital, because I was moving my house over, I had a little while ago I had a very extensive payments in connection with my divorce, which was over twenty years back but at that time it was quite fresh, and I had other personal matters that I wanted to settle.

In addition, I wanted to buy an interest that was 1220 offered to me from General Motors in the Management Securities Corporation, for which I had to invest a certain capital. It was over $10,000.

So I told Geheimrat, although I would not at this moment accept any payment for the reasons stated, I would be, I would accept a loan of $20,000. I said we could leave the question of payment for any services rendered open during the years, how we were going to handle that, but very definitely I wanted it set up as a loan at that time, because otherwise I would have been involved in taxes, and so on.

For that reason I wanted to keep that open. In fact, it was my intention to be in a situation, and that was also the understanding, that I could pay it back any time I wanted to.

The Management Securities, my participation in there, would have brought me in 1936, if I hadn't left Germany, and if the Hitler situation hadn't arrived, well over a hundred thousand dollars in stock of General Motors. That was the minimum, but it might have been twice, the double amount, so that the payment would have been very easy for me.

But all conditions changed afterwards, so we went back to that, that I said, now, you could not expect me to do all these things for nothing, and although I like to pay it back, I am afraid under the circumstances it will be very hard for me, and he said, as I have stated, it is a loan, and we will have to keep it that way.

1221 I said, "You can keep it that way."

He said, "I'm not going to ask you for payment of the loan, except I am forced by the Nazis, or conditions"—we were talking them about the Nazis—"to sue you."

I said, "Well, in that case, I am going to set off against all the services I have rendered to you."

Does that answer you?

Q. Was that conclusion which you have just stated agreeable? A. Very definitely. I don't think he ever intended to ask for it, and I don't think he ever after things had changed the way they had changed, expected value of the loan at any amount to himself.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I have no further questions.

The Court: You are excused, Mr. Stansfield.

(Witness excused.)

The Court: Let me speak to you gentlemen at the bench.

(Accordingly, counsel approached the bench, following which the noon recess was taken, from 12:40 p.m. until 2:00 p.m.)

1222 AFTERNOON SESSION

(The trial was resumed at 2 o'clock p.m. at the expiration of the luncheon recess.)

Thereupon, HANS FRANKENBERG was called as a witness and, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Will you please state your name? A. Hans Frankenberg.

Q. Where do you reside, Dr. Frankenberg? A. I reside in New York at the Ritz Carleton Hotel.

Q. And of what country are you a citizen? A. I am a citizen of this country.

Q. Of the United States? A. Yes.

Q. Doctor, it has been stated by counsel for the plaintiff that you had planned to make a trip to Europe on the 16th of this month; is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. And it has been further stated that your plans were postponed until Saturday, which is the 18th, I believe. Is that correct. A. That is correct. They were post-1223 poned because I was waiting for a business associate who was late in his return from Europe.

Q. Doctor, did you have any conversation with counsel for the plaintiff, Mr. Ingoldsby, Mr. Boland, and myself, last week with respect to your information about this matter? A. I did.

Q. And would you state what the conclusion was at that time as to whether or not you would appear as a witness?

Mr. Burling: I object. The witness should not testify as to what my friends concluded, if they wished him to testify.

Mr. Gallagher: All right; strike the question.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. As the result of that conversation, will you state what you did? A. I went to New York again and had a reservation for Saturday morning.

Q. Did you receive a phone call from me on Friday? A. I did.

Q. And is it not a fact that I advised you certain statements had been made, questions put to Mr. von Opel, on Friday afternoon, and as the result thereof I desired you to plan to appear as a witness? A. That is correct.

Q. What is your present occupation, Dr. Frankenberg?

A. I am a banker.

1224 Q. Can you state with what bank you are associated? A. I am associated in New York with the firm of Arnold & Bleichroeder, a firm in Switzerland connected with the firm of Adler & Company.

Q. For how many years have you been in the banking business, Doctor? A. I was in the banking business, oh, for prior to the outbreak of World War I.

Q. You have been associated with banks since that time? A. Oh, no. At that time I was, I used to be a banker in Frankfort.

Q. Subsequently you were associated with Adler & Company; is that correct? A. The firm in Frankfort was liquidated in '30, and I then joined these friends of mine, who at that time took an interest in the firm of Adler & Company, Zurich.

Q. Have you been associated with the Uebersee Corporation in any capacity? A. Yes.

Q. In what capacity, Doctor? A. I was and I still am a director of this.

Q. Now, is the Uebersee Finanz-Korporation the only client of the bank with which you are associated? A. Of course not.

Q. There are many clients besides Uebersee, Doctor?

A. Yes. I would say, it was a very valuable client
1225 of ours, but it took a small part of my time, as I was busy in many other fields.

Q. Are you familiar with the books and records of the Uebersee Corporation? A. Well, I am not too familiar with it. The bookkeeping was done by Mr. Gong. Of course, I received the balance sheets to be approved.

Q. What was in general the nature of the work that you did for Uebersee? A. I was in general the financial adviser of Uebersee.

Q. Can you state whether or not Uebersee followed standard investment and management practices? A. No, at least, not from a banker's viewpoint.

Uebersee, according to the wishes of Mr. Fritz von Opel always engaged in, to a very great extent, in industrial propositions, which I didn't consider to be very liquid.

Q. Now, let me ask you, Dr. Frankenberg: Did you ever direct Mr. Fritz von Opel as to how he was to act in his investments? A. I could not even have done so because if I wanted to—

Mr. Ingoldsby (interposing): A little louder, please.

A. (Continued) Mr. Fritz von Opel handled the investment business quite on his own. I had no interest.

Of course, he told me after he made investments,
1226 what it was about, and I had no, practically no say in this matter.

Q. Did Mr. Wilhelm von Opel ever ask you to be his agent or representative? A. No, he never did.

Q. Did you ever serve as Wilhelm von Opel's agent, as a matter of fact? A. I never did.

Q. Did Wilhelm von Opel ever give you any direction as to what you were to do in your capacity as director for Uebersee Corporation? A. Most certainly not.

Q. Now, where were you during the war years, Dr. Frankenberg? A. During the war? I came to this country in May, 1940.

Q. Did you remain here after that and during the war? A. Yes, until after the war, except for two trips I made I made to Colombia, South America.

Q. And you were not back in Europe after? A. No.

Q. To your knowledge, did the Uebersee Finanz-Korporation do any business with any enemy or ally of an enemy during the war? A. I don't think so.

1227 Q. Are you acquainted with H. Mason Houghland? A. I met Mr. Houghland once, or maybe twice, but only for a very short time.

Q. Are you acquainted with Mr. B. F. Crittenden? A. I met Mr. Crittenden. I went down to Louisiana in the year 1937, together with Fritz von Opel, and at that time I met him there.

Q. Now, on Friday last, Dr. Frankenberg, Mr. Burling asked Mr. von Opel several questions and received several replies.

The questions were with respect to certain purported conversations in which you had participated. I am going to read from the record and ask you if you will state or give your comment thereon.

At page 1032 of the record, Mr. Burling, in speaking about Mr. Crittenden, asked Mr. von Opel the following question and elicited the following answer:

"Question: Did you ever spend two weeks in Zurich with Crittenden, in the same hotel?—and I will identify the hotel as the Baur au Lac?

"Answer: I think the Crittenden family traveled through Switzerland, and it is possible I met them in their traveling.

"Question: You spent two weeks in a series of business discussions with Crittenden in Zurich, did you not, 1228. at the offices of Hans Frankenberg?

"Answer: No."

Now, I will ask you at this point: Did you spend two weeks in business discussions with Mr. Crittenden in Zurich in the year 1938 or '37, Dr. Frankenberg? A. I remember that Mr. Crittenden with his wife and also, I think, it was Mr. Bayer, went on a visit to Switzerland.

Maybe it was '37, I could not tell you, but most certainly I didn't carry on business negotiations with Mr. Crittenden. There was no reason to do so. That is all.

Q. I will now read from page 1051 of the record. Mr. Burling was talking about a merger of some oil companies, and in the course of the questioning, he asked the following questions and elicited the following answers, and this is directed to Mr. Fritz von Opel:

"Question: Did you and Frankenberg not decide to call a conference in Zurich on this subject, and did you not decide to call Crittenden over to Zurich to discuss this?

"Answer: There was no need."

I will ask you, Dr. Frankenberg, did you and Mr. von Opel decide that there should be a conference on this subject in Zurich, and as a result call Mr. Crittenden to Zurich? A. I could not imagine it should have happened because there was no reason I could remember 1229 Q. Then at page 1053, discussing the same topic, Mr. Burling asked the following question of Mr. von Opel:

"Question: Is it not a fact that the discussions of merger went on in Zurich for about two weeks?

"Answer: That sounds rather fantastic to me, Mr. Burling, because if I wanted to merge, all I would have to do is to give the orders."

I will ask you, Dr. Frankenberg, again: Were there discussions of a merger with Crittenden which went on in Zurich for about two weeks? A. Really, I don't even get the idea of the statement because there were several oil companies down in Louisiana, all of the stock owned by Uebersee Finanz Korporation.

Now, why should we discuss a merger of those companies in Zurich. Such merger could only be found of any interest from an American tax viewpoint.

Really, I could not see anything in it.

Q. Now, at page 1054, in the discussion of the same subject, Mr. Burling asked this question:

"Question: During these discussions was it not said that a million dollars additional capital should be put into the merged companies?

"Answer: That was what Mr. Crittenden wanted. He was quite a great spender in refining.

"Question: Didn't you and Frankenberg say that 1230 you thought that you would do that?"

Did you make any such statement to Mr. Crittenden, Dr. Frankenberg? A. I would be in favor of that.

Q. Yes? A. I really know—it was, in my opinion, it was already too much money invested anyway in this picture.

Q. On page 1057, Mr. Burling asked this question of Mr. von Opel:

"Question: Is it not a fact that Frankenberg told you that he, not you, had had a talk in the afternoon before this dinner, with Crittenden, and that he, Frankenberg, had told Crittenden to go ahead and consolidate the oil companies; is that not the fact?"

Did you make any such statement to Mr. Crittenden? A. It sounds to me more or less fantastic because I wasn't in charge of this.

Q. Your answer is that you didn't make any such statement? A. No; I could not possibly have.

Q. Now, going to page 1059, so that you will understand what was being discussed, Mr. Burling stated or questioned Mr. von Opel, and speaking of Mr. Houghland:

"Question: Did he confer with you and Frankenberg at the Plaza in the fall of '37?"

1231 And then the answer: "That is different, that is possible."

"Question: The fact is, is it not, in 1937 Houghland had a proposal to set up a series of small subsidiaries, to run smaller-sized gasoline stations?"

That was the topic, and we go to page 1060, and at page 1060, here is the question and answer at that point:

"Question: Is it not a fact that you met him at his hotel and walked with him to the Plaza Hotel, and while you, during the walk he outlined the proposal to you?

"Answer: That is probable.

"Question: And is it not the fact that when you reached the Plaza you talked to Dr. Frankenberg's room, and he came down, and you introduced Houghland to Frankenberg, and then the three of you went into the Palm Court and had a drink? "A. That is possible, if Dr. Frankenberg lived at this time in the Plaza, and we called for him there, that is possible.

"Question: And is it not a fact that before you had reached Frankenberg you told Houghland that he would have to make a full explanation of the proposal to Frankenberg?

"Answer: No, Mr. Burling.

"Question: The answer is no?

"Answer: No.

"Question: Is it not the fact that at the Plaza

1232 Houghland made a full explanation of his proposal, and Frankenberg said he would not accept it?"

Did you make any such statement to Mr. Houghland? A. As far as I can recall, Mr. Houghland never asked me about any sort of business proposition because he did that exclusively with Mr. von Opel.

Mr. Gallagher: That is all.

Mr. Burling: I wish to renew my application for at least twenty-four hours in which to prepare proper cross examination.

The Court: I do not think I can give you that, Mr. Burling.

Mr. Burling: May I be heard on it?

I am not sure I made myself clear. Plaintiffs indicated by their answers to the interrogatories that they were not calling this witness. He was an obvious one and his name goes all the way through from '31 to date.

I did not prepare myself to cross examine, and we were then told he was sailing for Europe. My friends intended to surprise me, because they didn't call me on the telephone.

I worked on Saturday and Sunday on something which was coming up in January, 1949.

If I knew he was to be here, I could have prepared some notes.

The Court: I just let him testify on the Uebersee 1233 Korporation. You are thoroughly prepared in this case. I have tried to give you every courtesy I can.

Mr. Burling: Thank you, Your Honor.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Dr. Frankenberg, you stated you are a United States citizen? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of what country were you a citizen before that? A. I am a born Austrian.

Q. Of what country were you a citizen before you became a United States citizen? A. I was a citizen of Haiti.

Q. What is your position with Arnold & Bleichroeder? A. The Arnold family are very old friends of mine, as a matter of fact, since about forty-five years or so, and in my youth.

Now, at the time they took the interest in the Swiss firm named Adler & Company, that was around '31. I joined them in this picture.

Q. In other words, the Arnold family controlled Adler & Company; is that right? A. That is correct.

Q. And they also controlled and represented an important part of Arnold & Bleichroeder; is that correct? A.
1234 That is right.

Q. And you have been with the Arnold interest then since 1931; is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. What position did you hold in the firm here in New York? A. None. I just have my office there.

Q. Are you employed by anyone? A. No. I am to a very small extent a shareholder.

Q. Would it be fair to say that you represent financial interests of Arnold, that you act for them? A. Yes, I tried to do business for them, but I am not employed, and I have no say. At least, I am not an officer of the company. They ask for my advice and so on.

Q. From what do you receive compensation? What do you live on? A. Well, at the time I am doing some business of my own, and besides that, I get some from time to time—that was before the war—I lived on Adler.

Q. On Adler & Company? A. Yes.

Q. But since the war hasn't Arnold & Bleichroeder paid you anything? A. Not in the form of any salary.

Q. Well, in any way? A. Let me see. Just for a 1235 couple of years, they gave me a sort of bonus out of the income because I, in turn, gave them business.

Q. The Arnold interests, whether Adler & Company or Arnold & Bleichroeder, have made extensive advances to Fritz von Opel and his wife, have they not? A. The Arnold bank?

Q. Didn't the same Arnold financial interests, as a matter of fact, to your knowledge, advance money to Mr. and Mrs. Fritz von Opel since '43? A. No.

Q. Do you know whether it is or is not the fact that one of the members of the Arnold family personally advanced such money since 1943? A. No.

Q. You are socially well acquainted with Mr. Fritz von Opel, are you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mrs. von Opel was released from internment in 1943, was she not? A. '43 or '44; '43.

Q. And all of the assets of Uebersee Finanz Korporation were invested in '42, were they not?

Do you know what money Mrs. von Opel has been using to live on since '43?

1236 Mr. Gallagher: We object.

The Court: If it is related to him, it may be admissible.

I will permit it, if he can trace it back to him, any interest he has in it.

The Witness: May I answer this question?

I know.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Yes. Recite what you know about it. A. I personally advanced some money to Mrs. von Opel.

Q. And he was released in May of 1945, and do you know what money he has been using to live on since then? A. Not entirely, but I advanced certain amounts of money to Mrs. Von Opel, and I assume she, in turn, gave part of it, at least, to her husband.

Q. Now, you know that Mr. Gallagher's partner, Mr. Conner, and Dr. Heinrich Kronstein, made a trip to Europe in connection with this case in '47?

Did you advance the expenses of that trip? A. No, but I presume Mrs. von Opel did.

Q. What is the total that you have advanced to Mrs. von Opel? A. I think it is about $25,000.

Q. You know, do you not, that neither Fritz von Opel nor Mrs. Fritz von Opel have any assets outside of Ger-1237 many, other than this claim they may have in this case?

Mr. Gallagher: We object to any inquiry as to what assets Mr. von Opel may have. I don't see the relevancy.

The Court: No.

Mr. Burling: The witness, I assume, has a $25,000 interest in the outcome of this suit.

He has no chance of being repaid unless the plaintiffs prevail.

The court: You mean, he did not have any other means to pay him; is that it?

Mr. Burling: If they don't win, he will not get back his money.

The Court: I will let you go into that.

The Witness: What is the question?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. You understand that neither Fritz von Opel nor his wife have any assets outside of Germany, other than whatever claim they may have in this instant lawsuit? A. Well, after all, he has a very valuable house in St. Moritz, and they may have some others. I don't know.

Q. You testified about your knowledge of the books and records of the plaintiff corporation, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. And you yourself made a selection of documents from these books and records for use in this very trial; did you not? A. I made a selection of the books?

Q. Yes. A. As far as I understand, all the books were produced for evidence here, and I was instrumental in having done it because I was requested.

Q 'But at an earlier date, didn't you go through the books and pick out special papers and send them to plaintiffs' counsel? A. Yes; that may be the case. If you show me the evidence you are talking about, I will be glad to testify about that and answer the question.

Q. Will you speak louder? A. I am very sorry. I have a bad throat condition.

Q. What did you say? A. If I know to which files or books you refer, I could answer this question more preciely.

Q. Well, do you recall that you went over the books and selected some to be sent to plaintiffs' counsel over here? A. No, that wasn't this way. At the request at that time of Mr. Conner, we went over all the books, including the year 1936, I think, and I didn't pick them out.

Q. In the middle of August, '47, did you or did you not bring over some books and records? A. I really 1239 would not remember.

Mr. Burling: Now, at this time I request to produce from the books and records a white sheet contained in the file called City Bank & Trust Company, a white sheet which recites on its face that Dr. Frankenberg has selected certain documents.

May I have that, please?

Mr. Gallagher: I don't know if we have it. If there is any great moment about what you are trying to establish, I just have a vague recollection about it. Of course, I wasn't in the case at that time, but I think possibly Dr. Frankenberg did have the files and books from '31 to '36 pulled, and we came in with them. It was Mr. Conner who got in touch with him or Gang.

The Court: Did you find the white sheet?

Mr. Burling: It has been removed. It was in this file. If I don't have it, I will have to call Mr. Laufer to testify.

Mr. Gallagher: Where was it? In this file?

Mr. Laufer: Yes.

Mr. Gallagher: It still might be. I will look for it.

Mr. Burling: For the record, I am referring to the file named Uebersee Finanz Korporation, A. G. and having this title, City Bank & Farmers Trust Company.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, in addition to being a director, were you

1240 not also managing director of the plaintiff corporation? A. Well, you may put it this way, if you want to: That refers only to technical matters and financial matters. The policy, investment policy, was made by Mr. Fritz von Opel.

Q. I want to read to you from an affidavit of Mr. Fritz von Opel, and I am reading from page 52 of the Gold case record:

"In April, 1931, when I was employed in Antwerp as aforesaid, I learned through Dr. Frankenberg, an old acquaintance of my father's, then employed in Zurich as general manager of a banking corporation known as Adler & Company, A. G., that the owners of the stock of Uebersee Finanz Korporation, A. G., would be willing to sell it to me."

Were you an old friend of Wilhelm von Opel in '31 or an old acquaintance? A. An acquaintance; yes.

Q. I want to read from another portion, reading at folio 165, and this is Fritz von Opel speaking now:

"I said to him, and he agreed, that, if the option were exercised on the stock of Uebersee Finanz Korporation, A. G., it might not be necessary to form a new corporation, but that the Uebersee Finanz Korporation, A. G., might serve as the holding company originally contemplated between us. My father asked me to be sure that the details were so arranged as to protect his and the other interests in the proceeds of the deed of gift, 1241 Exhibit R, and suggested that Dr. Frankenberg should become managing director of the holding company. The option having been exercised in the manner above described, I went to Zurich and obtained from Uebersee Finanz Korporation, A. G.,—"

Mr. Gallagher (Interposing): May I interrupt to let him have a copy of it so that he can follow?

Mr. Burling: Yes.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I stopped at the words Uebersee Finanz Korporation, A. G.

"Under date of January 13, 1932, a power of attorney authorizing me to sign for the corporation, employing the form furnished me as above stated by Mr. Sammis. A true copy of this power of attorney is hereto attached marked Exhibit U. At the same time I had a conference with Dr. Frankenberg, in which I asked him if he would be willing to serve as a member of the board and managing director of Uebersee Finanz Korporation, A. G. He stated that he would do so."

Now, skipping to folio 174, page 58, at the bottom of the page:

"I also frequently consulted with Dr. Frankenberg as managing director of the corporation regarding its investments, especially the corporation's investment in the stock 1242 of Spur Distributing Company, Inc., amounting to $440,871.44."

Will you now look at page 61, folio 183.

"In these corporations, Uebersee during 1933 invested an aggregate of $756,000. Dr. Frankenberg and I intended on behalf of Uebersee, greatly to increase its investments in these oil companies," and so on.

Now, did you see Fritz von Opel's affidavit in 1935? A. No; I saw it only much later.

Q. Is his recital of his dealings with you a correct one? A. Well, of course, he told me about it, as I stated before, about the investments he made.

As a matter of fact, the Spur stock was acquired two years before, and perhaps in 1933, something like that.

Also, these first oil properties had been acquired at that time by Mr. Fritz von Opel, and due to his presence in the United States, he discovered this very different financial situation, in a number of these companies, which were partly, especially in the later years, not very satisfactory.

The Spur proved to be different, a very good one.

Q. All I asked was: In your opinion, Dr. Frankenberg, are these portions of Mr. von Opel's affidavit, which I read to you, a correct statement of your relation to him and to Uebersee? A. Maybe Mr. von Opel could it that it has been this way. He is a very temperamental man, and 1243 so maybe, so he made these investments primarily without consulting me, but later on reported to me about it, asking my opinion.

Q. Well, did he ask you to become general manager and did you agree to do so? A. I did.

Q. And you did become general manager; is that right? A. Only in charge of technical and financial matters.

Q. What other matters was Uebersee involved in, besides technical and financial matters? A. In investments.

Q. Investments are not financial; is that your statement? A. I refer to the word "financial." The way I meant it was in loans, financing the company, and so forth.

Q. Will you look at folio 186, please?

Look first at 185, and I am reading from Fritz von Opel's affidavit again:

"I returned to Switzerland in December, 1932. I went to Zurich and discussed with Dr. Frankenberg, as managing director of Uebersee Finanz Korporation, A. G., the investments which I had made and was contemplating for the corporation, and he approved of them."

Is that correct? A. He just said he made the investments.

Q. And you approved of them? A. Of course, I 1244 approved of the.

Q. Will you also further down the page, halfway through folio 186, look at:

"I discussed the situation with Dr. Frankenberg both by telephone and face to face, and was told by him to convert the cash holdings of the corporation into gold or foreign exchange."

Did you give Fritz von Opel instructions to convert cash into gold or foreign exchange? A. I didn't give him instructions, but I remember in this case that I was in favor of him investing this money, either in foreign exchange on the Swiss standard, or maybe in gold because two years ago the pound sterling was devalued, and in due course the dollar was devalued, and later on the Swiss franc was devalued.

So at that time I was of the opinion that the devaluation of the dollar was imminent.

Q. Well, the question is: Did you tell Fritz von Opel to convert dollars into gold? A. I could not say whether I told him so.

Q. Is it fair to say you told him to do so? A. Maybe I gave him this advice.

Q. What is the organization called, I believe in Portuguese, Sociedad Monte Franco? A. It is a Brazil 1245 corporation.

Q. Will you state what you know about it? A. It is owned by two brothers of the Arnold family living in Brazil.

Q. Was it not organized by you? A. No.

Q. Will you agree that your name is translated literally—

Mr. Gallagher (Interposing): We cannot see what the Brazilian corporation has to do with the situation. It has no bearing to Uebersee.

Mr. Burling: I will state what I expect to prove, if it is an objection on relevancy.

The testimony already is, and if it has not been introduced, we will introduce it, and we shall prove that Mr. von Opel said to a witness, who will be called here, that the Opel family were very clever, and that in the event of war with the United States, it would turn out that ownership of Uebersee was in Swiss hands, and it was stated if Switzerland became involved, it would turn out that the ownership was in Latin American hands.

We propose to further prove that the 36,900 shares of Harvard Brewery stock, which is one of the companies, we shall show was held in an account for Mrs. von Opel, held in Sociedad Monte Franco.

We want to show that and corroborate the state-
1246 ment that Mr. von Opel was also using Latin American holding companies to conceal German ownership, and, at least, the 36,000 shares of Harvard Brewery were in Sociedad Monte Franco at one time, almost exactly at the same time as the conversation was had, as we will prove, from our witness.

Mr. Ingoldsby: We will stipulate that certainly the shares of Harvard stock were in this company at this particular time, and that the property belonged to the wife. In other words, we will agree and stipulate, but I submit we want to know the relevancy and competency. If this has that purpose, we would like to know the relevancy.

Mr. Burling: This is cross examination, Your Honor. I don't know all about this, and I want to find out by the domination of the witness over the corporation, and the negotiations with Fritz von Opel, whether he was using the Brazilian company as a cloak.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Our contention is undisputed that there is no property of Fritz von Opel or his wife, with the exception of the Harvard shares which have just been mentioned, which were, however, in the South American country.

My general objection relates to this, that it is not a correct form for any searching investigation as to where any assets might be.

The Court: Well, is this an asset of the corporation in which he is a managing officer?

1247 Mr. Ingoldsby: No, this is not.

The 36,000 shares of Harvard Brewery, it is my understanding, is the property of Martha von Opel, or Margo von Opel, the wife of Fritz.

Mr. Burling: And I dispute that. I deny she had any assets of such size, and whereas they might have been carried in her name, they were the property of Uebersee

Finance Korporation, and I submit it is relevant to show and explore the South American holding of these assets.

The Court: If this man is an officer and knows about it, is it immaterial?

Mr. Ingoldsby: This relates to the 39,000 shares of Harvard stock, and it would not be worth over $39,000.

The Court: But he is talking about the procedure of the corporation.

I would have a simple time in ruling on this if he was called in regular sequence, but it is hard to anticipate the significance of his testimony when it is not in order.

I will take up a motion to strike at the proper time.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I'll let it stand that this should not be used as an investigation to see whether any additional assets might be found, or anything of that kind.

Mr. Burling: That is not the purpose. We have title to them.

1248 By Mr. Burling:

Q. Do you know what shares of Harvard Brewery are currently quoted on the Curb Exchange today? A. They have reached a new low of about $1.25.

Q. So at current prices, the 36,000 shares would be worth about $50,000? A. Mostly.

Q. Will you agree with me that the word Monte Franco, either in Portuguese or Spanish, is a literal translation of your name? A. I would.

Q. Did you have anything to do with setting up this commercial corporation in Sao Paulo? A. No. I can explain it.

Q. Please do. A. In May, 1940, when I left Switzerland, the invasion of Switzerland seemed to be imminent.

At that time the Brazilian branch of the family who were caught in Germany with a fortune didn't want to get caught again, and they wanted certain assets held by Adler transferred, held in New York for transfer to Brazil.

I was on the boat, and on my arrival in New York, I was informed that they founded the corporation called Monte Franco, because they wanted the assets, and I was in charge partly, however, sir.

Q. Can you explain how the 36,900 shares of Har-
1249 vard Brewery came to be held by Sociedad Monte Franco? A. Yes.

Q. Will you do so? A. The 36,600 shares, among many securities, were transferred from Adler accounts to Monte Franco, for the purpose I just pointed out, and by mistake these 36,000 shares, which were the property of Mrs. von Opel, went with other assets down to Brazil because they weren't held in behalf of Mrs. von Opel, I think, in New York, but for Adler & Company, and after the mistake was cleared up, the shares went back and were as a consequence taken by the Alien Property Custodian.

Q. You say the shares have recently reached a new low of $1.25? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what they were worth approximately in the spring of '41? A. Just about the same. I think that in the years from 1937 to about the year 1942, or before maybe 1943, they fluctuated between one-half a dollar to seven-eighths of a dollar. I don't know the statistics.

Q. Now, you know, do you not, that Mr. von Opel placed the shares of Uebersee in a safe deposit box at the Sweizerische Credit Anstalt? A. That is correct.

1250 Q. Do you know what he did with the keys for that box? A. Mr. von Opel opened the safe in his name in the Sweizerische Credit Anstalt.

I had a key and a power of attorney to open the safe, together with Mr. Gang.

Q. When did you receive the key and from whom? A. That is many years ago. I really could not tell, offhand.

Q. Well, you have been worrying about that key ever since 1935, have you not? A. Me?

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. Well, what is your best recollection as to when you received the key? A. Well, probably shortly after the Uebersee stock was acquired by Mr. von Opel.

Q. This was sometime in early '32? A. Maybe, but I don't recollect.

Q. How long did you continue to hold the key? A. Well, these things happened many years ago and I am certain I could establish exact dates, but I think I had it for several years. I think the shares finally went out of, came out of the safe.

1251 Q. When did they finally come out of the box? A. The shares came out of the box—I could not say. I am sorry, I cannot establish the right date, but certainly they came out at the time they were sold to the Sweizerische Credit.

Q. And that was in '36, was it not? A. Yes.

Q. So all during the year 1935 you were in possession of the key, were you not? A. Well, the safe was, as it goes, I was in possession of one.

Q. And if Mr. von Opel's testimony that he lost his key is accepted, then you were in possession of the sole key; is that right? A. It would have been easy to take another safe and issue new keys.

Q. Did you do that? A. No, I didn't.

Q. So you had the only key to the box in which the Uebersee shares were held? A. It is technical.

Q. Whether it is technical, you had the key? A. Yes, but I don't know exactly when I had it.

Q. I thought you testified up until then that the sole—

A. (Interposing) I don't remember the date, but cer-

1252 tainly the shares were in the box, not later than '36, maybe.

Q. I am talking about all of '35. If we accept Mr. von Opel's testimony that he lost his key, then it is your testimony, is it not, that you held the only key to the box during the year '35? A. If Mr. von Opel lost his key, It would have been this way.

Q. Very good. He so testified.

Now, did you ever have a talk with Mr. von Opel in the course of which he asked you to hold the key as agent for his father? A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. You had no conversation of any sort with respect to your holding the key on behalf of Wilhelm von Opel? A. I would not remember that.

Q. Would you say you don't remember, or you are sure you didn't? A. It may be that there was once conversation at the time this—I had the key in order to produce the stock for voting purposes, and also I had the key because the shares were serving as collateral for loans granted by Adler & Company to the corporation.

Q. Try to listen to my questions and answer them. A. Yes.

Q. I asked you: Do you mean you don't remem-
1253 ber having a conversation with Fritz von Opel in the course of which he said that he wanted you to hold the key as agent for his father, or is it your testimony that you are sure no such conversation took place? A. Since I never was agent for his father, it could not have taken place this way.

Q. So you are morally certain that no conversation, such as I have described, ever took place? A. I had so many conversations, but I don't know the point you are trying to make.

Q. Are you familiar with the concept known in Continental law as the usufruct? A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever see the agreement under which Wilhelm von Opel gave his shares, 600 shares of Opel stock to Fritz von Opel? A. I don't remember when I saw this agreement for the first time.

Anyway, I do remember that I didn't act as agent for Wilhelm von Opel.

Q. But I am getting to something else.

You understand, do you not, that if you had held the key as agent for Wilhelm von Opel, that would have constituted delivery to him of the asset, and that would have brought into existence the usufruct? Did you not know that?

1254 A. No.

Q. Did you not know that? A. No, but I have already stated, I didn't hold the key as agent, and furthermore, how could this usufruct be established in this way if the shares served for collateral for loans granted? Otherwise, that would be absolutely contradictory.

Q. We will let the lawyers argue about that one. A. Well, I am not a lawye.

Q. At any rate, the purpose of my questioning is to see if you do not understand that it would be very important if you did, in fact, act as Wilhelm von Opel's agent, because that fact would bring into existence the usufruct? A. I never acted as his agent.

Q. But you understand it would be very important if you did, don't you? In other words, you are not at a loss to know what I am questioning you about? A. If you say so.

Q. I will ask you once more.

Did you say you were not a lawyer? A. I am not a lawyer.

Q. Did you ever study law? A. Partly only. I studied national economy.

Q. Will you describe what legal education you have had? A. I graduated from the University, in National Economy.

1255 Q. Will you describe what legal education you have had? That is what I asked you.

Have you never studied law at all? A. No; only partly; a few lectures I attended.

Q. Now, I want to know what your testimony is. Are you saying just that you had a lot of conversations with Fritz von Opel and you don't remember whether or not he ever asked you to serve as his father's agent and hold the key, or is it your testimony that you feel sure you had no such conversation? A. I am sure that I never acted as agent.

Q. Really, Dr. Frankenberg, you are a very well educated and experienced man. I am sure you understand. Please answer my questions. A. If Mr. Fritz von Opel—

Q. (Interposing) I didn't ask you about "if."

Are you saying you don't remember, or are you saying—

Mr. Gallagher: (Interposing) It would simplify it if Mr. Burling would ask two questions, instead of giving alternative questions, which are confusing him.

The Court: It is very difficult.

By the Court:

Q. When you got the keys to the box, or at or about that time, do you remember having a conversation with Mr. von Opel in which you stated that you would hold the key as agent of Wilhelm von Opel? A. Most cer-
1256 tainly not, because—

Q. (Interposing) You remember you didn't have it? A. At that time, certainly. Two keys were in existence.

Q. Your present memory, what is in your mind, not what you might have done or reasons for it, do you hold in your minds as to whether you spoke about agency or discussed this or not? A. I would say not.

Q. You have a clear memory in your mind that it was not discussed? A. Oh, yes, I never did.

Q. Well, then, your memory is that you didn't. That is the only way we know you didn't.

Mr. Burling: Would you ask him if he remembers if he didn't at some later time, after the key was first handed to him.

The Court: We are speaking, Mr. Frankenberg, and we have to speak in Court here about memories, and we ask witnesses what they carry in their minds, and the lawyers do the arguing before me.

What you carry in your mind is what he is talking about.

The Witness: Yes; thank you.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Would your answer to His Honor's question be 1257 the same if he asked you if you ever had a conversation with von Opel after he first handed you the key, a conversation about holding the key as Wilhelm von Opel's agent? A. Not holding the key for Wilhelm von Opel as agent.

Q. You had no such conversation at any time? A. I don't think so.

Q. When did you first see the record in the Gold case? A. I remember that Mr. von Opel showed to me this book.

Q. When? A. Maybe '39. I don't know when, but I never took the attention.

Q. Will you stand up, please?

Do you recognize this gentleman who just stood up? A. Certainly, I do.

Q. He is Mr. Worthington? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you tell him that you were a Doctor of Civil Law? A. Civil Law, that is?

Q. Yes. Did you tell him that? A. I don't remember that.

Q. Now, I want to read from the affidavit of Fritz von Opel, dated June 7, 1935, reading from folio 197, at page 66, in the middle of the page; have you found the 1258 place? A. Page 68?

Q. Page 66, folio 197. A. Yes, I have it.

Q. I want to read the following words to you:

"The 97 bearer shares of Uebersee which I acquired in the manner above stated are now on deposit in a vault in my name, No. 1917, with the Swiss Credit Anstalt in Zurich, Switzerland, the key to which is in the possession of Dr. Frankenberg. This key is held by Dr. Frankenberg as agent and representative of my father, Wilhelm von Opel, for the purpose of safeguarding his usufruct."

Now, on June 7, 1935, was the key to the box in your possession? A. That I would not remember. I told you already that I don't recollect for how many years I had the key.

Q. And at that time were you the agent and representative of Wilhelm von Opel? A. No, I was not.

Q. Now, the fact is, is it not, that in 1935 a copy of this affidavit was sent to you for your information; isn't that so? A. I would not remember.

Q. At any rate, when you first did discover this, did you say to Fritz von Opel: that this is a terrible mistake; that I never was your father's agent; and your state-1259 ment under oath is a mistake and incorrect? A. Maybe at that time Fritz von Opel was of the opinion that I was a sort of agent.

Q. I wonder if you will try to answer the question. A. I didn't say that to him, no.

Q. Did you say to any agent of the United States Government that it had been misinformed with respect to your acting as agent for Wilhelm von Opel? A. (There was no response.)

Q. You will have to answer. Do not shake your head, as the reporter cannot write that down.

What is the answer, please? A. No.

Q. Now, at the time the Gold case came to trial in the District Court, Southern District of New York, Mr. Kressel represented the plaintiff corporation here, did he not? A. He did.

Q. Is it not a fact that at that time you saw this affidavit? A. Mr. von Opel's affidavit?

Q. Yes. A. That is probably so.

Q. Didn't you know that the affidavit contained a misstatement about you? A. I didn't know about that.

1260 Q. When you saw the affidavit you knew Fritz von Opel swore that you were Wilhelm von Opel's agent in holding the key, didn't you? A. Now, at the time this matter came to my attention, I will now say about what—

Q. (Interposing) Will you answer the question? That is not true? A. That is true; yes.

Q. Didn't you learn of this at the time the lawsuit was tried? A. No.

Q. Didn't you testify about that a minute ago? A. No.

Mr. Burling: Well, excuse me.

Mr. Gallagher: The record doesn't show that.

The Court: He can ask him if he did question him.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Didn't you say that you probably saw this affidavit during the trial of this action, and that is the Gold case in the Southern District of New York? A. I am very sorry, but I must have misunderstood the question, and I didn't want to say that.

Q. Well, you did see it at an earlier date, did you not? A. No.

1261 Q. Some earlier date, two years ago, you said just that, didn't you?

Perhaps I can refresh your recollection. A. If you please.

Q. You were interrogated by Mr. Worthington, whom you just identified, were you not? A. Yes.

Q. Did you give him the following answers to the following questions:

"Question: So that you never represented Wilhelm von Opel?"

This is page 37, and the answer is:

Answer: No, never. I wasn't in the picture at all at that time.

"Question: Did any discussions ever come up with respect to the obligations of Fritz or Uebersee to Wilhelm under this usufruct?

"Answer: No.

"Question: Have you ever read this affidavit that was filed in the so-called Gold case?

"Answer: Yes, I am sorry I did, yes, but at the time, as a matter of fact, it was filed, I had no knowledge about it. It got to my knowledge out of this lawsuit which arose later on, which was handled by Mr. Kressel, and only then at that time I had seen it, because I did not work on it," and then it goes on.

1262 Did you see it at the time of the lawsuit? It was handed to Mr. Kressel? A. I don't even know at what time this was.

Q. Well, I don't care what time it was, but did you see it at the time of the lawsuit? A. I really don't remember.

Q. But do you remember telling Mr. Worthington you did see it at the time of the lawsuit? Will you answer the question, please? A. I it is on the record, I probably said so.

Q. Do you have any explanation how you came to say that to Mr. Worthington? A. No, I haven't.

Q. Did you say farther, and now I am reading from pages 38 and 41, three lines from the bottom of page 38:

"Now, according to our, at that time European conception, we thought it was the good right of Uebersee to claim this gold and to have it here and have it earmarked for the Swiss National Bank. That was the content of this lawsuit. Now, there was one point which apparently here was considered possibly to be weak, and that would have been if Uebersee had been doing business within the United States. So, therefore, apparently the people in charge of this lawsuit, which, after all, was lost, trying to prove in this affidavit first of all, that they were not doing

1263 business here, and so on, and so forth; and then they wanted to stress the point that Fritz von Opel, who was the only one who always was during these years within the United States as a visitor from time to time, that he could not possibly be, that his presence here could not possibly be established as if Uebersee was doing business through him, or something like that. Therefore, he tried in this affidavit, as well as could be done, to distance himself to a very considerable extent, as I remember, from Uebersee and from these assets. But then, I perfectly agree that if somebody reads it now, he has a perfectly other impression necessarily, because everything which was stated here was just to put back from him—well, I mean he could do so, because there is nothing—therefore, he produced this gift agreement and all this sort of stuff, which after all, later on, was nullified anyway. But at that time, in his opinion apparently, it was still in existence."

Did you so testify? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Now, does that refresh your recollection as to when you first saw the Gold case affidavit? A. I really—it is hard to answer the question, I never was in charge of the lawsuit, and I never knew very much about it, so that was my impression, I stated there. I surely would say something just about the same now. It was a personal im-

1264 pression I had.

Q. Did you ever talk to Wilhelm von Opel about the usufruct provisions? A. No.

Q. Did you ever say that you had talked to Wilhelm von Opel about the usufruct?

1265 Mr. Gallagher: Can we have that question made a little bit more specific, Your Honor, as to when and where?

Mr. Burling: I am coming to it, as soon as I find it in the record, please.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Reading from page 32, at the middle of the page, of the Worthington-Looney interrogation.

"Question: Did you ever talk to Wilhelm von Opel about this usufruct?

"Answer: Well, I remember he told me in these years about it, but I wasn't—that was before I came into the picture."

Do you remember now that you had a talk with Wilhelm about the usufruct?

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, I submit he hasn't asked the witness the whole answer contained here in the transcript; and the whole portion of it should be read.

The Court: He is asking him his recollection, now, and if you want to ask him the rest of it, you can do so later.

The Witness: For the moment, I really don't remember the occasion I referred to in this testimony.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. You don't deny you did say to Mr. Worthington and to Mr. Looney that you did talk to Wilhelm about 1266 the usufruct? A. For the moment I really couldn't remember.

Q. I ask you to examine Defendant's Exhibit 50-A, which has been already marked in evidence. It is a document taken from the records of Uebersee. I ask you to read it and state what it is. A. Well, that apparently refers to a request of the Swiss authorities that the corporation should submit under the Swiss banking law.

Q. And I want to read you a sentence in this letter and ask you to explain it—

"The entire capital of our company comes from a single group which also has a controlling interest in the capital stock."

That letter is dated November 27, 1935. Can you identify the letter, or name the persons who formed the group which then had a controlling interest in the capital stock of Uebersee? A. The only person with an interest was Fritz von Opel. It is the usual way to express it.

Why should a corporation state that it has only a single shareholder? So, for this purpose, it was perfectly satisfactory to say it is a single group.

Q. The Swiss Federal Bank Commission is an agency of the Swiss Federal Government, is it not? A. I couldn't answer this question. It is something like, yes.

1267 Q. And is it the Swiss banking practice for bankers to tell the truth to government agencies, or not? A. The issue in this case was, whether, for instance, if the corporation would have been active in accepting moneys, or something like that.

Q. Will you answer my question? A. It has no bearing on the case.

Q. Will you answer my question, anyhow? A. Certainly, if we would have thought the request to state exactly who this group is, we would have certainly complied.

Q. Yes; but is it the general practice to be truthful in reporting to the Swiss Government? A. It is certainly a general practice.

Q. You do not regard it as misleading to state that the controlling interest in the corporation is owned by a group, when in fact it isn't owned by a group but by a single person? Is that correct? A. Not for this purpose.

Q. Not for this purpose—very good.

Mr. Burling: I ask Your Honor's indulgence. We seem to have made a mistake in the exhibit number.

By Mr. Burling:

1268 Q. I ask you to look at Defendant's Exhibit 66-A for identification, which is already in evidence, to look at the last page, and state whether a copy of this was not sent to you. A. Well, it says it was sent to me; but I do not know what is in it.

Q. Look at it and see if you cannot recall receiving this, will you please?

This is a report, Dr. Frankenberg, made by Dr. Meyer, of a conference had in the United States Treasury in 1935. Does that refresh your recollection? A. Well, I do not remember anything about receiving this document. And if I read it, it may—

Q. Well, all right; I ask you to look at the section bearing the number 1—"Relations of Mr. Fritz von Opel to Uebersee." A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember receiving the information contained therein? A. I do not remember, no.

Q. You have no recollection of learning that the United States Treasury Department sought information concerning the ownership of Uebersee, and was told it was owned by a group? A. By a group?

Q. That is what Dr. Meyer says, is it not—

1269 "Mr. Bernstein insisted it should be known to me whether Mr. von Opel has a controlling interest. I repeated that a group of which Mr. von Opel was a member had a controlling interest, but that I did not know the composition of that group."

A. Well, maybe—

Mr. Gallagher: What is the question, now, please?

Mr. Burling: "Do you remember receiving this information?"

The Witness: I do not remember having received this information.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Do you know of a Liechtensteinean legal entity called "Frima"? A. Yes.

Q. And is it correct that whatever it is, Frima is a legal institution which does not exist in any law except that of Liechtenstein? A. That is correct.

Q. It is substantially unexplainable, except in Liechtensteinean terms? Is that correct? A. It is very hard to explain. It comes nearest to a so-called "Stiftung", according to the Swiss law.

Q. It is not exactly a trust, is it? A. No; in the American sense, it is no trust whatsoever. And also it 1270 has characteristics of a beneficiary, but it has not the qualities of an American trust.

Q. In fact, you said to Mr. Worthington and to Mr. Looney as follows, did you not?—

"That is something which does not exist in the whole world, except in the principality of Lichtenstein. I could not explain what that is here, because of the laws here. It is nothing. It is just a name. As far as this 'Frima' ever acted or was in the books, it does not mean anything else but Fritz."

A. That is correct, because he was the beneficial owner of same.

Q. Will you look at Defendant's Exhibit 67-A and state whether or not that is a telegram which you sent to your bank in Zurich from Montreal? A. Yes, I think I sent this.

Q. Who is the person named in the second word of the telegram?—"Henggeler"? A. It is a lawyer and a member of the board of directors of Uebersee.

Q. The first sentence of this telegram or cable to your bank is:

"Inform Henggeler sale of stock to if possible 1271 more than eleven purchasers, to be effective immediately, not later than end of month."

What stock did you refer to? A. Apparently the Uebersee stock.

Q. And why did you direct your bank to inform Henggeler that the Uebersee shares were to be sold to more than eleven purchasers immediately? A. It was, at that time, Mr. von Opel was wishing to do so; I do not recollect the reasons; but that is what he was doing.

Q. You do not know the reasons? A. Well, it may be that partly the reasons were to get an institution in between this ownership, since I think at that time it must have been the time Nazy pressure was exercised upon his father.

And then it seems to me that at that time it was also desirable from the point of view that the company should not be considered to be a personaliy-owned company.

Q. Didn't you and Fritz von Opel have discussions in 1936, the substance of which was that since he was the sole owner of Frima, which in turn was the sole owner of Uebersee, that Uebersee was to be taxed as a personal holding company? A. I remember very faintly having had these discussions. But I too know that later on this whole setup was not recognized by the Treasury anyway, 1272 and it was settled in some way or another.

Q. Yes; but that was not until 1942, though? Isn't that right? A. I don't know when. I would say in 1940 or so, or maybe in 1941.

Q. Oh, you think that it was in 1941 that the personal holding company tax was in fact imposed back for the years from 1936 to 1941? A. I think so.

Q. But, at any rate, isn't it true that the transfer of the shares in 1936 was primarily for the purpose of evading or avoiding, as the case may be, the American personal holding company tax? A. Well, it was, as far as I understand, as far as I remember this matter better, because it was discussed later on in 1940. As a matter of fact, it was, as far as I was concerned or informed, in 1940, perfectly legal to avoid this tax until the tax law was changed later on, the effect of which I never did know.

Q. That would depend upon whether the sale that took place in 1936 was a sham, wouldn't it? A. I mean, it was perfectly legal to do so in 1936. I am not a tax expert.

Q. Who told you it was perfectly legal to do what was done in 1936? A. I remember the fact from the 1273 negotiations in 1940.

Q. All right. You advised the accountants for Uebersee in 1936, did you not, that in filling out returns hereafter they were to report that Uebersee was no longer a personal holding company? Do you remember that? A. I advised them?

Q. Yes, you did—didn't you? A. I don't think so. If I did s[illegible] then certainly I was convinced it was quite all right.

Mr. Burling: I am about to inquire concerning a document which is already in the possession of plaintiffs. It was taken from plaintiff's files, and it is the defendant's exhibit 83.

I ask a concession as to the genuineness of the photostat.

Mr. Gallagher: If it came from our files, it is perfectly all right. We concede it.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 83--which I now offer in evidence as conceded by the plaintiff—and ask you if that is not a letter which you received from Bayer & Clauson. A. Maybe I received this letter. As a matter of fact, I lived in Switzerland. I had not the slightest knowledge about the American taxation, not the slightest.

1274 (The letter referred to was marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit No. 83.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Well, I want to read you a sentence from it, and we will see about it—in paragraph 3:

"We are also in receipt of your letter of July 28, 1936, with respect to the question of doing business in the United States. Since we were informed by you in June that Uebersee is no longer a personal holding company, we will eliminate that tax from our consideration."

Now, did you, by letter dated July 28, 1936, advise Bayer & Clauson, the accountants for the plaintiff, that the plaintiff was no longer a personal holding company? A. I certainly do not remember having done so.

Q. Do you have a copy of that letter in your files? A. I don't think so. But if I did so, if anything of this kind had been done, then I certainly was convinced it was so. I didn't understand anything about American tax law.

Q. You were advised by Bayer & Clauson in this letter that the personal holding company tax, which would be payable in 1936, and therefore it must have been assessed for 1935, was $28,736.64. Isn't that right? A. This letter says so. I am sure, if I received this letter, I wouldn't have to look at it, because I was pretty sure Bayer 1275 & Clauson handled the whole tax operation in the United States. I didn't care a thing about the tax operation in the United States.

Q. You knew that Bayer & Clauson didn't handle a fake, sham, or wash sale to the Swiss National in 1936, didn't you? Didn't you do that? A. I did it?

Q. Yes, didn't you?

The stenographer can't take down gestures, and I cannot understand what you mean.

Did you do it, or not?

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, we object to the form of the question—a fake, sham, or wash—the three connotations put on the sale, to which we object.

The Court: It might be possible for him to answer it a little later, whatever sale it was.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Didn't you handle all the selling involved in 1936?. A. No; it wast handled by Henggeler. He was very much more familiar than I was with all this tax situation. He was in New York and informed Bayer & Clauson.

Q. But you informed Bayer & Clauson that the corporation was no longer a personal holding company? A. Because I was told so.

Q. Who told you so? A. Maybe Mr. von Opel.
1276 I don't know who it was. I wouldn't have any judgment on it.

Q. But, at any rate, you had handled the Swiss end of the transaction? A. Henggeler did.

Q. But later didn't you go back to Zurich and handle this situation personally? A. No; Dr. Henggeler handled it.

Q. You did not? A. No.

Q. I see.

Mr. Burling: I will ask the plaintiffs to concede Defendant's Exhibit 84 and 84-A, which is a photostat of a cable taken from the files of the plaintiff corporation.

Mr. Gallagher: We concede it, if it is from our files.

Mr. Burling: Thank you.

May I have this marked?

(The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibits 84 and 84-A.)

Mr. Burling: I ask for a similar concession concerning 85 and 85-A.

Mr. Gallagher: The same concession.

(The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibits 85 and 85-A.)

1277 By Mr. Burling:

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 85-A and ask you if that is not a cable which you received from your bank, dated June 17, 1936.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Your Honor, I don't object so particularly to this particular question; but I submit that great latitude has been allowed Mr. Burling in going beyond the scope of the direct examination. We have not raised any question on his cross examination on points which he himself has raised. But inasmuch as it has gone to this extent during the period of time, we wish to make the point now.

The Court: What is this particular point?

Mr. Ingoldsby: This particular matter goes into—

How would you describe that document?

Mr. Burling: It goes into this transaction which we say is a fake, a sham, a dishonest transfer, which this witness was principally instrumental in doing, which I put in to attack his credibility, and also to show the mala fides and to show a continuous action on his part to hide—and I will make an offer of proof—

I offer to prove through this witness that in 1936 Frima purported to transfer its shares to eleven Swiss dummies, who paid nothing for the shares. The shares were left in a Swiss bank.

The dummies gave options to Frima, and thus to 1278 Fritz von Opel, that they would sell back the shares at any time.

Also, von Opel contracted to purchase them at a later date. The purchase price was the same as the original purported sale price.

The purchasers never received the shares at any time; they were always held by the bank.

And we contend that this was solely a device for evading the American personal holding company tax. In 1939 it was used in a case almost identical to the case at bar; it was used to defraud the British Government, that is, the Government of Tanganyika, by reporting that assets located in Tanganyika, which were owned by Uebersee, were Swiss owned and not German owned, in 1939, at a time when Fritz von Opel admitted was still a German national.

The Court: Are you going to prove all that by this witness?

Mr. Burling: We can prove a great deal of that by this witness, if Your Honor please.

The Court: I suppose his objection is that it doesn't relate to anything brought out on direct.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, they did allude to this sale.

The Court: Was that in the direct examination?

Mr. Ingoldsby: What question alludes to that sale?

Mr. Gallagher: That was in the cross examination.

1279 There was no question which alludes to this sale, Your Honor.

The Court: I didn't remember it on direct.

Mr. Gallagher: Not at all.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Your Honor, I think we have been very patient in raising the objections.

The Court: Of course, there is a rule about it. If you want to make him a witness on that, and it is material.

Mr. Burling: I think I am entitled to call him as my witness on this point, and then impeach him, because this witness testified he was then a director of the corporation. Our testimony is that he became a managing director, and the rule is that a party may call a hostile witness, if he is an officer or managing agent of the corporation, and may not only ask him leading questions, but may impeach him.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I think the rule by which Mr. Burling is bound on that question is the statute in effect in the District of Columbia relating to hostile witnesses.

Mr. Burling: I think it is the Rules of Civil Procedure.

The Court: Yes, I think the Rules of Civil Procedure supersedes that.

Mr. Burling: May I read the rule, Your Honor? It is 43 (b), the second sentence:

"A party may call an adverse party or an officer, director, or managing agent of a public or private corporation or of a partnership or association which is an adverse 1280 party and interrogate him by leading questions and contradict and impeach him in all respects as if he had been called by the adverse party."

It is perfectly obvious Uebersee is an adverse party, and this man is an officer of the adverse party, and the rule in direct terms covers the matter.

Mr. Ingoldsby: We still complain about the relevancy of it, Your Honor. We have no question that in 1936 the personal holding company tax was in effect. And all this would come down to would be an argument whether or not this was a lawful tax evasion or a legal tax avoidance. I don't see that it has any materiality on any of the issues in this case. And it is stipulated by all the parties that all of the stock of Uebersee is owned by Frima.

The Court: You have circumstances in regard to this disposition of the stock and the proceeds of it, which indicate that for some purpose it got out into these various groups which you chart there yourselves to show that. And I presume the circumstances might have some bearing upon the question of ownership.

Mr. Ingoldsby: May I say this, in that respect, Your Honor? First of all that the chart was prepared only for the purposes of lending something towards the ultimate end of clarity.

And I might also point out on the chart, for the 1281 purposes of clarity, it went to the Swiss banking company, to Frima, and we ourselves X'd it out as immaterial, inasmuch as it was covered by the stipulation.

The Court: The point I have in mind is, it seems to me, though I don't know the case as well as you gentlemen seem to, that it seems to me that the progress of the transfer of these stocks all the way through might have some bearing on the ownership.

Mr. Ingoldsby: On the ownership ultimately being in a national of an enemy nation?

The Court: Yes. The whole problem of ownership is before the Court, and whatever transactions went on in regard to this property might have had some significance. I don't know.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Do you contend, Mr. Burling, that that has any bearing, whether a beneficial or real interest was owned by Wilhelm and Marta von Opel?

Mr. Burling: I am surprised at the contention that this was X'd out. I think it was put in after the transaction was reversed in 1941, after the personal holding company liability was assessed, notwithstanding the transaction, and it was washed out.

My contention is that this has a very real bearing on the bona fides of the claim that Fritz von Opel is the beneficial owner.

1282 The Court: That is what I understood his point was.

Mr. Ingoldsby: If that is his point, then I suppose that is quite different. But otherwise I would ask him to explain how.

Mr. Burling: I could do that better by argument.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Your Honor, I don't want to be argumentative.

The Court: I would like to follow the pertinency of it, myself. Maybe I am wrong. Tell me again what your point of relevancy is to the issue.

Mr. Burling: The relevancy to the issue is that a fraudulent and sham transaction was made here in 1936, which hid the true ownership of this stock, whether Fritz or his father. I think it is relevant to show they held the stock in a manner which was fraudulent and a sham, from 1936 to 1941, as being on the probability that the presently asserted holding is a sham and fraudulent. I particular urge that arguinent, because I can show that in September, 1941, in an alien property proceeding—not a lawsuit, but an administrative proceeding in Tanganyika—this device was used to defraud the British Alien Property Custodian.

The Court: By these people?

Mr. Burling: By these people, by this corporation, and by its officers and agents, yes, Your Honor.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I might say this, if that is the 1283 purpose, we might partially stipulate our joint ways through it. In other words, we would be willing to stipulate to the effect that at the time the stock was transferred to Frima, that one of the principal purposes of the transfer was to avoid the effects of the personal holding company tax law.

Mr. Burling: And will you further stipulate it was false, sham and frudulent transaction?

Mr. Ingoldsby: No, certainly not.

Mr. Burling: Then I think I have the right to adduce evidence on that point, Your Honor.

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, it was transferred in 1936 to the Swiss we concede for the purpose of tax avoidance, and it is contended upon the part of the Government that it was for the purpose of avoiding taxes.

Mr. Burling: I concede nothing happened, but it was a pure sham.

Mr. Gallagher: Will you state it was not held by the bank?

Mr. Burling: It was held by the bank, although that is the wrong bank. But I contend the parties participated in a sham transaction, what Dr. Kronstein says is a Scheinvertrag. And we could put the evidence in, and you make a motion to strike.

The Court: There are limits to what you can prove as to the transactions of the parties. It may have some 1284 relevancy to ownership. I don't know what it will develop.

Mr. Gallagher: The chain of title, as to whether it was through Wilhelm or Fritz has nothing to do with that little detour that took place. It went out and came back to the same parties.

The Court: I think his point, starting with the transaction back at October 5, 1931, and tracing it all through, is that in the history with respect to the disposition of this stock, there were a series of what he claims to have been misrepresentations made from time to time—one in New York, and in this particular case, and now I think he is saying over there; that with respect to this very stock there were a series of misrepresentations, as I understand.

Mr. Burling: That is exactly right, Your Honor.

The Court: And that would be persuasive upon the Court in deciding if they went through a number of these, all dealing with the same stock, that then I would draw the conclusion that this testimony in this case on their part is equally to be considered, unless there is a showing in this case that it wasn't so.

Well, I will take it, and we will keep it within reasonable limitations, I suppose, and you can move to strike it a little later.

You see, this witness is called a little out of turn, and I can tell a little better at the end of the case than I 1285 can now. I will take it provisionally.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Is this document, Defendant's Exhibit 85-A, a telegram you received from your bank? A. It probably is.

Q. And do you see the words—

"Bankgesellschaft agrees to retention dollars and guaranty of margin of $20,000 on the part of Adler subject to definite contractual settlement after your return."

Do you remember receiving that? A. I don't remember at all whether I received it. But it may be that I did.

Q. Does that recall to your mind that the settlement of this shares sale in 1936 did not go through until after your return to Zurich? A. This wire refers to a margin which was to be added by Adler with the Bankgesellschaft, and that is what it refers to, apparently, because the entire negotiation was by Gesellschaft, as conducted by Dr. Henggeler, and so far as von Opel was involved, because they had to put up the margin of $20,000.

Mr. Burling: I ask the genuineness of Defendant's Exhibit 86-A and its translation be admitted as coming from plaintiff's files (handing the documents to counsel 1286 for plaintiff).

Mr. Gallagher: Yes, we concede that.

(The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibits 86 and 86-A.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you examine Defendant's Exhibit 86-A, which is headed "Memorandum for Dr. Frankenberg", and state whether you received that at any time.

Mr. Burling: May I have one moment, if Your Honor please?

The Court: All right.

Mr. Burling: May I have a concession as to Defendant's Exhibit 87-A, please (handing the document to counsel for plaintiff)?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Have you answered my question whether you received Defendant's Exhibit 86? A. I cannot say I received it.

Mr. Gallagher: It is conceded.

(The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibits 87 and 87-A.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you look at Defendant's Exhibit 87, which purports to be a copy of a letter to Dr. Henggeler, on 1287 June 19, 1936. Is that right?

Will you look at 86 and see if it is not true that that indicates that there were enclosed to you a memorandum or letter from the Bankgesellschaft of June 19 to Dr. Henggeler? It is Item No. 3. A. That is obviously what it is.

Q. So that Defendant's Exhibit 87 would appear to have been sent to you? Is that correct? A. Pardon me.

Q. A copy of Defendant's Exhibit 87 would appear to have been enclosed with Defendant's Exhibit 86, which is a memorandum to you? A. It appears so. But I could not remember it. I just want to repeat that in doing this transaction up here, or being in any way connected with it, I was purely doing nothing against any law, or to deceive, or to do any fraudulent business, as you expressed it.

Q. Isn't it the fact that the bank with which the contract or agreement between Frima and the bank was made, from the Swiss Bank Company, by the Swiss Union Bank— A. The Union Bank of Switzerland, yes.

Q. And isn't it true that Frima contracted with the Union Bank on the following terms?—

One, it was to transfer its Uebersee shares to the bank;

Two, that the bank was then to find persons nom-
1288 inal purchasers;

Three, that cross actions were to be obtained whereby the purchasers were to agree to sell back the shares at the original purchase price;

Four, that the purchasers were to have the right to require the repurchase of the shares.

— Am I right so far? A. I think you are right. It was perfectly legal.

Q. And, in addition, a term of the agreement was that the purchasers were to contract either to give proxies to the bank, which would give proxies to Frima to vote the shares; or, in the alternative, the so-called purchasers were to contract to vote the shares as instructed by the bank and thus by Frima. A. That is the way it was done.

Q. That is the way it was done? A. Yes.

Q. And the purchasers did not receive the shares, did they? A. Oh, yes.

Q. They did? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Aren't you mistaken about that? Weren't the shares deposited in a bank called the "Bank in Baden"? A. Well, that is an affiliation of the Union Bank of Switzer-1289 land, apparently.

Q. Did the purchasers ever take the shares into their own two hands, like that (indicating)? A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. Well, you know they didn't, don't you? A. No. Well, because the Bank of Baden could have delivered them.

Q. Didn't the Bank of Baden contract not to deliver them? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Don't you know, also, that the nominal purchase price was not paid by the purchasers? A. No.

Q. You don't know that? A. No; I am pretty sure that the purchasers paid the purchase price.

Q. Weren't the purchasers credited by the Union Bank of Switzerland, with the purchase price which they nominally paid? Isn't that how it was done? A. No. The purchase was paid, as far as I can remember, the purchase price, to the Union Bank of Switzerland. But the Union Bank of Switzerland didn't turn over the purchase price to Frima, but kept them in a special account.

Q. They were kept in blocked account, against the obligation of Frima to repurchase the shares? Isn't 1290 that right? A. That is correct. And Frima was entitled to invest this money in stocks.

Q. But it had to be held in the bank? A. It had to be held in the bank.

Q. So the purchasers acquired no beneficial or economic interest in the shares of Overseas, did they? A. Yes; they paid for it.

Q. What interest did they acquire, if they had to sell the shares back at the same price they paid, and if they didn't have any power to vote the stock? A. You see, it is very hard to explain these matters which were absolutely usual in Switzerland and 100 per cent unusual in this country. Because, after all, Switzerland was the place where capital from all over the world used to come to, just for the purpose of hiding.

Q. For the purpose of being hidden? A. Yes, for the purpose of being hidden. And that was, in Switzerland, very often the case.

Q. And that is the fact in the case at bar, isn't it? A. The what?

Q. The case here, Uebersee Finanz-Korporation against Clark? A. No.

1291 Q. It isn't? A. Not at all.

Q. I see. A. But, as a matter of fact, if you look at the history of Europe, you will understand that this feeling was much more popular than it possibly could be in this country, where things never were tangled and without the overthrowing of governments and revolutions.

Q. I didn't understand one part of your testimony. Do you think that the purchasers actually did receive the certificates, or is it merely your testimony that for all you know the bank in Baden may have delivered the certificates to them? A. I think there isn't the slightest difference.

Q. I would just like to know. A. Yes, I wouldn't know.

Q. You don't have any idea? A. No; but the proxies were issued by the purchasers.

Q. It is within your personal knowledge, is it not, that there were negotiations between the United States Treasury and Mr. von Opel in 1941, and that he then had to pay the personal holding company tax anyhow? A. I remember it.

Q. And, after that, these transactions were reversed, and the purported holders were washed out? Isn't that 1292 correct? A. Well, that had nothing to do with the thing whatsoever.

Q. Well, it is correct, isn't it? A. It is the fact. But at that time, and it may be even a great damage to this case now, it was the idea of dissolving the company, Uebersee, and to transfer all its assets to Fritz von Opel here in the United States. That was only—that was not in consequence of the settlement of this tax case.

Q. I see. A. But everybody felt—

Q. I take it you accuse me of the error of post hoc propter hoc. A. Pardon me?

Q. I will withdraw that.

In any event, you personally know that Fritz von Opel paid the tax, the personal holding company tax, as official stockholder, do you not, for the years 1936 through 1941? A. I think as far as I remember there was an arrangement worked out with the tax authorities; and, as far as I remember, in the meantime, before anybody paid these taxes, all the property was vested, and as far as I further remember, until a couple of years ago, I heard the Alien Property Custodian didn't pay it.

Q. At any rate, after the arrangement whereby
1293 Fritz did pay the taxes, this transaction was reversed? Isn't that correct? A. I couldn't tell you when the tax settlement was, and when the reversing was. As far as I see it, it had no connection whatsoever.

Q. I want to ask you about this portion of your interrogation, reading from page 29:

Were you asked this question, and did you give this answer?—

"Question: Now, coming back to the sale, you say that Fritz came to you and wanted to sell these shares for some purpose?

"Answer: Yes.

"Question: Did he tell you what the purpose was?

"Answer: No, I could not remember. It was a complicated matter. First of all, he was always squeezed, or his father was squeezed always because he gave this large amount of foreign exchange, and there were inquiries. So maybe he thought at that time that it was wise to have these shares just to show they were not owned by them at all any more. But I do not exactly recollect."

Can you remember that testimony? A. I can't remember it for the moment; but I said some things similar before.

1294 Q. What I am interested in is what you meant by saying that it was wise to have these shares to show they were not owned by them at all any more?

What was the antecedent of the pronoun "them"? A. I can only say that that maybe is a misprint, or I may have been not expressing myself very carefully. But there is no doubt about only Fritz von Opel owning the shares.

Q. You are sure it isn't a slip of the tongue by which you really meant the Opel family? A. No, certainly not.

Q. What does the word "Consortium" meaning in Swiss banking practice? A. Well, a verbal consideration would mean people coming together for the purpose of some business.

Q. Would the word "syndicate" be a fair translation? A. It would not be a bad translation.

Q. What is "Consortium O"? A. In the case of—

Q. As reflected in Uebersee's books? A. That it was just a name.

Q. What does it mean? A. As a matter of fact, first it was Fritz—I remember having seen this item—and then Mr. Geng, the bookkeeper, put it just in this way. It is a designation which might have been used also in the 1295 preliminary stages of forming a corporation; so later on, as you will see, the ownership of this property from "Consortium O" went into Frima and Frima was Fritz von Opel again. So it couldn't have any real meaning.

Q. Fritz von Opel is the gentleman sitting here by me? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does he look to you like a group of people, or a syndicate? A. It was a technical sort of a name, just put in by the bookkeeper. I didn't advise him to do so, and I wouldn't know who could have done it.

Q. Didn't you understand "Consortium O" was the syndicate Opel, or the Opel family? A. But there wasn't any syndicate Opel.

Q. That is the issue in this case. My question is, didn't you understand that "Consortium O" meant the Opel family? A. No. It can be misleading, but I am pretty sure it wasn't meant in this way.

Q. Changing the subject, you never had any business discussion at all with Crittenden in Zurich in the summer of 1937? Is that testimony? A. As far as I remember, yes. Because I had nothing that I really could discuss with Mr. Crittenden.

Q. You were staying on that occasion in the Dolder 1296 Grand Hotel in Zurich? A. Correct.

Q. Didn't Crittenden and Bayer come to the hotel and have a business discussion with you? A. I remember they came with their wives, and had dinner.

Q. No; didn't they have a business discussion with you? A. I must say it was really news to me, it escaped completely out of my mind that I even met them in Zurich, and I couldn't recollect to have any sort of a business discussion with Mr. Crittenden anyway, because it was out of my competence. Mr. von Opel was handling this oil picture. I didn't understand anything about oil; so I couldn't discuss it, or he couldn't discuss it with me.

Q. Adler & Company has some famous painting or paintings by a famous painter somewhere in its offices in Zurich? Is that right? A. It used to have, formerly.

Q. And it had in 1937? A. Yes.

Q. It had a collection of Degas paintings? A. There were three, as a matter of fact.

Q. And one of them was behind the door, so that when you opened the door, the painting was behind the 1297 door? Isn't that correct? A. It was a sort of a conference room, and there were these paintings hanging. Which one was which, I wouldn't know.

Q. But you remember vividly when you opened the door, or if the door was left open, you couldn't see the painting? A. There were at least five paintings.

Q. I am talking about one of the three biggest paintings. Didn't you have a discussion with Mr. Crittenden in which you said this Degas painting was very badly hung, because when you opened the door you couldn't see it?

Have you any idea at all how Mr. Crittenden came to learn there Degas paintings in the Adler Bank? A. Oh, I remember he visited with me at the Adler Bank.

Q. In the fall of 1937, were you in New York? A. Yes.

Q. Where did you stay? A. I stayed at the Plaza.

Q. You, Mr. von Opel, and Mr. and Mrs. Critten had dinner together at the Plaza, did you not? A. Mr. Crittenden?

Q. Mr. and Mrs. Crittenden, Mr. von Opel, and you? A. It is possible, but I really wouldn't remember.

Q. Now, on the day, or within a day or two either 1298 way, of a dinner which you had with the Crittendens and von Opel, didn't you in fact have a discussion with Mr. Crittenden about the oil business, at which Mr. von Opel was not present? A. Mr. Crittenden was a great talker, and what he told me about the oil business, I wouldn't know, if I listened to it at all, because I wouldn't understand anything of it.

Q. All right. But did you have a business conversation? A. No, no business conversation.

Q. Wait a minute. I haven't finished my question—Did you have a business conversation with Crittenden in New York, at which von Opel wasn't present, and I fix the date as of about October, 1937? A. I really couldn't remember; I do not believe it.

Q. You do not believe you did? A. I really do not believe it, because I don't know what I possibly could have discussed with him.

Q. At about this time did you, Fritz von Opel, and Mason Houghland have a business discussion at the Plaza Hotel in New York? A. Yes, I met there Mr. Houghland.

Q. Do you see Mr. Houghland in this courtroom?

Mr. Burling: Will you stand up, please, Mr. Houghland, and come forward?

(A gentleman in the courtroom stood and came 1299 forward.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Do you recognize Mr. Houghland? A. Faintly; but he wouldn't recognize me, either.

Q. He can testify about that. Do you recognize this gentleman? A. I believe that is Mr. Houghland.

Q. Thank you. Now, did you, Fritz von Opel, and Houghland have a business discussion at the Plaza, downstairs? A. I remember vaguely that we sat downstairs and we had a business talk.

Q. And in the course of this discussion did you tell Mr. Houghland you could not approve a proposal he made? A. I don't think so.

Q. Do you remember he talked about setting up small subsidiary corporations? A. I was the first time in this country in 1936, for six weeks, and then in the summer or fall in 1937. What should I understanding about putting up large tank stations or small ones? I am simply, I have no knowledge of this sort of business.

Q. Well, you had been discussing the investments of Uebersee ever since 1932 with Fritz von Opel, had you not? A. Yes, from time to time.

Q. And so you knew particularly about Spur, did you not?—Spur Distributing Company? A. I knew what 1300 it was, yes.

Q. And didn't you talk about a proposal to have Spur set up some small subsidiaries with Houghland in 1937? A. I could not imagine what performance that should be, on my part, in such a business.

Q. Whether or not you could imagine it, are you certain you did not have such a conversation? A. At least, I do not remember it, not in the slightest way.

Q. Let me read a section from folio 175 of the affidavit of Fritz von Opel:

"In the summer of 1932 and after my return to Europe I discussed with Dr. Frankenberg my concern over the future gasoline supply of the company. I feared increasing pressure of the larger companies against smaller competitors like Spur Distributing Company, Inc., and I decided in concert with Dr. Frankenberg to take steps towards supplementing the gasoline distributing system of Spur with oil reserves and a refinery so as to constitute an independent unit and protect Spur for a period of some 15 years."

In so far as that relates to your conversations between you and von Opel, is that statement correct? A. I really do not remember. But I do remember that once, maybe much later, or at that time, I couldn't tell you, Fritz 1301 von Opel told me his idea that Spur should have an independent supply of oil. And therefore he was inclined to acquire oil properties. That may well be.

Q. Now, did you ever decide to take steps to supplement Spur with oil reserves? A. No, most certainly not, as I was never instrumental in any of these investments. Also, I didn't make any contract with any of the managers of the American companies. That wasn't in the side of the business I was in.

Q. You understand what the words "in concert with" mean, don't you? A. "In concert with"?

Q. Yes. I will show you. It says here, does it not?—"I decided, in concert with Dr. Frankenberg, to take steps".

Do you think that is wrong? A. I don't know whether it is wrong. I can only repeat I never was instrumental in this sort of investments.

Q. You must know that it was either right or wrong. Either you helped Fritz von Opel decide, or you and he decided together—which is what he swears—or you didn't decide it together. Which is it? A. He told me about it—

Q. Which is it, please? A. But I can only repeat—
1302 Q. Will you answer my question? Did you and Fritz von Opel decide this in concert, or didn't you? A. Not the investments.

Mr. Burling: I have no further questions.

Mr. Ingoldsby: May we have just one moment, Your Honor?

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, we now move to strike Mr. Burling's testimony about any fraud with respect to the British Government. He stated he was going to prove this through this witness.

Mr. Burling: I just forgot it. I did omit it, Your Honor.

The Court: There is nothing to strike.

Mr. Burling: I apologize to counsel. I did forget the topic. I will go ahead. Thank you, Mr. Gallagher.

Mr. Gallagher: You are welcome.

The Court: Do you think you can complete this in ten or fifteen minutes?

Mr. Burling: This will take only five, Your Honor.

Mr. Gallagher: I won't take over ten, Your Honor.

The Court: All right. I have to leave here promptly at five. I will come back tonight and finish up, if it is necessary.

Mr. Burling: I don't believe it will be, Your Honor.

1303 I ask plaintiffs to concede Defendant's Exhibit 88-A as being a photostat of a document contained in plaintiff's files.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you look at Defendant's Exhibit 88-A and state whether you have seen it before?

Mr. Burling: Since it is conceded, Your Honor, may I read it?

The Court: Yes.

(The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibits 88 and 88-A.)

Mr. Burling: This letter is dated November 14, 1939, addressed to Messrs. Leslie, Strachan & Co., Chartered Accountants, Standard Bank Chambers, P. O. Box 45, Dar es Salaam."

And I ask Your to note judicially that that is the administrative capital of the mandated territory of Tanganyika.

"We are in receipt of your letter dated October 23rd and beg to hand you enclosed certificate from the Union Bank of Switzerland, Zurich, duly legalised by the British Consulat General, Zurich, which you may present to the Custodian. We assume that this certificate will induce the Custodian to convince himself that all holders of our shares are of Swiss nationality. At the same time he may gather from it that Mr. von Opel is not a 1304 shareholder of our company. For these reasons we presume that the release of our property will take place in due time."

And the rest of the letter is irrelevant.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you ever see that letter before? A. I don't think so.

Q. How do you write your initial? And I call attention to a mark appearing in the lower right-hand corner of the photostat and ask you if that is your initial. A. I usually wouldn't write it this way.

Q. I see. All right.

You know, do you not, that Overseas in 1939, prior to the outbreak of war, owned a plantation in Tanganyika? A. Yes.

Q. And you know that that plantation was seized by the British Custodian as being German owned, in September, 1939? A. I remember that.

Q. You remember it. And you know, do you not, that these two different letters were sent to Tanganyika by Overseas, and that as the result of such correspondence, the British Custodian returned the plantation to Overseas' manager, or to Overseas' possession? A. When was it?

1305 Q. In November or December, 1939, was it not?

Don't you recall that Overseas got back the vested plantation? A. I think so, yes.

Q. Yes, I think so, too. A. But, after all, at that time there was no fraud involved.

Q. There was no war in September, October, and November, 1939? A. Yes; but, first of all, the shares were really owned by Swiss people, and, as I remember, the Union Bank of Switzerland.

The Court (to Mr. Burling): He said there was no fraud, not "war".

Mr. Burling: Oh, I am sorry.

This is the last document we have on this topic.

(The documents referred to were marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibits 89 and 89-A.)

Mr. Burling: I ask that Defendant's Exhibit 89-A be conceded as a photostat of a document taken from plaintiff's files.

Mr. Gallagher: Yes.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence, Your Honor.

(The documents previously marked for identification Defendant's Exhibits 89 and 89-A were received in evidence.)

1306 By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you examine this letter and state whether you ever saw it before—and since it is conceded to be a genuine document, I will read it, if I may, Your Honor.

This is a letter to Uebersee, from Messrs. Leslie, Strachan & Company, Chartered Accountants, of Dar es Salaam, Tanganyika Territory, dated October 23, 1939:

"Dear Sirs: We are obliged for your letter of 6th October which reached us last week by airmail.

"The certificate from the Union Bank of Switzerland has been submitted to the Custodian of Enemy Property here. Our translation of the German is as follows '97 parts are lying with us and are in Swiss possession' and the Custodian points out that the actual ownership of the shares is not stated.

"Would you please therefore obtain from the Bank a similar letter giving the names of the actual holders of the shares at 3rd September 1939 and their nationality in each case. Should the 97 shares, or a majority of them, be held by a company the Custodian will eventually require similar information regarding the holding company.

"It is believed locally that Mr. von Opel is a German subject and a majority shareholder in your company and the Custodian requests full information regarding 1307 his relation to the company.

"At the same time we could point out that your estate has not been confiscated. The Custodian, following the internment of the manager, placed watchmen and caretakers on the estate to safeguard the assets. These, he will be pleased to withdraw on receipt of evidence that the estate belonged at 3rd September last to neutral subjects.

"It will assist us if you will include an English translation of any certificate obtained from the Bank.

"We are informed that Mr. Tassin was a member of the Nazi party and although some of the interness have been released, there is no immediate possibility of his being released on parole.

"Yours faithfully, Leslie, Strachan & Co."

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you see that letter when it was received? A. I have no recollection of it.

Q. Did you not understand that the Custodian in Tanganyika wanted to know the real or true ownership of the estate, the plantation, in Tanganyika?

Mr. Ingoldsby: May I ask the answer to the prior question?

The Reporter (reading): "Answer: I have no recollection of it."

1308 Mr. Ingoldsby: Then, Your Honor, I submit the next question is improper, if he doesn't have any recollection of it.

The Court: He probably would have to speak for himself.

Mr. Burling: He said he didn't remember this letter, but he did remember the taking of possession of the plantation.

The Court: His recollection wouldn't be material, unless he took some action on it, at least his interpretation.

The Witness: I really didn't do anything about it.

Mr. Burling: All right. That is all I have.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Just a few questions, Dr. Frankenberg—

First of all, Mr. Burling has gone into that New York affidavit and stressed the use of a word here or a word there. Let me read to you from the commencement of this proceeding:

"Mr. Worthington: Gentlemen; this is just merely a little informal further investigation that is being exercised under the powers of the Alien Property Custodian as they have been continued by the new Executive Order under the Trading with the Enemy Act, and it will be merely an informal interrogation. We want everyone to feel free to enter into the proceedings in any way they wish."

1309 As you know, the interrogation went on, and was there any necessity, in your opinion at that time, to weigh very carefully every word?

Had you been sworn in, let me ask, at that time? A. No, I had not.

Q. And when was the oath administered to you? A. Afterwards.

Q. And how did that come about? A. I asked him what you call an informal hearing.

Q. Yes? A. Because I wasn't aware at all that an oath would have to be taken.

Q. Yes, and what happened in connection with the oath? When was that taken? When did that come about? A. As I remember, Mr. Worthington or Mr. Looney said, "Now, let us take an oath."

Q. And this was after you had testified? A. After both of us had testified.

Q. And you agreed to it? A. Yes, I agreed to it.

Q. And prior to that time you thought it was a little pleasant get-together, to give them information with which they could go to Europe and investigate? A. That was the purpose of it.

1310 Q. And you endeavored to cooperate to the fullest possible extent? A. That is correct.

Mr. Burling: I appreciate the lateness of the hour; but Mr. Gallagher knows it is not proper to lead his own witness and put words in his mouth.

Mr. Gallagher: All right, Mr. Burling.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now, plaintiffs have offered in evidence, Dr. Frankenberg, Plaintiff's Exhibits 78 and 79, 78 being a letter of June 25, 1936, which purports to reflect the sales of the shares to the Swiss. A. Yes.

Q. And Plaintiff's Exhibit 79 reflects that the 97 shares have been deposited with the Union Bank on May 30, 1936.

And Plaintiff's Exhibit 80 reflects that they were passed over to the Union Bank on the 22nd of June, 1936, and finally returned to the Union Bank of Zurich on November 4, 1941.

Now, Dr. Frankenberg, is it not a fact that interest was paid during the five-year period, in the amount of some nine or ten thousand dollars a year to the holders of this stock? A. That is correct.

1311 Q. So a total of some fifty thousand dollars in interest was paid to the persons who had purchased this stock? Is that not correct? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, as far as Mr. Houghland is concerned, in any of your conversations with Mr. Houghland, did you ever say you personally would not permit, or you would not give your approval, or you would not in any way—

Mr. Burling: I object to the leading questions in this fashion, Your Honor.

Mr. Gallagher: I think, on redirect, Your Honor, I can meet the type of questions counsel was asking.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Did you state you would not approve or would not permit or did you express in any other fashion to Mr. Houghland as to oil properties or subsidiaries in Spur? A. I couldn't possibly have done so.

The Court: The question is not whether you could have, but whether you did.

Mr. Burling: The million dollar loan in the oil refineries related to Mr. Crittenden and not to Mr. Houghland.

Mr. Gallagher: Very well. We will strike the question, and let us frame it in this way:

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Did you ever in any conversation with Mr.
1312 Houghland, to your recollection, tell him you would not approve of any deals or permit of any financial transaction with reference to Mr. Fritz von Opel? A. To the very best of my recollection, I never did.

Q. Did you ever act as Mr. Wilhelm von Opel's agent, at his direction? A. I certainly did not.

Q. And did you ever have any oral or written agreement with Mr. Wilhelm von Opel personally to act as his agent? A. I never had.

Q. Now, in connection with this key, let us see if we can clear that up a little bit. If I understand correctly, the key to this safety deposit box was given to you some time in the year or years preceding 1935, that Mr. Houghland is talking about. Is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. At that time you have the key to the box, with Uebersee shares in it, and you have the key for two purposes: One, to take the shares out to vote them. A. As stated before.

Mr. Burling: Again I object, Your Honor.

The Court: He has been over that before.

Mr. Gallagher: I thought it was important, Your Honor.

The Court: And you are leading him.

Mr. Gallagher: All right, sir.

1313 By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Will you state the purposes for which you were originally given the key and for which you had it in your possession? A. I once wish to state that I had the key, but what was much more essential, I had the power of attorney to go with Mr. Geng, and not even myself alone, because it was a key you could not come to the bank and open the safe. In Switzerland you have to be registered, and I had to have a power of attorney issued by Mr. von Opel, to open the safe.

The purpose was to get the stock out from time to time, to vote it; and, second, the Uebersee shares were at some time, I don't know, whether it was 1933 or 1934, but anyway at that time they were serving as collateral for loans granted by Adler & Company, to the corporation here, the Uebersee Corporation.

Q. You say as a positive fact that in year 1935 you did not have any conversation at all with Fritz von Opel, in which he asked you, in which he asked you, to act as his father's agent? Did you say you never had such a conversation? A. I didn't well remember. It may be such a conversation, that he asked me. It wouldn't have meant anything important, it wouldn't be of any importance to me.

Please understand that Mr. von Opel came to me
1314 as a banker. He paid for the stock. He bought all the securities in the corporation; so he could do with his money as he pleased. Whether he stipulated usufract for his father, or gave his money away, let us say, as a gift to the University of Zurich, it was just up to him.

Q. You would not say you positively remember, then, you never had such a conversation with Mr. von Opel? Is that true? A. It may be.

Mr. Burling: I can't hear.

The Witness: It may be, if you ask me now, I remembered sometime, but I couldn't fix the year, there was a certain pressure upon Wilhelm von Opel, and in this connection—I really do not very well recollect, but if you ask me, I might say that it may be that some time there was such a conversation, in which he asked me whether I would act. But I didn't pay any attention to that.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now, Mr. Burling read to you a portion of an answer that is in this interrogation with Mr. Worthington here in New York, and he only read the first part of your answer. I want to read the whole answer to you now, and ask you whether or not this still is the fact. First the question:

"Did you ever talk to Wilhelm von Opel about this usufruct?

1315 "Answer: Well, I remember he told me in these years about it; but I wasn't—that was before I came into the picture."

That is where Mr. Burling stopped, and here is the rest of it:

"The moment I came into the picture it was only the moment Uebersee was acquired, when the company was acquired; and then the assets first held in custody were Uebersee's, and then later on acquired by Uebersee. But Uebersee never, nor I myself, made any sort of any arrangements with Wilhelm von Opel."

Is that a fact? A. That is a fact.

Mr. Gallagher: That is all.

Recross Examination

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Your testimony now is that you do not know whether or not you had a conversation in the year 1935 in which Fritz von Opel asked you to serve as his father's agent in holding the key? You have no knowledge either way? A. I couldn't recall it. If you would give me some more clues to it, I might remember.

The Court (to the witness): He wanted to know what your testimony was.

The Witness: Oh, the testimony.

1316 The Court: What you told Mr. Gallagher a moment ago.

The Witness: I said that it may have been that such conversations took place.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. And that is contrary to what you told me while I was examining you, was it not? A. It may be.

Q. Didn't you tell me you thought it very unlikely that such a conversation took place, and you had no recollection of it? A. By being asked again, it came to my mind it might have been.

Q. Do you recall His Honor questioned you about this particular point?

Do you understand the phrase, "His Honor"? I am referring to the Judge. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you tell His Honor that your memory was that no such conversation took place? A. If you say I said so, in being asked again, it came to my mind.

Q. If it comes to your mind, it means you remember something now that you didn't a few minutes ago. What is it you now remember about that conversation? A. As I said, Mr. Burling, it reminds me of being in con-
1317 nection with certain fines imposed upon Wilhelm von Opel, and that is—you have to understand, I never was and I never did any business with Wilhelm von Opel. So now if, for instance, Fritz would have decided to do anything, I don't know what, in favor of his father or whatever he pleased—

Q. Try to answer the question, won't you please?

The Court: He wants to know what has come into your mind now, since you last spoke to him about it. What is that is in your mind now that you did in 1935, or what was said about this agency?

The Witness: It may be that Fritz at some time, for the reason I just said, asked me whether or not I might act as a trustee. But I do not—

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Some recollection has come into your mind since I last examined you? A. Apparently, yes.

Q. Apparently. And I ask you what you can remember. Do you remember something now you didn't a half an hour ago? A. I am not familiar with this matter for years. In talking it over again and again—

Q. Do you now remember—and the answer is yes or no to this question—do you now remember something you didn't a half an hour or an hour ago—yes or no? A. Yes, but—

1318 Q. Thank you. What is it that has come into your mind within the past hour? A. That in some time there might have been a request, there might have been a conversation in which this usufruct business came up again.

Q. Do you have any memory of it, or are you just assuming it might have happened? A. No.

Q. So you don't remember anything— A. I couldn't put it in exact words.

Q. I don't want you to put it in exact words. I want you to answer my question. You don't remember anything now you didn't an hour ago, do you? A. Yes; in talking over it again—

Q. What is it you remember? A. That some sort of conversation—

Q You just testified you don't have any memory of a conversation, but that it might have happened? A. Yes, it might have happened, in connection with the Wilhelm von Opel, that it might have been.

Q. Do you remember anything at all about what was said in such a conversation?

What? A: I couldn't possibly—

1319 Q. The answer is yes or no. Do you remember anything at all? A. I do not remember anything—

Q. I didn't ask you that. I said, do you remember anything at all? A. The only thing I can remember is that he might have asked me sometimes whether or not I would take care of this usufruct—something like that. But it is very vague.

Q. You have some recollection of that? A. Very faint.

Q. A very faint recollection. A. Because it wasn't none of my business.

Q. Fine; thank you. We have only four minutes. Please stop volunteering, and answer my questions.

You have no idea of what was said, or who said it? Is that correct? A. Who said it?—Fritz von Opel.

Q. But you have no idea of what words he used in saying it? A. No.

Q Have you any idea as to when this conversation took place? A. No. It must have been somewhere between 1934 and 1935, or so.

Mr. Burling: I ask if the reporter got the answer
1320 "no" to my question, "And so you have no idea as to what Fritz von Opel said?"

Mr. Gallagher: That wasn't the question. As to what somebody said, he said it was Fritz von Opel.

Mr. Burling: And I asked as to what words Fritz von Opel used, and he said no.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. In substance, have you any present memory as to what he said? A. It can have been only in the connection, as far as now I recollect, that whether I would take care of the usufruct, or something like that.

Q. Take care of— A. But I—

Q. Please stop volunteering. What does "take care of the usufruct" mean to you? A. If it would come into existence.

Q. What did Fritz say about it? A. My memory isn't too good.

Q. Isn't it the fact, Dr. Frankenberg, that you don't recollect anything now that you didn't remember when I examined you first, and that you decided to change your testimony as a result of the tone of voice employed by Mr. Gallagher? A. I think so. I think it is very natural that after having discussed the question again and being 1321 asked again, that you search more profoundly the last memory you have in your head.

Q. But you don't seem to have brought up very much, do you, as a result of this profound search?

Just tell us now, and I will have to stop. Give us as best you can what you have now gotten out of your recollection as the result of this profound search you have made. A. He might have asked me—

Q. He might, or I might be Santa Claus. What do you remember as a fact? A. Whether I would have—

Q. He asked you? Is that the fact? A. As I pointed out before—

Q. Just tell us what you now remember, will you? A. I do not remember it exactly.

Q. What is it you do remember exactly? A. Therefore I wouldn't make a statement, in words, what he said, as I cannot remember.

Q. As best you can, tell us what you do remember. A. That he asked me to, in case the usufruct should be in existence or should come into existence, whether I would then take care of this situation on behalf of his father.

Q. But he didn't say a word to you about holding the key on behalf of his father as his father's agent, did he? A. No.

1322 Q. You are morally certain of that? A. I am absolutely morally certain of that.

Mr. Burling: Thank you.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. You have been holding this key in your possession, with the shares in the box, isn't that correct? You had a key for some during the thirties? A. Yes, for some time, but I couldn't tell you for what time I had it and for what time I didn't have it.

Mr. Gallagher: That is all.

Recross Examination

By Mr. Burling:

Q. But you are morally certain Fritz von Opel never asked you to hold the key as the agent for Wilhelm? A. To hold it?

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. That is, you are certain he did not ask you to hold it for him? A. No, not as his agent.

Mr. Burling: All right.

Mr. Gallagher: That is all.

The Court: The witness is excused.

(Witness excused.)

1323 The Court: Tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

(Accordingly at 5 p. m. the trial was adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, Tuesday, December 21, 1948.)

* * * * *

1326 Mr. Burling: May I address the Court, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Burling: Mr. Gallagher has asked me to make a statement for the record, to clear up something that happened yesterday, and I will be glad to do it:

I was examining Dr. Frankenberg as to whether he had not selected documents in 1937 from the files of Uebersee and brought them back here. I take it is conceded that he did do that.

The issue arose, however, as to whether a piece of paper had not been removed from the file. It was a loose paper we saw, and Mr. Gallagher tells me he cannot find it.

The statement I wish to make is that I make no point of it. I asked for the production of the paper solely for the purpose of establishing that Dr. Frankenberg did select documents. Since that is conceded, and since my friend tells me he cannot find it, I withdraw my request for the production of the document.

Of course, there is no contention that anything was removed intentionally, but was merely lost.

Mr. Gallagher: Thank you, Mr. Burling.

Further in explanation, if Your Honor please, the content of the document is merely described as some apparently loose paper that I never even did see.

1327 Mr. Burling: Your Honor, we would like to call Special Agent Kiefer, so that he may return to his duties in New York.

The Court: Is there any objection?

Mr. Gallagher: No, Your Honor. We had, in our designation of witnesses, that Mr. Ingoldsby was going to cross examine him. He is not here yet; but we have no objection to proceeding with him.

The Court: All right.

Whereupon, HARRY KIEFER, called as a witness in behalf of the defendant, and being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Baum:

Q. What is your full name, Mr. Kiefer? A. Harry Kiefer—K-i-e-f-e-r.

Q. And where do you reside? A. New York City.

Q. What is your occupation? A. I am a Special Agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Q. In what office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation? A. I am presently assigned to New York City.

Q. And how long have you been employed by the 1328 Federal Bureau of Investigation? A. Something over six and a half years.

Q. During the course of your duties as an agent of the bureau, did you ever have occasion to interview a Mr. Manfred Stansfield? A. Yes, I did.

Q. When did you interview him? A. I interviewed him on two occasions. The first interview occurred on June 4, 1947, in the New York office of the FBI, and the second interview occurred about August 9, 1948, at Mr. Stansfield's home in New York City.

Q. You were in the courtroom yesterday, were you not? A. Yes, I was.

Q. Did you see that Mr. Stansfield in this courtroom? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Now, referring to the interview in June, 1947, do you recall how long that interview lasted? A. Yes; it lasted almost two and a half hours.

Q. And during the course of that interview did you take any notes of what was said? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Is it a regular practice of the bureau for agents to take notes during interviews? A. Yes; normally in a case that is at all involved or where the interview will last for any length of time, notes are usually taken.

1329 Q. And what is the purpose of those notes? A. Well, I imagine you would have two purposes—

First, in order to obtain the facts, with the idea in mind of preparing a report which will later be submitted to the defendant.

And, secondly, from those notes, normally, a statement may be drawn, dictated to a stenographer, and then submitted to the witness or the person being interviewed, for his signature.

Q. Did you request Mr. Stansfield to sign his statement? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did he sign one? A. No, he did not.

Q. Now, what was the general subject of this interview with Mr. Stansfield in June, 1947? A. Generally I questioned Mr. Stansfield concerning the sale of the Adam Opel Automobile Company, some of the negotiations in that connection, to the General Motors Corporation of the United States.

Q. And in the course of this interview, did Mr. Stansfield make any statements concerning the capacity in which he participated in that sale? A. Yes, he did.

1330 Q. And what did he say at that time? A. He said early in the negotiations, perhaps in 1929, he represented the General Motors Corporation in Europe, in Germany; and that after the negotiations had begun, and he became more intimately acquainted with the von Opel family, that ultimately he had sort of a dual classification, both as a representative of General Motors Corporation and also of the Opel interests.

Q. And during the course of this interview did Mr. Stansfield refer to any statements concerning Swiss investments? A. Yes, he did.

Q. And will you please tell us of what you remember of those statements? A. Stansfield said that he and Wilhelm von Opel had spoken on a number of occasions concerning the chaotic economic and political conditions which existed in Germany at that time; particularly were they chaotic for people of some substance or wealth.

And Stansfield said there was a little expression current at the time in Germany, which expression said something to the effect that gold or money was not everything, unless you had it invested in Switzerland.

I asked him whether or not Wilhelm von Opel ever used that expression in his presence, and he said yes, he 1331 had, that Wilhelm had said that to him on a number of occasions.

Q. By the way, Mr. Kiefer, I questioned you a moment ago about notes you took. Do you have those notes with you today? A. Yes, I have.

Q. During the course of your interview in June, 1947, did you have any conversations with Mr. Stansfield concerning Fritz von Opel's status as a Devisen Auslander? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Would you please tell us what was said? A. Well, I questioned Mr. Stansfield concerning his knowledge of whether or not Wilhelm von Opel had suggested to Fritz von Opel that Fritz obtain an Auslander classification.

Stansfield said he had no knowledge at all whether Wilhelm had made such a suggestion to Fritz. He said, however, that on a number of occasions Wilhelm von Opel had mentioned that it was fortunate that Fritz was so classified as an Auslander, because nobody knew what was going to happen in Germany, and that perhaps through Fritz Wilhelm might be able to invest something outside of Germany, so that later, regardless of what would ultimately happen in Germany, he, Wilhelm, could be taken care of in his old age by his son.

Q. Now, during the course of your interview with 1332 Mr. Stansfield, did you question him concerning a gift agreement of October 5, 1931? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you question him with respect to the date of the agreement? A. Yes.

Q. Would you please tell us the conversations you had with Mr. Stansfield concerning that date? A. Yes. I questioned him particularly with reference to whether or not the date of October 5, 1931, might have been affixed to the gift agreement at some time other than the time when the gift agreement was actually signed by the parties.

Stansfield exhausted to some extent that question of date, and Stansfield said that he had some very vague recollection concerning conversations which took place regarding that date. But he had no present recollection of what those conversations were, or how or in what way they concerned the case.

I questioned Stansfield whether or not he could positively state that the instrument was not pre-dated. And he said that he could not positively state yes or no whether the instrument was or was not pre-dated. He thought that the signatures were affixed at the same time as the date which appeared on the instrument, but he couldn't 1333 positively state one way or the other.

Q. So I gather your answer is that he couldn't say whether or not the agreement was pre-dated? A. That is right.

Q. Did he exclude the possibility that it was pre-dated? A. No, he did not exclude the possibility. He said he could definitely say that it was not pre-dated.

Mr. Baum: That is all.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Mr. Kiefer, how long have you been an agent with the bureau? A. A little over six and a half years.

Q. And did you know anything about this case when you went to see Mr. Stansfield on June 4 of 1947? A. I had the background of the case in general. Would you like me to explain how I had that background?

Q. Yes; who gave it to you? A. The Department of Justice sent a memorandum to my headquarters in Washington, the Federal Bureau of Investigation Headquarters, and they in turn sent either that memorandum or perhaps an abstract of that memorandum to the New York office, giving in general the background of the case, what litigation had taken place to date, and a request that cer-1334 tain people be interviewed in connection with the case

On the basis of that memorandum, I made various inquiries.

Q. And who went with you on June 4, 1947, when you questioned Mr. Stansfield? A. The interview occurred in the New York office of the FBI. Mr. Stansfield came to our office, and Special Agent Walter C. Martinson was present at the time.

Q. Is he here today? A. No, he is not.

Q. Is he still with the bureau? A. Yes, he is; he is with the New York office.

Q. May I see the notes you made at that time? A. Yes, sure (handing them).

Q. Were these notes you have just handed me prepared while Mr. Stansfield was talking to you? A. Yes, they were.

Q. You heard Mr. Stansfield testify yesterday that you had not taken any notes? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And, as a result of this interview, you prepared a statement, you prepared a report to the bureau, did you not? A. Yes, I prepared a report to the bureau, not a statement.

Q. A customary agent's report? A. Yes.

1335 Q. Do you have a copy of that report with you? A. No, I do not.

Q. When was the last time you saw it? A. Last night, in Mr. Bower's office.

Q. Who is Mr. Bower? A. I beg your pardon—in Mr. Baum's office.

Q. But you do not have it with you today? A. No, I do not.

Q. And had you taken that copy of the report to Mr. Baum's office, or did he have it? A. He had it. I assume it was transmitted in the normal course of affairs.

Q. And did you read a copy of your report before you came down here from New York? A. In New York, yes.

Q. And you are quite certain you took these notes during the course of the interview? A. Well, yes; I am absolutely certain.

Q. And did Mr. Martinson also take notes? A. No, he did not.

Q. Did he write a report? A. No, he did not.

Q. Do you know that five or six of your agents have also interviewed Mr. Stansfield? A. No, I am not aware 1336 of that.

Q. You did not know that? A. No.

Q. When you went out to interview him, didn't you know he had been interrogated by other agents? A. I knew he had been questioned concerning Mr. Fritz von Opel, concerning his internment. But I didn't know how many agents interviewed him, or when the interviews had taken place.

Q. And you didn't take the trouble to look through the FBI reports in New York to see whether or not Mr. Stansfield had given statements to other agents on this same topic, before you went to interview Mr. Stansfield? Is that correct? A. I looked through the index of the office concerning what the interviews were about. But I am not positive that I saw whether statements had been taken, or not.

Q. What do you mean by "statements taken"? A. I thought you mentioned that statements were taken. By "statements" I meant something in the form of a signed statement.

Q. You meant a signed statement by the person being interviewed? A. That is right.

Q. And did you say you looked through the files of the bureau on that? A. I looked into the files of the bureau.

1337 Q. And did you find any signed statements had been obtained? A. I don't recall whether I found any signed statements or not, I have no recollection of finding any.

Q. Did you read the reports of the agents who had interviewed Mr. von Opel, before you went out to interview him? A. As I recall, I looked over the reports to determine whether or not they had any connection with this case. But, as I recall, they had no connection with this case, or the facts of this case.

Q. Are you quite sure you read those reports? A. Yes, I looked over whatever was in the index. I don't recall whether there were any exhaustive reports in the index at all. But I glanced over whatever we had available in New York at the time.

Q. Do you remember seeing anything in any of those reports about pre-dating? A. No, I do not.

Q. And it is standard bureau practice to obtain a signed statement wherever possible, isn't it? A. There is no hard and fast rule concerning it. Certainly in a case like this, I think if the person being interviewed is agreeable, I think it would be usual to obtain a signed statement.

1338 Q. Well, you can't get a signed statement from anybody unless they are agreeable, can you? A. No.

Q. And did you say it was not standard practice to get a signed statement from a witness, from one who is likely to become a witness? A. I didn't say it was not standard practice. I said there was no hard and fast rule concerning it, and I thought it would be very likely to obtain such a statement in a case like this.

Q. And when did you ask Mr. Stansfield to sign a statement? A. At the conclusion of the interview on June 4, 1947.

Q. And did he refuse? A. Yes, he did.

Q. And he wouldn't sign the statement at that time? A. No. I asked him whether he would be agreeable to signing a statement when such a statement was drawn up.

Q. And did you show Mr. Stansfield the notes you took during the interview? A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you at any time submit any notes to Mr. Stansfield? A. Well, it was perfectly obvious that I was taking notes. As a matter of fact, on a number of occasions,
1339 as Stansfield testified yesterday, he pointed to the notes I was taking and said, "I want to talk to you off the record. Don't put it down."

And I explained to Mr. Stansfield that my job as a special agent is to obtain the facts, not to keep them off the record, and if he wanted to tell me what I wanted him to tell me, perfectly well and good, but I certainly intended to record everything about what he did say.

Q. And you told him that? A. Yes.

Q. And it was after that that you had this conversation about the pre-dating? A. Well, I don't recall whether it was after it or before it. On a number of occasions Stansfield said, "Now what I am going to say now, I want off the record."

And I explained to him that certainly I didn't intend to keep it off the record.

Q. You are acquainted with Mr. Stansfield's background, are you not? A. Just generally, yes.

Q. Generally you are acquainted with it? A. Yes.

Q. And it is your testimony that Mr. Stansfield was telling an FBI agent something about his conduct in this case which was off the record? A. No, no, nor at 1340 all. I would like very much to clear that up. Mr. Stansfield said, "I would like what I am about to say off the record."

And I said to him very definitely that I would not take what he was going to tell me on an off-the-record basis; that if he wanted to tell me, he could, and if he didn't want to tell me, he didn't have to, naturally; but what he was going to say to me was going to be recorded by me, since that was my job.

I said, "It is entirely up to you." Whatever he said, he did at his own volition.

Q. Did you ever show Mr. Stansfield the report you prepared? A. No, of course not.

Q. And you only had this one conversation on June 4 about pre-dating? Is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. And you didn't talk to him any more about that topic? A. No. That is correct.

Q. And then you went to see him again on August 9? Is that correct? A. Of 1948.

Q. And you didn't go to see him, you didn't talk to him at all about pre-dating at that time, did you? A.

1341 No; that is true.

Q. Did you say in your direct examination that you had discussed with Mr. Stansfield the advantages of becoming a Devisen Auslander? A. I had discussed with Mr. Stansfield the status of Fritz von Opel as an Auslander.

Q. And who told you what an Auslander was? A. Well, I think I knew pretty well what an Auslander was, before this case.

Q. What was it. A. From just general knowledge.

But certainly the question of Fritz von Opel's status as an Auslander was included in that preliminary memorandum I spoke to you about at the beginning of the cross examination.

Q. And what is a Devisen Auslander? A. Well, as far as I can recall, it would be a person who would have a dual classification. He would be a citizen of Germany and he might be a citizen of another country.

Q. That is your understanding of a Devisen Auslander? A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Kiefer, let me refresh your recollection. Isn't this what happened in that conversation?—

You did talk about the possibility of pre-dating this agreement, to Mr. Stansfield. You did do that, didn't 1342 you? A. Yes, I did.

Q. And that was your primary reason in interviewing Mr. Stansfield, wasn't it? A. Oh, no. That was certainly one of the primary reasons for interviewing him, but there were many things about which I had to question him, based upon the request of the Department of Justice.

Q. What were the other things you wanted to question him about? A. Well, to begin with, what his status was as far as an attorney is concerned, whom he represented at the negotiations, whether he represented the General Motors Corporation or whether he represented the Opel interests.

Q. On that phase of it right there, if I may interrupt you, yesterday—or I will put it this way:

At the time you had your interview with him in June, 1947, he told you the same thing about whom he represented as he told on the witness stand yesterday, didn't he? A. Yes, that is right.

Q. All right. What else did you talk to him about? A. And I spoke to him about whether or not—I wanted to speak to him about whether or not Wilhelm had used Fritz von Opel as a method of getting funds out of the country. I wanted to speak to him about—

Q. What did he tell you about that? A. It is go-
1343 ing to take some time. He stated—that is where the conversation concerning Auslander came up—he said Wilhelm had never told him, Stansfield, that he was using Fritz to get securities or wealth out of Germany. He said that he did not know whether or not Wilhelm had ever instructed Fritz in that matter. He had no knowledge of that at all.

But he could say that during conversations with Wilhelm, Wilhelm had said on a number of occasions that it was a good thing, that it was fortunate that Fritz was outside of Germany; and that Wilhelm was extremely concerned over his old age, and who would take care of him during his old age; and that perhaps through Fritz he would be able to get something outside of Germany so that he could be taken care of in his old age by his son.

Q. Those are your own words?—"Got something outside of Germany"—are they not? A. No, they are not. They are as close—I beg your pardon. They are my own words. But they are as close a quote of what Stansfield said as I can recall at the present time.

Q. You heard that portion of Mr. Stansfield's testimony yesterday, did you not? Do you recall hearing him say that it was fortunate that Fritz was outside of Germany?

Do you recall hearing him say that yesterday? A. 1944 I don't recall hearing him say that, Mr. Ingoldsby.

Q. You don't recall him saying that? A. I do not recall hearing him say that.

Q. You were here all during Mr. Stansfield's testimony? A. I was here during his testimony.

Q. Are you a lawyer? A. No, I am not.

Q. And how long have you been in the New York office? A. Since March, 1946.

Q. And what type of cases do you work on generally? A. Generally fraud against the Government, bankruptcy, the Federal Bank Act—or the National Bank Act—anti-trust cases.

Q. Let me ask you this, and see if this refreshes your recollection:

Do you recall in your conversation of June 4 with Mr. Stansfield whether you asked him about the pre-dating, and he told you he didn't know exactly what the date was, but whatever the date was on the agreement, that is the date it was signed? A. No, that is not the case at all.

Q. You do not recall it that way? A. No, I do not recall it that way at all.

Mr. Ingoldsby: That is all.

1345 Redirect Examination

By Mr. Baum:

Q. Mr. Ingoldsby just asked you, Mr. Kiefer, whether Mr. Stansfield has said he didn't remember the date of the agreement, and I believe you said that is not what he said? A. That is right.

Q. Did you have a copy of the agreement with you at the time of this interview? A. I had a copy of the English translation of the agreement.

Q. Which had been furnished you by whom? A. As I recall it, it had come up to the New York office attached to the Department memorandum.

Q. And did you show that copy of the English translation to Mr. Stansfield? A. Yes, I did.

Q. At the time you questioned him about the date? A. That is right; yes, I did.

Mr. Baum: Your Honor, inasmuch as cross examination has been based on these notes, I think I would like to offer them in evidence at this point.

Mr. Ingoldsby: We certainly object to that, Your Honor.

The Court: You object to it?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: Then they are not in evidence, if he objects.

1346 Mr. Ingoldsby: I haven't read them, but it is just a standard objection.

By Mr. Baum:

Q. Mr. Ingoldsby questioned you about a previous report of an interview with Mr. Stansfield, which I believe you said had something to do with the internment of Fritz von Opel. Is that correct? A. Yes, as I recall now, that is correct.

Q. Do you have any knowledge of why Mr. Fritz von Opel was interned?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object, Your Honor.

The Court: Is that material?

Mr. Baum: I merely want to show, Your Honor, he knew nothing about this previous interrogation and had nothing to do with this case. The answer I expect to get is no.

The Court: Ask him the question as you said it just then, in that form.

By Mr. Baum:

Q. In the course of your duties as an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, were you ever called upon to interrogate anyone in connection with the internment of Fritz von Opel? A. No, I was not.

Q. Did you see the report on the interview with Mr. Stansfield which related to the internment of Mr. 1347 von Opel? A. As I explained to Mr. Ingoldsby, it is normal practice to check the name of the person to be interviewed against the index of the field office, and to draw those files and look through them to determine whether or not there is any reason why this man should not be interviewed, something of that nature.

Now, I did that as usual practice in this case. But I cannot testify now as to whether or not I saw a particular report related to Fritz von Opel's internment, or not. I checked the name of Manfred Wronker-Flatow Stansfield in our index and looked at everything in that connection.

Q. Do you recall whether there was anything in any prior reports concerning an interrogation of Mr. Stansfield on this gift agreement? A. I have no recollection of his ever having been interviewed concerning the gift agreement.

Q. You testified that you reinterviewed Mr. Stansfield in August, 1948. A. That is right.

Q. Was that in connection with this same case? A. Well, as far as I am concerned, it was not. It was an entirely new case.

Q. What makes you say that?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object, Your Honor. This isn't proper redirect.

1348 The Court: If it was not on the subject of this case, it would not be material.

Mr. Baum: Your Honor, I think counsel has attempted to show he went back and re-interviewed Mr. Stansfield and that nothing was then said about pre-dating. The fact is that there was an entirely different subject matter involved, and therefore there was a reason for it.

The Court: That is what he said.

Mr. Baum: All right, sir. No further questions.

Mr. Ingoldsby: No questions.

The Court: All right; you are excused.

(Witness excused.)

The Court: Now we have all of our hurried witnesses disposed of, don't we?

Mr. Gallagher: I believe so, Your Honor.

The Court: Let us finish up with Mr. von Opel, then.

Mr. Burling: At this time, if Your Honor please, Your Honor will recall the testimony when Mr. von Opel was last on the stand, on Friday, that Uebersee invested approximately $45,000 in Transdanubia bauxite.

The testimony also was that Mr. von Opel told the Miami hearing board, in the spring of 1942, that he had invested some $15,000 in Transdanubia bauxite.

He explained the discrepancy in terms of a deflation of the pengo or Hungarian unit of money.

1349 I therefore ask that the Court take judicial notice —and I am reading from the World Almanac for 1947—that the pengo in 1937 was at the rate of 19.779 cents;

That it went in 1938 to 19.727;

That in 1939 it was 19.238;

In 1940 it fell to 18.475;

In 1941 it went back up to 19.770.

Then I ask Your Honor to take judicial notice of the New International Year Book for 1943 and I am reading from page 309, under a section called "Finance"—

"The official exchange rate of the pengo in 1942 was $0.1949."

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, I object to the Court's taking judicial notice on the basis of this almanac Mr. Burling is reading from, because it doesn't set forth therein, from the statement he has just made, whether these were free pengos or blocked pengos.

I understand from our Swiss expert, Dr. Kaufmann here, there is quite a differentiation in the market; that a free pengo has a much higher rate of exchange against the dollar, whereas the blocked pengo had a very much lower rate of exchange. And Mr. von Opel was dealing with the pengos in Hungary at the time these loans were made in 1938.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, there might be arguments which could be advanced, but there is 1350 no doubt that the Federal Reserve Board reported the pengo at this rate. I don't believe my friend will contest that this document says it; and I think unless there is some showing that it is not the official Federal Reserve Board rate, the judicial notice should be taken of what the official rate is.

I don't deny his right to argue there might have been foreign exchange control in Hungary. But the official rate was, at all relevant years except 1940, when it was 18, the official rate was nineteen point something cents.

Mr. Gallagher: Would you stipulate, Mr. Burling, that you are speaking of free pengos when you are making those quotes?

Mr. Burling: I am speaking of what the official exchange rate was. I don't know as to the foreign exchange.

Mr. Gallagher: We stand on our objection, Your Honor, unless the distinction is drawn between free pengos and blocked pengos.

The Court: You had better give me what information all of you have on the subject, and I will decide at the end of the case whether I can judicially notice. I understand when you come to judicially notice a matter, you can have recourse to documents and testimony of those who have knowledge.

Mr. Burling: I believe, if Your Honor please, ordinarily when commonly used texts on matters of public knowledge which are beyond dispute, as to what the Federal 1351 Reserve Board said the exchange rate was, are presented.

The Court: Well, I suppose if the Federal Reserve Board documents say it, I can get it from that.

Mr. Burling: I will bring in the original document, rather than an almanac.

The Court: I don't rule that is not competent. I say at the end of the case I will go on what you have.

I don't think that is a valid objection, Mr. Gallagher. I think the point is that when a Judge has called to his attention matters of standard or historical note or tables of exchange and things of that sort, he may look at any number of sources, it may be, and decide at the end what he finds to be the established fact that he can notice.

And I don't think it is confined to any one particular proposition. It may be that you have one almanac, and maybe you can get another. I don't know. Maybe they are all the same. Maybe there isn't a distinction such as you are talking about. Maybe there is; I don't know.

Mr. Gallagher: That is the reason I wanted to bring Your Honor's attention at this time to a distinction between the blocked pengo and the free pengo, since Mr. Burling is making quite a point of the fact that he said it was fifteen thousand instead of forty-five thousand.

The Court: I will look at these authorities, and such others as you want to present.

1352 Mr. Gallagher: Thank you.

Whereupon, FRITZ VON OPEL returned to the stand and was examined and testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. In 1938 and 1939 you yourself participated in technical activities relating to the production of bauxite, did you not? A. In what?

Q. Technical, engineering activities relating to bauxite production.

Mr. Gallagher: What year was that, Mr. Burling, please?

Mr. Burling: 1938 and 1939.

The Witness: I didn't do too much. I had several experts doing it.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. What were the names of your experts who were doing it? A. There was Mr. von Krausz.

Q. K-r-a-u-s-s? A. K-r-a-u-s-z.

Q. s-s or s-z? A. s-z, in Hungary.

1353 Q. By the way, have you known him for a long time? A. Yes, I think I knew him since 1935. I met him in connection with this matter.

Q. I see. He was a mining engineer in Hungary? A. He was an engineer, and a geographer.

Q. A geographer? A. Yes, and versed in those matters of mapping out areas.

Q. And what position did he hold in Transdanubia Bauxit? A. He was one of the managers. The other manager was a man by the name of Dr. Timar.

Q. T-i-m-a-r? A. Yes, right.

Q. Was there a man named Somogyi?—S-o-m-o-g-y-i? A. I think he was a mining engineer.

Q. Employed by or an official of Transdanubia? Is that right? A. That is possible, for the time being; he wasn't continuously employed.

Q. Who was a man named Saluschinscy? A. Saluschinscy was a lawyer. Gyula was his first name.

Q. What was his first name? A. G-y-u-l-a.

1354 Q. Didn't you yourself carry on discussions of a technical or engineering nature with respect to the production of bauxite in the years 1938 and 1939? A. I discussed the general problems with Mr. von Krausz. It isn't a very complicated procedure. You just dig a hole in the ground and get this mineral out. It isn't very complicated.

Q. You prospect for bauxite, do you not, by drilling small holes? A. Yes, that is done.

Q. It is similar to the process of drilling oil wells, is it not, mechanically? A. Yes. We did that by hand, with a very cheap drill rig, turned by hand; two or three workmen were turning it. And we only drilled to a depth of about, I think the maximum was about 25 meters. That is, let us say, about 80 or 90 feet.

Q. And you discussed this cheap hand labor drilling with Mr. Crittenden in his home in Nashville in 1938, did you not?

Oh, I am sorry. I have the city wrong. It is Shreveport. A. I explained to him, yes, that it was some old-fashioned drilling we did there, and it was not up to date.

Q. And did you not discuss with him the question
1355 of whether modern American oil well drilling apparatus might be brought from America and used for prospecting for bauxite? A. He suggested it. But the equipment was much too expensive. And oil drilling goes to much greater depths, than this shallow drilling for the minerals, you see.

Q. And you did go with him in Shreveport to inspect some drill rigs, did you not? A. Yes, I think we visited a place where they had some drill rigs for sale, very light ones. But even those were too heavy for this kind of work.

Q. So it did not seem to you feasible to import American drilling apparatus to carry on the Hungarian operation? A. I think it was too expensive.

Q. And is it not the fact that in the spring of 1938, in Shreveport, you asked or suggested to Crittenden that he come to Hungary in the summer of 1938 and inspect your operation? A. I rather doubt that, as he was much too busy in the refineries.

Q. Yes. A. And there was very little he could learn from an engineering standpoint.

Q. And is the man Somogyi to whom you referred, the man to whom you also referred in your letter which 1356 is Defendant's Exhibit 80, dated September 11, 1939? Do you see the name Somogyi? A. Yes. It says here that the mining authorities, the Hungarian mining authorities, wanted Dr. Somogyi.

Q. I see. This Somogyi is the same Somogyi is the man to whom you previous referred? A. You referred to him.

Q. Did you not identify him as an official or an employee of Transdanubia? A. I think he was for a very short while, upon the insistence of the Hungarian mining authorities. You see, in Hungary there is a regulation, if you mine, you have to have an official mining engineer, a classified mining engineer, classified by the Government, as supervisor of operations.

Q. The name of the corporation, Transdannbia, was Transdanubia Bauxit A. G., or "ah gay"? Is that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that A. G. stands for the German word for corporation, does it not? A. It means stock corporation, yes.

Q. My point is, it is a German word. A. No. You see the letterhead, you see the Hungarian name, and underneath the German name.

Q. But the Hungarian equivalent of A. G. is R. T.,
1357 isn't it? A. I think so, yes.

Q. And the office of Transdanubia Bauxit was located at "V Bathory-utca 5", in Budapest? Is that right? A. I think that was; if I remember correctly, the home of von Krausz, or it was the address of Dr. Saluschinscy—one of the two.

Q. I show you what looks on its face to be a letterhead of Transdanubia Bauxit, and invite your attention to the address and ask you if that refreshes your recollection as to the address of Transdanubia Bauxit. A. I think that is either the address of Dr. Saluschinscy's office. Dr. Timar, the manager, was an associate—it was a firm of lawyers—Dr. Timar was the associate of Dr. Saluschinscy, and after the death of Dr. Saluschinscy, he took over, the law firm; he is a lawyer.

Q. At any rate, I am not asking you about the letter, but the letterhead. That is the letterhead of Transdanubia Bauxit? A. I think so, yes.

Mr. Burling: I now wish to offer in evidence a document merely to show the letterhead, and I do not offer in evidence at this time any part of the body of the document. (To Mr. Gallagher:) Do you wish to look at the letterhead (handing the letter)?

1358 Mr. Gallagher: That is all right. We have no objection to the letterhead.

(Accordingly, the letterhead portion of the paper identified as Defendant's Exhibit 90 was received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. So you do recognize Defendant's Exhibit 90 to be the letterhead of Transdanubia Bauxit? A. I think so, yes.

Q. Thank you. A. That was the custom in Hungary, because very few people spoke Hungarian.

Q. And that is why, is it not, that the name of the corporation is set out both in Hungarian and in German? A. Yes; that is where the two languages are used in Hungary.

Q. Now, going back to your testimony of last Friday, I believe that you stated you had sent the wire which is Defendant's 82. Did you not state that?

Did you not state that? A. State what?

Q. That you sent this wire. A. Yes, certainly.

Mr. Burling: I believe it can be stipulated by the parties that Defendant's 82 is a wire sent between September 16 and September 19, 1939, Your Honor.

1359 Mr. Gallagher: That is right.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Defendant's 81-A was a letter to you from Giulini Brothers, dated September 16. A. That is not the letter the cable refers to.

Q. It is not? A. No.

Q. To what letter, in your opinion, does the— A. May I see the wire again?

Q. Yes. A. It is stated in the wire.

Q. The wire refers to Giulini's letter of September 16. A. Oh, yes; you are right, yes. That is a letter I rejected and I say I stick to my proposal of July 31.

Q. Yes. A. That is correct.

Q. In other words, Defendant's 81 is Giulini's letter to you. A. Yes.

Q. Defendant's 82 is your telegraphic reply to Giulini? A. Yes, in which I state—

Q. I am just trying to get this clear. A. In which I state—

Q. Thank you, Mr. von Opel. A. Yes.

1360 Q. Now, Giulini, in their letter to you, request you do that, to tackle with all your energy the resumption of production in the mines? A. Correct—and that is what I refused.

Q. Will you please do not volunteer.

If that is what they ask you, the answer is yes, and nothing more. A. Yes.

Q. And you replied—

"Your letter 16th September as before stand by my offer July 31 upon recent of order immediately ready to travel Budapest for purpose of starting production." A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you? A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. And your offer of July 31 was an offer to produce bauxite, was it not? A. Under certain conditions.

Q. At any rate you, shortly after September 16, 1939, indicated that you were ready to go to Budapest for the purpose of starting bauxite production, didn't you? A. Under the conditions that Mr. Koranyi would be—

Q. I don't care what the conditions were. If Mr. Gallagher wishes to ask you, he can.

You did say after September 16, you were ready

1361 to go to Budapest— A. Yes.

Q. —to produce bauxite? A. Yes.

Q. Thank you. By the way, when did Hungary join the Axis pact? A. I couldn't tell you that.

Q. It was before this date, at any rate, wasn't it? A. I don't think so, because if I remember correctly, in 1938 they were very close with Italy, and Germany was afraid at this time that Italy jointly with Hungary would stop the conquest of Austria.

Mr. Gallagher: If Your Honor please, in order to try to speed things up, we have gone along with Mr. Burling on all this 1938 and 1939 situation, which we agree happened, that would be considered in the production of bauxite and so on. But we can't see where it has any materiality in this matter at all.

Mr. Burling: I would be glad to make a statement of what my theory is.

Mr. Gallagher: I wish you would.

Mr. Burling: The fact is, as we shall establish by the text, that Hungary at this time was a member of the Axis.

We shall further establish that Mr. von Opel well knew that the bauxite which was being produced in Hun-1362 gary was going to the Giulinis, one of the principal fabricators of aluminum in Germany;

That he well knew that aluminum in Germany was then going to the Luftwaffe, the German Air Force.

We shall show that he continued his activities personally in the producing of bauxite, until just before he left, until three or four days before he left Europe.

We shall show at that time he had negotiated, himself, a contract to have Transdanubia continue to producing bauxite in ever increasing—well, in annually increasing amounts.

We shall show that Transdanubia did continue producing bauxite all during the war, which bauxite was going into the German war economy and the German Air Force.

And we shall show that it was the intention of Fritz von Opel that this happen.

Then at that point we will argue that since we show Uebersee and Fritz von Opel actively setting up the production of bauxite, through Uebersee's wholly owned subsidiary, Transdanubia, that the burden is then upon the plaintiff to show that after December 6 that condition in some way stopped.

We concede that Fritz von Opel personally was not engaged in those activities, because he was in internment here during most of the war. But the question is not whether Fritz von Opel personally engaged in these activities. The question is whether Uebersee is an enemy, because it was doing business in an enemy country, enemy occupied territory.

Hungary, of course, was an enemy country. The production of bauxite is of course doing business. And we think that since we can show, we believe, that Transdanubia itself did produce bauxite; that Fritz von Opel contracted that it would produce bauxite during a term which lasted well into the war; when we show all of his activities before the war, before America entered the war, but after the European war was being waged, to cause bauxite to be produced to go to Germany, that the burden is on Uebersee Finanz-Korporation to show that pattern of doing business in Hungary ceased on December 6.

Mr. Gallagher: Now, Your Honor, we will positively show the Court that there was no business done by Uebersee or by Mr. von Opel, subsequent to May, 1941. We categorically state we will convince the Court of that fact.

But, for the moment, all this camouflage Mr. Burling has thrown into the case, with letters from the Giulinis, they are not letters Mr. von Opel wrote, but letters the Giulinis wrote to him in 1938 and 1939—and the war between Germany and England had broken out.

But the camouflage they throw around this case, because von Opel, in Switzerland, and a citizen of Liechtenstein, and a neutral corporation, was still engaged in mining bauxite—and very little came out, a few thousand tons. But, regardless of what came out, they had 1364 the right to sell to England, like we were doing in this country, or to Germany, or elsewhere. It is only a camouflage, the whole thing. And we say, if this is going to continue, with documents, as to what transpired in 1939 and 1940, it is completely irrelevant.

The Court: The continuity may be important. I will permit it to be proved, and we will argue it at the end, when we will argue both sides.

Mr. Burling: Thank you, Your Honor.

I ask Your Honor, in the absence of some counter showing by my friends, to take judicial notice of what is set forth on page 474 of the World Almanac for 1947, as follows:

"Hungary joined (February 24, 1939) the Anti-Comminturn Pact, and signed (November 20, 1940) the German-Italian-Japanese Axis Pact.

"Hungary declared war on Russia June 27, 1941; on the United States and Great Britain, December 13, 1941."

Mr. Gallagher: We have no objection to Your Honor's taking judicial notice of the date that war was declared between Hungary and the United States. But when they joined the Axis Pact and all, we say, is completely irrelevant in this proceeding.

The Court: Let it go into the record, and I will hear your arguments on it at the end.

1365 Mr. Burling: I ask that a document, together with its translation, be marked Defendant's Exhibit 91 for identification.

(The documents referred to were marked for identification Defendant's Exhibits 91 and 91-A.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, Mr. von Opel, I show you a document of which Defendant's 91 is a photostat, and ask you if that is not the reply to your telegram which is Defendant's 90.

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, without repeating it any further at this time, do I understand the record should show that we have an objection to all this testimony with respect to 1939 and 1940, the years preceding the war?

The Court: Yes, you may have that understanding.

Mr. Gallagher: Thank you.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. You did receive this letter from Giulini, did you not? A. Yes, I think so.

Q. And that refers, again, to your leaving Zurich for Budapest, does it not? A. No; it only quotes my wire.

Q. And on October 4 Giulini again wrote you, confirming their earlier letter of the 19th, did they not?

Mr. Gallagher: What is the year, please?

1366 Mr. Burling: October 4, 1939.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. You recall receiving this letter, do you not? A. It is possible, yes.

Mr. Burling: I offer Defendant's Exhibit 92, which is a photostat of the letter which the witness has just examined.

1367 Q. You replied on October 28, 1939, did you not? I am showing you a document of which Defendant's Exhibit 93 is a photostat. A. Yes.

Q. And you say to Frick—and Frick, you said, was an official of Giulini, did you not? A. Yes, I think so.

Q. He was the head of the purchasing department, was he not? A. Yes.

Q. "Dear Mr. Frick: Since my trip to the United States is impossible at the present time, I intend to go to Hungary instead. I would be grateful to you, therefore, if you would let me know what result the conference of your firm with the other two refineries has had. I intend to stay for several weeks in Hungary, beginning November 10, and would be pleased if on this occasion we could meet in Budapest. I remain, Sincerely yours, Fritz von Opel."

Did you intend to go to Hungary? A. I was invited by some friends to come to Hungary.

Q. For what purpose? A. For hunting.

Q. You were well enough to go to Hungary for hunting in November, 1939, but your broken leg prevented 1368 you from going to Liechtenstein the same month for the purpose of taking the oath of allegiance in the meantime? A. Because I had an accident in the meantime.

Q. What was the nature of that accident? A. I had slipped and the leg was rather soft yet, so I hurt it again.

Mr. Burling: I offer Defendant's 94 in evidence.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I will ask you now to look at a document of which Defendant's Exhibit 94 is a photostat, and state whether or not that is a reply from Giulini from your letter of October 28, which bears the date of November 4, 1939. A. Yes.

Q. And this letter reads in part, does it not:

"It is therefore a fortunate coincidence because of your postponement of your trip to the United States you now intend to stay for several weeks in Hungary in order to be able to observe the development of the matter on the spot."

A. Yes; on the first, as you see by the heading, "Istvan Koronyi, Budapest," namely, "To the lawsuit in which we all were involved."

Q. It also refers, does it not, to the production of bauxite? A. Yes.

Q. When was this second accident to your leg, please? A. I think that happened after my return to Switzerland.

Q. After you returned to Switzerland from where? A. From Hungary.

Q. In other words, in the month of November, 1939, you did make a trip from Switzerland to Budapest? A. Yes.

Q. And that was for the purpose of speeding up production in your bauxite mine, was it not? A. I wouldn't say that.

Q. You did say that on November 10, 1939, did you not? A. No speeding up happened, Mr. Burling.

Q. I know, but the reason that you went from Switzerland to Hungary was to speed up production in your bauxite mine, was it not? A. The main purpose was to get this Koronyi matter settled, who was sitting on my neck since five years continuously defrauding me, and I had to pay all the public fees and wages and all other public charges.

Q. I show you a letter dated November 10, 1939, addressed to Walter E. Guyette of the Harvard Brewing Company, and ask you if you signed it. A. May I read the letter?

Q. Yes. (Pause) Have you read the letter? A. Yes.

Q. Did you sign it? A. Yes.

Q. Did you not tell Mr. Guyette on November 10, 1939, "I am now on the way to Hungary to speed up production in my bauxite mine, but I hope to be home in St. Moritz for Christmas"? A. Yes.

Q. Will you state whether or not it was not a fact that the purpose of your trip to Hungary was to speed up production in your bauxite mine? A. Yes, I thought it was possible to settle this Koronyi matter and start delivering bauxite to Switzerland.

Q. Delivering bauxite to Switzerland? A. Yes.

Q. You contracted to deliver bauxite to Germany on this occasion, did you not? A. I don't think that any large quantity was ever delivered, Mr. Burling.

Q. We will get through much faster if you will answer my questions. Did you not go to Hungary and enter in a contract to deliver bauxite to Germany? A. If you refresh my recollection.

Q. I will try to do that. Will you look at Defendant's Exhibit 96 and state whether that is not a letter dated 13 April 1940, which you wrote to Edgar Giulini in Ludwigshaven? A. Yes, I wrote this letter.

1371 Q. Will you look at the first sentence of the second paragraph. It reads, does it not: "Although our agreement clearly provides that we will pay these overdue fees, one half share each, I thought it nevertheless correct to advise you of the matter and to obtain your consent to the payment." What agreement were you referring to? A. I don't recollect that. If you show me the agreement.

Q. I will show you the agreement. I show you a letter dated March 10, 1940, addressed to Giulini, and signed Krausz and Timar, and ask you if that is not an agreement which you negotiated with Giulini brothers in Budapest. A. Yes, it is an agreement.

Q. And you negotiated in Budapest, did you not? A. An agreement, I should say, with a loophole.

Q. Whether or not it has a loophole, you negotiated it in Budapest? A. Yes.

Q. When did you do that? A. That must have been in the fall of '39.

Q. You recognize the signatures of Krausz and Timar, do you not? A. Yes, I do.

Q. And they appear on the third page of this document? A. Yes.

1372 Q. Written right under the stamp "Transdanubia Bauxite," and the Hungarian word for incorporated, is that correct? A. I don't know whether that is the word. I presume so. I don't speak Hungarian.

Q. This agreement provides, does it not, that Transdanubia undertakes to ship to Giulini at Ludwigshafen 100,000 tons of bauxite at a basic price of 10 R. M. f.o.b. car, and then at Suemeg, or Zalahalep stations. Those stations were where the mines were, is that right? A. Oh, no, they are stations on the River Danube.

Q. And then there is some more Hungarian geographical terminology:

"Shipment to be made from the 'Margot I-IV' and 'Edgar' mines, one-half of which is owned by you, one half by Mr. Lucovnik, engineer, and subject to the following conditions."

Then there is a paragraph on quality, a paragraph on discount, a paragraph on price, a paragraph on payment, and then the following:

"Shipments: Shipment of the 100,000 tons of bauxite shall be started in the spring of 1940 as soon as weather conditions permit. You undertake, to delive not less than 25,000 tons during the year 1940, another 35,000 tons during the year 1941, and the balance during the year 1942."

That would be 40,000 tons of bauxite in 1942, would it not? A. You just read it. Would you also read the next paragraph.

Q. I would be glad to go on reading:

"The obligation to make shipments terminates if bauxite of the agreed quality shall no longer be available in the mentioned mines in quantities which make mining commercially feasible, and if future shipments from other mines shall not be possible."

Do you want me to go on? A. No, that is sufficient.

Q. Did you negotiate such an agreement in 1939 with Giulini, or Giulini's representatives? A. I think Timar and Krausz made all those stipulations.

Q. I want to invite your attention to the first sentence of this document:

"On the basis of negotiations conducted by your Mr. Fritz von Opel, on the one hand, and by our attorney-in-fact, Dr. Georg Ballay, attorney at law in Budapest, we confirm the fact that we concluded with you the following supply contract."

Does that refresh your recollection that you negotiated this? A. Yes, together with those men, because those technical details and prices, and so on, I did not know, 1374 but I certainly was present.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, I apparently omitted to offer certain documents. I now offer Defendant's 90 through 97, inclusive.

Mr. Gallagher: Our objections are the same as to all this line.

(Accordingly, the documents above referred to were marked Defendant's Exhibits 90 through 97, inclusive, and received in evidence.)

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, I wonder if we could have a five-minute recess.

The Court: We will take a five-minute recess.

(Accordingly, a short recess was taken.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you look again at Defendant's Exhibit 96, which is the letter of April 13, 1940, from you to Giulini. This letter concludes, does it not: "If I can render you any service in the United States in business or private matters, I shall of course be glad to do so." A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Did you ever render Edgar Giulini any service in the United States? A. No, neither private nor in a business way.

Q. You state, do you not—and I am reading from the last sentence of the first paragraph on page 2 of the 1375 English translation—"Of course, I share your opinion that, within a few weeks, the entire dealings will run smoothly so that, in the long run, both of us, as I hope, will derive pleasure from our business association." A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. And then you go on to say, do you not: "On April 16 I am leaving on the Conte de Savoia for the United States where you can reach me, if necessary, at the address set forth below." A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. And then you set forth the address of your accountant, Bayer and Clauson. A. Yes.

Q. You meant by that letter, did you not, that at the time you were leaving for America you expected your bauxite problems to straighten themselves out so that thereafter you and Giulini would have a pleasant business association. A. Yes, that is expressed in the letter.

Q. And that is what you meant to say, is it not? A. You always have to take those remarks with a grain of salt.

Q. But is it not the fact that just before you left for America you expected Transdanubia to start functioning smoothly? A. No, I was not willing to put any 1376 money into it. I thought within a very short time they would come to a stoppage.

Q. You thought that Transdanubia would come to a stop, and at the same time you wrote to Giulini, "Of course I share your opinion that within a few weeks the entire dealings will run smoothly so that in the long run both of us, as I hope, will derive pleasure from our business association"? A. You must refer to this remark in the contract. There is what I call the loophole in this contract.

I already knew at this time that it was rather doubtful whether we ever would make big deliveries.

Q. What was the purpose, then, of entering into the contract to deliver a hundred thousand tons of bauxite, and writing this letter to Edgar Giulini? A. Because I wanted to get Mr. Koronyi off my neck.

Q. That is why you contracted to deliver a hundred thousand tons of bauxite? A. Under certain conditions.

Q. Koronyi was already off your neck at the time you wrote this letter, was he not? A. The situation was rather unclear, because Giulini had failed to really put Koronyi out of circulation. He still had some say in the matter.

Q. Hadn't he gone bankrupt in 1939? A. He was in difficulties, but Giulini failed to really finish the man.

1377 Q. Didn't Koronyi go bankrupt in '39? A. I think he personally went bankrupt, but these 50 per cent were not kept on his name but on the name, I think, of a relative of his. And this part, I think, that was the reason that Giulini could not get hold of him.

Q. Is it not true that on November 4, 1939, Giulini had written you as follows: "A substantial change in the situation, however, has occurred as a result of the bankruptcy of Koronyi, which we assume is now under you." I am reading from Defendant's Exhibit 94. A. That is what I thought at the time, but I think those 50 per cent mining rights were not on Koronyi's name, that was the reason the Giulini couldn't get repaid.

Q. Prior to April 13, 1946, you had frequent occasion to receive letters from Edgar Giulini, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. And you also received letters from Mr. Frick, did you not? A. Yes with always under the heading Koronyi.

Q. Wait a minute. Did you not receive letters from Frick of Giulini Brothers? A. Yes.

Q. I did not ask you a thing about the heading, did I?

A. No, I just wanted to refresh my recollection whether you were talking about those letters.

1378 Q. I am talking about letters which you received signed Edgar Giulini, or signed Frick. A. Which letters, what date?

Q. Did you not receive such letters? A. I received several letters.

Q. That is what I wanted to know, thank you. And you recognized the signature of Frick and Giulini, do you not? A. Yes, I think so.

Q. Now, Mr. von Opel, I show you a document entitled "Aide Memoire," which is Government's Exhibit 98, and ask you if you do not recognize the signatures of the four men who signed that document. The first signature is that of Edgar Giulini, is it not? A. I don't recognize it, but it is possible.

Q. And the second signature is that of Heinrich Frick, is it not? A. That is possible.

Q. At any rate, you recognize the signature of Georg von Krausz, do you not? A. Yes.

Q. And von Krausz had what position with Transdanubia? A. He was one of the managers jointly with Dr. Timar.

Q. Will you examine this document and see if it is not an aide memoire, or record of a conference held in the office of an attorney in which the parties were Trans-

1379 danubia and Giulini? A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. And it records an agreement entered into, does it not? A. Yes.

Q. Between Giulini and Transdanubia? A. Yes, apparently.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence.

Mr. Gallagher: Same objection that runs to all of these.

(Accordingly, the document above referred to was marked Defendant's Exhibit 98 and received in evidence.)

The Witness: This contract runs for three months.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did I ask you that? A. No.

Q. Haven't I asked you fifty times not to volunteer? A. Pardon me.

Q. You have lawyers, have you not, in this courtroom? A. Yes.

Q. And you know they will have a chance to ask you questions after I finish. A. I beg your pardon.

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 90-A, which you have previously identified as being the letterhead of Transdanubia; state, if you will, whether the signature on 1380 the right hand—there are two signatures—the right hand signature is not that of Dr. Timar. A. Yes, I guess it is.

Q. And that is written under the stamp, Transdanubia Bauxit, Aktiengesellschaft, is that right? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence. If Your Honor please, this is dated February 4, 1942, and refers to shipments of bauxite to Giulini Brothers from Transdanubia

Mr. Gallagher: Are you offering it?

Mr. Burling: Yes. I said I offer it in evidence.

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, we object very strenuously to this unless Mr. Burling can tie it in in some wise with Uebersee or Mr. von Opel. As the proof further will show, in our case neither Uebersee nor this witness, Mr. von Opel, had anything further to do with Transdanubia, as far as directing its operations or otherwise. As we will further prove to the best of the belief of this witness and of the corporation the mines had been leased in '41.

This exhibit, which Mr. Burling is now offering, purports to relate what was being done by Transdanubia with Giulini subsequent to that time. We feel convinced that it is completely irrelevant, and further that it is really incompetent to point the situation up. It would be similar to one in which an American corporation, or cor-1381 poration of another neutral, having a subsidiary in a country which became an enemy or ally of enemy, that the subsidiary acting on itself without directions from the parent company, or the subsidiary having leased its properties to a third party, and they being operated by a third party, in no wise goes to show that the parent corporation, or the holding company, or Mr. von Opel in any wise directed, aided, assisted, conducted or operated mines in the production of bauxite, and until Mr. Burling can tie this exhibit, Defendant's 90, into Uebersee or Mr. von Opel, then we feel that it is clearly objectionable.

The Court: I understood, and over your objection I have been admitting all of this testimony with regard to this transaction subject to its being connected up at least to the extent that it may give rise to a presumption of continuendo. Now, if it does not, you can move to strike it out at the end of the case, and you can argue that as part of your argument. I have to take these things provisionally, subject to their significance being shown at a later time.

(Accordingly, Defendant's Exhibit 90, having previously been received in evidence for a limited purpose heretofore specified, was received in evidence in its entirety.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. In any event, this document, 90-A, is signed by one of the managers of Transdanubia? A. Yes, that is signed by Dr. Timar.

1382 Q. Have you any reason to believe, Mr. von Opel, that at any time prior to V-E day Uebersee sold or otherwise divested itself of its ownership of Transdanubia? A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. What is that reason? A. I got lengthy report about the situation in Hungary in a letter dated March, '41.

Q. And that said what? A. I am coming to it. In addition to this letter I got numerous communi—

Q. I ask you what that letter said, please.

Mr. Gallagher: We have the letter, do you want to offer it?

Mr. Burling: No, I don't want to offer it. I want to see it.

Mr. Gallagher: You will see it at the proper time.

Mr. Burling: I now want to know from Mr. von Opel what the contents of the letter were, if you refuse to give it to me.

The Witness: You want to know the contents of the letter?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Yes. A. The managers begged me to invest capital in the mine because they had run completely out of money.

They had produced very little because the surface 1383 production was exhausted, and they suggested, and implored me to invest about 50,000 pengos so the deep mining could be started. I refused, and even previously, prior to this letter, and they told me in this letter that it would be deplorable if I would give up the corporation, and the implored me for the favor of the corporation, and they implored me for the favor of the cor- so that the mine could be opened.

Q. Yes. A. I refused that, and I wired both managers of the corporation that I would not invest any money, and they should get rid of the entire investment either by selling it or by leasing it in any way they saw fit.

Q. Yes? A. That is about all.

Q. This was a communication addressed to Transdanubia, is that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. My question, which I don't believe you answered— A. Pardon me, it was, that the gist of the letter Transdanubia wrote me, and it also shows my prior orders to them, and after I received the letter I immediately got in contact with them by wire.

Q. With whom by wire? A. With Transdanubia.

Q. But my question was, which you did not an-1384 swer: Have you any basis for belief that Uebersee Finan. Korporation, prior to 1945, prior to V-E Day, ever divested itself of its hundred per cent ownership of the shares of Transdanubia.

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, we submit that that has nothing to do with the situation—no, even if the question were that they retained their ownership, it would not constitute doing business to own stock, a hundred per cent owned in a subsidiary. I want to clarify that point at this time.

Mr. Burling: Your Honor, is that not a point for argument, after we know what we are fighting about?

Mr. Gallagher: I want to clarify the point at this time before we continue.

The Court: I have gotten your point. I will hear you on the matter.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. You know that Uebersee did by a series of transactions continue to extend a guarantee to Transdanubia through the year 1942, do you not? A. There was a guarantee given of altogether seven or eight thousand dollars.

Q. And that was extended in the year 1942 by Transdanubia, was it not? A. No, it was not extended. Transdanubia had received a loan from a Swiss bank through a Budapest bank.

Q. And the Swiss bank was guaranteed by Ueber-1385 see through Adler, is that not right? A. Definitely.

Q. And is it not right that that arrangement was continued, that Henggeler took steps on behalf of Uebersee in the calendar year 1942 to continue that arrangement? A. You entirely—

Q. Is it true or not? A. No, not in the way you say it. It was different. We had—

Q. Haven't you previously testified, Mr. von Opel, to the effect that that guarantee was extended in 1942?

Mr. Gallagher: If it will serve any useful purpose, Mr. Burling, we are willing to stipulate that during the period of '41 and '42, until the collateral was returned by a Swiss bank which it had been posted with, which in turn serves as a guarantee to a Swiss branch in Hungary, who in turn gave a guarantee to a Hungarian bank, who in turn made a loan to Transdanubia bank in '40, we will stipulate that when the bank advised Uebersee, and in three-month periods during '41 and '42 until the collateral was released, that Mr. Henggeler agreed that the collateral stay posted, we will stipulate that.

The Court: There are some documents here on it, as I remember.

Mr. Gallagher: We will stipulate that that is the 1386 fact.

Mr. Burling: I do not by my silence mean to agree that that is the fact. I think Henggeler requested, not agreed.

As to these original documents which are now being marked, if Your Honor please, we are under an agreement to return the originals to Giulini Brothers, and we therefore request a stipulation that we may withdraw the originals and substitute photostats for the record.

Mr. Gallagher: We have no objection that that, Your Honor. We would like a statement from Mr. Burling as to where the documents have been returned; as a matter of fact, they have been obtained from Mr. Giulini himself, his files?

Mr. Burling: Giulini Brothers.

Mr. Gallagher: Do we understand that neither of the brothers are going to be witnesses? One is dead, I believe.

Mr. Burling: Edgar Giulini is dead, I can't call him.

Mr. Gallagher: Is the other going to be a witness?

Mr. Burling: I don't believe so.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 99-A for identification and ask you if you can identify the stamp signature. Is it not Transdanubia Bauxit, Aktiengesellschaft? A. Yes.

Q. And the date of this letter is April 15, 1942, is it not?

A. Yes.

1387 Q. And is it not the fact that the signature on the right-hand side of the two signatures is that of Georg von Kraasz? A. I guess it is.

Q. Thank you.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence. Your Honor, this refers to the shipment of bauxite dated April 15, 1942.

(Accordingly, the document above referred to was marked Defendant's Exhibit 99 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 100-A for identification, and ask you if it is not the fact that the signature, that the stamped signature is Transdanubia Bauxit Aktiengesellschaft, and that the right-hand of the two signatures is that of Georg von Krausz. A. I am not so sure. It is very badly written. It might be. It starts with a "K".

Q. And is not the fact that the left-hand signature is that of Somogyi? A. I couldn't read it. I never saw the signature.

Mr. Burling: I offer this in evidence.

(Accordingly, the document above referred to was marked Defendant's Exhibit 100 received in evidence.)

1388 Mr. Burling: Your Honor, this letter to Giulini Brothers, dated April 20, 1942, reads:

"We have the honor of submitting to you herewith photostat of the official certificate concerning the analysis prepared by the Royal Hungarian Geological Institute of the 532,700 killograms of bauxite shipped by us in January of this year. Very truly yours, Transdanubia Bauxit, Aktiengesellschaft."

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I ask you to examine, Mr. von Opel, Defendant's Exhibit 101-A, on the letterhead of Transdanubia, and ask you if it does not bear the rubber stamp signature of Transdanubia, and if the signature on the left-hand is not that of Krausz. A. It looks to me like his signature.

Mr. Burling: This, if Your Honor please, refers to bauxite shipped "by us in the month of April, 1942."

(The document above referred to was marked Defendant's Exhibit 101 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I show you Defendant's 102-A, and ask you if that is not a document written on the letterhead of Transdanubia, addressed to Giulini Brothers, dated October 30, 1942. Is not the signature on the right hand of that Krausz, and on the left hand that of Somogyi? A.

1389 I can see on the right-hand side a "k". He writes very badly. But it might be Krausz.

Q. And it bears the rubber stamp, Transdanubia Bauxit? A. Yes, I can read that.

Mr. Burling: Without reading the letter in detail, Your Honor, this again relates to bauxite production and shipments in July, 1942.

(The document above referred to was marked Defendant's Exhibit 102 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you now examine Defendant's 103-A and state whether that is not written on the letterhead of Transdanubia, and has the rubber stamp signature of Transdanubia? A. Yes.

Q. And is it not dated March 18, 1943? A. Yes, it is.

Q. And addressed to Giulini Brothers? A. Yes.

Q. Is it not true that the signature on the right is that of Timar? A. Apparently.

Mr. Burling: I offer this, also. Your Honor, I would like to point out the second paragraph, which reads:

"Pursuant to negotiations carried on on October 13 and 14 in the office of Dr. Georg Ballay, Budapest, the 1390 following was agreed between you as lessee and us as lessor in partial amendment of the lease of March, 1940, and the subsequent agreements made."

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Mr. von Opel, does that refresh your recollection as to whether Transdanubia was the lessee or lessor of mining properties in 1940? A. The last I heard was this letter of sales of March, '41. This letter is entirely new to me. But if you let me read it, I might be able to interpret it.

Q. Does that letter not refer to Transdanubia as being the lessee? A. Yes, apparently.

Q. Have you any explanation of that? A. No, I have not.

Q. I show you a letter which is Defendant's 104-A, and ask you if that is not on the letterhead of Transdanubia, bearing the signature stamp of Transdanubia, and signed by Krausz. A. It looks to me like his signature.

Q. The one on the right? A. Yes.

Q. And this bears a receipt stamp of June, 1944, does it not? A. June 6, 1944, yes. There must be—it says 1391 here, 1924, apparently a typographical error.

Q. The Giulini receipt stamp is June 6, 1944? A. Yes.

Q. And that refers to production of bauxite in the month of February, does it not? A. And to the chemical analysis, yes.

Mr. Burling: That is all.

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, I might point out in the record in the pre-trial conference, and in Defendant's contentions, and so forth, the time during which all this doing business was alleged by the Defendant to have taken place was in the period from the 'thirties up to '42. It seems to me we are now getting further afield all the time. They themselves so stated in the pre-trial statement.

Mr. Burling: My friend, I think, is mistaken as to what our statement was. We agreed that as a legal conclusion it does not matter what—I withdraw my statement.

What we were trying to do was to bring it up to the date of vesting, and I am told—I did not take part in the pre-trial conference—that what was said was at least until the date my friend referred to.

Mr. Gallagher: No, it does not say that, Mr. Burling.

Mr. Burling: In view of the fact that my friend has deviated extensively—

Mr. Gallagher: It states right in the pre-trial proceedings, signed and taken before Judge Holtz-

1392 off, and signed by both parties, "Defendant claims that the plaintiff corporation was doing business in an enemy country, to wit, Hungary, from the middle 'thirties to 1942."

It seems to me we are getting further and further afield, and wasting more and more time on this thing.

Mr. Burling: Perhaps I could save time if I said I have come to the end of this line of proof.

Mr. Gallagher: Did the defendant sign this stipulation?

Mr. Burling: You swore to some interrogatories, too, that neither Fritz von Opel—

The Court: Gentlemen, let's try to get along with the testimony. I will give you an abundance of time to argue the case.

Mr. Burling: I am coming now, if Your Honor please, to a wholly different line of questioning, it has nothing to do with bauxite at all.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you ever have occasion to talk to Mason Houghland on the transatlantic telephone? A. I don't remember that. If you refresh my recollection as to the date and time.

Mr. Burling: I believe I forgot to formally offer 103 and 104. I now do so.

1393 (Accordingly, the documents referred to were received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibits 103 and 104.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Shortly after—that is, within a week after September 18, 1939—did you have such a conversation with Mason Houghland? The week following September 18, 1939? A. Do you mean a transatlantic call?

Q. Yes, I do. A. Between Switzerland and America?

Q. That is true. I will try to help you out. Were you staying at the Dolder Grand or Grand Dolder Hotel in Zurich? A. At this time, yes.

Q. And did you not receive a call from Houghland, who was in America? A. It is possible, I don't recollect it.

Q. Will you look at Defendant's Exhibit 105 and see if that is not a wire which you sent to Houghland on September 18, 1939? A. Oh, yes, I remember this wire.

Mr. Burling: I offer—

Mr. Gallagher: Just a moment, let us get a look at it, Mr. Burling. We don't have a copy.

Mr. Burling: I don't understand counsel's concern with a cable your witness says he sent.

1394 Mr. Gallagher: I am still asking to be permitted to see an exhibit before you offer it.

(The document was handed to Mr. Gallagher.)

Mr. Gallagher: No objection.

Mr. Burling: I now offer it.

(Accordingly, the document above referred to was marked Defendant's Exhibit 105, and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. This telegram is addressed, Mason Houghland, care of Spur Distributing Company; signed, Fritz, Doldergrand, Zurich:

"Overseas Investors intend selling participation to meet other obligations What I personally deeply regret Please communicate Ulrich Shreveport who is informed accordingly Intend to sail soon possible. Regards Fritz."

You sent this? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Who were the overseas investors who intended to sell a participation? A. At the time, as you know, the overseas stock was owned by about 15 different people, and I certainly after this set-up has cost me $50,000 to maintain, just for such a purpose, I certainly on a transatlantic wire didn't say that I was the one who 1395 owned it.

Q. When you refer to some 15 owners, you are referring to this transaction that Dr. Frankenberg told us about yesterday? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The transaction which you heard me characterize as a fraudulent transaction. I am not asking you to agree with it, but we are talking about the same thing, are we? A. If you talk about a fraudulent transaction, we certainly don't talk about the same thing.

Q. Well, the one which I characterize in questioning Frankenberg— A. Perfectly wrongly.

Q. Perhaps so, but it is the same transaction, at any rate. A. It was a full legitimate sale.

Q. We will come to that. That is what we are talking about, is it? A. Yes.

Q. When you say that it cost you some $50,000, this transaction also saved you hundreds of thousands of dollars in personal holding company taxes, did it not? A. You are entirely mistaken.

Q. Finally, the Government caught up with you in 1941, but before that you thought you were saving hun-1396 dreds of thousands of dollars in personal holding company taxes. A. How could I?

Q. Did you not? A. No.

Q. In 1939 you had not filed a personal holding company return for '36, '37, or '38, had you? A. Let me explain this whole matter a little bit more.

Q. Will you just answer my question, and then you can explain with Mr. Gallagher. A. What was your question?

Q. In 1939, the day you sent this telegram, Overseas or Uebersee, had not filed, and you had not filed, a personal holding company tax return for any year since 1935, had you? A. I don't know—nothing about the matter. This matter was attended to by the accountants and Dr. Henggeler.

Q. Don't you know that no personal holding company tax return had been filed for those years? A. That is perfectly possible, but you—

Q. All right, thank you. The fact is, is it not, that these Swiss nationals that the Union Bank of Switzerland found, executed proxies to vote the shares as instructed by Frima, is that not right? A. That is possible.

Q. Is it not right? A. I couldn't tell you, I think they did that.

1397 Q. So they had no power to direct the investment of Overseas at all, personally, did they? A. No, this whole transaction was an escrow agreement.

Q. Were proxies to vote the shares or agreements to vote the shares running to Frima? Is that not right? A. That is possible, I don't remember this detail.

Q. You do not think that the Swiss nationals had any power to vote the shares in accordance with their choice, do you? A. I don't think so, no.

Q. I don't either. So when you said that Overseas investors intend selling—and by the way, the participation you referred to here is, you mean, the Spur stock held by Uebersee, do you not? Well, Hougland was the president of Spur, was he not? A. Yes.

Q. And you were not cabling him about something else, were you? A. I think he intended to buy the spur stock.

Q. But you understood that Overseas investors intend selling participation to mean other obligations? You meant they intended to sell Spur Distributing, is that not right? A. That is possible. At this time we were rather—

Q. Is that not what you meant, don't you know? A. It is not said in the cable.

1398 Q. I said, is that not what you meant, sir. A. I don't remember that. If you show me Mr. Houghland's cable, I can tell you, we can fit it together.

Q. Did Mr. Houghland cable you or did he telephone you? A. I couldn't tell you. Anyhow, we were in a rather unliquid position, and the creditors of Overseas, who had advanced me quite a lot of money, told me I should get in a liquid position.

Q. What you were talking about selling was Spur and not some other stock, is that not right? A. It was never my intention to sell Spur, because it was a very good investment, but Mr. Houghland made suggestions, and if he had offered a fair price, we might have accepted it.

Q. Did you not cable him on the 18th, "Overseas investors intend selling the participation to meet other obligations What I personally regret"? Will you explain why you said that you deeply regret its doing something with respect to the Spur stock? A. Because I didn't want to indicate to him my financial situation.

Q. In other words, this cable was deliberately misleading, was it not? A. If you call that deliberately misleading, Mr. Burling, then the whole business life is deliberately misleading, all day long.

1399 Q. Your experience in business life is that people customarily lie to one another, is that right? A. Not at all, you see, but if you—

Q. Did you not lie to Mason Houghland when you told him that Overseas investors intended selling the participation, and that you personally regretted it? A. Do you think I should have told him that I—

Q. Did you not lie to him, I said. A. No, that is not a lie.

Q. Is it not a lie to tell him something that is contrary to the truth? A. Mr. Burling, do you really—if you deal—

Q. Will you answer my question, sir. A. I can't answer it this way.

Q. Do you know the difference between truth and falsehood? A. I think I know that very well, Mr. Burling.

Q. Was this cable true or false? A. If you want to sell—

Q. Was it true or false? A. How shall I explain it?

Q. Is it true or false? A. I can't answer this question.

Q. Can you answer any question truthfully? A. I think so, I try to do that all the time.

1400 Q. Have you in the courtroom? A. I try to do that all the time.

M. Ingoldsby: I object to this continued argument.

The Court: Sustained. We will adjourn until two o'clock.

(The noon recess was accordingly taken at 12:30 p.m. until 2 p.m.)

1402 Fritz von Orel, resumed the witness stand on behalf of the plaintiff and, being previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, during the noon recess have you been able to refresh your recollection that shortly after September 18, 1939, you received a trans-Atlantic telephone call from Mr. Houghland concerning the possibility that the Spur shares would be sold? A. I don't recollect this call, but it is possible that he called me.

Q. Didn't Mr. Houghland say to you that he was very surprised because he thought you were enthusiastic 1403 about the Spur shares? A. That is possible.

Q. And didn't you say to him that you agreed and regretted the decision to sell and, in fact, had done everything you could to prevent the sale? A. No, that is not quite a correct statement.

Q. In fact, didn't you tell Mr. Houghland that your father insisted upon the sale and that you could do nothing to change his mind? A. My father had nothing to do with the matter.

Q. Whether he did or not, isn't that what you told Mr. Houghland? A. No; definitely not.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Definitely. That would be fully inconsistent with my wire to Mr. Houghland.

Q. Your wire didn't correctly state the fact, did it? A. Yes.

Q. Did it? I thought you agreed that you could not say whether the wire was true or false before lunch? A. I can say this way, Mr. Burling. As you know, I was in an unliquid position, and if you want to deal with someone, you don't disclose your weak position.

Q. But the wire says investors who intended 1404 selling Spur stock? A. No.

Q. Your wire says practically that, doesn't it? A. Investors. It might have been better to say creditors.

Q. What creditors are you talking about? A. I am talking about those people who lent me money.

Q. Who were they? A. For instance, the Adler Bank. I owed money to the Adler Bank and the Nashville Bank. I owed money in Shreveport.

Q. Did they insist you sell the Spur stock? A. No, they didn't insist on selling the Spur stock. They told me to get into liquid position.

There was no special sale in their mind. They wanted me to get out of unliquid position. I didn't sell Spur but some other property.

Q. What did you sell? A. Some oil property.

Q. As a matter of fact, the oil properties were in bankruptcy at this time, weren't they? A. Oh, no.

Q. No? A. No, no; you are mistaken.

Q. Weren't your oil properties consolidated in 1405 Hurricane Oil Refinery? A. That was the refinery I had there.

Q. That is where your oil lands and oil wells were, too? A. Oh, no.

Q. Nothing went into Hurricane except the refineries; is that your testimony? A. If I remember, Hurricane was—I don't know whether anything was consolidated into it. As far as I remember, only the Shreveport properties went into it.

Q. And the Nashville Bank loan wasn't made until 1940, was it? A. I think there was a loan against the collateral of—you are speaking about Nashville?

Q. You said that the Nashville Bank requested you to get in a liquid position in September, '39.

I asked you if it wasn't true that you borrowed money from the Nashville Bank in '40? A. That is possible; yes.

I had borrowed money from the Adler Bank, and I think also in '39, because it has been years ago, and I think I already had borrowed $200,000 from the bank in Shreveport.

Q. But you referred a moment ago to a Nashville bank. That was in error, you realize that? A. That is in error; yes.

I was in unliquid position at that time.

1406 Q. Didn't you state to Houghland on the phone, shortly after September 18, 1939, that although you had some say in Overseas management, the real control and management was our father's? A. I never made such statement.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Definitely.

Q. Didn't you also state that your father had directed Frankenberg to sell the Spur stock? A. I never made such statement.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Definitely.

Q. Didn't you tell Mr. Houghland on the trans-Atlantic phone that you were trying to get your father to agree to give him an option on the stock for a short period? A. No; I never made such statement.

Q. Didn't you agree— A. (Interposing) And by the way, Mr. Houghland had an option. He had a right of refusal since '32 and '33.

Q. A right of first refusal, is that the same thing as an option? A. What do you mean by option?

Q. I don't know. What do you mean? You used the word. A. You asked me about option.

1407 Q. So I did. I am wrong.

Don't you know what an option is, Mr. von Opel? A. An option gives somebody some rights to exercise or not exercise.

Q. At a fixed price? Isn't there a difference between a right of first refusal and option? A. I think it is.

Q. Now, do you recall telling Mr. Worthington in the course of the New York interrogation, and I am reading from page 84, and I am now back to the same proposed sale of Spur stock in September of '39:

"As I recollect, it was Dr. Frankenberg who said: Wouldn't it be wise to get into a better cash position and sell one of the properties, but we never pressed the matter and nothing came out of it"?

A. That is possible. I told you the Adler Bank had given me some loans, and Dr. Frankenberg was advising me financially.

Q. So Dr. Frankenberg was pressing you to sell the Spur stock? A. You can't say pressing.

Q. But he was pressing you to sell the stock? A. No, not pressing.

Q. Well, he was insisting? A. He was only concerned with Spur, with my liquid or cash position, so to 1408 say.

Q. Didn't you tell him that you agreed to give Houghland an option on the Spur stock at this time? A. That is possible. I can't recollect the details. I think Mr. Houghland wanted an option.

Q. How did you learn he wanted an option? A. He must have wired me.

Q. How do you know he must have wired you? How do you know he didn't telephone? A. Because usually I didn't telephone.

Q. Don't you know, Mr. von Opel, that the long distance telephone records from your Palm Beach house in Florida show you made 105 long distance calls in the six-month period ending in May, 1941?

Mr. Gallagher: Do I understand you mean trans-Atlantic calls?

Mr. Burling: Long distance.

Mr. Gallagher: There is a big difference. I wish you would clarify that as to which you are discussing.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. In the six-month period ending May, '41, didn't you make 12 trans-Atlantic phone calls? A. Trans-Atlantic phone calls?

Q. Yes. A. I don't recollect that.

1409 Q. Didn't you make calls to Wiesbaden, Budapest, Zurich, and London? A. That is entirely out of my mind, and I rather doubt that very much, because normally I don't use the trans-Atlantic telephone because you could communicate much cheaper by wire or cable.

Q. Did you have a cable from Mr. Houghland in which he asked for an option? A. About which time are you speaking now?

Q. September, '39, sir. A. Well, in between you spoke about Palm Beach.

Q. That was with reference to your habit of using the trans-Atlantic telephone.

I am going back now to September, '39. A. You want to know in which Mr. Houghland communicated with me?

Q. That is right. A. I don't remember.

Q. Are you certain he didn't talk to you on the trans-Atlantic phone? A. I never said it was perfectly certain.

Q. Are you now? A. It is possible but I am sure I didn't call him.

Q. Mr. von Opel, it is unnecessary to waste so much time every day in discussion.

1410 I have asked you: Don't you remember that he called you? A. I told you I don't remember.

Q. Now, was it your intention to sell Spur stock? A. No. I considered it a very good property and I wanted to keep it.

Q. Why did you send the wire to Mr. Houghland then, Defendant's 105? A. Because if Mr. Houghland would have made a good offer, I might have sold Spur.

Q. That does not invite an offer from Mr. Houghland to sell Spur? A. No. Mr. Houghland wanted to buy it, you see, and I indicated to him that I would be willing.

Q. You think Mr. Houghland indicated to you before you sent the wire that he wanted to buy the stock; is that your testimony? A. I don't recollect these details. I only—

Q. (Interposing): That is not just a detail. Isn't it important whether you tried to sell the stock or Houghland first tried to buy it? A. I think it started—I am not sure about the detail, but I think it started with Mr. Houghland expressing the wish to buy.

Q. You think first Mr. Houghland expressed the 1411 wish to buy and then you sent the wire to him; is that your testimony? A. I am not sure about this detail.

Q. Is it your best recollection that that is the way it was? I understand you are not sure. What is your best recollection? A. It is so long time ago and nothing came out of it, I really don't remember it.

Q. You have been interrogated about this time and time again? A. About the wires?

Q. Yes. A. This one wire I was shown in '46 in New York.

Q. And you have tried to recall this transaction, have you not? A. I cannot recall.

Q. You don't know whether Mr. Houghland first communicated with you or you sent a wire? You don't know which was first? A. No, I don't.

Q. And you have no opinion as to which is more likely? A. No, I could not tell you.

Q. Now, in 1941, you saw Mr. Houghland again, did you not? A. In which part of the year?

1412 Q. Did you at any time in the year 1941 see Mr. Houghland again? A. Oh, yes. He phoned me and wanted to see me in the beginning of the year.

Q. Did you see him? A. Yes; I think he asked me.

Q. Did you see him? A. To meet him in Savannah. I saw him several times in Savannah.

Q. In '41 you saw him several times? A. I think I saw him in Savannah, and I think I saw him in New York.

Q. In '41 in New York? A. That is what I recollect right now.

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 106 and ask you if this is a copy of a letter you received from Mr. Houghland?

I wish to show it to your counsel first.

By the way, do you see Mr. Houghland in the courtroom? A. Yes.

Q. He is the gentleman sitting inside the rail on the right? A. Yes.

Q. Will you look at Defendant's 106 now and state whether or not you received that shortly after 1413 January 13, 1941. A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence.

(The document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 106.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Look at Defendant's 107 and state if that is not a letter in your handwriting in which you wrote to Mason Houghland? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: Thank you.
I offer that in evidence.

(The document referred to was marked and received in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit 107.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, Mr. Houghland indicated to you that he wanted to see you and discuss a matter of business? A. Yes.

Q. Will you state what the discussion was in the DeSoto Hotel in Savannah, Georgia? A. He was very much concerned about the general political situation, and he asked me what would happen to Spur in case of war would break out.

Q. What did you say? A. And I told him, he need not to worry. These were my worries and not his.

1414 Q. What else did you tell him? A. He started to dig into me, and he wanted to know a lot of personal, about my personal affairs, and I got somewhat suspicious about all these questions.

Q. Will you state what the questions were, please? A. He wanted to know who was behind Overseas, and also things which were no concern of his.

Q. Just go on and tell us as fully as you can what Houghland said to you in Savannah in January, '41? A. I can only give you general impressions. I was under the impression it was the questions he asked me were none of his business.

Q. I didn't ask you— A. (Interposing) Nothing to do with the operation of Spur.

Q. I didn't ask you your impression of his questions. I asked you to state them as fully as you can remember. A. I don't recollect anything, any single word of it.

Q. You have no recollection of any addition to what I have just asked you; is that correct? A. He started digging into me, and he wanted to know where the stockholders of Spur were, of Overseas were.

Q. Did he ask you anything else? A. No; that was the main question, and I got suspicious about this insistence because I had been warned previously against Mr.
1415 Houghland's loyalty. I gave him some wrong explanations.

Q. State what the wrong explanations are. A. I told him that Overseas was owned by some South Americans.

Q. And that was a lie, was it not?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Just a second. I object to that characterization of the statement.

The Court: Was it true or not, he asked him. I shall permit that.

The Witness: It was what you call a bum steer. I wanted to find out because I had no business dealings whatsoever in South America, and I knew that if this name South America would have come out that Mr. Houghland gave me away, and it came out through the FBI exactly a year later.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. In other words, will you agree Mr. Houghland was loyal to his country, rather than to you?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object to that.
The Court: I think that is argumentative.
Mr. Burling: It is withdrawn.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, some 36,000 shares of Harvard Brewery belonging ultimately to Uebersee was put down in the Monte Franco Company, wasn't 1416 it? A. No; this is entirely incorrect, Mr. Burling.

Those shares belonged to my wife, and they were when Adler—in Switzerland, when the people feared the Germans might enter Switzerland, Adler transferred a lot of their securities to their South American company.

Q. You say it wasn't Uebersee's? It belonged to your wife? A. Yes.

Q. How did she acquire them? A. I had given them to my wife.

Q. When did you give them to your wife? A. I don't remember the exact time.

Q. Did you ever file a gift tax indicating you gave the South American securities to your wife? A. That was done in Switzerland, and these shares, Mr. Burling, weren't kept in the name of some South American corporation, as you say, but were kept on my wife's account with Bleichroeder in New York, and there they were in New York.

If my wife had tried to hide something, she would not have left these shares right there for everybody to see.

Q. Now, going back to your conversation in the DeSoto Hotel in Savannah, Georgia, with Mr. Houghland, you didn't tell him at that time you were the beneficial owner of Uebersee and that you were a Liechtensteinean 1417 national, and hence would be a neutral, did you?

A. It is possible that he asked me about my citizenship.

Q. But you didn't say anything to him about, even if war between Germany and the United States would break out, you were the beneficial owner, and you would be a neutral, did you? A. You are asking me two questions at once. Let me answer the first one first.

It is possible that I told him that I was a Liechtensteinean citizen.

Q. Of course, it is possible that you did, but did you? A. I don't recollect that.

Q. You have no recollection of having said that to him? A. It is absolutely possible I told him.

Q. Of course, it is possible. It is possible you told him that you were a Chinaman, but what did you tell him? A. If he asked me, I think I have given him an answer.

Q. Did he ask you? A. I don't recollect whether he asked me.

Q. Now, the second part of the question: You didn't say to him that if war between Germany and the United States would break out the Uebersee shares would be neutral because you would be the beneficial owner, and you were a neutral? A. To be an absolutely correct 1418 explanation, I don't recollect whether we went into this matter.

Q. You have no recollection that you did, do you? A. That would be in contrast to what I thought previously. I think I told him that some South Americans were interested in it.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, in '39, Uebersee had invested about a half million dollars in Argentina, hadn't it? A. No, sir; you are badly mistaken.

Mr. Burling: I ask a concession that Defendant's 108 is a photostatic reproduction of a book of account of the plaintiff corporation.

Mr. Gallagher: If you say so, Mr. Burling, we are satisfied.

Mr. Burling: Thank you.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I show you a book which bears the title, the translation of which appears as participations and securities.

Do you recognize that volume? A. Not right now.

Q. It is conceded by your counsel to be a photostatic reproduction of an account book of Uebersee Finanz-Korporation. The title of the book is Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, Limited, Liestal, and the English words, participation and securities.

Now, I open this.

1419 Mr. Ingoldsby: What are you attempting to prove by this book?

Mr. Gallagher: With respect to our concession, let us have it straight so that I don't put you on a wrong track. Dr. Kaufmann is in back. I don't know if it is his book or personal, but we concede you got the book from us.

Mr. Burling: Thank you.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I am going to show you the page which refers to Argentinian participation, and open the book to that page and hand it to you and ask you to state the meaning of the entry which I have just shown you. A. Without seeing the connecting sheets, that is lined out or crossed out, as you see, so that doesn't mean a thing.

Q. It doesn't mean anything? A. No.

Q. What did it mean before it was crossed out? A. As far as I remember at this time, some Swiss banking group wanted to give me a loan or credit of about $300,000.

Q. State what date? A. It wasn't an investment of mine in Argentina. I hadn't any money at the time.

Q. Translate the words at the top of the page. A. It means participation, Argentina.

1420 Q. What does the top word mean? A. Participation.

Q. Would you explain what these entries mean, if you can read them? A. They are lined out, Mr. Burling.

Q. I understand that. A. But without seeing the connecting sheet--

Q. (Interposing) You may look at the connecting sheet. Please do so. A. How can I from one sheet?

You asked me about one sheet and you asked me yesterday about this income of 2.6 million dollars, and then I went into this matter what you gave this time, but you didn't ask me on this.

It was not in a book of Overseas but a question of testifying about that it was my personal book. It wasn't a book of income.

Q. Do you mean that your counsel— A. (Interposing) Or division of assets.

Q. Do you mean that your counsel delivered under a court order requiring him to produce books and records of the Uebersee Corporation, and they delivered to us an account book of yours personally; is that your testimony? A. No, Mr. Burling.

You wanted the books of Overseas and now my 1421 private accounts are sent.

Mr. Burling: We didn't ask for them.

Mr. Gallagher: You just got them. That was the point.

Mr. Burling: We were not told that until just now.

Mr. Gallagher: We weren't either.

The Witness: I was checking the matter. I could not answer you.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. What is this entry? A. It shows I had been given a line of credit of $300,000 by a group of Swiss bankers, and I had a line of credit against which I had pledged the Spur stock as their collateral until the end of '39.

Q. What did you intend to do with the credit in Argentina? A. That has nothing to do with Argentina.

Q. I thought you got the line of credit in Argentina? A. Yes.

Q. What did you intend to do with the credit in Argentina? A. You misunderstood me. I went to a group of Swiss bankers which had gotten together and had given me a line of credit, and I told you I was rather unliquid at the time, and I needed money, and so they loaned me the money against several collaterals, and among these collaterals were Spur and Harvard shares.

1422 Q. Will you explain what the credit in Argentina was to be used for? A. There was no credit in Argentina.

Q. Where did Argentina come into the picture at all? Just explain it. A. I tried to explain to you. It was a Swiss banking group, and they have, some of these bankers had participation in Argentina, and I wanted credit, and they gave me a credit, an Argentine credit, or something of this sort.

It was a group of Swiss bankers and it had nothing to do with Argentina. It was a loan of $300,000 credit which I had for four or five months, and which was cancelled.

Q. And that is why the line is drawn through the page? A. I could not tell you without checking on the relating sheets first.

Q. Is it customary in Swiss business practice to record credit extended to you in inventory of participations and securities? A. I could not answer that, but I will gladly go into it and show you the corresponding sheets.

Q. But you have at the moment no better explanation of what that entry is doing in the book? A. I am not a bookkeeper, Mr. Burling. I only can state you the principal facts.

1423 Q. Now, on this occasion in the DeSoto Hotel in Savannah, in January, '41, did you have any further conversation with Mr. Houghland? A. If you refresh my recollection.

Q. Did you tell him— A. (Interposing) We talked for several hours.

Q. Did you tell him that you were thinking of acquiring a yacht or sea-going boat? A. In '41? Yes, I think I was interested in yachting.

Q. The question wasn't what you were interested in, but what you told Houghland.

You did tell him something about a yacht, didn't you? A. It is possible.

Q. Didn't you show him navigational charts of the Atlantic Seaboard of the United States? A. I think I intended to sail—

Q. (Interposing) I didn't ask you what you intended. I asked you: Didn't you show charts to Houghland?

Mr. Gallagher: I can't see the relevancy. I think we are getting into irrelevant matters.

Mr. Burling: It is not irrelevant if you permit me to go on for two more questions, and I will show you the relevancy.

Mr. Gallagher: You could go on for half an hour and it is still irrelevant.

1424 Mr. Burling: I am coming to a relevant point almost immediately.

The Witness: I was sailing at the time in Florida.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I didn't ask you what you were doing. You were in the DeSoto Hotel at the time I was talking about. A. Yes? Pardon me, but you were asking me about navigational charts.

Q. I asked you if you didn't show navigational charts to Houghland? A. It is possible.

Q. Did you? A. I don't recollect, sir. It wasn't anything of any importance.

Q. Well, is it not a fact that Mr. Houghland stated to you in words or substance as follows;

You ought to get rid of these charts; after all, Fritz, you are a German, and if we go to war with Germany and you are found in possession of these navigational charts, it might get you into trouble? A. I don't recollect that, but it was possible that Mr. Houghland made the statement.

Q. You have no recollection of that? A. No.

1425 — I kept those charts in New York in my apartment, and nobody ever objected to it.

You could buy them everywhere for 25 cents all during the war.

Q. Well, in any event, if Mr. Houghland did make that statement, you didn't correct him and say: I am not a German; I am a Liechtensteinean national? A. Now, just a minute ago you asked me whether he asked me, whether Mr. Houghland, whether I was a Liechtensteinean citizen, and I said if he asked me, I answered him so.

Now, all of a sudden, he asked me whether I am a German. That is contradictory; and certainly if he would make such a statement, I would have objected to it.

Q. But you have no recollection of objecting? A. I may have said—

Q. (Interposing) Please will you answer the question and not make a speech.

You have no recollection of having told Mr. Houghland: You are wrong; I am not a German; I am a Liechtensteinean? A. If Mr. Houghland—

Q. (Interposing) Will you answer the question? Do you have any recollection of having said to Houghland: You are wrong, Mason; I am not a German; I am a Liechtenstein? A. If I must—1426 Q. (Interposing) Do you have any recollection of that, sir? A. Pardon me.

Q. Do you have any recollection of that? A. I only—

Q. (Interposing) Do you have any recollection, and I do not want to know your hypothesis.

Do you have any recollection now in your mind? A. I don't recollect that Mr. Houghland made such statement.

Q. And so— A. (Interposing) If he made the statement—

Q. (Interposing) Please stop. You are required to answer the question.

You have no recollection presently in your mind that you made any such statement to Houghland, do you? A. No, I don't remember.

Q. Thank you.

Is that meeting in the DeSoto Hotel not the last time you saw him until you saw him in this courtroom? A. No, I don't think so.

Q. Will you state where else you think you saw him? A. If I am not mistaken, I saw him in New York afterwards.

Q. What happened on that occasion? A. I think 1427 that was at the occasion of some directors meeting, if I am not mistaken.

Q. Do you remember when that took place? A. I think it was then twice. I remember, anyhow, I remember an incident in New York which took place in the office of my accountants, Bayer & Clauson.

Q. Will you state the incident, please? A. The Spur Corporation had filed a record with the Treasury, had to file a report with the Treasury stating the names and nationalities of the officers and directors of Spur Corporation, and in this list of stockholders or, rather, officers and directors, one of the board members, a certain man by the name of Ulrick, who was an American citizen for 30 or 40 years, they answered this question by saying, nationality unkonwn.

Behind my name, instead of saying, Liechtensteinean citizen, they answered, traveling on Liechtenstein passport, and furthermore, without being asked about it, they had added that I possessed huge, or considerable or big interests, in Germany, and that my family or parents and my sister was living in Germany.

About this report to the Treasury, I raised hell there in the office of Bayer & Clauson in the presence of Mr. Houghland, and told him how he would let go such a report by the Spur Corporation, and he begged my pardon.
1428 He didn't do it, he said, and it must have slipped through Mr. Ryan's, who did it, and I didn't believe that at this time because Mr. Ryan knew even less about me than Mr. Houghland.

Q. And that was the last time you saw Mr. Houghland until now? A. It is possible that there was another meeting on account of bonus, or so to be paid some time later. I don't remember exactly when this meeting took place about which we are speaking now, whether that was in the summer of '40 or '41. I think it was in '41.

Q. Now, coming to another topic, you recall that the Miami hearing board questioned you at great length about your trips into Germany after you left Germany; is that right? A. Yes.

Q. And you understood that they were trying to tell the degree of relationship that you had kept up with Germany, isn't that right? A. Yes, and don't overlook one thing, Mr. Burling. All my records and files have been taken, and I was unable to reconstruct—

Q. (Interposing) The answer to my question is yes. If you want to make argument, you can ask your lawyer who is there to argue for you. Please don't argue 1429 with me. A. I am trying to be cooperative.

Q. Specifically, isn't it true that the hearing board asked you about trips which you made to Germany after proceedings against your father were settled? Isn't that so? A. I don't recollect it.

Q. I will read to you from page 89 of the Miami record, referring to the settlement of proceedings, and weren't you asked this question:

"Question: I believe you said you came into Germany a couple of times after that?

"Answer: Yes; after the matter was settled.

"Question: That was after 1938?

"Answer: After thirty—it was settled in 1935.

"Question: You mean you went on hunting trips?

"Answer: I was, I think, hunting with my father. He had this estate, and he asked me to do away with some deer on it, and I shot about 15 or 20 deer from the estate."

Now, do you recall that testimony?

Mr. Gallagher: Which hearing is that?

Mr. Burling: It is the Miami hearing.

Mr. Gallagher: There was more than one.

Mr. Burling: There is only one Miami hearing of which you or I have record.

Mr. Gallagher: There was also one in 1942, and one in the fall of '43, of which we have copies. In addi-1430 tion, there is one that is missing, and we don't know what was asked or stated at that hearing.

Mr. Burling: May I state to the Court: We were required by Judge Holtzoff to produce all the portions of the alien enemy hearing file that we intended to use in the trial, and we complied with that, and counsel have asked us in open court and privately, and we have repeatedly told them we do not have any more files, and we cannot give them those we do not have. They are in possession of all the hearings. Of course, we have our Department of Justice memorandum, but all the hearings we are in possession of have been furnished to counsel.

Mr. Gallagher: I accept Mr. Burling's word and it is not quibbling with him, but I wish to keep before the Court that there was a hearing held at which questions and answers were elicited that nobody knows what was stated or what was answered, and we want the record to reflect that.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. No, didn't you go on, after referring to the shooting of these deer, and state that you had made a trip to Kampen, and that you were visiting a lawyer there, a lawyer of mine, Mr. Gros? A. Yes.

Q. That is Dr. Gros, who is sitting in the court-
1431 room today? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you visiting him in Kampen or was he visiting you? A. I think he was at the seaside.

Q. I didn't ask you about the seaside. I asked you were you visiting him or was he visiting you? A. I went there for a business discussion with him.

Q. Please answer my question. I didn't ask you why. I said: Was he visiting you or were you visiting him? A. I was visiting him, but he had no house there. He was living there and I went there and talked with him.

Q. But you or your wife did have a house there? A. My wife had a cottage, a two-room cottage.

Q. Where was Mr. Gros staying? A. He was staying five or seven miles or so from us, in Westland.

Q. And you were staying with your wife, weren't you? A. Yes; for several weeks.

Q. So you were misleading the Miami board, were you not, in stating you went to visit Mr. Gros when you, in fact, were staying in the house rented by your wife? A. Mr. Burling, there I expressed my intention to go to Westland to meet Mr. Gros.

Q. But you omitted telling the hearing board that you were not visiting Mr. Gros but staying in the house 1432 rented by your wife; isn't that true? A. I thought that was of no importance, however.

Q. You didn't think the hearing board wanted to know, after you had left Germany, that your wife was renting a house there? A. I thought it was brought out in the hearing that she was.

Mr. Gallagher: I want to make a point in connection with the questions and answers elicited, Your Honor. We are well aware that these enemy alien hearings are ex parte and star chamber proceedings, and we don't know how the word visit was defined.

Mr. Burling: Perhaps so, but he should ask that on further redirect examination, or on argument to Your Honor.

I should be permitted to bring out any additional facts that there are in the record of concealment and deceit on the part of this witness concerning his trips to Germany in the proceeding.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, going on, didn't you tell the Miami board that the remaining time you were in Germany was in '39 when you visited your father in Wiesbaden? A. I guess so, if that is in the record.

Q. And the fact is that you were in Germany at least once in every year between '33 and '39, inclusive?

1433 A. I told you before that.

Q. Isn't that the fact, sir? A. That is possible.

Q. I didn't ask you about possible. A. Now, I have to get my file.

Mr. Gallagher: I am having difficulty following Mr. Burling's questions myself, and I don't want to annoy him, but this statement he is talking about, it is the settlement and the time his father had paid the fine.

Mr. Burling: Is counsel making an objection?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I am asking if it is not a fact in every year from '33 through '39, inclusive, you were not in Germany at least once? A. That is possible.

Q. I didn't ask you if it is possible. Don't you know it to be a fact? A. If you want to know that, I will be pleased to tell you that now after.

Q. Don't you now know the facts? A. I now know the facts.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you were in Germany every calendar year from '33 to '39, inclusive? A. I think I was.

Q. Thank you.

1434 Now, during the period from January 1st, '33, to December 31st, '39, you were frequently in Germany for fairly long periods of time, were you not? A. No.

Q. How many visits did you make to Kampen during this period? A. I don't recollect that.

Q. Didn't you make visits on at least four separate summers, visits lasting between two and six weeks? A. No, I don't think so.

Q. What is your best recollection how many visits you made to Kampen and how many days you stayed there? A. I don't have any record showing that and no possibility of checking it, except going through this file of Overseas.

Q. Haven't you done that? A. And out of this file I try to reconstruct, and I have done it very thoroughly where I have been from the time I left Germany until the time I arrived in the United States.

Q. All right. If you have done this thoroughly, tell us what the facts are and figure out as closely as you can—A. (Interposing) Based upon these records, where I have been?

Q. Tell us what the facts are, won't you, please?

1435 A. The facts are that all this time from my leaving Germany until the outbreak of the war, I was in Switzerland 35 per cent of the time.

Q. Thirty-five per cent of the time? A. Yes.

Q. What per cent of the time were you in Germany?

A. In Germany 9 per cent, somewhat less than 9 per cent, and in America 34 per cent. In foreign countries other than America and Switzerland, 13 per cent.

Q. This is going from what period to what period? A. From the time I left Germany until the outbreak of the war.

Q. That is, you talk about 1929, now; is that right? A. No; '41.

Q. What is the beginning of that period? A. In the beginning of this period is December, '29, when I left Germany.

Q. And you go to December 7, 1941? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you added a two-year period in which you were residing in the United States, or in Antwerp. Have you figured out the percentage since October 5th, '31? A. I would have to refigure that.

Q. I want to know something else. I want to know what time you were here until the outbreak of war? A. 1436 I didn't figure it out.

Q. Will you do so this evening, please? A. Well, I will try to do that.

Q. You will agree it would be more than 10 per cent because the two years previously you were in America and Belgium? A. I will try to figure it out.

Q. But you will agree it would be more than 10 per cent, won't you? A. I have to figure it out.

Mr. Gallagher: Could we ask: What are you trying to establish with this last questioning?

Mr. Burling: I will be glad to tell you. I am trying to show, to attack the witness' credibility by showing that he made a determined effort before this hearing board to establish that he was very, very infrequently in Germany, and now it turns out he was in Germany a great deal.

Mr. Gallagher: Even if it were true, which we deny, where is it material? What materiality does it have?

Mr. Burling: He lied to the enemy alien hearing board, and it attacks the witness' credibility, in my opinion.

The Court: I think you can raise that question after he has finished.

Mr. Burling: I will go on then.

By Mr. Burling:

1437 Q. Now, coming to the transaction which is covered on the chart by a box with a "X" painted over it, as I understand it, in 1934 you transferred the Uebersee shares to Frima; is that correct? A. Yes; about this time.

Q. And then in '36 a transaction involving the Union Bank of Switzerland took place; is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is the following an accurate summary of what happened?

One, it was agreed between Frima and the Union Bank that Frima was transferring to the Union Bank all but three shares of Uebersee; is that right? A. Yes.

Q. Two, the Union Bank would purport to distribute the remaining Uebersee shares to the credit of clients, numbering more than ten; is that correct? A. I don't remember this detail, but along this line; yes.

Q. You don't remember the detail? A. It was more than 15 clients or so.

Q. Who handled the transaction? A. Between Dr. Henggeler and the management Bank Gesellschaft.

Q. Did Dr. Frankenberg give Dr. Henggeler in-1438 structions to do this? A. No; it was Dr. Henggeler's idea.

Q. Did he consult you about it? A. Certainly. We talked it over.

Q. But you don't remember the nature of the contract with Swiss Union Bank. A. I am wondering about the one figure you mentioned. You said ten members, and I think there were fifteen shareholders.

Q. All right. I said more than ten. A. Oh, pardon me: I understood ten.

Q. And wasn't it agreed between Frima and the Union Bank that the bank's clients would give an option which ran first to the bank and then from the bank to Frima, so that Frima could buy back the shares at the purchase price? A. It was an escrow agreement; yes.

Q. Is my statement correct or incorrect? A. Yes, I think it is correct.

Q. Thank you. And fourth, it was agreed that the purchasers could require the bank and then Frima to buy back shares at that price, was it not? A. Yes; to the original selling price.

Q. In other words, either of you could require the transfer back to Frima? A. Yes.

Q. At the original selling price? A. Yes; including interest and charges.

1439 Q. Well, as a matter of fact, the interest was fixed, was it not, so that the so-called purchasers were to be guaranteed a dividend of 6 per cent, irrespective of how the Uebersee shares were made out? A. That is correct, yes. I cannot—

Q. Thank you. Thank you. I haven't asked you another question.

And it was further provided that there was to be a contractual obligation on the part of the so-called purchasers that they would either deliver proxies to the bank, which would then deliver them to Frima, or that the purchasers would agree to vote the shares in accordance with the Frima instructions? Isn't that correct? A. I think that is correct.

Q. And was it not further agreed that Frima would not withdraw the purchase price from the Swiss Union Bank, but would leave the purchase price in the bank as a guarantee that it would be prepared to buy back the shares? A. I think that was done.

Q. And it was also provided, wasn't it, that if Frima wished to withdraw the purchase price and substitute securities, that it must put up a margin of 40 per cent? A. Yes; that is a natural thing to do.

Q. Thank you. Was it not also provided that the Swiss Union Bank would deposit the Uebersee shares with a 1440 bank called Bank in Baden? A. I think that is part of the contract, yes.

Q. And it was even provided, was it not, that Frima should pay the Bank in Baden the deposit fee for holding the Uebersee shares? A. Yes, I think that is in the contract.

Q. Thank you. Now, will you not agree that it was a matter of no interest to the purported purchasers whether the real value of Uebersee went up or down, because they were guaranteed their purchase price back? A. They were safeguarded, yes.

Q. They were safeguarded. And if the stock went up, it wouldn't do them any good, because Frima had the right to get the shares back, at the original price? A. Certainly. I wanted to be in control.

Q. And you remained in control, didn't you? A. By the right of repurchase.

Q. By the right to have Frima control the voting of all the shares? A. By those proxies, yes.

Q. And will you not agree that this purported sale to these purported Swiss stock shareholders was a sham transaction undertaken by you for the purpose of avoiding the United States personal holding company tax?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object to that, Your Honor. The 1441 witness has testified as to what the facts are in the transaction. Whatever significance attaches to those facts, I believe attaches.

The Court: I think that is correct, Mr. Burling.

Mr. Burling: I was asking him his purpose.

The Court: You can ask him his purpose.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Isn't it true that your purpose in going through this transaction was to void the American personal holding company tax? A. No; that is not correctly stated, Mr. Burling. Do you want to know the purpose?

Q. No; I want to ask you another question.

Did you not tell Mr. Gros that was exactly your purpose? A. He was, at this time, negotiating with the Nazi Government about this waiver; but even in the case he would not succeed, that my father was not in immediate danger with the Niessbrauch, for two reasons—the first reason I give you, that I controlled American subsidiaries, and our dividend policy, and that therefore Overseas would not receive any dividends.

I further explained to Dr. Gros that some of the American corporations were largely undercapitalized, particularly the Harvard Brewing Company, and that for this reason, for a number of years, even if my father would 1442 be forced to establish a Niessbrauch, that nothing would come out of it.

In addition to that, I wrote Dr. Gros that this American tax which came in, I think 1934 or 1935, was a real God send. It gave me an opportunity to set up this, to make this agreement with the Bank Gesselschaft, and it gave me an explanation towards the Nazis if they got suspicious about it. I then could say, "This, as you see, is made on account of tax purposes."

In reality it was a protection of my interest, because all through 1935, to the end of the year, I discussed this problem with Dr. Gros; and even through 1936 and 1937, I was not sure whether the leading viewpoint of Dr. Gros would prevail.

And even in 1938, after the Reichsbank had admitted that our waiver was legally unassailable, even then the Reichsbank said, "But we are going to use political pressure."

And I was concerned, and afraid of this political pressure, which was brought to bear upon my father, to the end of 1939, I think it was—1938 or 1939, shortly before the outbreak of the war—and therefore I was very much pleased with the fact that I could set up these Swiss stockholders, with the excuse towards the Nazis, in case they would put on new pressure.

Q. While you were in Germany, in the years 1933 through 1939, did you hear many people talking about the 1443 Nazi Party members and SS members who were being subjected to political pressure? A. In 1934, thousands of friends of the party and party members were shot.

Q. Yes; that was the Roehm purge, was it not? A. And those things happened off and on at all times through the Nazi regime.

Q. Let me see if I understand you correctly. Your testimony is that this transfer to the Swiss stockholders, under these arrangements, was for the purpose of making it look to the German Government as if neither you nor your father owned the Uebersee assets? A. No; my father had nothing to do with it. The Nazi Government knew it was myself, you see. And even the waiver was at this time—

Q. We haven't come to the waiver, and there wasn't any waiver ever filed, was there? A. Definitely

Q. You say there was a waiver filed? A. Certainly.

Q. Well, we will discuss that later.

At any rate, is it your testimony that this transaction here, that is to say, that the shares sale was for the purpose from concealing from the Germans the fact that you still in fact owned the Uebersee Finanz-Korporation? A.
1444 That was the main purpose.

Q. I see. That was your main purpose? A. Yes.

Q. Thank you. And you used—

Mr. Ingoldsby: Pardon me, Your Honor. I think the witness was being asked about his motives for doing this. He said that was his main purpose. If he wants to state any other purposes, I think he has the right to do so, by way of explanation.

The Court: You can ask him that later on.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. And you have explained to your lawyer this transaction, in terms of concealing from the American Government the fact that you owned the Uebersee Finanz-Korporation? Is that right? A. No. That is not quite correct. I only mentioned the fact that Dr. Gros stated that I might do that. And I stated that, I think, in the middle of 1935.

Q. Now, before the year 1942, did you ever file or cause to be filed personal holding company tax returns for Uebersee, for the years 1936, '37, '38, '39, '40, or '41? A. As far as I remember, the law remained unchanged in 1936 and 1937.

Q. All right. Did you file returns for those years?—

1445 prior to 1942? A. If I might explain to you—

Q. No; just answer the question, please.

Did you file returns for 1936 and 1937, prior to the year 1942? A. I don't remember what was filed.

Q. And do you have any reason to believe that personal holding company tax returns were filed prior to the year 1942? A. Yes; I think they were filed in the years 1933, 1934.

Q. No. You didn't file a tax return for the year 1936, in the year 1933; did you?

I am talking about tax returns for 1936 and 1937, now. A. I think they were filed.

Q. When? A. In accordance with the law.

Q. When? A. From time to time—

Q. When? A. Shortly or afterwards, they were filed every year.

Q. Don't you know they were not filed until 1942? A. I think they were filed in 1936 and 1937. And the law then was changed, if I understand it correctly, in the year 1938.

Q. In 1941 and 1942, a law firm in which Mr. Isadore Kresel was a partner handled your tax matters, isn't 1446 that right? A. Yes.

Q. And they were also counsel for Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, were they not? A. Yes.

Q. What is the name of the lawyer who particularly handled Uebersee's tax problems? A. I think it was Mr. Marin.

You mean here on the American side?

Q. Yes. A. I think it was Mr. William Marin, in Mr. Kresel's office.

Q. Mr. William Peyton Marin? A. I think so.

Q. Will you look and see if this is not a letter signed by Mr. William Peyton Marin on behalf of Uebersee Finanz-Korporation? Look at the signature and see if you do not recognize it. A. I think that is Mr. Marin's signature, isn't it?

Q. And will you look and see if that wasn't written to the Treasury on behalf of you and Uebersee? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence, Your Honor.

Mr. Gallagher: Just a moment, Mr. Burling. May I see it first.

1447 Mr. Burling: Yes, certainly (handing the letter to counsel).

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you look at this letter and see if it indicates to you when the income tax returns for Uebersee Finanz-Korporation for the years 1936, '37, '38, '39, 1940 and '41 were filed? A. You mean paragraph 2, Mr. Burling?

Q. I mean paragraph 2. Would Mr. Marin's letter indicate to you when the income tax returns for Uebersee were filed for those years? A. Yes. But I am sure there were some filed previously to it. I think it was only a reassessment.

Q. Now will you look at paragraph 8, which has the following words—

Well, prior to the numbered paragraphs, does it not read as follows—

"Pursuant to a tentative closing arrangement made with Mr. Albert Schwartz, Internal Revenue Agent, I enclose herewith and am filing for the respective taxpayers therein named, the following:

"* * * * * * *

"8. Personal holding company returns for the calendar years 1936 to 1941, inclusive (some in duplicate as required by law) executed on behalf of Uebersee 1448 Finanz-Korporation, A. G. by me as attorney in fact, together with affidavit of Dr. Hans Frankenberg setting forth the reasons for the late filing of each of said returns."

Does that suggest to you when the personal holding company tax returns were in fact filed? A. Yes, at this date.

Q. And they were not filed previously, were they? A. There must have been some reports filed previously. They were filed every year.

Q. Are you in possession of any copies of personal holding company tax returns which were filed every year, as you state, during the period? A. I have to check that.

Q. I request that you do so and inform me prior to the end of this trial.

Mr. Gallagher: Mr. Burling, may I ask if this affidavit referred to in subparagraph H, by Hans Frankenberg, is in your file?

Mr. Burling: I do not have it, sir.

Mr. Gallagher: You do not have the stated reasons for the late filing?

Mr. Burling: No, sir.

Mr. Gallagher: Is it in the Treasury? Have you checked on that?

1449 Mr. Burling: It may be. We have asked for the entire file.

Mr. Gallagher: But, at the present time, this is all you have?

Mr. Burling: Yes; and I call upon the plaintiff, if it is in possession of any documentary evidence, showing current filing of the personal holding company tax returns, to produce such documentary evidence, including file copies of earlier returns.

Mr. Gallagher: Just a moment, Mr. Burling. I don't understand your demand that we should be filing personal holding company tax returns now, while you have the property vested, do you?

Mr. Burling: No. I am talking about returns for the years 1936 to 1941, inclusive.

I assert that there is at least a prima facie case established to show that the tax returns were not filed until 1942. And I request counsel for the plaintiff corporation to produce such returns, if they have returns indicating that they were currently filed.

Mr. Gallagher: We will look for that. And, in connection with my request to you, as to the Frankenberg affidavit referred to in that letter filed with the Treasury, and which you say you cannot locate in the Treasury Department, I ask you at this time to state whether or 1450 not the files of the Treasury Department reflect whether or not any fraud penalty was ever imposed here, or any delinquency penalty?

Mr. Burling: I do not know the answer to that.

The Court: Gentlemen, I am afraid we are going to have to move along here. We have taken a lot of time on this examination. We had better get to a close.

Mr. Burling: Yes, Your Honor.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Is it not also true that the purchase price which the purported purchasers paid was a total of $166,000? A. Yes; I think that was the amount.

Q. And that was about 5 per cent of the book value of the shares? Isn't that true? A. You are entirely mistaken, Mr. Burling.

Q. Hadn't you put about $3,700,000 into Uebersee at this time? A. But you are entirely mistaken.

Q. Fine. How much had you put into Uebersee at the time you made this sale agreement? A. At the time, don't forget—

Q. Just answer the question, please. A. I had a claim, what Frima or myself had put into Overseas, and these amounts you mentioned were credited to me with Overseas.

Q. How much had you put into Overseas? A.
1451 I think I was appearing as a creditor on the Overseas books.

Q. How much did you put into the Overseas stock? A. About 11.5 million Swiss francs, that was the adjusted value. First I think it was about fifty million francs, and we had to write off about three million on account of the loss on the gold. So I had to write down my claim to abut eleven and a half million.

Q. At any rate, the true value of the Overseas stock was far in excess of $166,000? Isn't that true? A. You are entirely mistaken. I think it was even lower than this value. You see, the value of the stock is only the difference in assets against its liability.

Q. I see. Now, look at Exhibit 48-A again and I address your attention to the paragraph beginning in the middle of page 5 of the English translation. A. Page 5?

Q. Page 5 of the translation. A. Yes.

Q. It begins: "These plain facts, which can be proved at any time"—

It is toward the end. A. Yes.

Q. I want to read you these words, and ask you the explanation:

1452 "These plain facts, which can be proved at any time, have become still more complicated by the fact that I shall probably have to reorganize the holding company. The reasons are as follows:

"The revised American income tax law considers all companies whose majority is held by five persons or less are private holdings, i.e. these companies are required to pay not the customary corporation taxes of 13-1/4 per cent, but the rates applying to private individuals, which are several times higher. That means practically that only such companies are recognized as holding companies which have eleven or more stockholders.

"After extended consideration I have finally found a way to meet this requirement, namely by selling to outsiders all the stocks I own. To be able to do this I have to keep my credits with the holding company on a loan account and to obligate myself towards the prospective stockholders not to claim any interest until the stockholders have been satisfied and sufficient reserves accumulated."

A. Yes, if I may say, that this claim is for this claim of eleven and a half million Swiss francs which I just mentioned.

Q. And in this letter you in effect tell Gros that 1453 August 2, 1935, is it not? A. Yes.

Q. And in this letter you in effect tell Gros that this shares sale transaction is a way around the American personal holding company tax? A. Pardon me. You have to read it in the first part. I tell him in the first part that even if a Niesshrauch has to be established under force, that even then no dividends will be paid, and then in addition to the economic situation, I mention this tax situation.

Q. That is to say, you are here saying, "Even if it should become necessary to bring the Niessbrauch right into existence, it might still be dangerous; so you have to change the tax setup?" A. No. Mr. Burling. You misunderstood me. I indicate in this letter—and let me rather explain it this way:

The first part of the letter deals with legal arguments, and I said:

"Dr. Gros, I am more pessimistic than you are. I cannot share your optimism. We were hit too hard a year ago, but now conditions are a little smoother, and you might succeed. But still in my mind it is somewhat doubtful."

Q. What is somewhat doubtful? What is it you
1454 are talking about? A. I was rather pessimistic whether Dr. Gros would finally succeed in having this waiver accepted.

Q. At this time, at the time you wrote this letter? A. Yes; I was rather pessimistic, and I remained pessimistic, through all the time—

Q. I am just talking about this letter. Let us address ourselves to that. At this time you wanted Gros to persuade the German Government that there was no Niessbrauch? Is that right? A. Pardon me. It wasn't up to me to tell him that. My father had given him the order to get rid of this Niessbrauch any way he wanted to.

Q. Did you know that at the time you wrote this letter—August 2, 1935? A. Now, Mr. Burling, I now found out, last time you didn't give me a chance to read this letter, and I now found out I had spoken to my father before, as stated in the beginning of the second from the last paragraph.

Q. So that all of your testimony which went on about an hour about this letter a few days ago was wrong? Is that right? A. You didn't let me read the letter. You just pinned me down on one sentence or paragraph.

Now, I see here, in the second from the last paragraph, I am speaking about complimentary—

1455 Q. Where are you reading from? A. The second from the last paragraph of the letter—your discussion in addition to the gift agreement.

Q. Wait a minute. I will read you the second— A. The second from the last paragraph.

Q. That is, "I thought I should explain to you"? A. No, that is not the one. The one further. The second last.

Q. That is the second last, is it not? A. No; it must be—may I show you?

Q. Please do. A. Yes, that is the one. They didn't make a paragraph, here (indicating).

Q. So now you testify that prior to having written—

Mr. Gallagher: Excuse me, Mr. Burling. I would like to have His Honor have this exhibit in front of him while you are discussing it, as I think it will save time on the redirect.

It is the letter of August 2, 1935, the last paragraph—

Is that right, Mr. Burling?

Mr. Burling: That is right.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. So now you testify; do you, that prior to August 2, 1935, you had told your father about your conversation with Frankenberg in which you asked him to hold 1456 the key as agent for Wilhelm von Opel, and that your father said he didn't want that? A. Yes.

Q. When did that conversation with your father take place? A. That must have taken place prior to this letter—I guess about two weeks prior to this letter.

Q. And all the testimony taken the other day concerning this letter is incorrect? Is that right? A. Definitely, because you didn't give me a chance to read the letter,

Mr. Burling. I am very sorry that that happened, but it was not my fault.

Q. I think the record will show whether I have given you a chance to read the documents.

Can you fix the time and the place where you now say you had this conversation with Wilhelm von Opel? A. It must have been in the weeks prior to this letter.

Q. Well, fix the date as accurately as you can. A. I am unable to do that.

Q. Where did the conversation take place? A. I think in Wiesbaden. And we had additional conversations, because this first draft of the declaration I think wasn't the final one we agreed upon.

Q. Now, you understand, do you not, that if the usufruct in fact arose, as opposed to a claim to create a usu-
1457 fruct, then it would be impossible to waive it without a license from the German Government?

Mr. Boland: I object, Your Honor. I think that calls for a legal conclusion. This witness is not qualified for that.

Mr. Burling: This witness has spent years on that, and I want to know what his state of mind is.

The Court: What is the question?

The Reporter (reading): "Question: Now, you understand, do you not, that if the usufruct in fact arose, as opposed to a claim to create a usufruct, then it would be impossible to waive it without a license from the German Government?"

The Court: I don't think we can take his opinion on it.

Mr. Burling: I don't want his opinion, if Your Honor please, as a legal opinion. I want it as bearing on what Mr. Gallagher intended to do on redirect.

The Court: Let us get on to the redirect. I am afraid we are going rather far afield, anyway.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, perhaps to save time I could ask if counsel will concede that the answer to Interrogatory 7 is inaccurate, in that it states that the 97 shares of Uebersee were, during the period of this Swiss Union Bank transaction, in the possession of the named clients of the bank, since it appears from 1458 the testimony that they were in the possession of the Bank in Baden.

And I further ask the concession that the answer to Interrogatory No. 8 was wrong, in so far as it recites that the names of the beneficial owners of the stock of plaintiff corporation were as stated in the list of Swiss—

Mr. Gallagher: That should be corrected. That No. 8 obviously is in error. I concede that. But I do not understand your request in connection with 7.

Mr. Burling: I do not believe the testimony supports the answer, in so far as it recites that the shares were in the possession of the Bank Gesellschaft. It appears they were in the possession of the Bank in Baden, pursuant to the escrow agreement.

Mr. Gallagher: If you want to correct it to physical possession, or constructive possession, or pursuant to the escrow agreement, we will gladly change it to that.

Mr. Burling: All right; thank you.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, by 1939 Uebersee had an investment in a plantation in Tanganyika, valued at about seventy thousand dollars? Isn't that so? A. I acquired that with German marks in 1932.

Q. It was an investment of Uebersee's in 1939, wasn't it?

A. Yes.

1459 Q. And it was carried at a Swiss franc value equal to about $70,000? Is that right? A. I don't recollect the figure. Approximately I think it is correct.

Q. And throughout the month of October, 1939, you were a German national, were you not? A. At this time my application was pending for naturalization.

Q. But you were a German national, nevertheless.

Mr. Boland: Your Honor, may I ask counsel to clarify what he means by a "German national"?

Mr. Burling: Citizen of Germany.

Mr. Boland: But you are using them synonymously.

Mr. Burling: I am using them as used in the Act of 1940.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. And is it not true that in 1940 you caused Uebersee to tell its agents in Tanganyika to report to the British Enemy Property Custodian that the Tanganyika plantation was Swiss owned?

Mr. Gallagher: Which year is this, Mr. Burling?

Mr. Burling: October, 1939.

Mr. Gallagher: You stated 1940.

Mr. Burling: Thank you.

The Witness: I don't remember that that is possible.

By Mr. Burling:

1460 Q. Do you remember that the plantation was seized by the custodian? A. I think a report had to be filed—

Q. Do you remember that the plantation was seized by the custodian, after the war between Germany and England started? A. Yes, I remember that.

Q. And didn't you cause Uebersee to report to the custodian that the plantation was owned by Uebersee, and Uebersee was Swiss owned? A. Yes.

Q. And was that true or false? A. It was at this time technically owned by the stockholders. And I personally, Mr. Burling, in 1940, as well as in the report you just yesterday read into the record, my report to the Treasury, I mentioned that I personally was the owner of this plantation.

Q. When did you do this? A. In 1940 and 1942.

Q. Did you ever report that to the British? A. In 1940 to the British, yes, in Gibraltar.

Q. After you had acquired your Liechtensteinean citizenship, but not before? Is that right? A. Yes.

Q. In other words, you know that before you
1461 became a Liechtensteinean citizen, you were the beneficial owner of the plantation in Tanganyika, and that was concealed from the British custodian? Isn't that so? A. It wasn't concealed from the British custodian. In fact; this plantation, since the time I bought them, they were called Opel Estates. Everybody in the colony knew they were my plantations. If I wanted to conceal something, they certainly would not have been called "Opel Plantations". That is a very rare name.

Q. Now going back, Adler & Company, prior to 1931, had been the Opel family bankers in Zurich for many years, had it not? A. No, definitely not.

Q. At any rate, you dealt with— A. Which year?

Q. 1931. A. 1931, no.

Q. At any rate, in 1931, in the spring—

Mr. Burling: And I think I can say, Your Honor, I am on my last topic. And I know Your Honor's patience is wearing thin, but I will sit down in a few minutes.

The Witness: As far as I know, I can only speak for myself and what I know of my father's business. But to the best of my knowledge, no member of my family ever did any business with Adler & Company except myself.

1462 By Mr. Burling:

Q. I see. A. And I myself, the first business I did was in 1931.

Q. And in the spring of 1931 you had business with Frankenberg, didn't you, Mr. von Opel? A. With the Adler Bank, yes.

Q. With Frankenberg, didn't you? A. He represented the Adler Bank.

Q. Well, that is the answer; thank you.

And Frankenberg was an old acquaintance of your father's when you first started doing business with him, wasn't he? A. My father knew him since about after the first world war, and so did I. He was a casual acquaintance. But he was no business connection of my father's.

Q. Now, one of the reasons which particularly interested you, in the spring of 1931, in purchasing Uebersee, was that Frankenberg agreed to become a member of the board of directors? Isn't that so? A. You are now talking about the spring of 1931, Mr. Burling?

Q. Yes, sir. A. In the spring, 1931, Dr. Frankenberg wasn't at all in the picture, because at this time I only had a right to acquire 60 per cent of the capital stock.

Q. All right. A. You are mixing up those two 1463 separate deals.

Q. At any rate, one of the reasons which ultimately caused you to buy Uebersee was the fact that Frankenberg agreed to become a member of the board of directors; wasn't it? A. I wouldn't put it this way.

Q. All right; you won't; thank you.

You did put it this way in an affidavit which you filed with the Treasury Department, didn't you? I will read you a sentence and see if you can recall it.

Mr. Gallagher: What is that, Mr. Burling?

Mr. Burling: The affidavit of August 26, 1941—

"Another circumstance which enticed me to buy this corporation was that Dr. Hans Frankenberg, a partner in Adler & Company, agreed to become a member of its board of directors."

The Witness: It was one of the reasons, yes—but not the single reason, Mr. Burling.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. And your father suggested to you that Frankenberg should become managing director of the holding company? A. I asked my father—

Q. Did he or did he not suggest it, sir? A. I asked him—

Q. Did he or not suggest that Frankenberg be-1464 come managing director? A. I do not recollect, sir.

Q. Didn't you so state under oath? A. It is possible, yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you state—not that it was possible—that he did suggest this? A. Yes.

Q. You did swear to that, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. All right. And you had a conference with Frankenberg in which you asked him if he would be willing to serve as a member of the board, and managing director of the Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, A.G., did you not? A. Yes.

Q. And he stated he would do so, did he not? A. Yes, and he did it.

Q. And when you invested in the stock of Spur Distributing Company, you frequently consulted with Dr. Frankenberg in his capacity as managing director of Uebersee, did you not? A. He always—

Q. Did you not? A. Yes.

Q. And in the fall of 1932, you discussed with Frankenberg your concern over the future gasoline supply 1465 of Spur, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. And when you went into the oil production field in 1933, you and Frankenberg jointly handled this, did you not? A. I mentioned the situation to him, and he advised it it would be a profitable investment.

If I may add something, Mr. Burling, I think yesterday—

Q. Please don't volunteer. I am trying to finish. A. Pardon me.

Q. Didn't you say, in your gold case affidavit, as follows?—

"In these corporations Uebersee during 1933 invested an aggregate of $756,000. Dr. Frankenberg and I intended on behalf of Uebersee greatly to increase its investments in these oil companies and would have increased them were it not for the impounding of the company's gold in the United States in March, 1933, as hereinafter described."

You state that under oath, did you not? A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. And you further swore, did you not, at folio 185—

"It was by reason of these pending investments on behalf of Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, A. G., that Dr. Frankenberg and I caused the liquidation of bonds held for its account as above described."

1466 A. That is correct.

Q. And in December, 1932, you had a discussion with Frankenberg, in Frankenberg's capacity as managing director of Uebersee, did you not? A. I had very many discussions.

Q. With Frankenberg in his capacity as managing director? A. Yes.

Q. Thank you. And in February, 1933, Frankenberg told you what to do with respect to certain cash holdings— A. He advised me—

Q. Didn't you? A. On account of the bank holiday.

Q. Didn't he tell you— A. He advised me, yes, sir.

Q. And you did purchase gold, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. And the gold was stored with Ladenberg, Thalmann & Company, wasn't it? A. Yes.

Q. And that was suggested by Frankenberg, wasn't it? A. Yes; I think Dr. Frankenberg was a former partner of Ladenberg & Thalmann, in Frankfort.

Q. Now, is your property blocked in Switzerland by the Swiss Compensation Office? A. The situation in 1467 Switzerland, I have no property in Switzerland which is of any value to me right now.

Q. But there is a blocking order against your property, is there not?

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, I wish to enter an objection to this line of inquiry of Mr. Burling, wherein he is asking what action the Swiss have taken. There is a long story behind it, and we are not in any position to give this court any information of this situation, until we have gotten further information from Switzerland. But at the moment we submit any action taken by the Swiss as to any personal assets is immaterial, as far as this proceeding is concerned.

Mr. Burling: I think probably my friend's position is right.

If you will agree you will not raise—

Mr. Gallagher: No, I will not agree to that. We are checking that situation now, Mr. Burling, and I think you are well aware of what we are checking.

Mr. Burling: I will save any point I have, for recross, and will withdraw the question now, Your Honor.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Burling: And I have only one further question—

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Is it now your assertion that Defendant Exhibit 49
1468 relates to your personal books? A. What is called here "Consortium Q"—yes, pardon me. These are my personal books, Mr. Burling.

Q. I see. A. And also—

Q. Wait a minute. This is a book about which I examined at considerable length, and you did not recognize it as your personal book. Is that correct? A. Pardon me. You asked me to explain if that is the income account of 2.6 million in Overseas.

Q. I am talking about this book here, Defendant's Exhibit 49.

Mr. Gallagher: Just a minute, Mr. Burling. If I recollect correctly, you only showed him one page at that time, page 16—

Mr. Burling: I think that is correct.

Mr. Gallagher: And you prefaced the statement that it was a Uebersee book, and I think the record will show that to be correct.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, I can say I have no personal knowledge of Uebersee's books. We were given this book as being a book which was a record or account of book of the plaintiff. I had no knowledge other than the fact—

The Court: I think we are arguing here. What is it you want to find out about it?

Mr. Burling: I now want to cross examine. I don't believe the witness.

1469 The Court: What do you want to find out?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Are there any other books and records you know we have been shown which are your personal account books and not the accounts books of Uebersee? A. I couldn't make such a sweeping statement, Mr. Burling. I only know you asked me to clear up what this page 16 meant, and that is what I did. And you did not only get the books from Overseas, Mr. Burling; you also got the books of Frima, and this is a Frima book.

The Court (to the witness): Just answer his questions.

Mr. Burling: I would like either for the witness or his counsel to give us a statement as to what books they were in error on when they gave us the books. They told us they were giving us the books of Uebersee.

Mr. Gallagher: I can make a statement, Your Honor.

The Court: Don't make a statement. Bring it out on redirect.

Mr. Gallagher: All right, sir.

As to redirect, Your Honor, I think we could more rapidly dispose of Mr. von Opel in the morning, if Your Honor please, if Your Honor would be disposed to adjourn a little earlier than indicated.

The Court: That will be all right.

Mr. Gallagher: And, if Your Honor please, I
1470 would like to get rid of this one point as to which Mr. Burling made quite a bit of, the fact that in response to the interrogatories 27 and 28, which were:

"27. Describe the nature of plaintiff's interest in bauxite mines in Hungary at all times from October 5, 1931, to June, 1942."

And the next one, Your Honor, Interrogatory 28—

"State the nature of plaintiff's interest in any corporation holding or holding bauxite mines in Hungary, or bauxite mining rights in Hungary, at all times from October 5, 1931, to June, 1942."

And then he said the plaintiff has answered in this fashion—the answer to 27:

"The plaintiff had no interest in bauxite mines or bauxite mining rights in Hungary at any time."

And the answer to 28:

"The plaintiff had no interest in any corporation holding or owning bauxite mines or mining rights in Hungary from October 8, 1931, to June, 1942."

Now, he failed to read, which I want to read, the following interrogatory, so that Your Honor is cleared up on it—the next interrogatory being, their next interrogatory, number 29:

"Describe in all detail all actions taken by plaintiff or by any agents of plaintiff, including Fritz von 1471 Opel, concerning the mining of bauxite in Hungary at all times from October 5, 1931, to June, 1942."

We responded as follows—and at the time it was prepared, we thought the stock had merely been hypothecated to Mr. von Opel; but for the purposes of this inquiry it made no difference whether he owned it, or the plaintiff. However, here is our answer:

"Answered as to plaintiff in responses to interrogatories 27 and 28,"—in which it was stated that plaintiff had no interest—

"However, Fritz von Opel organized the Transdanubia Bauxite, A.G."—

Mr. Burling: You are reading that unintelligently, Mr. Gallagher—

"Answered as to plaintiff in responses to interrogatories 27 and 28. However, Fritz von Opel organized the Transdanubia Bauxite, A. G., having a capital of 300,000 pengos party paid in. This corporation owned bauxite mining rights in Hungary."

Mr. Gallagher: All right, Mr. Burling.

The Court: Now, you gentlemen have been arguing this case all the way through, for beginning to end, and I have gone along with it, because I don't want to control the way you gentlemen run your case. But so many of the questions are argumentative, and there have been 1472 so many of these little sallies.

I am going to give you plenty of time to argue it. Those things don't make any impression on me, until the case comes to an end. I have been trying cases as a lawyer for 25 years, and as a Judge for ten years. I don't draw any conclusion until I hear the argument at the end. I think if you will just keep to the questions, and have the argument at the end, we will save a lot of time.

I don't want to interrupt either one of you, because I know you have a complicated case and a good many questions. But I promise to give you a full argument on it, on both sides.

(To Mr. Gallagher): You want to stop here?

Mr. Gallagher: Yes, Your Honor. I think it would be more expeditious if we did.

The ourt: All right, until 10 o'clock.

(Accordingly, at 3:55 p.m. the trial was adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, Wednesday, December 22, 1948.)

1475 FRITZ VON OPEL, returned to the stand and was examined and testified further as follows:

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Mr. von Opel, during the close of yesterday afternoon's session you were answering Mr. Burling and you gave him a breakdown of the time you had spent between 1929 and 1931. And as I recollect that breakdown in general it was to the effect that approximately 35 per cent of your time during that period had been spent in the United States, 35 per cent in Switzerland, 9 per cent in Germany, and the remainder of the time in other countries.

At that time Mr. Burling asked you to prepare a breakdown from October, 1931, until the end of 1941. Have you prepared such a breakdown? A. Yes.

1476 Q. Would you now state for the record what that breakdown reflects as to where you spent your time from October, 1931, until the end of 1941? A. From October 5—

Q. From October 5, 1931, would you read that breakdown? A. I spent in Switzerland 41 per cent of my time; in the United States, 30 per cent; in various countries, 14.5 per cent; in Germany, 10.1 per cent; and interned and unaccountable, 4.4 per cent.

Q. All right. Now, Mr. von Opel, in connection with that breakdown, did you also prepare a statement which would reflect the reasons for each of your trips to Germany during the years 1931 to 1941?—the 10 per cent figure you were speaking of? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Would you state for the record the purposes of each of the visits during that period of time, year by year, commencing with 1932? A. In 1931, I saw my father shortly after my return from the United States, and I saw also an architect in Berlin.

Q. All right—1932. A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: Excuse me. The witness said 1931.

Mr. Gallagher: Yes, and now I am asking about 1932.

The Witness: In 1932 I paid a visit to my sister. I saw this architect again. And I was in Berlin trying to 1477 release about a hundred thousand blocked marks I had there, for which I bought this Tanganyika farm.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. All right; now 1933. A. In 1933 I was there to purchase furniture from an interior decorator, in Berlin.

Q. Yes. A. In 1934, the foreign funds control proceedings against my father began, and I had of course several conferences in these matters.

Q. How much time did you spend in Germany during 1934 in connection with those proceedings? A. I should say altogether I think twice, each four weeks.

Q. For a total of about eight weeks, in 1934? A. Yes.

Q. In connection with the proceedings? A. Yes.

Q. All right. What about 1935? A. In 1935 these proceedings were still going on; and in so far as I had to transfer a number of marks out of Germany again.

Q. Was that in connection with the Niessbrauch? A. No. I had made a payment to the Reichsbank of 850,000 marks.

But I immediately sold these marks to British and 1478 other exporters; and so with a slight loss I got immediately rid of this marks obligation.

Q. All right; and in 1936? A. And, pardon me, in 1935, of course, I had several discussions with my father in respect to this Niessbrauch, his renunciation of the Niessbrauch.

Q. The renunciation of the Niessbrauch. Now, in 1936? A. In 1936 the criminal proceedings against Mr. Deku started.

Mr. Burling: Will you fix which Mr. Deku, please?

Mr. Gallagher: This was Mr. Erich Deku, the brother of the Mr. Deku who testified.

The Witness: And I had personally conducted, so to say, the investigation. I wanted to protect my father. My father was about to lose his entire fortune, and I was the main witness in the proceedings.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. How much time did you spent in Germany in 1936 in that connection? A. I think I spent there one week, three weeks, two weeks, and four weeks.

Q. That is ten weeks in Germany in connection with the Deku trial? A. Yes.

Q. All right; now 1937. A. And also in 1936 I had 1479 to pay, as you remember, income taxes for the sale of the Opel shares in America. And for tax purposes I had to show what the value of these shares was in Germany.

Q. That is right. A. And, due to American regulations, I had to go back to 1912, or even prior to this date, and I had to spend many weeks to find these old records in various offices and government places.

Q. All right. Now, 1937? A. In 1937, I was witness in a lawsuit against my father. He had acquired a forest, and some twisters, some small hurricane, had blown down part of the forest, and a lawsuit was involved, and I was a witness in this lawsuit.

Q. And how long were you in Germany in that connection in 1937? A. And I also was interested in the bankruptcy proceedings of the Union Bank, because according to the court records, about six million marks had disappeared, and according to my own investigation about four to four and a half million marks; and I was busy to find out where this money had gone.

Then in 1938, both of these lawsuits—

Q. How much time did you spend in 1937 in connection with both of those matters you have just mentioned?

1480 A. I think I was there twice, two weeks each, or three weeks each.

Q. So it was four to six weeks in connection with those proceedings? A. I would say four to five weeks.

Q. All right. Now, in 1938? A. In 1938 both of these lawsuits, the forest lawsuit, as well as this bankruptcy proceeding, were still going on. And I also spent eight or ten days on the estate of my father.

Q. All right. Now, 1939? A. In 1939 I had a compound fracture, and my Swiss doctors had advised me to see some specialist in Germany, and go to a cool climate. And I spent two weeks and four weeks in Germany.

Q. So that it was six weeks altogether in 1939? A. Yes.

Q. And in 1940? A. That was after the outbreak of the war, and I wasn't there.

Q. And in 1940 is when you came to the United States and have remained ever since? A. Yes.

Q. All right; thank you.

Now, Mr. von Opel, you stated earlier in your testimony that when you left Germany in 1929 you gave notice 1481 to the authorities in that connection. Is that correct? A. Yes, I did.

Mr. Gallagher: I will ask to have this marked.

(The document referred to was marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 83.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I will ask if you can identify Plaintiff's Exhibit 83? A. Yes; it is registration of departure, a copy of it.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer this Plaintiff's Exhibit 83, Your Honor.

Mr. Burling: No objection.

(The document previously marked for identification Plaintiff's Exhibit 83 was received in evidence.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now, Mr. von Opel, Mr. Burling wanted to know who was going to testify under oath about "Consortium O". A. I can do that.

Q. All right, and I have several questions I want to ask you about it. At the time he was talking about Consortium O, he prefaced his remarks, on page 968 of the transcript, with discussing Uebersee and its books, and then showed you Defendant's Exhibit 49, a photostat of page 16 of a book.

I will ask you now to look at this book which I will hand you.

1482 Mr. Gallagher: And I would like this to be marked first, please.

(The book referred to was accordingly marked for identification as Plaintiff's Exhibit 84.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Plaintiff's Exhibit 84, and first I will ask you what this book is. A. This is my private account book.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, I move to strike that, on the grounds that plaintiffs are estopped to make this point. I believe it will not be denied that more than a year ago Mr. Richard Connor, then in charge of this case for the plaintiffs, and Mr. Gallagher's partner, handed the book to Mr. Baum and Mr. Laufer—

Mr. Gallagher: All books, wasn't it?

Mr. Burling: —asserting that it was a book of account of Uebersee. We have continued to believe that, up until this moment.

Furthermore, this witness himself first identified the record.

But my primary point is that we were told by plaintiff's counsel that this was a record of Uebersee.

Furthermore, the document which we have asked for and have not been given—and I am sure it is because it 1483 is lost, and I don't mean it has been secreted by counsel—recites that Dr. Frankenberg has removed the following books of Uebersee, not of von Opel, but of Uebersee, to be taken to America. And one of the books of account referred to in that letter is this book which is before the witness.

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, I can explain that whole situation. It is very simple.

The Court: I understand you take the position that it is a mistake?

Mr. Gallagher: That it is a mistake, and it will show from other pages of the book that it is not a Uebersee book.

The Court: You needn't argue, if you say it is a mistake.

Mr. Gallagher: It is a mistake.

The Court: And I will overrule the objection on the question of estoppel—and, of course, I will permit you to argue the point.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Page 16 of the original of this page photostated by the defense and which is their Exhibit 49—and at that time, as you will recollect, Mr. Burling was asking you whether or not this figure did not reflect 80 per cent of income, in the amount of two million point six. Will you state what those two pages do reflect? A. That has nothing to 1484 do with income whatsoever. It is a mere summary of all transactions in the United States.

Mr. Burling: I move to strike that answer, on the ground it is not responsive. The question was, what do the pages reflect, and the witness has not stated what the pages reflect, but what they don't reflect.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. What does it reflect? A. It is a summary of all transactions in the United States.

Q. And if I understand you correctly, it merely shows all the transactions? A. Yes, just a summary; and the figure, as such, is meaningless.

Mr. Gallagher: I would like to show you this, Your Honor, and then turn to another page. This is just tradings, and the figure here is not a total of anything, but the amounts of tradings, a meaningless figure, as far as that is concerned.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 85 and ask you what this book is. A. That is a similar book of my own accounts in Swiss francs.

Q. And I direct your attention to page 31 of this book and ask you what the figures on that page reflect.
1485 A. These are transactions in Swiss francs, similar to the dollar transactions in the other book.

Q. This is the same transactions reflected now in francs? A. Not the same transactions—transactions in Swiss francs, whereas this book—

Q. Is in dollars? A. Is in dollars.

Q. I see. I now direct you—

Mr. Gallagher: And first of all, Your Honor, just so you can follow my questions (indicating), these two pages here reflect the transactions in Swiss francs.

Mr. Burling: May I ask, Mr. Gallagher—

Mr. Gallagher: Why don't you come up here, Mr. Burling, and follow us?

Mr. Burling: May I ask if you have had the witness identify this book?

Mr. Gallagher: Yes, that it reflected transactions in Swiss francs, whereas that reflected them in dollars.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I now direct your attention to page 16 of this same exhibit, Plaintiff's Exhibit 85, and ask you what those reflect. A. They show the relationship of my personal account to Overseas Finance Corporation. They show 1486 whether Overseas Finance Corporation was crediting me or debiting me.

Q. It shows how you stand in Uebersee? A. In relation to Overseas.

Q. I see. And is it correct to say that this page 31 in Plaintiff's Exhibit 84 is a recompilation of all the transactions shown throughout this book? A. Yes, it is correct. And all those transactions are reflected in the balance sheet of Overseas.

Mr. Gallagher: (Indicating to the Court): This shows the transactions on these other pages, they are compiled on that page.

The Witness: May I add here that these transactions appear in the Overseas books in the first year, 1932, under the name of Fritz von Opel; in the next year, under the name of Consortium O; and in the years thereafter as Frima Verwaltungsanstalt.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. All right. Just a moment. You are getting a little ahead of me.

I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 86.

Mr. Burling: I object, unless this witness testifies as a matter of his personal knowledge he knows that is a book of Uebersee.

Mr. Gallagher: This is one of the books produced in response to your motion.

1487 The Court: Ask him the question.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Mr. von Opel, I show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 86. Can you state what this book is? A. That is a book of Overseas.

Mr. Burling: I object, if Your Honor please, on the ground that the witness testified he was not familiar with the books. He has no personal knowledge whether that is a book of Overseas or whether it is a book I wrote last night. He doesn't know anything about it, of his own personal knowledge.

The Court: Find out whether he has personal knowledge of it.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Mr. von Opel, of your own personal knowledge do you know if this is an Uebersee book? A. Mr. Burling asked me to study the matter. So I reconstructed—

Mr. Burling: I object, Your Honor. What this man is doing now is stating that some books the lawyers for Overseas tell him are Overseas books, are Overseas books, and he is so identifying them. He never saw the books until they were in Mr. Gallagher's office.

Mr. Gallagher: That is not correct, Your Honor. We didn't tell him they were Overseas books.

1488 The Court: Don't specify. Just ask him the question and if he knows it, and how he found out,

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Do you know these are the Uebersee Finanz-Korporation books? A. They must be the corporation books. They were sent over from Switzerland.

Mr. Burling: I object to that, Your Honor. He has no knowledge.

The Court: I agree with that.

(To the witness): Don't testify, unless you know it of your own knowledge, by having seen it, or some other circumstance, other than a deduction.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Mr. von Opel, can you tell, by looking at pages 70, 71, and 72 of this Plaintiff's Exhibit 86 that these are your transactions in Uebersee and reflect what you did in Uebersee? A. I remember it because it is shown in the balance sheet of Uebersee. I have not seen the books, but I have seen the balance sheets of Uebersee, and the same figures are reflected in Overseas' balance sheets.

Q. The balance sheets, which we will come to, will reflect these figures in the books, and you are familiar with the balance sheets? A. Yes.

1489 Mr. Burling: I move to strike the answer, Your Honor, because obviously the witness has not looked at the figures in detail while testifying. He has said he hasn't seen the books, and the fact that certain figures may appear in balance sheets which are not in evidence, and also appear here, doesn't identify them as books of the plaintiff corporation.

Mr. Gallagher: This is the first time they have raised the contention in all these weeks that this is not an Overseas book.

The Court: I think there have been a good many items of evidence that might have been objected to, that have not been objected to up to now; but I have to rule on the objections when they are made. And if he doesn't know of his own knowledge that this is an Uebersee book, and you want to introduce it as such, I am afraid I will have to get you to identify it from some other source.

The fact that he has transactions in there, doesn't negative the possibility that it might be John Jones' book. We have to have those identifications in court, unless you stipulate on them.

Mr. Burling: May I say, Your Honor, I refuse to stipulate; because as late as yesterday afternoon, we were arguing about whether the books were Fritz von Opel's books or Uebersee's books, and I certainly don't know.

The Court: All right.

1490 By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Mr. von Opel, let me ask you this: It has been testified proviously in the proceedings, has it not, that you were Frima? A. Yes.

Q. And that Frima owned the stock of Uebersee? A. Yes.

Q. And on page 72 of this book appears the heading "Frima", does it not? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: I object to Mr. Gallagher's showing an unidentified book of account to the witness and questioning him about it.

Mr. Gallagher: I am trying to identify it indirectly Your Honor.

The Court: That is the trouble. We have to authenticate the book by someone who knows something about it. That is the objection.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, I would like to state for the record that I am not merely disputatious, but I feel very strongly that in a four million dollar lawsuit the plaintiff corporation, if it wanted to make arguments on this book, should have brought the bookkeeper from Switzerland.

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, I might say at this point that they have all this man's assets here in this 1491 country. How are we going to get the money to bring people here?

The Court: I cannot take a position as to what you ought to do, or not. All I can do is rule on your objections.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Mr. von Opel, have you ever seen any of the Uebersee books when you were in Switzerland? A. No; only the balance sheets.

Q. You haven't seen the books. You state that you have seen the balance sheets of Uebersee? A. Yes, I have.

Q. I show you Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 87 and I will ask you if you can state what that is. A. That is a balance sheet for the year 1932.

Q. A balance sheet of whom? A. Of Overseas.

Q. I direct your attention to the first page thereof—

Mr. Burling: May I see it, please?

Mr. Gallagher: We have just this sheet. If you will come over here, Mr. Burling, and follow me while I am asking it.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I direct your attention to the first page there under "4", and will you state what that reads? A. Under "current accounts", it shows that Fritz von Opel owes to Overseas an amount of 525,395.50 Swiss francs.

1492 Q. And what was the nature of that debt of yours to Uebersee at that time? A. I don't recollect that.

Q. All right.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer this in evidence.

Mr. Burling: No objection.

The Court: It is received.

(The document referred to was received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit 87.)

The Witness: I presume it has to do with the payment of capital into Overseas.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. And I will now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 88 and ask you if you can identify that exhibit. A. That is the balance sheet of the next year, of the year 1933.

Q. And I direct your attention to number 4, and will you state what that reads? A. There, under "current account", it shows that Consortium O owes to Overseas an amount of 588,790.55 Swiss francs.

Q. Now, directing your attention back to Plaintiff's Exhibit 87 in this connection, is this the same amount under Consortium O, with the addition of some 13,000 Swiss francs as appeared in Plaintiff's Exhibit 87 under 1493 the heading Fritz von Opel? A. Yes, sir. In the first year it was called Fritz von Opel, and then the next year "Consortium O."

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 88.

(The document referred to was received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 88.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 89 and ask you if you can identify that exhibit. A. Yes; that is a balance sheet for the year 1934.

Q. I direct your attention to the second page of that balance, under the numeral 3, and ask what the fifth line thereunder states. A. It states that Frima trust fund has claim against Overseas of 6,095,011.85 Swiss francs.

Q. And if I recollect your previous testimony, Frima trust was founded in 1934. Is that correct? A. Yes.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 89 in evidence.

(The document referred to was received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 89.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Going back for just a moment, Mr. von Opel, do you know who commenced the negotiations in Germany 1494 between your father and General Motors, subsequent to October 17, 1931, when you had demanded that General Motors purchase your Opel shares pursuant to the escrow? A. General Motors started that.

Q. General Motors? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: I object and move to strike, on the ground it is hearsay. The testimony is that Fritz von Opel was in the United States when this happened. He could not have personal knowledge, except hearsay, of what happened in Germany at that time.

The Court (to counsel for plaintiff): Do you want to bring out that he had any personal knowledge?

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Did you have any personal knowledge, Mr. von Opel? A. Yes; my father informed me about it, after I came back from the States.

The Court: That is hearsay. I guess I will have to strike it.

Mr. Gallagher: All right; we will drop it, Your Honor.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now, turning to just one more topic, Mr. von Opel. Will you explain briefly to His Honor the Transdanubia picture during the thirties, up until 1941, and stop at that point? Just explain what had happened and what 1495 Transdanubia was all about, in your own words.

A. Transdanubia was founded in 1935. It was through all the years inactive. I think it was in 1936 when I contacted the Bauxite Trust, asking whether they would operate the mines for me. They put out about a thousand tons of bauxite, and then stopped.

In the years between 1937, up to 1939 or 1940, the property was involved in lawsuits, and no production of any amount was ever started. However, Mr. Koranyi stole considerable amounts of bauxite out of adjoining properties, for which I had to pay damages and even wages.

We produced some bauxite in surface production, a rather small amount, I think about a thousand tons; and then the mine on the surface was exhausted, and my representatives suggested to go over to deep drilling.

In the meantime, we had made some test drillings and we actually found considerable amounts of bauxite. But I did not want to invest any further capital in Hungary, on account of the fact that it was a blocked currency; it was a one-way street. You could bring capital into Hungary, but at the time you couldn't take anything out of there any more.

In this connection I think I have to go in a few words into the problem of blocked currencies. Mr. Burling yesterday read out of the World Almanac some figures of free currencies. But those figures are entirely meaning-1496 less.

For instance, now, the official exchange rate of the British pound is slightly above four dollars for the pound. In reality you can buy in New York any amount of British pounds at three dollars a pound.

The same relates to the German marks. In the World Almanac, the German mark is shown with 40 cents for the mark. In reality you could buy marks with 20 cents, with 10 cents, and at even below this amount.

The whole system of foreign currency control was more or less an economic warfare, comparable to the saying, "Heads I win, tails you lose." You could go into a country, and you had to pay dearly for the currency; but you could not re-transfer it out of the country. And that also became the case with Hungary, and therefore it was absolutely senseless to continue operations there.

Q. All right; just a moment, please.

Now, Mr. Burling asked you, during your cross examination, about Defendant's Exhibit 68 and 69, I believe, which were affidavits executed in the summer of 1941 by you and by Mr. Kresel, in which the affidavit stated that the mines had been leased. A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 90-A, which is the Hungarian original, Plaintiff's 90 being a translation thereof, and ask you if you can identify that letter.
1497 A. Yes; that is a letter I received from Transdanubia in about April or May, 1941.

Q. In connection with Transdanubia? A. In connection with the business affairs of Transdanubia, yes.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 90; and I would like to pause a moment while Your Honor reads this, before taking up the discussion afterwards.

(The documents referred to were marked and received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibits 90 and 90-A.)

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now, that letter summarizes, as I understand it, Mr. von Opel, what the situation was in connection with Transdanubia. A. For the year 1940 and up to the spring of the year 1941.

Q. After you received that letter, did you send a cable to the parties or in any ways communicate with them? A. Yes. In the letter, they asked me to change my mind, and I wired them that I would stick to my decision to get rid of the mine.

Q. Do you recollect the substance of the communication to Transdanubia in response to their letter?
1498 A. Only faintly. They wanted me to reverse my decision, and I told them they should go ahead and either sell or lease.

Q. I show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 91. Can you identify whose writing that is? A. That is my handwriting.

Q. What is this document? Can you state? A. Yes, that is in my handwriting, my draft of the wire to the corporation.

Q. After having read that— A. I have read it.

Q. —was that prepared at the time you sent it? A. Yes; it was my reply.

Q. After having refreshed your recollection from that draft, can you state what the contents were of the cable you sent to Transdanubia? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: I object on the ground that the document is the best evidence. And I have no objection to the offer of the document.

Mr. Gallagher: All right, sir. We will offer the document.

It is in his longhand writing (indicating). Can Your Honor read it?

1499 (The document referred to was received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 91.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 92, a cablegram addressed to Opel, West Palm Beach, Florida, signed Transdanubia Bauxit, and ask you if you can state what that cable is? A. That seems to be the answer to this wire of mine.

Q. Will you read for the record what that has to say?

Mr. Gallagher: First I will offer the cable, and then will you read it so the record will reflect it?

I offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 92.

(The document referred to was received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 92.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Now will you read into the record the cable? A. The cable is addressed to me at West Palm Beach, Florida, and signed Transdanubia, and it reads—

Q. What date, Mr. von Opel? A. It is dated May 27, 1941. It reads:

"Two possibilities for solution are offered—

"First, Count Hadik willing to lease mines for five years, rent one pengos twenty-five per ton, makes all investments and takes over contract Giulini. Will start with works at latest 10th June Stop.

1500 "Second, we could raise a loan of forty thousand pengos for three years at 6 per cent. Stop.

"Giulinis feeling inclined to give amnesty for the failure of delivery if we start with it until 15th July. Stop.

"We shall do our best in order to choose the most advantageous form. Should feel obliged to hear your opinion.

"Transdanubia Bauxit."

Q. All right. Just a moment.

After you received that cable, did you send a wire giving your opinion and directions? A. I remember I just repeated my former order.

Q. I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 93 and ask you if you can identify what that is? A. That is in my handwriting, a draft in reply to the cable on the other side.

Mr. Gallagher: I now offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 93, which is the reverse side of the cable which is Plaintiff's Exhibit 92.

(The document referred to was received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit 93.)

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Will you read for the record what the cable is that you sent? A. It is addressed to Dr. Timar, my 1501 lawyer in Budapest, and it says:

"Suggest accept Hadik offer provided Giulini agrees, and our terragium safeguarded. Hadik ought to guarantee around 40,000 tons yearly. Try to raise terragium or get a true percentage of profit."

Signed "Opel."

I might explain for the record that "terragium" is a fee, a kind of royalty paid to the owner of mineral rights, if a mine is operated by some other party.

Mr. Burling: Mr. Gallagher, may I request that you produce the enclosures which are referred to from Transdanubia of March 12, 1941? The letter discloses on its face that enclosures were with it, and the exhibit you have offered is therefore incomplete on its face.

And I move to strike, unless you do give us enclosures.

Mr. Gallagher: Where are you talking about?

Mr. Burling: The penultimate paragraph, the second sentence—

"From this letter and enclosures you will see that all conditions are fulfilled to meet the contracts and to let bloom the enterprise."

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, Mr. Burling is certainly taking a peculiar evidential view. Yesterday he in-1502 troduced a document filed at the Treasury Department and which referred to six enclosures which he said could not be found.

The Court: Do you have the enclosures?

Mr. Gallagher: No, I do not, Your Honor. This letter is merely a recapitulation of what transpired before.

The Court: The objection will be overruled, and it will be received for what it is worth.

(The letter heretofore offered and received on page 1499 hereof, remains in evidence accordingly.)

1503 Mr. Burling: Will you identify the book.

Mr. Gallagher: I am going to identify the book in just a moment.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I show you Plaintiff's 94, Mr. von Opel, particularly pages 24 and 29 thereof, and ask you whether or not those are the originals of the pages of which Mr. Burling showed you the photostats, and on which, with respect to the years '40 and '41, and of Uebersee, and ask you whether or not you can state what this book is.

Mr. Burling: Is this an original of a Defendant's Exhibit, Mr. Gallagher?

Mr. Gallagher: This is the original of your exhibits, yes.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. These are the original pages 24 and 29, Mr. von Opel. Will you state what those pages are? Mr. Burling asked you to refresh your recollection. He showed you two defendant's exhibits which were the photostats of pages 24 and 29 of this Uebersee book, and he pointed out to you that at the end of the year 1940 the balance there showed 102,360 francs, is that correct? A. Yes, on current accounts.

Q. And he showed you from his photostat of 1504 page 29 that that figure had increased to— A. 109,000.

Q. 918.50, is that correct? A. That's correct, yes.

Q. Those are francs, are they not? A. Swiss francs, yes.

Q. Will you explain what that increase was? A. I already mentioned that at the time Mr. Burling asked me, it reflects a payment made on March 10, '41, to the Budapest lawyers, a payment to the amount of about $1,600.

Q. I now show you Plaintiff's 95.

Mr. Burling: I object to counsel showing a book unless he established what the book is, and that the witness has personal knowledge of it, unless it is a book which we have ourselves previously put in evidence.

Mr. Gallagher: We are again faced with the same question, Your Honor, that it is another Uebersee finance book produced in response—

Mr. Burling: Counsel does not know whether it is a Uebersee book or a book which Henggeler picked up in the street of Zurich. Counsel has no personal knowledge of it, nor does the witness.

The Court: As I understand the rule, it is that in the absence of a stipulation, the books have to be proved as authentic books.

Mr. Gallagher: This is a pretty late time, Your 1505 Honor, for them to raise any question about books that we produced in response to Court order several months ago.

The Court: They may be produced. You see, I have to go by the rules of evidence, there is nothing else I can do. The mere production by one party does not authenticate the books unless there is a stipulation or proof of it. I have to sustain the objection.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Mr. von Opel, can you state from your own recollection when that payment was made to—you said it was to Dr.— A. Salusinszky Gyula.

Q. Can you state when in 1941 you made that payment to him? A. I did not make this payment, I already had left at the time. I saw from a slip, from an accounting voucher in the records, that the payment was made to the lawyers.

Mr. Burling: I move to strike any testimony of this witness concerning what he saw on a slip in counsel's office.

The Witness: I personally have no knowledge of it.

The Court: All right. Sustained.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. How much was the payment, do you know? A. About 7,000 Swiss francs.

Q. Is that about $1,500? A. About $1,600.

1506 Q. Do you know what the payment was for? A. The lawyers all through the years '39 and '40 received about $200 monthly for legal fees, office rent and expenses connected with operating the office of Transdanubia.

Q. Now, Mr. von Opel, Mr. Burling asked you about the posting of some collateral by Uebersee with a Swiss bank in guarantee of a loan or security for a loan made by Transdanubia in Hungary from a Hungarian bank during the 1930s, and an increase of several hundreds of dollars in 1940. I will ask you whether or not that collateral was returned by the Swiss bank to Uebersee. A. The collateral was released.

Mr. Burling: Will you fix the period.

Mr. Gallagher: In November, 1942.

Mr. Burling: I object to that on the ground that the witness could not have any personal knowledge of that.

Mr. Gallagher: You have already, as I recollect, Mr. Burling, in the course of this cross examination yourself taken the position that the loan was, the cancellation of the security took place in 1942.

Mr. Burling: I am not discussing, if Your Honor please, what my position is, I object to this witness testifying about something he obviously has no personal knowledge of. The testimony is in November, 1942. This witness was in internment camp in the United States, and of course we know what went on.

1507 Mr. Gallagher: Do we understand your position then to be, Mr. Burling, that collateral was posted in security of a loan prior to the war, and that there is nothing further in that respect, that we are to understand the situation is to stand, that the collateral is still sitting in Switzerland?

Mr. Burling: My position, if Your Honor please, is that this witness merely should not be allowed to testify about something which patently he has no personal knowledge, whatever, of.

The Court: I will sustain the objection, if he did not have personal knowledge.

Mr. Gallagher: We will pass that for the time being, Your Honor.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Did you ever receive any income from Transdanubia? A. No.

Q. To your knowledge did Transdanubia ever receive—Uebersee ever receive any income from Transdanubia? A. No.

Q. Did you ever give any orders or direct anybody with respect to the operation of Transdanubia from May, 1931, until the present time? A. No, I did not.

Mr. Ingoldsby: May, 1941.

1508 By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. May, 1941, until the present one. A. '41, yes.

Q. Did you ever give any directions to any agent or authorize anybody to operate these mines for you subsequent to May, 1941? A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you, to your knowledge, did Uebersee ever authorize? A. No, I did not.

Q. Any operation of the mines. I will ask you this, who in Uebersee was the person who handled the Transdanubia situation? A. I was solely handling it, except this credit arrangement was, of course, made through banks.

Q. Directing your attention for a moment back to October 5, '31, did you have any conversations on that date with your father to the effect that you would pre-date the gift agreement when you returned to Germany? A. No, definitely not.

Q. And did you have any conversations with your father on October 5, '31, as to all the advantages that would come to you if you waited until you returned and signed it? A. There was no advantage, there was only a great danger that the loophole in the law would be closed.

1509 Q. Was the gift by your father to you reported to the German authorities? A. Oh, definitely, yes, in various ways.

Q. Will you explain the ways. A. First, within the limit permitted by German regulations, within three months it was reported as a gift and a gift tax of 2,000,000 R.M. was paid for it. This report was filed on January 2, 1932, just at the end of this three-months period. Furthermore, those 600 Opel shares were for every year shown on my father's property tax declaration, and of course after the gift to me it was not shown any more. In addition I could say this gift is, of course, mentioned in my father's last will.

Q. When is the date of the will? A. The last will was filed in 1938.

Q. Turning again to the question of the right to a Niessbrauch, if your father had had any income out of the gift agreement, would that have shown up in the German records somewhere? A. Oh, definitely, that would have shown up in three ways, at least. First, he would have to file any income with the Foreign Funds Control; even a claim to an income he would have had to file. Second, any income out of it he would have to report as an income under the income tax regulations. And then even any Niessbrauch right under German regula-1510 tions is regarded as property right and reflected in a property tax assessment.

I think I have to make this point clear. For instance, if a person receives, let us say, 5,000 marks out of a niessbrauch, then this figure of 5,000 marks would be capitalized and he would have to declare a property of, let us say, 100,000 R.M., and out of this property he then would have to pay his property tax of about one-half of one per cent.

And, if I may say, as the niessbrauch was conditional niessbrauch, only a niessbrauch conditioned upon the distress of my father, he had not to report this in his property tax declaration.

Q Were you ever directed by your father or mother as to what you were to do with the proceeds of the gift? A. No.

Q. Were you ever asked by your mother or father to pay them any dividends or any other income? A. No.

Q. Did you ever pay them any dividends or income out of this gift? A. No.

Mr. Gallagher: That is all.

Recross Examination

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Mr. von Opel, you testified on redirect that 1511 you filed Plaintiff's 83-A, which is called in German, abmeldung. A. Yes.

Q. And that is translated as "Notice of Departure." A. Yes.

Q. You filed a statement indicating that you were departing. A. It shows that I am departing to Detroit, United States.

Q. In December, 1929. A. On December 12, 1929.

Q. And it shows you intend to remain abroad how long? A. It doesn't show anything about it.

Q. You know, do you not, that the rule is that, and was at that time, that a German leaving his place of residence for a period of more than a short visit, I think it is more than two months, was required to file one of these even though he intended to return to his domicile? A. Yes, that is possible.

Q. You know that's the fact, don't you? A. I don't know the law in this respect. Everybody changing residence had to report.

Q. You testified concerning your trips into Germany after October 5, 1931, and said that between October,
1931, and the end of '41 you were in Germany 10.1
1512 per cent, is that right? A. Yes.

Q. And that adds up to a total, therefore, of more than a year. Ten percent of ten years, is one year, is it not? A. Yes, mathematically speaking, yes.

Q. You will agree, will you not, that you never indicated at any time during the alien enemy proceedings that you were in Germany any such amount of time.

Mr Ingoldsby: I object to that question, I think it is much too broad, Your Honor.

Mr. Gallagher: We are again back to the point that we do not know what he stated in the missing hearing, either.

The Court: He is asking about his recollection. Do you have any recollection in that regard?

The Witness: I beg your pardon?

The Court: Do you have any recollection as to what you said at the hearings as to the time you were in Germany?

The Witness: At the time of the hearings I was deprived of all my files, I could not reconstruct any movement of mine anywhere. I had no files at my disposition.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. And you were not able to remember that you spent many weeks in Germany in the Deku proceeding, and many weeks on these other proceedings that you have spoken of? A. I think I have stated that I went to 1513 Germany for business reasons, and I think even in the memorandum I wrote, in addition to the hearings I think I filed a memorandum, and in this memorandum I tried to reconstruct as good as I could at the time, without any files and records, for what purposes I had gone to Germany.

Q. You filed that memorandum about a year after the hearing, did you not? A. I think it was in connection with the re-hearing. But I think even for the first hearing a memorandum was filed, if I remember correctly. I think I filed a memorandum for each hearing. Mr. Burling

Q. And at no time did you indicate, did you, that you had been in Germany for a period, or a series of periods, which would add up to a year, isn't that true?

Mr. Gallagher: Mr. Burling, I have to object to that; would not the record be the best evidence?

The Court: If he has any recollection of it, he may answer. I think the record might refresh his recollection.

The Witness: I was asked in a round-about way. As I told you, I had no opportunity to exactly figure that out, and in fact it took me even now with these records about three weeks to reconstruct these exact percentages.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. You identified a book of accounts this morning as your personal book of accounts, is that right? A. Yes.

1514 Q. Is the book kept in your handwriting? A. No, sir.

Q. Who kept it, if you know? A. Mr. Gaeng, the accountant of Overseas.

Q. When did you lay eyes on it for the first time? A. When the books arrived here in the United States upon court order.

Q. You never saw it before you saw it in Mr. Gallagher's office? A. No, I did not.

Q. Will you tell the Court how you know it is your book of accounts if you never saw it before just recently? A. Because it must be my book of accounts, because it can not be an Overseas book of accounts.

Q. It is a deduction of yours? A. It is a deduction, but a very logical deduction.

Mr. Burling: At this point, if Your Honor please, I move to strike this witness's testimony concerning this book.

Mr. Gallagher: They have already introduced photostatic copies from that exhibit on that very point.

Mr. Burling: We did that on representations of counsel that it was a book of accounts of the corporation.

Mr. Gallagher: Mr. Burling, you keep repeating that, that some letter we have not seen made some such statement.

The Court: Let me see. Were you familiar with 1515 the handwriting there?

The Witness: I know Mr. Gaeng's handwriting, certainly.

The Court: You have seen him write from time to time, seen books in which he wrote?

The Witness: No, Your Honor, I wouldn't go so far.

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, the books themselves are the best evidence, because they show that they carry in it what his assets are in Uebersee.

Mr. Burling: I submit, Your Honor, a completely unidentified book cannot authenticate itself by what it says about itself.

The Court: Wait just a minute, let me find out from the witness what he knows about it. The handwriting in there is the handwriting of whom, do you say?

The Witness: Of Mr. Gaeng.

The Court: Did he work for you or Overseas, or both, or whom?

The Witness: Since 1931, yes.

The Court: Whom did he work for?

The Witness: He did all the accounting work for me personally, for Frima, and for Overseas.

The Court: What is there in this particular book that you identify as your own that convinced you it's with relation to your accounts and not Overseas'?

The Witness: Because it shows all the transactions
1516 which I had made in the United States and in Switzerland, it reflects those transactions. It shows all those transactions.

The Court: It has transactions personal to you in which Overseas were not in any sense interested?

The Witness: My personal transactions, yes, sir.

The Court: I mean it has some of your personal, in which Overseas had no relation whatever?

The Witness: Yes, that is correct.

The Court: I think that makes it circumstantial evidence.

Mr. Burling: May I inquire—I am not sure the witness understood your question.

Mr. Gallagher: I think he did.

Mr. Burling: May I inquire.

The Witness: May I say a word, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

The Witness: Defendant asked not only for the books of Overseas, but as far as I remember also for the books of Frima, and for this reason we gave them my personal books because they are the forerunners of Frima.

The Court: That is another point.

The Witness: For two years.

The Court: The lawyer can argue that later on. The thing we are trying to find out now is the identification of these which you talked from.

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, the only relevancy to 1517 this whole thing with respect to these books is simply the mystery that Mr. Burling arose with the word "Consortium O." We are merely explaining it for that purpose. If he wants to strike all his testimony and his exhibits with respect to those two pages, we can dispose of the exhibits. That is the only pertinency.

Mr. Burling: I object to the testimony of this witness, if Your Honor please, that it is his personal book of account. I agree with Your Honor that if there is a transaction of Fritz von Opel which is not a transaction also of Overseas, that would be circumstantial, to indicate it is. I wish to show the book to the witness and ask him to point out the transaction.

Mr. Gallagher: Is that the dollar book or the Swiss book? That is the dollar book.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I will show you now Plaintiff's Exhibit 85 and ask you to point out the transactions which are personal to you, and in which Uebersee has no interest—had no interest. A. It is better, Mr. Burling, to use the dollar book, because all those dollar amounts were not transferred to Overseas; we started with the Swiss francs amount.

Q. Wait a minute. I want you to show me in Plaintiff's Exhibit 85, which is the book which defendant referred to—

Mr. Gallagher: No, we referred to the dollar book.

1518 Mr. Burling: I am sorry.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. All right, I will show you Plaintiff's 84, which was also referred to by defendant, and ask you to show the transactions in which Uebersee had no interest. A. All those American transactions at the time of '31, all dollar transactions Overseas had no interest in.

Q. Just show me. A. It is the entire book, Mr. Burling.

Q. Show me one transaction in which Uebersee has no interest. A. The entire transactions.

Q. Show me one.

Mr. Gallagher: All of them.

Mr. Burling: I want to see one, please.

The Witness: Take, for instance here, November 9, 1933; there a block of Harvard shares is acquired, 18,160 shares of Harvard Brewing stock.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. And that stock was transferred to Overseas, was it not? A. That stock was transferred to Overseas in 1935, two years thereafter. For the time being it was kept on my books, or Frima's books. You see, these books are the forerunners of Frima. They were acquired through 1519 Ladenburg, Thalmann & Company, New York.

Q. You have no personal knowledge, do you, of whether Uebersee maintained records, tracing the assets which were ultimately transferred to it, all the way back to the original purchase by you? A. Oh, certainly, this book ends up with Frima, and then Frima then transfers everything, sells everything to Overseas in the end of 1935. He can show you every single transaction which you wish to see.

Q. Will you explain, Mr. von Opel, on the assumption that Plaintiff's Exhibits 84 and 85 are your books of account, why there is an account representing 80 per cent of the principal of the gift of October 5 which is labeled Consortium O? A. I explained to you, I never have seen that account. Which figure you mean—you are again referring to this figure of 2.6 million; that is not an income account.

Q. I said principal, now. I am changing my question. I first asked you about income, and you pointed out to me that that could not be income. I now ask you if that is not 80 per cent of the principal. A. No, definitely not. It is the entire hundred per cent.

Q. What is the meaning of "Consortium O"? A. I tried to explain that to you, Mr. Burling, those accounts were in the first year kept under my own name, as you see in the balance sheets of Overseas. In the second year 1520 it was called Consortium O prior to the formation of Frima.

Q. That is my question, why was it called—have you any knowledge, or can you give any explanation as to why it was called "Consortium O"? A. Because I wished that my name not be shown on the books. In the first year it was shown, in the second year it was called "Consortium O", and the third year it was called Frima. It was the purpose of forming the Frima corporation that my name should not appear on the books.

Q. Why were you anxious that your name should not appear on the books that were maintained in Switzerland? A. For several purposes, Mr. Burling.

Q. What were they? A. Mainly, as you know, at this time I feared some action by the Nazis Government, and I wanted to protect myself as well as I could.

Q. You feared action by the Nazis Government in the year 1932, did you? A. Pardon me, Mr. Burling, in the year '32 it is still under Fritz von Opel, and then it appears under Consortium in '32, and in '33 it is then called Frima. I think that is the sequence, Fritz von Opel, Consortium, and Frima.

Q. Why did you call yourself a syndicate? A. That is not a syndicate. It is called Consortium.

1521 Q. Consortium is a syndicate, is it not? A. It is not a syndicate, it is a consortium. By using another word—

Q. The word consortium means syndicate, does it not? A. Consortium means—I discussed this problem with two Swiss people, they told me that generally in Switzerland any forerunner of a corporation is called consortium.

Q. Did you hear Dr. Frankenberg testify on this subject? A. I think I did.

Q. Did he not say it was a small group, or a syndicate? A. Yes, it generally is called this.

Q. Will you explain why your account was carried under a name which indicates a small group or syndicate? A. Because it was supposed to go into Frima, and Frima, as you know, means—is an agent of mine, an application of mine and my wife's name. It is Fritz-Margot, abbreviated.

Q. The consortium is you and your wife, is that it? A. Yes, the corporation.

Q. No, I am talking about the consortium. A. In a strict sense those assets did, of course, not belong to my wife.

Q. Isn't the consortium you, your father, and your mother? A. No, definitely not.

Q. You are absolutely sure of that? A. Absolutely sure.

1527 DANIEL GROS, was called as a witness on behalf of the Plaintiff, and having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

Mr. Boland: Your Honor, while this witness understands English fairly well, he does not speak English fluently and would like very much to use Mr. Laufer as interpreter during the course of his interrogation. I have spoken about this with Mr. Laufer, and it seems to be agreeable.

The Court: Did you understand the nature of the oath you took?

The Witness: Yes.

The Court: You do not need that interpreted to you in German?

The Witness: No, I don't.

(Accordingly, the witness was examined and testi-1528 fied through the interpreter, Mr. Joseph Laufer, as follows:)

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Will you state your full name, please. A. Daniel Gros.

Q. What is your business or profession? A. Attorney at law.

Q. And where do you live? A. In Wiesbaden.

Q. Is that in Germany? A. Yes.

Q. What is your age? A. 48 years of age.

Q. Will you describe briefly your education? A. I passed the German examination for admission to universities. I then studied economics and business administration. And I terminated my studies after obtaining a degree in business administration and doctor of political science. I then studied law and took my first and second state bar examinations.

Q. And how long have you been practicing law, Doctor? A. I began practicing law at the end of 1933.

Q. And where did you start to practice law? A. In Berlin.

Q. And how long did you practice in Berlin? A. Until 1943 where I was bombed out completely with re-1529 spect to my office and my home.

Q. And what was the general nature of your practice? A. I was engaged in general practice with the exception of rent cases, divorce cases, and cases involving traffic violations.

Q. And after 1943 what did you do then, Doctor? A. I moved to Wiesbaden but immediately thereafter was called up for military service.

Q. And how long did you remain in the army? A. Until I was made a prisoner of war.

Q. And when were you taken as a prisoner of war? A. On April 27, 1945.

Q. And how long did you remain a prisoner of war? A. About two months.

Q. And then what did you do? A. I then returned to Wiesbaden and made application to be readmitted to the bar.

Q. And when was this? A. That was in the fall of 1945.

Q. Were you admitted to the bar? A. Yes, I was admitted as attorney and simultaneously as notary public.

Q. And then what did you do? A. I did not engage in the practice of law for the time being, but a judge in the law court of Wiesbaden.

1530 Q. How long did you serve as judge? A. About three quarters of a year.

Q. Who appointed you? A. The minister of justice of Hesse, with the approval of the military government.

Q. Is that the American Military Government? A. Yes.

Q. When you left your practice to enter the army, what did you do with your files and records? A. When I was called up I had already—I had no longer any files. For safety's sake I had removed my files as early as August, 1944, to Belitz, near Berlin.

Q. And after you served in the army did you make any attempt to recover your files and records? A. Yes, but it was difficult. Belitz is situated in the Russian zone of occupation. And I found out that the building to which I had removed my files had been occupied by the Russian Kommandatura after the city had been taken. And I was advised that nothing was left of my files.

Q. Doctor, were you ever a member of the Nazis Party? A. No; for the very reason that I was not a member of the Nazis Party I was appointed a judge, because there were very few judges whose record was unblemished and who were not members of the Nazis Party.

Q. Were you employed as an attorney by Wilhelm 1531 von Opel in the year of 1935? A. Yes.

Q. What was the purpose of your employment, Doctor? A. Wilhelm von Opel and Martha von Opel had made a gift of shares to their son by a gift agreement of 1931.

Mr. Burling: I object and move to strike as hearsay. The witness cannot testify.

The Court: Yes, that is right.

Mr. Boland: Your Honor, this witness has not testified in fact that a gift was made.

The Court: I will disregard that. The Witness has told him.

Mr. Boland: Read his answer back.

(Accordingly, the Witness's last answer was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: And a usufruct was provided therein for the parents, and I was given the job of presenting to the German authorities an agreement between the parties to the effect that this stipulation was nugatory.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Doctor, what steps did you take in carrying out this assignment of Wilhelm von Opel? A. I first prepared a memorandum of law.

Q. I show you now, Doctor, Plaintiff's Exhibit 96-A and ask you whether or not this is a copy of the memo-1532 randum to which you have just referred. A. Yes.

Q. And this memorandum was prepared by you? A. Yes.

Q. What was the purpose of this memorandum? A. By this memorandum I tried to become clear in my own mind concerning every possible legal interpretation of the agreement in order to be guided by it with respect to the steps which I would take before the German authorities.

Q. Doctor, directing your attention to the last line of the Exhibit—

Mr. Burling: I object to any reference to the attention of a document which is not in evidence.

Mr. Boland: I offer it.

Mr. Burling: I object to the document, Your Honor, on the ground that it contains extensive hearsay. The witness has testified that he was retained in 1935. There is a great deal of material relating to facts occuring in 1931 with which he could have no possible personal knowledge. He must be referring to—

Mr. Boland: He has testified as a lawyer he took the gift agreement and made a legal analysis of it.

The Court: Are you going to show that this was submitted to Wilhelm von Opel?

Mr. Boland: I will, Your Honor.

1533 The Court: All right.

Mr. Burling: My argument, Your Honor, is that this man can no more testify to what happened than it would be proper for me to take the stand and testify that in my opinion after studying the case the gift agreement is a sham.

The Court: As I understand it, he is seeking to establish that this opinion was handed to Wilhelm von Opel and he later took some steps in reliance upon it, is that not what you are going to do?

Mr. Boland: Yes, Your Honor, this has got nothing to do with the establishment of the gift agreement as such. We are not using him as a legal witness or as an expert to testify that a gift was in fact established by interpretation.

The Court: That would be proper.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor would restrict the admission of the document so that it is not evidence of the facts set out in it but merely evidence that it was prepared, I withdraw my objection.

The Court: I certainly will not draw any conclusions as to the fact of the execution of the agreement itself or anything as to which this man had no knowledge. I am admitting it as a memorandum of law that was handed to, that I understand you offered to connect up with the fact that it was handed to the alleged donor, and that he took certain actions in reliance upon it.

1534 Mr. Boland: As a matter of fact, Your Honor, we will bring out, and the defendant well knows, that this was filed in the files of Wilhelm von Opel.

The Court: I will accept it, then, subject to that understanding.

(Accordingly, the document above referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 96 and received in evidence.)

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Directing your attention to the last sentence of this exhibit, it states, does it not, that a draft of an agreement was attached? A. Yes.

Q. Do you have a copy of that draft? A. No.

Mr. Boland: By the way, I might also state for the record, Your Honor, that that last exhibit was Defendant's Exhibit 31 in the deposition in which this witness was interrogated in Germany by Mr. Baum and Mr. Laufer.

Mr. Burling: That is in no way binding on us here; what we use in cross-examining a witness on depositions is immaterial to the proposition here.

The Court: Well, let's see what is asked about it. If you want to object, I will rule on it.

By Mr. Boland:

1535 Q. Doctor, I will show you now Plaintiff's Exhibits 7-A, 8-A, and 9-A, which have been previously identified as drafts and correspondence of Dr. Hachenburg, and ask whether or not you had copies of these exhibits before you at the time you made your draft of July 27, 1935. A. I can't state that with absolute certainty, but I believe rather definitely that I did not have them; otherwise I would have referred to them in my memorandum in one line or another.

Q. After having prepared the memorandum of July 27,

1935, Doctor, what was the next step you took in this connection? A. Some time later I filed an application with the Foreign Exchange Control office attached to the original treasury office in Wiesbaden.

Q. At approximately what date was this filed, Doctor? A. A few months later.

Q. Doctor, I show you now Plaintiff's Exhibit 97-A, and ask whether or not this is the application to which you refer. A. Yes, that's the one.

Q. And was this prepared by you? A. Yes.

Q. What was the purpose of this application, Doctor? A. I wish to advise by this application the Foreign Exchange Control office of the fact that the parties to 1536 the agreement consider the usufruct provisions as nugatory, and I requested to approve the position of law which I had taken in this application for reasons of legal certainty.

Q. Was this an application for a license, Doctor? A. No, I solely requested a statement of clearance in the interests of legal certainty.

Q. So that it was not an application for a license? A. No.

Q. Was there a draft attached to this application, Doctor? A. Yes.

Q. Is this a copy of the draft that was attached to the application? A. Yes.

Q. What is this draft, Doctor, what does it purport to be? A. This draft is meant to make it clear that the parties, as stated in the penultimate paragraph thereof, have agreed to consider the stipulations of the usufruct agreement no longer effective.

The Court: I think we had better adjourn now until two o'clock.

(Accordingly, at 12:30 p.m. the noon recess was taken, until 2 p.m.)

1537 AFTERNOON SESSION

Thereupon, DR. DANIEL GROS resumed the witness stand and was examined and testified further, through the interpreter, Mr. Joseph Laufer, as follows:

Direct Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Doctor, you have testified, have you not, that the draft attached to Exhibit 97-A was a draft of an agreement in connection with waiving the Niessbrauch? A. I did not say that this draft was a draft for a contemplated waiver of the usufruct, but was a draft of a statement to the effect that the parties considered the usufruct as being no longer in effect.

Q. Was this draft actually signed by the parties, Doctor? A. No.

Q. Did the parties intend to sign this draft? A. No.

Mr. Burling: I object on the ground that it is hearsay.

Mr. Boland: I don't think it is hearsay at all, Your Honor. He was the attorney for these parties.

The Court: What was the question?

Mr. Boland: The question was, did the parties
1538 intend to sign this draft.

The Court: I don't know that he would know their intentions, would he?

Mr. Boland: He was their attorney.

The Court: I don't believe he would know their intention, unless he talked to them.

Mr. Boland: He prepared the draft, Your Honor.

The Court: I don't believe I can let him give his conclusion as to whether they intended to sign it or not, without some facts from which we can draw that deduction.

Mr. Boland: All right, sir.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. What was the purpose of this draft? A. As I already stated, the purpose of this draft was to advise the Foreign Exchange Control authorities of the fact that the parties themselves had agreed to consider this usufruct as pointless.

Q. During the course of your representation of Wilhelm von Opel in connection with this matter, did you have conversations with Wilhelm von Opel? A. Certainly, often.

Q. Did you have conversations with Marta von Opel in connection with this? A. Yes.

Q. Did you have conversations with Fritz von 1539 Opel? A. Yes.

Q. What was the nature of your conversations?

Mr. Burling: I object to that, Your Honor, on the ground that it is clearly hearsay. And I would like to point out in further support of my objection that all three of the persons named have been interrogated, either here or by deposition, called as witnesses by the plaintiff. I do not believe that this witness should be allowed to testify as to what Wilhelm von Opel said to him, when Wilhelm von Opel himself was a witness and could have testified.

The Court: Well, of course, that would be a point you could argue, as to the weakness of his testimony. But wouldn't what he said with regard to his attitude in creating what you call a sham be material, everything he said in connection with it, as a sham when he had no motive, to deceive this Court, for example?

Mr. Burling: I submit, Your Honor, the evidence has established that he did have a very strong motive to deceive the German Government.

The Court: I am talking about this case. It would be a statement accompanying the act, in explanation of his attitude at the time. You can argue the weakness of it, but I think the testimony is proper.

Mr. Boland: Will you read the question, please?

The Reporter (reading): "Question: What was 1540 the nature of your conversations?"

The Witness: The substance of these conversations was that all parties explained to me that they wished to consider the usufruct provisions as pointless.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. In your conversations with Wilhelm, Marta, and Fritz von Opel, did they indicate, did any one of the three indicate to you, that they in fact considered the usufruct as void? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does this draft reflect that the parties had so agreed? A. Yes; in the penultimate paragraph it is stated expressly—

"We declare that we consider the provisions concerning the usufruct set forth in the gift agreement as no longer effective."

Mr. Boland: I offer Plaintiff's 97.

(The document referred to was received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 97.)

By Mr. Boland:

Q. I show you now Plaintiff's Exhibit 98, and ask whether or not this letter was prepared by you. A. Yes.

Q. Would you state the purpose of this letter?
1541 A. In this letter I express my position with respect to one statement contained in the gift agreement, which reads as follows: "The usufruct in the shares is not assigned."

It is the purpose of my letter to state with legal arguments that by this phrase, according to the provisions of German law, a usufruct cannot be reserved.

Q. Had this question been raised by the German authorities? A. Yes, by Assessor Dr. Rentrop, to whose attention this letter is directed.

Mr. Boland: I offer Plaintiff's 98.

(The document referred to was received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 98.)

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Doctor, I show you a letter that has been marked for identification as Plaintiff's 99 and ask whether or not this is a copy of a letter prepared by you. A. Yes, sir.

Q. And, in substance, is this the same as the application of October 8, 1935? A. Yes, it is the same thing.

Q. And is the distinction that this was sent to the national office of the foreign exchange agency? A. Yes, this letter was addressed to the national office in Berlin, whereas the other letter was addressed to the re-
1542 gional office in Wiesbaden.

Q. The other letter being Exhibit 97 (handing to the witnes)? A. Yes.

Q. Doctor, in the first paragraph of this letter—

Mr. Burling: Will you identify the letter, please?

Mr. Boland: This is 99, Mr. Burling.

Mr. Burling: Thank you.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. In the first paragraph of this letter I notice that a reference is made to a decision of December 13, 1935, of the regional revenue office, Frankfort-on-Main branch, and ask whether or not you have a copy of this decision? A. No.

Q. Do you recall the decision referred to in your letter of February 8, 1936? A. I do not remember with certainty this decision, but I conclude from the contents of the letter of February 8, 1936, that the decision taken must have been in the negative.

Q. And how do you come to that conclusion, Doctor? A. Because otherwise the statement of February 8, 1936, would have been unnecessary.

Q. And that is the reason, is it, Doctor, you wrote to the national office of the Foreign Exchange Agency?

1543 A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you now, Doctor, Plaintiff's Exhibit 100, and ask whether or not this is a copy of a letter prepared by you. A. Yes.

Mr. Boland: It is Defendant's Exhibit 32 in the Wiesbaden depositions.

Mr. Burling: Thank you.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Does this letter contain in substance the same arguments which you used in your letter of October 8, 1935, Plaintiff's Exhibit 97? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Burling: I object to this. Again, clearly, it is a recital not only of legal arguments, but of facts of which this witness could not have any personal knowledge.

If it is stipulated it is not offered for the facts cited, but merely to show that the letter was sent, I have no objection.

Mr. Boland: We will stipulate that it is not offered other than to establish the fact that the argument was prepared by Dr. Gros and sent to the addressee of the letter, for the purpose of getting rid of the Niessbranch.

Mr. Burling: Thank you; that it fine.

Mr. Boland: Where do we stand, Mr. Reporter?

1544 The Reporter (reading): "Question: Does this letter contain in substance the same arguments which you used in your letter of October 8, 1935, Plaintiff's Exhibit 97?

"Answer: Yes, sir."

By Mr. Boland:

Q. I note, Doctor, that this letter was addressed to the tax revenue office in Wiesbaden. A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Was this letter actually sent to the tax office in Wiesbaden? A. I have, of course, no immediately recollection of its having been mailed; but if I see a letter from me, I assume that in the ordinary course of business this letter was mailed.

Q. What was the purpose of sending such a letter to the tax office, Doctor? A. The collector's office also was concerned with the usufruct in connection with a possible taxability of income derived from it, and the tax office had inquired of Wilhelm von Opel whether or not he had received any income from the usufruct.

Moreover, as I note from the contents of the letter, it was important for the collector's office with respect to the property tax.

Q. Doctor, did you take any action with the 1545 Reichsbank in connection with obtaining approval of the waiver of the Niessbrauch? A. Yes.

Q. When? A. At about the same time at which the collector's office addressed its inquiry to Wilhelm von Opel, an inquiry was made by the regional office of the Reichsbank in Wiesbaden.

Wilhelm von Opel advised me of the fact, and I advised him what to reply. And, as I recall, I sent him a draft of a letter.

Q. And was the letter in the nature of advice to Wilhelm von Opel? A. In this letter I suggested to Wilhelm von Opel how he should write to the regional office of the Reichsbank in Wiesbaden.

Q. And what was the general nature of your advice? A. The substance of my advance followed precisely the line which I had followed previously with respect to the collector's office and the office of Foreign Exchange Control. And I remember that at the end of the draft, I had added:

"For any further information, please inquire of Dr. Gros"—that is, speaking to the Reichsbank branch—"inquire of Dr. Gros, attorney at law, who is handling the matter."

Q. Doctor, did the Reichsbank ask you for any 1546 information concerning this matter? A. No; but I heard that the customs investigation office in Frankfort-on-Main had undertaken investigations on its own concerning this matter.

Q. Did the Reichsbank directorium in Berlin ask you for any information? A. No. I merely received one day a telephone call, according to which a certain Mr. Wilhelm, director of the Reichsbank, wished to talk to me in connection with the Opel matter.

Q. Did you ever go to see Director Wilhelm in connection with this matter? A. Yes, sir, several days after the telephone call.

Q. What was the date of your first visit to Director Wilhelm? A. I cannot immediately remember the date. But I will remember it as soon as my memory will have been refreshed by a letter which I addressed to Wilhelm in connection with the matter.

Q. I show you now Plaintiff's Exhibit 101.

Mr. Barling: By my silence, Your Honor, I don't want the record to indicate that I agree to the admissibility of this document.

Mr. Boland: I am merely identifying it. I have three documents to offer, as I recall.

1547 By Mr. Boland:

Q. I ask you whether or not this is a copy of your letter to which you have just referred? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does this letter refresh your memory as to the date of the conference with Director Wilhelm of the Reichsbank? A. Yes; I note from the letter that the conference must have taken place on June 27, 1935.

Q. What was the nature of your conference with Director Wilhelm?

Mr. Burling: I object, Your Honor. This is clearly hearsay, what some person named Wilhelm—not Wilhelm von Opel, but Wilhelm of the Reichsbank—said to this man.

And furthermore, if Your Honor please, the testimony of Wilhelm has been taken in this case and that is the proper way to find out what Wilhelm said.

Mr. Boland: Your Honor, if you will bear with me just a minute, in the first instance, we are not offering what Director Wilhelm said to Dr. Gros for the truth of what he asserted, but merely for the fact that he did say it, true or false. And the second statement is that there was a deposition taken from Director Wilhelm; he was brought here to Washington by the Government and subjected to examination; and we intend to make him a witness in this case and read in portions of his deposition. And 1548 this is merely to corroborate things in his deposition.

The Court: What do you seek to develop?

Mr. Boland: That Director Wilhelm, upon the presentation of Dr. Gros' application for approval of the parties waiving all rights in connection with the gift agreement, had admitted he had no legal basis upon which to oppose their doing exactly what they did.

And we think it is important, lest the Government argue it would be impossible for the parties to have agreed to waive, in the face of potential criminal prosecution under the Exchange Control regulations; and this would establish there was no fear of that.

Mr. Burling: That is my point, Your Honor—it is offered to establish that Wilhelm said this.

Mr. Boland: This is in corroboration of their own witness.

The Court: We can take it in turn.

Mr. Burling: The fact is that hearsay evidence is offered to corroborate another witness, and incidentally the deposition of Wilhelm will be contrary, I think, to what this witness will say; but you can't corroborate a witness by hearsay evidence. There is no such exception to the hearsay rule.

I submit this man can say what he said to Wilhelm, but it is pure hearsay for him to say what Wilhelm said to him.

1549 The Court: The only way in which he could say it, where it would have any relevancy, would be if it was communicated to any of the parties and they took any action in regard to it, or failed to take any action in regard to it.

Mr. Boland: It certainly was communicated to the parties, to all the parties to this agreement, and they were thoroughly cognizant of the fact that the German agencies would take no action on the waiver of the rights under the agreement.

The Court: Let me see if I comprehend the drift of this testimony. I want to be sure I do. You are seeking to establish that this Dr. Gros was employed for what purpose?

Mr. Boland: He was employed by Wilhelm von Opel for the purpose of obtaining the approval of the German Government to a waiver of whatever rights the father and the mother had retained in the gift agreement.

The Court: And he then wrote certain officers, and in the course of writing them he submitted the document which I think he didn't sign? Is that right?

Mr. Boland: I think that is right. And he also stated the parties had in fact agreed to a waiver of whatever rights they have.

The Court: Does this have any relation to his failure to sign? Is that what you are talking about?

1550 Mr. Boland: No, it doesn't, Your Honor. It isn't related to the failure to sign, at all.

The Court: He tells them what another man says. What relevancy does that have to any action they took? That is what we are trying to get at. Of course, his opinion is not controlling on me, if that is what you are offering it for.

Mr. Boland: No, Your Honor. I am offering it for the purpose of showing that the parties, as a result of the German inaction, the German Government's inaction, and the application for approval of the waiving of their rights, that the parties relied upon the fact that there was no further action to be taken by the German Government—

Mr. Burling: I will stipulate the German Government took no action with respect to this waiver or alleged waive

Mr. Boland: And also that Mr. Fritz von Opel governed his actions accordingly.

The Court: Your point is that in so much as this Director Wilhelm, of the Reichsbank—

Mr. Boland: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: And what position had the Reichsbank?

Mr. Boland: Comparable to the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. Burling: We contend his opinion had no effect whatever.

The Court: You expect to establish that this 1551 Reichsbank had a national position, and that he was an officer of the German Government? Is that right?

Mr. Boland: It is established in the deposition, upon questioning by Mr. Baum. He was their witness, and we are going to read that into the record.

The Court: And inasmuch as he, rightly or wrongly, took the position that no affirmative action was necessary by way of relinquishing this usufruct, that he took no action? Is that it?

Mr. Boland: Yes, sir.

The Court: I think it would be admissible.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, my objection goes to hearsay. Why should this witness be allowed to testify what Wilhelm said? Wilhelm himself has testified to what he said.

The Court: Well, it would be corroborative of it.

Mr. Burling: Isn't it hearsay, even if it is corroborative?

The Court: No, I don't think so. It is a fact. If somebody fails to take an action that he might otherwise take, it is competent. I might fail to take any action whatever, if I have certain information given to me by an official of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. And I might very well take different action if I did not have it.

The fact of the communication of that is a fact 1552 which is both relevant and material, I think. I will permit it, subject to your objection, and let you argue the deposition conflicts, if it does.

Mr. Boland: All right, Your Honor.

The Court: Tell him he may answer the question.

Mr. Boland: Will you please read the question, Mr. Reporter?

The Reporter (reading): "Question: What was the nature of your conference with Director Wilhelm?"

The Witness: Wilhelm referred to the position I had taken in the Niessbrauch matter, the usufruct matter, and then told me that their own lawyers had examined the matter and had reached the conclusion that my position was to be approved and that therefore my position was to be shared by their own lawyers, and that therefore no claim existed within the terms of the Foreign Exchange Control provisions of Wilhelm von Opel against Fritz von Opel.

After that, he said "Let's leave the legal consideration aside." And then he made lengthy statements to me, pointing out that in view of the very tight foreign exchange control position of the German Reich, Fritz von Opel should feel inclined voluntarily to make contributions of foreign exchange to help alleviate the emergency of the German Reich.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Did you communicate the results of your con-
1553 versation to Wilhelm von Opel? A. Yes, just in this letter of July 7, 1937.

Q. And the purpose of this letter of July 7, 1937, is what, Doctor? A. This letter had, in the light of my assignment and in the light of my situation, the extremely important purpose of putting on paper the approval of the Reichsbank of my legal position.

Q. And did you forward a copy of this letter to Wilhelm von Opel? A. Yes, sir; this letter was found in his files.

Mr. Boland: I offer Exhibits 98, 99, 100, and 101.

(The documents referred to were thereupon received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibits 98, 99, 100, and 101.)

By Mr. Boland:

Q. I show you now a paper identified as Defendant's Exhibit 32 and ask whether you are able to identify this document? A. Yes; this is a copy authenticated by the authorities, of the last will of Wilhelm and Martha von Opel.

Q. Do you know who drafted this will, Doctor? A. Yes. I drafted it, except for the codicils which were added subsequently.

Q. And what was the date on which you drafted
1554 this will, Doctor? A. The date was November 20, 1938, as I note from the copy of the will. I directly remember it was in October or November of 1938, because at that time I was present at the hunting lodge at Wilhelmsruhe, on the Lake of Moener.

Q. And who was present at the time the will was drafted? A. Wilhelm von Opel, Marta von Opel, Fritz von Opel, and I myself.

Q. At the time of the drafting of the will, was there any conversation in connection with the gift agreement of October 5, 1931? A. Yes, sir, for the reason that in connection with this gift agreement steps had to be taken with respect to the accounting as between son and daughter.

Q. Were there any conversations in connection with the rights of Marta or Wilhelm von Opel under the Niessbrauch? A. No.

Q. Doctor, do you know an Erich Deku? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know a Rudolf Deku? A. Also.

Q. Do you know a Graf Schwerin? A. Likewise.

1555 Q. Do you know a Major Mudra? A. Likewise.

Q. Doctor, Rudolph Deku testified here the other day in this case, and he testified as a witness for the defendants. He stated that he had had dinner but once in his life with Wilhelm von Opel. He stated further, in cross examination, that you were not present at that dinner.

Do you ever recall having had dinner with Wilhelm von Opel at a time at which Rudolf Deku was present? A. Yes, sir, in the Neva Grill in Berlin.

Q. And in what year did this dinner take place? A. It must have been in the year 1934.

Q. Do you remember who was present at that dinner? A. All those persons that were mentioned before as being known to me, and in addition myself, and Wilhelm von Opel.

Q. In other words, you mean that Erich Deku, Rudolf Deku, Graf Schwerin, Major Mudra, Wilhelm von Opel, and yourself were present? A. That is correct.

Q. How do you remember this dinner, Doctor? A. Mainly for the reason that I never attended another dinner with the same guest list, and also for the reason that I didn't attend another dinner at the Neva Grill.

Q. What was the nature of the conversation during the course of the dinner, Doctor? A. I have no imme-

1556 diate recollection of the conversation, and I assume that it slipped my memory, as thousands of others, because nothing worthwhile was being said.

Q. Doctor, Rudolf Deku stated, at page 844 of the record, in answer to the following question by Mr. Baum:

"Now, Mr. Deku, will you please tell us in words or substance what you recall was said by Mr. Wilhelm von Opel during the course of this dinner?"

Which answer Mr. Rudolf Deku stated as follows:

"As a result of my questions, and as a result of the questions of the others, the discussion arose over the payment of a fine of three and a half million marks by Wilhelm von Opel.

"We were astonished that he had submitted to such a severe fine, without fighting through a regular procedure.

"And we asked him how it came about, how he happened to do that.

"He stated that it was well worth three and a half million marks to have his assets outside of the German locked safe."

Now, Doctor, do you remember Wilhelm von Opel's having made these statements during the course of that dinner? A. No; I do not remember that. But I would 1557 like to add that if such a statement had been made by Wilhelm von Opel, it would have fixed itself upon my memory.

Q. Referring to page 842 of the record, in referring to a trip which you took to Switzerland, Mr. Deku stated the following:

"Mr. Gros was evidently dissatisfied with the results of his conversation with Fritz von Opel, and he stated that in his opinion it would be difficult for Wilhelm von Opel to prove to the German authorities the bona fide character of the agreement which he had concluded."

The question is, did you ever make that statement to Mr. Rudolf Deku? A. It is wholly impossible that I made such a statement, because it is in direct conflict with the basic position which I have always taken in this matter; and, in fact, I advised at this time not to submit but to go to court in connection with it.

Q. Doctor, was your deposition ever taken in connection with this case? A. Yes, sir, in September of last year in Wiesbaden.

Q. Wiesbaden, Germany? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were the documents which you identified here today presented as exhibits during the course of that deposition?

1558 Mr. Burling: I object, Your Honor, on the ground that it is irrelevant.

The Court (to counsel for plaintiff): What is the point?

Mr. Boland: The point of this, Your Honor, is to establish that during the course of the deposition taken of Mr. Gros by Mr. Baum and Mr. Laufer, in Wiesbaden, Germany, at which time the very documents we have here in this court that this man has identified today were put in evidence and questions asked about them, that during the course of his deposition Wilhelm von Opel was sitting right next to him, and if they had any questions to ask about the waiver, they could have asked them then and there. And we think it is very material to get that in evidence.

Mr. Burling: I object very strongly, if Your Honor please. If the testimony is that Wilhelm von Opel waived something, and Wilhelm von Opel's deposition indicates the proper party to testify about the waiver is Wilhelm von Opel, I think it is argumentative, to which we could respond at the proper time, that it is not the proper thing to think up this waiver story after Wilhelm von Opel is dead.

Mr. Boland: They were there, Your Honor. Wilhelm von Opel was there during the course of this deposition about the waiver.

1559 The Court: And you want to draw some inference from the fact that they didn't question him about it?

Mr. Boland: I want to counteract any inferences they are drawing about the fact that there is no questioning of Wilhelm von Opel about the waiver.

Mr. Burling: We agree Wilhelm von Opel was sitting there. But when they came to taking the deposition of Wilhelm von Opel, they forgot to ask him any question about waiver.

Mr. Boland: We will stipulate that at the time the deposition was taken of Dr. Gros, the documents he has identified today were identified in the course of the deposition, and during the course of his deposition Mr. Baum and Mr. Laufer were present; and, further, that Wilhelm von Opel was present during the course of the deposition.

Mr. Burling: I will stipulate if you will join in the stipulation that neither Maria von Opel nor Wilhelm von Opel was asked a single word about waiver, when their deposition was taken.

Mr. Boland: You can make your argument for the record on that. We won't stipulate on that.

The Court: Well, you stipulate the facts as to the presence of the parties, and the presence of the documents, and the conclusions can be drawn later on.

Mr. Burling: All right, sir.

1560 Mr. Boland: Yes, sir. With that understanding, Your Honor, that is all we have on direct.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Burling:

Q. As closely as you can fix the date, when was this dinner you have testified to at the Neva Grill? A. From immediate memory I cannot fix the date any further. It was an important prop to my memory that Rudolf Deku fixed the date.

Q. Now, Dr. Gros, this is a very complicated cross examination that I have to conduct, and I request you to answer my questions as directly as possible, and not volunteer or make arguments or make comments about the reason for your answers. A. Does that refer to the last answer which I have given?

Q. Yes; I want the best date you can possibly give, and nothing else. A. I believe to be required to add this in order to make a truthful statement; otherwise my answer would have given rise to misunderstanding.

Q. You are required, on the contrary, to answer my questions and say nothing else at this time.

Mr. Boland: Your Honor, I think that the witness has indicated he doesn't recollect this, because Rudolf 1561 Deku was the one who fixed the thing in his memory, and he doesn't remember specifically, and I don't see how a man can be required to do that which he cannot do.

Mr. Burling: Then he can say it; but I don't want argument which can go on for days.

The Court: I think he has the point now, and let us see how we can go on.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Give us the best statement you can as to when the dinner at the Neva Grill took place. A. I canot make a further statement—a more definite statement.

Q. Did it take place between 1920 and 1940? A. I already stated it took place in the year 1934.

Q. Did it take place in the summer of 1934? A. If I examine my conscience closely I must say that any more definite statement as to the time would divorce me from the truth.

Q. Well, we certainly don't want to do that, Doctor.

Mr. Boland: We agree.

The Witness: I take that for granted.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Do you not recall that the dinner at the Neva Grill took place shortly after a summary judgment had been entered in the Wilhelm von Opel proceedings? A.
1562 I have no recollection of the fact that there was any connection between the summary order and the date of this dinner.

Q. How many times have you been in the Newa 1563 Grill? A. As I stated already, I have been there only once, and it was on the occasion of that dinner.

Q. And is it not true that the Newa in the 1930's was the most fashionable, or one of the most fashionable restaurants in Berlin? A. I don't know whether you can put it that way. At any rate, is was a rather small establishment.

Q. It was a very expensive restaurant, was it not? A. It belonged to the group of the more expensive establishments. I did not then, and am not now, familiar with the very expensive restaurants.

Q. And the dinner took place in a private dining room, did it not? A. I cannot remember that any more.

Q. And you were invited to this dinner by Wilhelm von Opel, were you not? A. How it happened that I was present at the dinner, I cannot state any more today.

Q. Don't you recall it was a dinner in the nature of a celebration given by Wilhelm von Opel? A. No—celebration, what for?

Q. For the success in getting his money out of Germany. A. No, during this time I have only seen him complaining bitterly about the fact that he was pressured by 1564 the German agencies.

Q. In 1935, I believe you testified you were retained by Wilhelm von Opel in relation to a usufruct matter? A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. And you are familiar, are you not, with the applicable law in Germany relating to usufructs? A. Yes, at that time I was quite familiar with all the details of these provisions, and even today I am familiar with the basic principles thereof.

Q. And it is true, is it not, that a usufruct, as opposed to a claim to have someone create a usufruct, is an in rem right? A. No, that is not correct, because the term "usufruct" is used even by lawyers in different meanings.

Q. I am going to show you the German civil code, and ask you to point out any chapter relating to a usufruct other than a right in rem. A. I assume that this is not seriously meant, because otherwise it would take too much time.

Q. I assure you, Doctor, it is seriously meant, because I am advised by my experts that there is no such reference in the code anywhere, and I ask you to point one out to me. if there is one. A. In order to do this properly, I will just as a matter of precaution check up in the index.

1565 Mr. Boland: Your Honor, while he is checking, I don't want the record to indicate that because he may or may not find something in the German code that the position of the plaintiff is unwarranted, or the position of the defendant in this case. He is not qualified in German law.

Mr. Burling: Your Honor, I am merely laying a foundation for attacking the testimony of this witness with respect to the termination of the usufruct. I am not trying to make him a general expert. I am merely laying a foundation for an attack on his testimony relating to the termination of the usufruct, which we contend never was terminated at all, if it ever came into existence; that is, if this was not a sham transaction from the outset.

Mr. Gallagher: Could you clarify that? You mean it was not terminated because it did not receive the approval of the Germans?

Mr. Burling: No, no, my contention, which I am coming to, is that it was impossible validly to waive a usufruct or even a claim for a usufruct once it was created, without a license, and a license was never issued, or at least, there is no testimony from Mr. von Opel that a license was issued.

The Witness: May I hear the question again?

(The pending question was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: No, I think I must agree with you that the usufruct in a technical sense appears only as a right 1566 in rem in this code.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. And that is the code in which the German civil law is embodied, is it not? A. Yes, since 1900.

Q. Now, Doctor, what are the conditions required to create a valid usufruct? A. In order to avoid misunderstandings, shall I take the word "usufruct" to mean a right in rem?

Q. Yes, as defined in the code. A. The requirements are basically the same as those required for the creation of any other right in rem, that is, a meeting of the minds and delivery, or, in the place of delivery, a substitute for such delivery.

Q. And once there is an agreement that a usufruct is to be created, then all that is left undone is the delivery of possession to the usufructuary, is that right? A. That is correct, if the question is put in an abstract fashion, because otherwise the particular circumstances must be taken into consideration.

Q. Suppose we take these hypothetical circumstances. "A" gives legal title to property to "B", and it is agreed that "A" is to keep the usufruct, and "B" takes the property and sells it, and puts the proceeds in a safe deposit box, and delivers the key to that box to "C". And 1567 "A" and "C" have agreed that "C" is the agent of "A", and "B" gives the key to "C", and at that time

"C" agrees to hold the key in his capacity as "A's" agent.

Under those circumstances, the delivery of the key would constitute good delivery to the usufructuary, and a valid usufruct would arise, is that not so? A. I must state that my intellectual capacity didn't quite catch up with the hypotheses presented to me, and therefore I would like to put them down again.

Q. Isn't this pure sham, Doctor, aren't you just acting? A. I don't know how I gave cause for such a statement on your part, and I reject it.

Q. Haven't you been dealing with precisely the hypothesis I put to you in this very matter ever since 1935? A. Not so.

Q. Don't you know that Fritz von Opel swore in 1935 that he put the shares of Uebersee in a box, and took the box and gave the key to the box to Hans Frankenberg as his father's agent?

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, I will have to object. The testimony of Mr. von Opel is not to that effect. The record reflects that Mr. von Opel gave him a key, and subsequently, the following year, asked him to be the agent. You constantly, Mr. Burling, change the record in that respect.

Mr. Burling: May I state to Your Honor that Mr.
1568 Gallagher has made an unwarranted assertion, that my question is entirely correct, that the affidavit of Fritz von Opel says in the most clear possible language that he gave the key to Hans Frankenberg as agent for his father.

The Court: There is no use of arguing about it. He is asking the question as to whether this witness recalls that as a fact. If that's the wrong hypothesis, you can bring it out later on.

He asked him if he doesn't recall that was the fact.

Mr. Burling: I asked him if he didn't recall that Fritz von Opel swore to that?

Mr. Gallagher: Just for the purpose of the record, Your Honor, even the affidavit itself, which I submit should be read on this point, was not given to him for that purpose, but said it was held for that purpose. The key was held by—

The Court: Let us not waste too much on this. What he is trying to develop is whether the witness knows what he is talking about. Let us not spend too much time on it. I am going to let you argue the significance of the testimony at the proper time. What you are trying to establish is that he is familiar with the hypothesis.

Mr. Burling: That is correct, Your Honor.

The Witness: I learned about this in the course of this proceeding.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Don't you understand my hypothesis? Don't 1569 you understand that in my hypothesis Wilhelm is "A", Fritz is "B", and Frankenberg is "C"? A. I have made notations so that I will better understand it, and I request you to continue.

Q. All right, my question is, on the hypothesis I gave you, the fact that "C" holds the key as agent for "A" would be a good delivery to "A" for the purpose of creating a usufruct. A. In this abstract fashion of putting the question, nothing reliable can be stated.

Q. Well, will you answer the question? A. It is impossible to answer the question.

Mr. Gallagher: Mr. Burling, I suggest you now state the hypothesis, so he can write it down. I think it will save time. I think he has forgotten the hypothesis.

Mr. Burling: All right.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. The hypothesis, once more, is: "A" gives legal title of property to "B", and "A" and "B" agree that "A" is to retain the usufruct. And "B" places the property given in a safe deposit box. And "A" and "C" agree that "C" shall act as the agent of "A". And "C" then holds the key to the safe deposit box as agent for "A", having previously been given the key by "B".

And "B" and "C" agree that "C" is to hold the key as agent for "A". A. From the many assumptions 1570 that were made I can see that an agreement of the parties is present, and also something that can be described as a delivery or substitute for delivery, which would bring a usufruct into being, in an abstract fashion.

Q. But nevertheless valid?

Mr. Gallagher: I just want to ask one question. That hypothesis, if I recollect correctly, stated that "A" and "C" had agreed, "A" being the father, and "C" being Frankenberg, is that correct?

Mr. Burling: Yes, you heard correctly.

The Court: But nevertheless valid, he asked.

The Witness: Certainly.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Once a usufruct is established under German law, it can be terminated, can it not, by the act of the usufructuary? A. Certainly, the niessbrauch can be terminated.

Q. And by the act of the usufructuary? A. I believe if the whole thing is to be waived, a consent of the other parties is required.

Q. And when a usufruct is waived, and the title holder agrees, then the beneficial interest in the property passes to the title holder, is that right? A. I do not understand that.

Q. Well, supposing that I have the usufructuary
1571 interest in a thousand hectare farm; as long as I have the usufruct, I get all the crops that grow on that farm, don't I? A. Yes.

Q. And if you held the legal title, you wouldn't get the crops until the usufruct was over, would you? A. Certainly.

Q. And if I waive my usufructuary interest, and you consent to it, my right to the crops moves to you immediately, does it not? A. You cannot put it in those terms under German law, but in substance that is the case.

Q. And so a waiver of a niessbrauch or usufruct is a disposition of a property right, isn't it? A. Yes, because the term "niessbrauch" itself is a right in rem as we use the term at the present time.

Q. Is it not true that under German law after August 1, 1931, a disposition of a right or claim for foreign exchange could not be made without a license from the Reich foreign exchange control office? A. I do not know whether you can put it in that fashion, I would have to know what technical term the law uses in order to give an answer to that.

Q. Didn't you ever look up the law on this point? A. Certainly, at the time when I handled the matter, 1572 I knew it in my memory, but I am not a peripatetic library.

Q. Fortunately, we have a library here, Doctor.

Mr. Burling: (To the clerk) May I have defendant's 31, please?

The Clerk: That I don't think has ever been entered, that is the Reichsgesetzblatt. That was marked for identification. I don't think it ever came into my exhibits. I have it so marked, as marking for identification.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I show you a photostatic copy of Pages 421 to 425 of the Reichsgesetzblatt for August 1, 1931. This is another copy of defendant's 31.

Mr. Boland: Is this the currency laws?

Mr. Burling: Yes.

Mr. Boland: No objection.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you look at section 12? What does that provide with respect to foreign exchange transactions? A. It is provided that transactions which violate the provisions of sections 3 to 11 are void.

Q. Will you look at sections 3 and 4, and see what transactions are dealt with. Rather, Doctor, will you look at paragraph 3, and see if my translation is correct?

"Foreign currency, or claims payable in foreign currency which have been acquired otherwise than in accord-1573 ance with section 2 may be transferred only under a license in writing of the Office of Foreign Control, except where such assets are sold to the Reichsbank, or one of the banks provided for in Section 2, Paragraph 3.

"4. Foreign securities not listed on a German stock exchange may not be acquired for a consideration except under a license in writing of the Office of Foreign Exchange Control. Foreign securities not listed on a foreign stock exchange may be transferred only under a license in writing of the Foreign Exchange Control, except where the securities are sold to the Reichsbank or one of the banks provided for in Section 2, Paragraph 3."

Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. In the light of this proclamation, could a usufruct validly created in foreign securities be waived without a license? A. Section 3 refers to foreign means of payment or claims; Section 4 to securities. If the law is construed literally, then it must be stated that a niessbrauch is not included in these provisions, for it quite evidently is neither a foreign means of payment, nor a claim, nor a foreign security. The niessbrauch is a right in rem from which possibly such foreign securities, claims of foreign currency, may accrue.

1575 If they so accrue, then of course they constitute foreign claims, foreign-means of payment, and securities which are included in Sections 3 or 4.

Q. On the hypothesis that you have a usufruct presently in foreign securities, was it not necessary to have a license in order validly to waive the usufruct? A. I have in my legal memoranda taken the position because of the highly personal nature of the usufruct, such a license was not required, but I would like to add that one could be of a different opinion, if one does not construe the provisions literally, but keeps in mind the economic purpose of the law, and wants to include the economic consequences resulting from such transactions.

The Court: Mr. Burling, you will be some time longer, won't you?

Mr. Burling: I am afraid so.

The Court: As I told you yesterday, I had to make an appointment yesterday. I will have to adjourn at this time. We will go until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

(Accordingly, at 3:45 p. m. the trial was adjourned until 10 o'clock the following morning, Thursday, December 23, 1948.)

PROCEEDINGS

1579 Mr. Burling: Your Honor, may the record show that I have furnished plaintiffs with all of the statements or papers other than my own trial brief which we have, relating to Mason Houghland, except FBI reports.

Mr. Gallagher: We acknowledge the receipt of those from Mr. Burling, Your Honor.

The Court: All right.

Whereupon, Dr. Daniel Gros, returned to the witness stand and was examined and testified further, through the interpreter, Mr. Joseph Laufer, as follows:

Cross Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Dr. Gros, I am going to ask you to look once more at Section 4 of the report of the Reich President of August 1, 1931. Will you look, please, at the second sentence of that paragraph? I want you to look particularly at the verb in that sentence, and I want you to look at the verbal phrase; that is, there is a verb modified by a preposition. And the first word of the verbal phrase is the German word "uber", is it not? A. Yes.

Q. Then the next word in the verbal phrase is the 1580 word "darf"? Is that right? A. Yes.

Q. And the next word is "werden", is it not? A. Yes.

Q. We skipped the word "verfugt", did we not? A. Yes.

Q. And the verb is modified by the word "nur"? Is that right? A. Yes.

Q. And the infinitive of the actual verb used is "verfugen"? Is that right? A. Yes.

Q. And "uber" is a preposition that customarily goes with the verb "verfugen"? Is that right? A. Yes.

Q. And the term "verfugen uber" is a technical term of the German civil law, is it not? A. Yes.

Q. And the noun form of the word "verfugen" is "verfugung"? Is that correct? A. And when used in the Civil Code, it means a declaration of intention which results directly in the loss of a right or a change in a right by which the right is encumbered?—in other words, a legal transaction by which a right is directly transferred, encumbered, changed in its substance, or terminated?
1581 Is that correct? A. Yes, that is correct. The emphasis is on the word "immediate" or "direct".

Q. And it would include, would it not, one, transfer of ownership or of an existing pledge, or assignment of a claim? A. Yes.

Q. And another transaction which would be a verfugung would be a creation of a right in rem in a given property? A. That is also a verfugung.

Q. And another class of transactions which is classified as verfugung are waivers of rights? Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. Are you familiar with a volume entitled "Treatise on Civil Law", by Enneccerus-Nipperdey? A. Yes.

Q. I will show you a section entitled "Waiver", which is a subsection to a section called "Particularly Important Verfugungen", and ask you if you will state how the authors of this treatise define "waiver".

Will you just read, please, the definition of "waiver" which I handed you? A. On page 429, under 3, it is stated as follows:

"A 'waiver' in the larger sense of the word is the surrender of a legal advantage by a declaration of in-1583 tent directed toward that end."

That is the first sentence. It is stated there further:

"This legal advantage may be a right or may arise without such a right, from a rule of law which operates in favor of somebody, in particular a rule of the law of procedure.

"Since however, the waiver of rights is of importance almost exclusively for private law, and moreover can be substantially distinguished from the other kinds of waivers, it is recommended to define the surrender of a right by declaration of intent as a waiver in the narrow sense of the term"—and so on.

"The waiver of"—

Q. Just a moment, Doctor. You said "and so on", did you not? A. No. I have also read the next sentence.

Q. Well, you did use the words "and so on", did you not? A. That is correct. But after I had read the next following sentence.

Mr. Burling: Then I will ask the interpreter to read the next sentence.

The Interpreter: I read it already.

Mr. Burling: Will you translate it?

The Interpreter: "No waiver is presented by the 1583 mere non-acquisition of a right, if thereby a right of expectancy is not surrendered thereby"—and so on.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you look again at Section 4 of the Executive Order of August 1, 1931, and state whether or not it is not clear to you that the waiver of a valid usufruct in foreign securities was a transaction within the meaning of that section? A. I believe to remember to have stated already yesterday that I am of the opinion that a waiver of a usufruct does not constitute a verfugung within the terms of this section, because by such a waiver, income which is pertinent to the terms of the Foreign Exchange Control is not affected directly or immediately, but indirectly.

And I have also stated this position in my applications to an agency, although I am willing to admit that another interpretation is possible, if one does not keep in mind the direct legal language, but the economic consequences and results.

Q. By the way, this textbook I showed you is a standard German commentary on the civil law, is it not? A. By all means, yes.

Q. And you agree with what it says about verfugung, do you not? A. Yes.

1584 Q. And you agree with what it said here about waivers, do you not? A. Yes.

Q. And you agreed yesterday, did you not, that a usufruct, in the technical sense, is a right in rem in property? A. Yes.

Q. And therefore a usufruct in foreign securities is a present right in rem in those foreign securities, isn't it? A. Yes.

Q. And a waiver of a usufruct would affect an immediate change in the legal status of the foreign securities, would it not? A. Yes, as far as the property right is concerned.

Q. Will you explain, then, why a waiver of a valid usufruct is not a present change in the legal status of the property so as to make it a verfugung? A. The waiver of a usufruct for the purposes of foreign exchange control does not directly affect the income from the securities which is alone pertinent to the terms of the provisions concerning Foreign Exchange Control.

Q. But it does immediately and directly affect a right in rem in the foreign securities, does it not? A. Yes.

1585 Q. And the concept of verfugung in the foreign exchange law is fully as broad if not broader than the concept in the general civil law? Is that not right? A. You cannot put it that way, because the Foreign Exchange Control legislation has a different end in mind than the rules of private law do.

Q. But those transactions which are characterized as verfugung, for purposes of civil law, are also characterized as verfugung, for purposes of the foreign exchange rules, aren't they? A. In the foreign exchange law, as in all specialized fields, it is customary to refer to the general concepts of civil law. But it must be decided from case to case whether or not a modification is in order where these concepts do not fit the particular case.

Q. Now, do you know Dr. Hartenstein's book on the law of foreign exchange, do you not? A. Yes; I have quoted from it myself in my applications.

Q. And it is the principal commentary on foreign exchange law, is it not? A. It is a respected commentary.

Q. Will you look at pages 100 and 101 of Hartenstein's commentary and see if he does not define verfugung for purposes of foreign exchange regulations, in substantially the same way as you have yourself defined the term, in agreement with the earlier text I showed you.

1586 Specifically, isn't it true that Hartenstein defines transactions which are verfugung as sales, pledges, creation of a usufruct; in the case of claims, also performance by the debtor or by a third person; accords and satisfactions, as well as depositing the assets and simultaneously waiving the right to reclaim it; also assignment, set-off, waiver, extension of time? A. So far as I can see now, Hartenstein takes a thing which is quite natural, the concept of verfugung as developed in the civil law, for his starting point, and therefore considers transfer, assignment of claims, the creation of a usufruct, and so forth, as included in the term of verfugung, which is quite obvious.

But he does raise the question, on his own, whether or not the concept of verfugung for purposes of Foreign Exchange Control legislation must be defined in a different way. And after weighing various opinions, he finally inclines to the view that for the time being the concept of the private law of verfugung should be used until by governmental directives the question had been clarified.

Q. Are you in possession of the text of any governmental directives that subsequently did clarify the definition of verfugung? A. I only see from Hartenstein that he refers to general orders, Roman numerals II, IX, X, XXI, XL, XLI, which he says dealt with the matter.

1587 Q. You came all the way from Germany to testify in this lawsuit, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. And you understood when you left Germany that the main point of your testimony was to deal with the question of waiver of Niessbrauch, didn't you? A. I only knew I was to be questioned concerning matters which came within my observation, but not concerning questions of general law.

Mr. Boland: I would like to make a statement to the Court at this particular time, that this witness was also going to testify in regard to the criminal proceedings, which have been more or less precluded by strong argumentation on the part of the Government. This man was not brought over here as a legal expert to testify on Niessbrauch. He did not come over here to testify on the legal aspects of this case. That was not the purpose of this trip.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I will renew my question, which you did not answer when I asked it first:

Are you in possession of any texts indicating that the German Government subsequently changed the definition of the concept of verfugung? A. My present memory does not contain anything concerning such a definition.

1588 Q. And Hartenstein specifically includes, within the class of transactions which are called verfugung, waivers? A. I haven't read it here, but I take it for granted. Yes, it is here, a waiver of assertion.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, didn't you yourself come to the conclusion, in 1935, that a waiver of a usufruct in foreign exchange required a license in order to be valid? A. I stated that different opinions concerning this are possible. But in my application to the Foreign Exchange Control Office of November, I have taken that position which was most favorable to my clients; I took the position that it did not constitute such a verfugung.

Q. I did not ask you, Dr. Gros, what position you took. I asked if you did not yourself come to the legal judgment in July, 1935, that a waiver required a license. A. I have examined the question in my own mind and I have come to the conclusion that different opinions and different interpretations were possible.

Q. But you came to the conclusion in July, 1935, did you not, that a waiver of a usufruct in foreign securities required a license? A. In the terms in which you put the question, I do not remember that.

1589 Q. Will you look at Plaintiff's 96-A, please. I address your attention to the section having the Roman numeral II. Will you look at the fifth paragraph, which begins in English with the words, "This legal situation".

I want to read the second sentence of that paragraph in English and ask you if that is what you said, in your memorandum which you testified yesterday you preferred to clarify your own thinking about the Niessbrauch—

"If a valid usufruct was created, the parents have immediate title to the income and are, therefore, obliged to report and to deliver the foreign exchange which has automatically accrued to them.

"In this connection it must be remembered that the duty to convert foreign exchange cannot be rendered nugatory by a subsequent waiver by the parents of the automatically accrued income. For even a waiver is a transfer within the meaning of the foreign exchange regulations requiring a specific license."

Mr. Boland: I would like the record to indicate, Your Honor, that that is merely an argument in a series of arguments in this particular exhibit.

Mr. Burling: I object to the characterization of counsel of an exhibit. The record should not show any such thing. That is an argument made now by Mr. Boland.

The Court: What is the exhibit number?

Mr. Burling: Number 96. This is a memorandum
1590 the witness testified yesterday he prepared.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Boland: The point I make, Your Honor, is by his excerpting that particular paragraph, it might lend credence to the argument that a valid usufruct has been created, and in the prior arguments in that very exhibit he has been arguing no valid usufruct has been created. That is a "but if" argument.

Mr. Burling: My entire examination of the witness, Your Honor, is on the hypothesis that a valid usufruct was created, and trying to establish it could not be waived without a license.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Burling: And I am trying to bring out the point that the witness himself said in 1935 that it could not be waived without a license.

The Witness: This is a gross misunderstanding.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I take it, you don't mean a pun? A. I don't know what I should say about this. It is incomprehensible to me how such an answer can be given to me.

Q. At any rate, did you not state that if a valid usufruct had been created, then it could not be waived without a license? Isn't that exactly what you say in this 1591 memorandum? A. No; that is precisely what I am not saying. But I say that the accrued income cannot be waived without a license, and in such clear words that an erroneous interpretation is quite incomprehensible to me.

Q. I agree with you there. But you do say, do you not, "A waiver is a transfer within the meaning of the foreign exchange regulations"? A. Yes, by all means.

Q. And you do say that a waiver within the meaning of the foreign exchange regulations requires a specific license? A. Yes.

Q. And you also know, do you not, that if parties went through a purported transaction which required a license, without obtaining a license, that purported transaction was void? A. Yes.

Q. Now, going back to the years 1935 through 1937, did you have any personal knowledge whatever as to whether a valid usufruct in the proceeds of 600 Opel shares had in fact been created in 1931, or 1932? A. No.

Q. And, more specifically, you did not have any personal knowledge as to whether Hans Frankenberg held the key to a box in which the Uebersee shares were placed, in the capacity of agent for Wilhelm von Opel, did you?

1592 A. No.

Q. Will you say again when you first heard about the gold case? A. During the Wiesbaden depositions.

Q. I see. You heard Mr. Laufer translate portions of Mr. Fritz von Opel's affidavit during the Wiesbaden depositions, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. And in fact you heard Mr. Laufer read those portions of the gold case affidavit of Fritz von Opel, at the Wiesbaden depositions, in which Fritz von Opel stated that the Uebersee shares were in a box in a bank in Zurich, and that Frankenberg was holding the key to the box as Wilhelm von Opel's agent? Isn't that correct? A. Yes.

Q. And you still say that your difficulty yesterday in understanding the hypothesis I put to you was genuine? A. They are genuine, for the reason that it is difficult to draw conclusions from the hypothesis whether or not a valid usufruct was created.

Q. You did not come to this country now at your own expense, did you? A. No.

Q. Who did pay your passage? A. I was advised that the passage had been paid. I take it that Fritz 1593 von Opel paid for it. I haven't made special inquiry about that.

Q. Are you receiving any additional compensation from anyone for coming to this country? A. No. All I get is reimbursement for my expenses.

Q. You agreed to come here and stay away from your law practice in Germany for many weeks, in return for nothing more than expenses? A. Yes, because I do not suffer any economic disadvantages from it.

Q. And you also have performed legal services in connection with this case in Germany, have you not? A. Yes, I have made repeated inquiries.

Q. Have you been paid or promised pay for those services? A. No.

Q. You just contributed them free? A. I have rendered so many services to the family von Opel, and I have received such large compensation from the family von Opel, that I cannot charge for such petty matters.

Q. As a matter of fact, you are the executor of the will of Wilhelm von Opel? Are you not? A. Yes.

Q. And it is the custom in Germany, is it not, that the executor is paid in accordance with a schedule of fees prepared by the bar associations? A. It is not pre-1594 cisely that way, but by and large it is correct.

Q. And where the executor deals with an estate of more than a million marks, a fee of one per cent of the estate would be considered appropriate? Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. And the estate of Wilhelm von Opel, using the marks as they were before their recent devaluation, contained more than ten million marks, did it not? A. Yes.

Q. So that you expect to receive compensation, as executor, of at least a hundred thousand marks, do you not? A. Unfortunately not, because the fee is determined on the basis of the value during the course of the activities of the executor, and the value is substantially less today.

Q. What do you think the value of Wilhelm von Opel's estate is today? A. The large majority of the estate consists of securities which are deposited in a collective account with a Berlin bank, and it has been seized by the Russians and their legal fate is undetermined as yet.

Q How did you come to be named the executor? A. The will named Fritz von Opel as executor of the estate. It was also provided, in order to take care of all eventualities, that Fritz von Opel could appoint somebody 1595 else in his own stead. This Fritz von Opel has done, and thereupon the surrogate's court in Wiesbaden has issued a certificate naming me as executor.

Q. But at any rate this law business in connection with the estate of Wilhelm von Opel was given to you by the action of Fritz von Opel? Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. Going back to your retention by Wilhelm von Opel in connection with the usufruct, when were you first retained on this subject? A. The Niessbrauch was already involved in the criminal proceedings. But the actual mandate in that respect I received about the time I prepared this memorandum of law.

Q. When did Wilhelm von Opel first say to you that he considered the usufruct as nugatory? A. I cannot state that from memory.

Q. Was it just at the time this memorandum, which is Plaintiff's 96, was prepared, or earlier? A. I cannot state that on memory. I would have to draw conclusions which would be uncertain.

Q. What is your best recollection? A. I can't give another answer than the one I gave already.

Q. At any rate, at the time you prepared Plaintiff's 96, the thought had occurred to you, had it not, that 1596 the German authorities might require or seek to require Wilhelm von Opel to report his usufruct in foreign exchange, for Foreign Exchange Control purposes and for tax purposes? A. Yes. The fear that the German authorities would take steps with respect thereto was always alive, because of the mempry of the preceding criminal proceedings involved.

Q. And therefore you understood, did you not, it was extremely important to Wilhelm von Opel to make it appear to the German Government that there was no usufruct? A. That was very important for him in order to restore to him the sense of legal security which otherwise was absent.

Q. And that was the purpose of all the legal activity which you carried on, about which you testified yesterday, wasn't it? A. Yes.

Q. You testified yesterday concerning Plaintiff's 97-A, and stated there was a draft attached to it, did you not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. This draft was not signed, was it? A. No.

Q. And no other document of this nature, that is, a formal, written amendment of the gift agreement of October 5, 1931, was ever signed, was it? A. None that came to my personal attention; but I assume that there was none, because the parties relied in this respect entirely on 1597 what I advised them to do.

Q. You testified yesterday, at page 1537, as follows:

"Question: Doctor, you have testified, have you not, that the draft attached to Exhibit 97-A was a draft of an agreement in connection with waiving the Niessbrauch?"

And you answered—

"I did not say that this draft was a draft for a contemplated waiver of the usufruct, but was a draft of a statement to the effect that the parties considered the usufruct as being no longer in effect."

I ask you to look at the letter to which the draft was attached. It is there stated, is it not?—

"The parties to this agreement intend to take action on the basis of this conclusion, and to declare explicitly in a supplement to be drawn up to the deed of gift that the usufruct stipulations contained therein will be considered as void."

Is that not a statement of what the parties intend to do in the future, rather than a statement of what they think did happen in the past? A. That is correct, upon a strictly literal interpretation.

Q. Thank you. Now, coming to the hypothesis that a valid usufruct did not arise, because of failure of 1598 delivery of possession to the usufructuary, there is still a very difficult legal problem, is there not, as to whether a waiver to a claim to create a usufruct, or a waiver to a claim to income, would be valid without a license? A. I did not consider that problem as such a serious one.

Q. I see. You heard Dr. Kronstein testify concerning the German law, did you not? A. I was only present for a short time, and I understood very little. Most of the time I was not present.

Q. Well, you understand, do you not, that plaintiffs have three hypotheses, three possible ways, in which they say the gift agreement of October 5, 1931, can be construed? A. I have heard about that from Dr. Kronstein. But if it is important, I would like to be told about these three possibilities again.

Q. You understand that the first hypothesis is that what was done on October 5 was that an agreement was entered into whereby Wilhelm von Opel had a claim to receive 80 per cent of the income from the gift? A. Yes, a claim in personam.

Q. On that hypothesis, in 1935, Wilhelm von Opel had an in personam claim against Fritz von Opel for 80 per cent of the income? Is that right? A. Yes, in the event of emergency, as I was always told.

1599 Q. That may have been the purpose of the gift, but it was a present in personam claim which Wilhelm von Opel could exercise legally at any time he chose? Isn't that so? A. Yes, for the case of an emergency.

Mr. Boland: Your Honor, I think this is quite confusing. Dr. Kronstein was testifying as an expert, and in giving his interpretation of the gift agreement alone, he knew nothing of the facts of the case. They are asking questions of Dr. Gros for truth of the purpose intended by this reservation from the father and mother. And he cannot distinguish as to the right of distress, which was not present in Dr. Kronstein's testimony.

The Court: I am a little bit lost in what you are trying to develop here, Mr. Burling.

Mr. Burling: What I am trying to get at, Your Honor, is that even in the event that the Court should believe von Opel's testimony that there was no agency, and disbelieve his testimony earlier that there was an agency, and therefore that the usufruct, the right in rem, did not arise, but it was merely a right in personam, even that, I say, could not be waived as a matter of German law.

The Court: I don't think this witness is the one to be asked about that, on cross examination—I mean, about something Dr. Kronstein said on the stand here. If 1600 he had that in view, or in mind, when he drew these papers. That might be different. But I don't think we want to go into his observations in regard to what Dr. Kronstein said.

Mr. Burling: I was trying to exhaust the possibilities. My position is that there was no possible way in which this could be waived without a license.

The Court: But you have asked him that extensively, and now you are taking up some view of Dr. Kronstein's, from three different points of view, and asking his opinion about them, which I think is not proper cross examination.

Mr. Burling: Very well, Your Honor. But the witness did testify about waiver in general, and so far I have asked him only about waiver of a right in rem.

The Court: I think you can ask him about anything which operated on his mind when he drew any of these papers, or the agreement about which he has testified, but not otherwise.

Mr. Burling: Very well, Your Honor. I will drop the hypothesis.

The Court: I think we have been going rather far on that other proposition. He is not really your expert.

Mr. Burling: Well, Your Honor, the point is—

The Court: I think I will just sustain the objection. My ruling is going to be that anything he said or did, or any views he had at the time he drew this, you may ask him about.

I don't think we ought to take the time to try to 1601 pick out of him, by way of cross examination, some present view he has as to the law.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, he did express the view that a waiver could be made.

The Court: I know. Anything he said at that time you may ask him about.

Mr. Burling: Yes, Your Honor.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you express the view to any official of the German Government that due to any action taken by Wilhelm, Marta, and Fritz von Opel, rights which Wilhelm and Marta von Opel possessed ceased to exist? A. Yes.

Q. And was it not clear to you that no such rights could cease to exist in the absence of a license from the German Government? A. No.

Q. Did you advance arguments to the German Government and to Wilhelm von Opel to the effect that rights which Marta and Wilhelm previously held had come to an end validly, even though no license to terminate those rights was ever obtained? A. Yes; that is the very purpose of my applications addressed to the Foreign Exchange Control Office in Wiesbaden of October 8, 1935, and my subsequent letter to the Federal Office of Foreign Exchange Control.

1602 Mr. Burling: I would ask Your Honor if you would clarify the ruling. I do not understand what I am allowed to do and what I am not allowed to do. I did think I would be allowed to try to point out to this witness that the position he took before the German Government is clearly contrary to the German law.

The Court: I think you have been permitted to cross examine at length. Ask him about this license, and the necessity for it. What I was sustaining the objection to was that you took up the series of claims that this other witness on the stand in this trial advanced, toward getting his opinion on those claims.

Mr. Burling: I will drop that, Your Honor.

The Court: Any matter that came to his mind at or about the time he rendered a statement or opinion, or took any action that has been testified to on direct, I think is pertinent.

Mr. Burling: Then I shall confine myself to that, Your Honor.

Mr. Boland: It would seem that this witness has testified that in his opinion no license was needed. And it seems to me incumbent upon the defendants to prove their point as a matter of law with their expert.

The Court: As I understand it, he asked him any number of questions about that. If he hasn't completed it, 1603 I will permit him to do that.

Mr. Burling: I have not asked more than one or two questions on whether you could waive an in personam right.

The Court: I thought I remembered you specifically asked him that. But you can ask it again.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you not agree, Doctor, that a claim to receive income from foreign securities falls within the purview of the foreign exchange regulations? A. As far as I remember, I have never stated such a claim in my application, but have always spoke of a claim to the subsequent creation of a usufruct.

Q. Well, I now ask you, will you agree with me that a claim for income from foreign securities would be a claim within the purview of the foreign exchange regulations? A. Yes; I would agree to that at first blush.

Q. Now, do you have any authority whatever for the proposition which you gave to the German Government that a claim to have a usufruct created in the future, in foreign securities, could be waived without a license? A. I do not have authority for that, but I have the statement from Reichsbank Director Wilhelm that his lawyers agreed with my legal position.

Q. We will come to Wilhelm in a moment. But do you have any formal legal authority of any kind that you 1604 can cite? A. Neither a position pro nor a position contrary can be directly read from the statute.

Q. Do you have any commentary, article, or decision, or other formal legal matter, that supports your position? A. No. This singular case, as far as I know, had never been decided before and had therefore to be decided in accordance with general principles, and my position was subsequently approved.

Q. But whether or not is was approved, which you understand is in dispute, do you have any subsequent formal writing of any kind that supports your position? A. I can only refer to my memorandum of August 8, and December 27.

Q. You wouldn't expect any court to accept as a formal authority a self-serving letter written by you, would you? A. Of course, I base my argumentations on the law. But in so far as the law does not provide in unequivocal language for this particular case so that you can simply read the decision from the text, general arguments have to be made which are based—

The Court (interposing): We are going to a terrible lot of length about nothing. He asked him if there was any formal decision. Ask him that. That is all we want to know.

1605 The Witness: No.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, coming to your conversation with Wilhelm, assume that Wilhelm says what you say he did. A. Yes.

1606 Q. Wilhelm's lawyers would still be expressing an opinion on a state of facts furnished by you, wouldn't they? A. Of course.

Q. And you had no personal knowledge of what the facts were, did you? A. I had the gift agreement.

Q. But you didn't know what had been done—you had no personal knowledge of what had been done between the parties after the gift agreement, did you? A. Yes, to this extent, as the parties in my presence have waived their rights arising out of the usufruct provisions.

Q. Orally? A. Yes.

Q. Now, will you not agree if you were either mistaken when you told Wilhelm the facts or untruthful, then Wilhelm's opinion would be of no value whatever? A. If the facts relative in law, which were assumed, were in fact not existent, then you are right.

Q. As a matter of fact, it wasn't any of Wilhelm's business to pass on any of this matter at all? A. The opinion of Wilhelm was entirely sufficient for my purpose because I didn't want a license within the meaning of the foreign exchange control laws but solely for a confirmation of some authority of my position for purpose of legal security.

1607 Q. But Wilhelm had no authority to construe foreign exchange laws with respect to what transactions required and what didn't require licenses, did he? A. In general, no, except that he may have gotten in touch with the Reichs Office for Foreign Exchange Control.

Q. But the agency of the German Government which would have final authority to issue licenses or determine what transactions needed to have licenses was the Reich Office for Foreign Exchange Control; isn't that right? A. Yes; it generally had the task of issuing such decisions.

Q. And you don't know whether Wilhelm did or didn't get an opinion from the office having jurisdiction over the subject matter? A. I cannot state that from my own knowledge, but I take it for granted.

Mr. Burling: That is all.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Doctor, the purpose of these particular letters to the various agencies in Germany, you have testified, was for an approval of the waiver of whatever rights the father and mother had reserved to themselves; is that right?

A. Yes.

1608 Q. And that, as far as you know, there was no usufruct ever created with respect to this gift agreement; is that right? A. No.

Q. And therefore the purpose of these writings to the various German agencies was not to make it appear that a valid usufruct had not been created? A. No.

Q. You have stated, Doctor, that the parties never signed the draft attached to Exhibit 97-A. A. I stated that I had no knowledge about that, but I would have known about it because the parties always followed my advice.

Q. This draft wasn't prepared for purposes of signature by the parties, was it, Doctor? A. No.

Q. And therefore the fact that it wasn't signed is of no significance? A. Yes.

Q. Doctor, how is it that you happened to go to see Director Wilhelm in respect to this Niessbrauch? A. One day I received a telephone call in the year 1937, according to which Reichsbank Director Wilhelm wished to talk to me.

Q. And you testified that you, in fact, went to see 1609 Director Wilhelm as a result of this call, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. And when you went to see Director Wilhelm, did he talk about this Niessbrauch? A. Yes.

Q. And when he stated that his attorneys approved of your position, did he indicate whether they were attorneys within the Reichsbank or some other government agency? A. I cannot state that. I only remember that he had the file before him and said "our" lawyers. That was an ambiguous term. Whether he meant lawyers of that agency or lawyers who had been assembled for that purpose, I cannot state.

Mr. Boland: That is all.

(Thereupon the witness was excused and retired from the witness stand.)

Mr. Burling: I move to strike all the testimony concerning the conversation of this witness with Reichsbank Director Wilhelm as being irrelevant to any issue in the case.

Mr. Boland: I think we presented this issue yesterday, and it is the same issue.

Mr. Burling: I made the objection before the evidence came in and I now renew it.

Mr. Boland: I will restate my position.

1610 The Court: Tell me about it.

Mr. Boland: The entire point of Dr. Gros' testimony, it is not if the statements of Director Wilhelm are the truth, but whether he stated it, and he stated it.

The Court: What did he state?

Mr. Boland: He stated in effect that the position taken by Dr. Gros whether the waiver of the rights of the parties was within the Foreign Exchange Control, he stated in effect that their attorneys agreed with the position of Dr. Gros that no waiver was necessary.

Now, the releyance of this testimony is that the parties relied on the advice of Dr. Wilhelm in knowing they were not going to incur criminal penalties under Foreign Exchange Control.

The Court: And therefore, what?

Mr. Boland: And therefore that the parties were free and waived any direct rights.

Mr. Burling: That does not follow at all. The parties were or were not free in accordance with what the German law was. If the German law, as we contend, required a license in order to waive rights, the hearsay opinion of a bank official, whom this official says agrees with him, was not the proper German authority, and it is wholly irrelevant.

The Court: Let me see if I get the purpose. Some question arose around this period—1935, was it?

1611 Mr. Boland: Yes.

The Court: As to whether this Niessbrauch existed or not; is that correct?

Mr. Boland: We do not contend in any sense of the word—

The Court (interposing): What was the question that arose in 1935?

Mr. Boland: The question first arose in respect to the criminal proceedings, which is handled by stipulation—merely that the old man was fined, and as a result of that, the old man wanted to get rid of all his rights and wanted no more trouble with the German Government, and that is when Dr. Gros was hired for getting rid of all rights, as the father and mother were sick of it, and they had enough money to go on with, and they told him at that time, as Mr. von Opel and Dr. Gros testified, that the family wanted the right in case of distress, in case of financial need.

The Court: And your point is: If it was determined by his counsel and by the authorities that he had any rights which he needed to get rid of to comply with the law, he would have done it at that time?

Mr. Boland: That is right.

The Court: And that the lawyer and this man in the Government, whether right or wrong, having advised him that he had no rights or no necessity to get rid of them, that he did not take that action. I think I will per-1612 mit that to stand.

Mr. Burling: Even assuming that were proved, it would still be irrelevant because they, in fact, didn't get a license.

The Court: You can argue that at the conclusion of the case.

Sometimes these department heads give you a wrong opinion, and if you rely on it, it would be a reason why you did not take some action you might have otherwise taken.

Mr. Gallagher: Can we have a five-minute recess? We are about to read about twenty minutes of Reichsbank Director Wilhelm's testimony.

The Court: I will take a five-minute recess.

(Thereupon a short recess was had. The following then occurred):

1613 Mr. Boland: At this time, Your Honor, we are going to offer pertinent parts of Director Wilhelm's deposition. The deposition was taken on Tuesday, April 6, 1948, as a witness of the defendant, in Washington, D. C.

I will just ask the reporter to copy in the first page of it, page 485, which makes reference to the notice filed and the persons who were present.

IN THE

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Civil Action No. 26453

UEBERSEE FINANZ-KORPORATION, A. G.

Plaintiff,

v.

TOM C. CLARK, Attorney General, as Successor to the Alien Property Custodian.

Defendant.

Washington, D. C.
Tuesday, April 6, 1948

"Deposition of Carl Friedrich Wilhelm, a witness of lawful age, called on behalf of the Defendant, pursuant to notice, filed with the Court of the Court at Room 670, in the Home Owners Loan Corporation Building, First Street and Indiana Avenue, Northwest, beginning at 1:30 p.m. before Braxton O. Watson, a Notary Public in and for the District of Columbia when were present on behalf 1614 of the respective parties:

"Gallagher, Osherman, Connor & Butler,
By: Richard J. Connor, Esq., and Christopher Boland, Esq., 831 - 15th Street, N. W. Washington, D. C. Appearing on behalf of the Plaintiff.

"Myron C. Baum, Esq., and Joseph Laufer, Esq., Attorneys of the Department of Justice, Appearing on behalf of the Defendant."

Mr. Boland: This is part of the direct examination. It reads:

"CARL FRIEDRICH WILHELM

was called as a witness on behalf of the Defendant, and, having been first duly sworn by the Notary, was examined and testified as follows:

"Direct Examination

"By Mr. Baum":

(Thereupon Mr. Boland read the question of the witness and Mr. Gallagher read the answers of the witness.)

"Question: Mr. Wilhelm, what is your full name?

"Answer: Carl Friedrich Wilhelm; Friedrich is the name by which I am called.

"Question: And where do you reside?

"Answer: Berlin, Dahlem Koenigin-Louisestr 87.

"Question: And what is your age?

"Answer: I am 59 years and two months old."

Mr. Boland: We are now turning to the middle of page 487, still continuing with Dr. Wilhelm's testimony.

1615 "Answer: * * * In May, 1930,"—

Mr. Burling (interposing): I think that question is relevant and I request you read it:

"Question: Will you briefly describe for us the nature of your education.

"Answer: After attending elementary school, and the usual preparatory schools, I passed in 1908 the examination qualifying me for admission to German Universities; and subsequently studied law and political science for about four to five semesters.

"Then I became a banking apprentice of the bank which was then called the Bank for Trade and Industry, which later became the so-called Darmstaedter Bank.

"After completing my apprenticeship, I remained at the bank as a bank employee; and in August, 1914, I was called for military service as a member of the reserves."

Mr. Burling: You have read all of that section we want.

Mr. Gallagher: All right.

"Answer: * * * In May, 1930, I was assigned to Kempen im Allgaeu, as director of the local branch there; and upon the outbreak of the monetary crisis in August, 1931, I was called to Berlin as an official in charge of a certain field; and from 1934 to 1939, I was employed in the Directorate of the Reichsbank, first as an official in charge 1616 of a certain field; subsequently, that is, from 1935 on, as Vortragender Direktor, a title which implied a nominal promotion only.

"In February, 1939, I joined the Reichsbank directorate as a full member. In this position, I remained until the final collapse.

"Question: And from 1931 until 1939, what were your duties in the Reichsbank?

"Answer: I was in charge of foreign funds control.

"Question: And were you the sole person in charge, or did you have a superior?

"Answer: I had superiors.

"Question: And who were they?

"Answer: From 1931 to 1933, the official immediately superior to me was a Mr. Richard Fuchs, a Reichsbank director and member of the Reichsbank directorate. After 1933, it was Mr. Puhl, the later vice president of the Reichsbank. His first name is Emil. Beginning in 1939, I had no superior.

"Question: What were your duties after 1939?

"Answer: My duties were the same as before except for the fact that they were broadened, since I became the chief of all problems relating to foreign funds. That field included not only foreign funds control but also the trade in foreign funds.

"Question: And can you describe for us generally 1617 the functions of the Reichsbank in connection with foreign funds control in Germany?

"Answer: Briefly summarized, the function of the Reichsbank in the field of foreign funds control was as follows: One, to take control of all foreign funds available. The term 'foreign funds' also includes gold.

"Further, to see to it that all foreign funds accruing from abroad were actually transferred to Germany. That is, the foreign exchange which accrued from export and from capital transactions.

"Furthermore, the Reichsbank was the sole agency authorized to make foreign funds available. In doing that, the Reichsbank did not act alone; but it delegated its authority to the so-called commission banks, the so-called foreign funds banks; called 'Divisenbanken'."

Mr. Boland: At this point we are skipping through—

Br. Burling (interposing): Read further.

Mr. Boland: How far?

"Question: Was it the function of the Reichsbank to render legal opinions to the members of the public on foreign funds control matters?

"Answer: No, the Reichsbank did not render legal opinions.

"Question: What agency of the German Government had such a function, if any?

1618 "Answer: Such agency did exist. It was the Foreign Funds Control Offices, which were subordinated to the Reichs Economics Ministry.

"Question: Well, in addition to these Foreign Funds Control Offices, did the Economic Ministry itself render any such opinions?

"Answer: Yes, in all those instances in which the Foreign Funds Control Offices did not consider themselves qualified."

Mr. Boland: We are skipping to page 591, and it is the second and last paragraph of the answer, and the question by Mr. Baum is in connection with the third occasion in which Director Wilhelm had an occasion to come in contact with the von Opel problem.

"Answer: * * * In 1937, and that is in the first six months, the Reichsbank branch in Wiesbaden sent me a written inquiry: What shall we do about the foreign funds connected with the niessbrauch of Mr. von Opel?

"I advised the Reichsbank branch in Wiesbaden to approach Mr. Wilhelm von Opel, and to inquire where the foreign exchange connected with the niessbrauch had remained. Thereupon, a Dr. Daniel Gros appeared in my office and advised me that the niessbrauch was subject to a condition precedent; that is, it should only become operative if Wilhelm von Opel would become financially 1619 distressed. Moreover, it was the agreement of both parties that the niessbrauch would be waived; and thirdly, the niessbrauch had not come legally into effect at all, since certain defects as to its form had occurred, which I do not recall now.

"And he requested me to waive the demand for surrender of foreign exchange. I advised him that I could not do that; I would have to submit the matter first to the legal counsel of the Reichsbank. Moreover, his request involved modification of the agreement, over which the Reichsbank had no jurisdiction.

"The Reichsbank attorneys reviewed the statements made by Mr. Daniel Gros and came to the conclusion that on the basis of the prevailing facts, we did not wish to undertake anything against Wilhelm von Opel."

Mr. Burling: Will you continue, please?

"Answer (continued): The reason for this conclusion was the following: In view of the often insufficient draftsmanship of the foreign funds control provisions, it might happen that a judge unfamiliar with the subject matter of foreign funds control would reach a conclusion adverse to the position of the Reichsbank. Such an adverse decision, however, would imply a loss of prestige to the Reichsbank. Such a loss of prestige, however, would have been intolerable to the Reichsbank, as the guardian of the German currency and the foreign funds."

1620 Mr. Burling: Will you continue, please?

Mr. Gallagher: We object to continuing any further because the remainder is hearsay.

Mr. Boland: Where he finished, at this particular point, the next sentence, if that is permitted in the record, we will ask Your Honor to bring the whole criminal proceeding in because if that sentence is permitted to go in the defendants will have tendered the best parts of the criminal proceeding without having had the disadvantages which we see in the criminal proceedings to their side, and we object to giving the statement to Your Honor.

Mr. Gallagher: We can give it to you off the record so you can rule.

(Thereupon a discussion was had off the record.)

The Court: I do not think this would be important or relevant. I also think and I am afraid if we get into it we might have to open the whole field up, which I do not want to do. We will leave that out.

Mr. Boland: We will skip to page 509, still questioning by Mr. Baum,—

Mr. Burling (interposing): Read the first paragraph, starting with the first paragraph on page 503.

Mr. Boland: And read all the way through to 509?

Mr. Burling: Those two paragraphs are important.

The Court: I will tell you what you do: Either 1621 of you gentlemen read what you want as you go along.

Mr. Gallagher: At this point, Your Honor—and this is off the record again.

(Thereupon a discussion was had off the record.)

The Court: Read it. If you have objection, I will consider it later.

If you are going to have a lot of this, I would like to have you mark it between you.

Mr. Boland: Is this the first paragraph on 503?

Mr. Burling: Yes, and the second paragraph, which begins, "I also know."

Mr. Boland: We object to the introduction of this without having full opportunity to explore the depositions of Fritz von Opel, and we will not permit innuendoes to be drawn without a complete exploration of the deposition.

Mr. Burling: I don't know how Your Honor can rule on it, without reading it.

The Court: I do not know, either.

Mr. Boland: I will show it to you. It is the first and second paragraphs on this page (handing a document to the Court).

The Court: That has already been testified about, that first. Somebody testified about that. I think Mr. von Opel testified about it himself, didn't he? He was asked about that.

1622 Mr. Gallagher: He testified he brought some marks back and transferred them.

The Court: I don't know that he brought them. He testified he was asked.

Mr. Boland: I don't want to leave the impression with the Court that his offer to take dollars or foreign exchange back to the country was necessarily against the interests of the Reichsbank in respect to the waiver.

Mr. Burling: We contend it was and it is therefore relevant.

The Court: This first paragraph he has already testified about. It was by Mr. von Opel and without objection. I am sure of that because I remember the testimony.

Let us see the second one. On that ground I will permit it because I think it is already in the record without objection.

Well, now, Mr. Burling, what is the significance of the second paragraph?

Mr. Burling: I will withdraw my request for that paragraph.

The Court: All right. Just read that first one.

"Answer: * * * It was decided that I undertake negotiations with Fritz von Opel with a view to insure by such negotiations that foreign funds would be surrendered by him on a voluntary basis, for the Reichsbank needed 1623 foreign funds and had to have them. The Reichsbank was not interested in criminal penalties."

Mr. Boland: Now, on page 509, a question by Mr. Baum:

"Question: Now, coming to the third occasion which you referred to, you testified that Dr. Daniel Gros came to see you. Did you ask him to come to see you?

"Answer: No, not for his first visit; decidedly not. As to the second visit, I had to reply to him with respect to what may be called his questions.

"Question: And on the occasion of these conferences with Daniel Gros, did he send you or deliver to you any letters?

"Answer: After the second conference, he, personally, appeared for a third meeting, and upon the occasion of this third meeting, he handed a letter to me, in which he set forth, so to speak, what he claimed to be the result of the second conference.

"Question: I show you now Plaintiff's Exhibit 51"—that is Exhibit 101 now—"and ask you whether that is a copy of the letter to which you refer?

"Answer: That is the letter; I have seen it; that is the one he gave to me. That is, he wanted to hand it to me. I told him, 'What should I do with the letter? Take it back again.' I do not recall now whether, in the end, I took it myself, or whether he left it outside the door with the receptionist.

"Question: I call your attention to the statements made in the second paragraph of that letter and ask you whether that paragraph correctly states what you told Dr. Gros?"

Mr. Boland: I believe we better read that:

"I informed Mr. Fritz von Opel that you told me that your legal aids in charge of the usufruct case also denied that Geheimrat Dr. Wilhelm von Opel had a monetary claim against Mr. Fritz von Opel and that, consequently, no legal obligation exists within the terms of the provisions of the foreign exchange law."

"Answer: This paragraph is not correct. I am certain that I did not tell him that I considered a claim of Dr. Wilhelm von Opel as non-existent. What I told him was that we did not wish to enforce such a claim.

"Question: Were you in any way embarrassed when Dr. Gros handed you this letter?

"Answer: In my capacity of chief of the Foreign Funds Control Office, which I pursued for many years, I do not recall having ever been embarrassed by a letter of this kind. If Dr. Gros so testified, I am sure it must have been his subjective impression.

"Question: Did you tell Dr. Gros whether or not you could reply to this letter?

1625 "Answer: I do not remember that I told him expressly, 'You will not get an answer', but it is certainly not true that I promised an answer.

"Question: Did you ever reply to this letter?

"Answer: This letter was never answered.

"Question: Why not?

"Answer: I must make an explanation which, as such, has nothing to do with this case. We have had the experience that written statements made by the Reichsbank were repeatedly abused by the addressees. We did not know what Fritz von Opel or Daniel Gros intended to do, or what purpose they had in mind, with such a letter of reply. And, furthermore, it was entirely immaterial to us what opinon Mr. Daniel Gros had concerning the legal question.

"Question: What do you mean by the legal situation?

"Answer: What I mean is, Mr. Daniel Gros stated that I had denied the existence of a legal claim by Wilhelm von Opel against Mr. Fritz von Opel; and it was immaterial, as far as we were concerned, whether he was of that opinion or not. He had no written statement from us which he could present somewhere else. I refused to make a statement in writing, as I had said before.

"I would like to add that I would not have given an answer to Mr. Daniel Gros, even if he had been right, because it would have been a declaration against our own interests."

1626 Mr. Boland: Now, page 514.

Mr. Burling: On page 512, Your Honor, the last question and answer on the page, I request be read.

"Question: When Dr. Gros delivered this letter, Plaintiff's Exhibit 101, to you, did you tell him that the statements contained in that letter were not true, in your opinion?

"Answer: According to my recollection, yes; I do not recall the precise words which were used, but, according to my recollection, I told him something like this:

"'Mr. Gros, the matter was not that way.'

"I did not say more, for the simple reason, already to avoid an unfolding of the underlying problems; and that is why I confined myself to that answer."

Mr. Boland: Now, on page 514, and this is cross examination by Mr. Connor—skipping to page 539 in the middle of the page. This is still cross examinaton. On page 539, question by Mr. Connor:

"Question: When was the first conference which you had with Dr. Gros in reference to the niessbrauch matter?

"Answer: In my recollection, it was in the neighborhood of the end of the first half of the year 1937.

"Question: And was Fritz von Opel with Dr. Gros on that occasion?

"Answer: No.

1627 "Question: When was the next conference, if any, with Dr. Gros in reference to the niessbrauch?

"Answer: Perhaps eight or ten days later.

"Question: And then did you have a third discussion with Dr. Gros about the niessbrauch?

"Answer: Not in the niessbrauch matter. Whether he came to see me later, another time in another matter, I do not know."

Mr. Boland: This is page 559, and still cross examination by Mr. Connor.

"Question: Well, isn't it a fact that the reason you didn't pursue any court procedure was the fact that you were convinced that you had no case at all?

"Answer: No. The only reason why we didn't go to court was that we did not want to assume the risk of losing the case. No matter whether the losing of the case resulted from the legal situation or from interference of higher places."

Mr. Boland: The Court indicated you will read those later, Mr. Burling.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, the difficulty about that is we are going to get the record chopped up. If you have it read, you can read it.

Mr. Boland: That is all we want to read, Your Honor.

The Court: Read what you want now.

1628 Mr. Burling: I want just the next sentence, and I shall read from page 559 where you stopped reading.

Mr. Gallagher: Wait a second, just a minute, please.

Mr. Burling: I will withdraw that.

Mr. Gallagher: All right, then.

Can we recess now, Your Honor? We want to start with another witness.

The Court: You can do that this afternoon.

Who do you have this afternoon?

Mr. Gallagher: Dr. Kaufmann and Dr. Kronstein.

The Court: Dr. Kronstein?

Mr. Gallagher: He is coming back on nationality but not on this.

The Court: Who is the other one?

Mr. Gallagher: Dr. Kaufmann.

The Court: Is he a lengthy witness?

Mr. Gallagher: I don't believe so, Your Honor; not on direct examination.

The Court: Do you think you may be able to conclude with these two today?

Mr. Gallagher: I think so.

The Court: Do you have any more testimony after that?

Mr. Gallagher: Not at this point, but we would appreciate it if the Court would indulge us, that we not close today, because it is our intention to bring Mr. Gaeng 1629 here from Switzerland in connection with the identification of the book situation yesterday.

Mr. Burling: May I say something?

I have two witnesses from out of town who will have to go home. One is a short witness, Calvin Houghland. If we could put him on, he would not have to come back.

The Court: Whatever you agree on, will be all right. I have a luncheon engagement but I think I can make it by 2 o'clock. It is one I had made some time ago. I will be back at 2 o'clock, and if I am late, it won't be more than five or ten minutes.

(Thereupon, at 12:30 o'clock p. m., a recess was taken until 2 o'clock p. m., for the luncheon recess.)

1630 AFTER RECESS

Mr. Boland: At this time, Your Honor, we would like to call Dr. Kaufmann to the stand.

Mr. Burling: I am still discussing what I was. If Your Honor please, I think we do not wish to read any more of the deposition of Reichsbank Director Wilhelm. Before I make that statement flatly, may I ask Your Honor once more about a question of a ruling. The point is, there is evidence which we would wish to put in—that is, additional testimony by Wilhelm—if the ruling is one way and not if it is another way, and it is quite an important point.

I think I understand Your Honor, but I ask leave to ask you once more. Do I correctly understand that Your Honor is admitting the testimony of the witnesses Gros and Wilhelm concerning what Wilhelm said to Gros merely as evidence that he said it and not as evidence concerning the correctness of what he said or his motive for saying it?

The Court: That is correct.

Mr. Burling: Thank you, Your Honor. Then we do not wish to read any more of the Wilhelm deposition.

The Court: That is the only purpose for which you offered it, is it not?

Mr. Boland: Yes, sir. At this time, Your Honor, we would like to call Dr. Kaufmann to the stand. Whereupon—

1631 OTTO KAUFMANN, was called as a witness on behalf of the Plaintiff, and having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Would you state your full name for the record, Doctor? A. Otto Kaufmann, with one "F" and two "N".

Q. And your place of birth? A. Zurich, in Switzerland.

Q. And your date of birth? A. February 28, 1914.

Q. And what is your nationality, Doctor? A. Swiss.

Q. And you are a Swiss citizen? A. I am a Swiss citizen, yes.

Q. Would you state your educational qualifications, briefly? A. I entered grammar school in Zurich in 1920, went through grammar school and through the gymnasium of Zurich, and came out of there in the fall of 1932.

Q. What do you mean by gymnasium, Doctor? A. Gymnasium is a combination of high school and junior college.

Q. And after 1932? A. After 1932 I first worked 1632 in a bank for near to a year, at Geneva.

Q. And what position did you hold in the bank? A. Oh, I was there just to get a little acquainted with banking practice, as a volunteer.

Q. How long were you in the bank? A. Near to a year.

Q. Does that bring us to 1933? A. Exactly.

Q. Then what did you do? A. Then I entered the law school of the University of Zurich, and I studied law there up to February 1939, where I got my degree of doctor of law.

Q. And then what did you do? A. After that I was mostly in the army during the rest of '39 and '40, and then I became a secretary in the trial court of Uster, U-S-T-E-R, in the countryside of the State of Zurich, Switzerland.

Q. What is the position of secretary to the court? A.

There are different degrees of secretary. First you are just an assistant of the main secretary. Now, later on, when the main secretary was in the army, I replaced him; and then the secretary is the legal advisor of the court, because the trial courts are mostly made of laymen; just the president in that court was a lawyer.

1633 Q. And the secretary did what? A. He is the advisor of the court, and he also writes all the opnions, because in our country the judges do not write the opinion themselves, but the secretary writes the opinion for the whole court.

Q. And how long did you remain in this position? A. Something around nine months, altogether, with interruptions by military service.

Q. And this brings us to approximately what year? A. Oh, to beginning of 1942.

Q. Then what did you do? A. Then I entered the law office of my father, I passed the bar examination at Zurich, and then I entered a law firm at Uster, and I worked as an attorney of law in that law firm.

Q. For how long, Doctor? A. Till to the end of '43, I think.

Q. Then what did you do? A. And then I was asked by the Swiss School of Economics, the University of St. Gallen, to become a legal assistant in that university, and to start my academic career. That time I wrote my main publication on the new agricultural real estate law of Switzerland in order to become a so-called privatdozent; and when I was admitted I became a full-employed privatdozent. That is practically similar to an assistant professor in this country.

1634 Q. Did you have any other legal writings? A. My first publication that has been printed was my thesis on the liability in the corporation limited by guarantee, and now my last important publication is the commentary on the articles on legal accounting in the main commentary of corporation law of our country.

Q. What is the significance of the commentary in Switzerland? A. Switzerland is a code country. We unify the private law in a statute enacted in 1912, and the commentary gives the legal opinions with reference to the cases following the disposition of the code, article by article. That is a commentary.

Q. How long did you remain as a professor at the university? A. I am still a full-employed privatdozent, and of the Swiss School of Economics, but in the fall of '47 I came over to the Yale Law School to study there for advanced legal studies, and I got my Master's degree last summer at the Yale Law School.

Q. What is your present occupation? A. Then I returned to Europe and I came back, and I give now a course of comparative law at the Yale Law School. Besides this I am doing some legal research work.

Q. And you are presently teaching, are you? A. Yes,
I give this course, as I told you, comparative 1635 law.

Q. Doctor, I show you now Plaintiff's Exhibit 5 and 5-A and ask you whether you are familiar with this agreement. A. Yes, I read it.

Q. Directing your attention to the first paragraph on page 2 of the English translation of Exhibit 5, would you read this paragraph, please.

Mr. Burling: Just a minute, please. I object to any such testimony by Professor Kaufmann, because it is wholly irrelevant and immaterial. The document which the evidence establishes beyond peradventure, was drawn up between two German citizens, within Germany, relating to shares of German stock which were physically located in New York under an escrow agreement. I submit that no question which this witness—there is no question relating to this instrument which this professor is competent to express an opinion on.

Mr. Boland: May I make a statement, Your Honor. The plaintiff corporation is a Swiss corporation. The shares of stock of Uebersee, the plaintiff corporation, are shares of stock which it has been stipulated is the present corpus of the gift agreement. This res, or these shares of stock are presently located in Switzerland and were located at the time of vesting in Switzerland.

If a usufruct were established in connection with this particular gift, it would have been established under 1636 Swiss law. If a usufruct were demanded, or if the parents demanded the son to set up a usufruct, it would have been set up under Swiss law.

The second but more important phase of this particular testimony is in connection with the waiver, and a waiver although true enough made among donors who were German citizens we think entirely material at this time to show the Court the effect of such waiver under Swiss law in connection with the corpus of this gift, whether a usufruct was or was not established. We think it is very, very material.

Mr. Burling: I am not sure that I would not tentatively agree with Mr. Boland on the second point. I cannot understand, however, how this witness can testify about a transaction which took place, allegedly, on October 5, 1931, when there was no Swiss interest relating to this. Swiss law certainly, no matter what else it does, does not go back for the purposes of this Court and cast light on what happened in Germany in 1931 to German nationals, relating to shares of a German corporation.

Mr. Boland: I think that Mr. Burling has misconceived the purpose of the question, Your Honor. The purpose of this question is merely to ask him whether or not he is familiar with the fact that there is a usufruct. We do not want him to interpret this agreement. It is merely as a ground work to get into the general topic of his con-1637 versation. I will be glad to withdraw the question.

Mr. Burling: I then withdraw my objection. I do not concede that any question of Swiss law is before this Court.

Mr. Boland: I think we can establish that with this witness, Your Honor.

That is a matter of law for this Court to decide; there is a very serious question of Swiss law. The corpus of this gift is located in Switzerland. It is our contention, Your Honor, that under Swiss law a waiver that was valid under the private law of Germany, regardless of the foreign currency regulations, will be recognized and given full faith and credit in Switzerland, that the Supreme Court and the established law of Switzerland will not recognize any foreign currency regulations in Germany, and that is the main purpose of this man's testimony. The corpus of the gift is in Switzerland, and the Swiss law will look only to the private law of Germany by conflicts of law, and if valid under the private law, then they will give full effect to the waiver.

And the position of the United States Government in this particular case is that of taking over the rights of Wilhelm and Martha von Opel, and if Martha and Wilhelm von Opel tried to establish a usufruct after having waived it under Swiss law, they would not be permitted to establish it. It would not recognize any subsequent rights.

Mr. Burling: That is a position which I concede
1638 Mr. Boland has a right to argue at the appropriate time. It is, nevertheless, an argument addressed to Your Honor's knowledge of the law and not this witnes'. Because the question of what foreign law Your Honor will apply is a matter of our domestic law of contracts.

The Court: That is undoubtedly true. But if I did ultimately decide that the law of the jurisdiction where the property is located did control, then I would have to know the Swiss law.

Mr. Burling: I agree with Your Honor.

The Court: I think I will take it, then, and bear in mind your point.

Mr. Burling: By withdrawing my objection, which I do,

I do not wish to concede the point that Swiss law governs.

The Court: Yes, I understand. All right, he wants to save his point to argue that the Swiss law does not apply.

Mr. Boland: We are agreeable to that.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Are you familiar with the term "niessbrauch"? A. I am familiar with it.

Q. Is there such a term under Swiss law? A. The Swiss code use the term "nutzniessung." That is exactly the same concept as "niessbrauch."

Q. And is there a provision in respect of niessbräuch or nutzniessung under the Swiss code? A. Yes, there 1639 is a section about the niessbrauch in the articles 745 'til 775. They deal with the nutzniessung.

Q. And does that cover the general definition of nutzniessung—niessbrauch? A. There is no explicit definition of nutzniessung in it, but this whole chapter that is in the book on property deals with the nutzniessung, or with the niessbrauch.

Q. Would you explain generally the provisions of those particular sections to which you have referred? A. The nutzniessung, or niessbrauch, is a so-called limited right in rem. That means that the full ownership is split into two rights. The one is the right as to so-called—that the so-called usufructuary has. He has the right to get the interest, fruits, he can administer the thing; if shares are the object of the usufruct, he has also the voting right. And the other right is the so-called nude proprietes, N-U-D-E P-R-O-P-R-I-E-T-E-S.

The nude proprietes belongs to the legal owner. He has the right to control that the usufructuary uses the capital gradually, and he will get back the full ownership if the usufruct comes to an end, because a usufruct can only be made to last for lifetime.

Q. Under the provisions of the Swiss Code, is joint possession necessary in order to establish a valid niessbrauch?

A. In order to establish a valid niessbrauch as a 1640 right in rem, it is necessary to transfer possession to the usufructuary. That is said explicitly in the article 746 of the Swiss civil code.

Q. Doctor, are you familiar with the provisions of the German code in respect of niessbrauch? A. Yes, I know them.

Q. And you have had an opportunity to read them? A. I read them.

Q. And are the provisions under the Swiss code comparable to the provisions under the German code? A. They are comparable but there are some minor differences.

Q. But in general? A. In general they are similar.

Q. So that a Swiss court would have no difficulty in establishing a niessbrauch; for example, let us assume this case, that the donor gives property and passes title to a donee, and the contractual relationship is such that the donor has a right to call upon the donee to establish a usufruct in the future. Assuming that that arrangement, that agreement had been entered into in Germany, and that the corpus of the gift was actually now located in Switzerland, if the donor came and sued to establish his right in Switzerland, there would be no difficulty in establishing the niessbrauch, is that right? A. No difficulty at all.

1641 The Court: What would be the view of the Swiss Court? You say there is no difficulty. Is that because you would follow the law of Germany?

The Witness: No, they would establish a usufruct under Swiss law, naturally, but the claim would be, "Please, Court, order the defendant establish the niessbrauch," and then the court would order the defendant to establish the niessbrauch.

The Court: In other words, you would govern it by the law of your state, but you would take into account the acts that occurred in Germany, together with the demand or act that took place in Switzerland, is that right?

The Witness: Exactly. We would say the contract is governed by German law, but the way, how it has to be performed, is governed by Swiss law.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Doctor, what is necessary under Swiss law to create a usufruct as a right in rem? A. You have to transfer the possession of the thing in which the usufruct shall be created to the usufructuary.

Q. Suppose that the corpus of the gift is in the nature of bearer shares of stock, and that these bearer shares of stock were located in a safe deposit box. What would be required under Swiss law in order to give the usufructuary possession? A. You have to give the 1642 key of the safe deposit box to the usufructuary or to his agent.

Q. Well, suppose for example that there is only one key, and the usufructuary keeps that key? A. The usufructuary keeps the key, that's okay.

Q. He is given the key, right? A. He is given the key; then the usufruct is established, because the usufructuary can take out the shares and exercise all rights of a possessor.

Q. Suppose there are two keys, and the donee keeps one, and the usufructuary gets the other? A. That is still sufficient, because still the usufructuary can exercise his rights.

Q. Suppose there is only one key, and the donee keeps that key? A. That would not be sufficient.

Q. So the main thing is delivery of possession or a substitute for possession? A. That is the delivery of possession.

Q. The delivery of the key is delivery of possession in Swiss law? A. Exactly, yes.

Q. Can delivery be made, Doctor, under Swiss law to an agent of the usufructuary? A. That can be made.

1643 Q. Can delivery be made to the usufructuary, to a person who is not in fact the agent of the usufructuary? A. He is not the agent?

Q. That's right, not in fact. A. If he is not the agent, and if the usufructuary doesn't ratify later on that he is an agent, there is no transfer of possession.

Q. Assume, Doctor, that it is established in this case that in the year of 1935 the two donors to a gift agreement in Germany, and the donee of the gift agreement under which title is passed to the donee, and in which certain rights in connection with the usufruct are reserved to the donors—we will assume that a usufruct has not in fact been established but that there is a right in the donors to call upon the donee to establish a usufruct.

Now, let us assume further that the corpus of this gift if physically located in Switzerland, and that the parties now agree that all rights retained by the donors would be waived or terminated or made nugatory. Would the Swiss law recognize such a waiver? A. Where was this agreement between these persons made?

Q. The agreement was made in Germany? A. Yes, it would be recognized.

Q. How would a Swiss court handle the situation? A.

1644 They would say that such an agreement was made in Germany and that the rules of German civil law apply, so they would look at this agreement made in Germany, and if there is a valid agreement under German civil law, they would enforce this agreement in Switzerland in saying that the usufruct has been waived.

Q. Let us assume, Doctor, the same case, that under German private law all that is necessary to effect a waiver, to to terminate the rights of the donor, is an oral agreement among the parties that the rights are now out of existence. However, let us assume further that under the foreign currency regulations of Germany that such a waiver is void. Under these assumptions, Doctor, what effect would a German court give to such a waiver? A. German court?

Q. Swiss court, pardon me. A. The Swiss court would disregard completely the German foreign currency regulations and provisions in these regulations that some agreements are void for lack of license.

Q. You say that the Swiss courts would not recognize the German foreign currency regulations, even though they stated that such an act was void? A. That is exact. There is a very important case that comes near to the assumption you made me, and it is not the only case about the not-recognition of German foreign currency regulation, and that is the decision of the Swiss Federal 1645 Supreme Court, First Civil Bench, of October 8, 1938, and if Mr. Laufer likes, he may check if the translation I made myself is correct. I have different copies of it.

Mr. Boland: I would like to have this identified. I will not offer it until Mr. Laufer has had a chance to check the translation.

(Accordingly, the document above referred to was marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 102 for identification.)

Mr. Boland: I think we can go ahead with this.

Mr. Burling: May we say that if we have any dispute about the translation, we will bring it up later.

Mr. Boland: We will withhold our offer, Mr. Burling, until such time.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Doctor, you were referring to the Swiss Supreme Court case? A. Yes.

Q. As a justification for the position you have just stated that the Swiss courts would not recognize the foreign currency rules of Germany? A. Shall I explain the case?

Q. Yes, would you, please. A. In that case there was an assignment of a claim of German law, and the court held that the assignment in itself was governed by German law. But then it says from the beginning there 1646 is no discussion about the applicability of the rules of the German civil code because the defendant does not deny it. But the defendant opposes to the claim, saying that the assignment was void because there was no license given by the German Devisenbewirtschaftungsstelle.

That was the first position, and the second, that performance of his duty, as referred to previously, had become impossible, and therefore the duty to be performed had been extinguished to this extent under German law.

Q. Did the court state why it did not apply the German foreign currency regulations? A. Then the court said that he does not apply the German law, the German currency regulations, because it is against the Swiss public order.

Q. And does it explain in detail why it is against the Swiss public order? A. The prohibition of payments—on page 3—of payments of the German Foreign Currency law and the other restrictions about claims are interference with creditor rights in order to spoil them, and these prohibitions are contrary to the basic philosophy of the Swiss legal order. From this follows that the German foreign currency regulations cannot be taken into consideration by a Swiss judge either directly in so far as has been the contents of a claim, nor indirectly in so far as they make the performance impossible.
1647 The Federal Court has already decided in this way in a judgment of September 18, 1934, in the case Nathan-Institut c. Schweiz. Bank fur Kapitalanlagen entschieden, and we can refer to the arguments given there.

Q. Doctor, are you familiar with the philosophy of this particular position of the Swiss court? A. I think you ask me why they said that the foreign currency regulations were against the Swiss public order?

Q. Yes. A. After the first World War Swiss banks and Swiss firms had made large investments—

Mr. Burling: I have an objection. I am not contesting Mr. Kaufman's qualifications if he were called as a historian, but I don't believe that the history of Switzerland or the philosophy of the judges is an appropriate topic for expert testimony.

The Court: I guess the Swiss public order is something like our public policy.

Mr. Boland: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: You are speaking of what the Court has declared, now?

The Witness: Yes. I would like to say just a few words why they say it is against our public policy.

The Court: Have the courts expressed themselves the way you are about to express yourself?

1648 The Witness: What I say the court says here, as I read to you, that the German foreign currency regulations spoils the rights of Swiss creditors.

The Court: I understood that. But you are going to enlarge on it now. And what I wanted to know is where do you get your information, do you get it from your courts, or just your knowledge of the historical facts?

The Witness: No, in this case the judge says that, and the previous case refers to what they say here as it has been discussed in all Swiss newspapers. In the first case there they say why these German foreign currency regulations interfere with the rights of Swiss creditors.

The Court: In other words, what you are about to say you got from the court's decision in another case which referred to the newspaper items, and so forth?

The Witness: Exactly, yes.

The Court: All right, I will permit him to say on.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. What is the general philosophy behind the position that is taken by the Supreme Court in that case, Doctor? A. Before the German foreign currency regulation, Swiss banks and Swiss firms had made investments in Germany, and under these agreements solvent German firms had to pay back these loans in marks or in gold marks or in Swiss francs in Switzerland, place of performance being Switzerland. Now came these German foreign currency regulations and prohibited these German solvent firms to pay back their loans in Switzerland or anywhere outside Germany.

The Germans could just pay inside Germany, and Swiss creditors could not dispose of this money outside Germany.

That is the reason why the Swiss Supreme Court held that these provisions of the German foreign currency regulations spoils the rights of Swiss creditors, and are against the Swiss public policy, or as they say here, the Swiss public order.

Q. Therefore, Doctor, assuming—getting back to our hypothetical question—that the parties to a gift agreement in which the right had been reserved to call upon the son to set up a usufruct in the future, that if the parties had agreed to waiver which was valid under German law, then if the corpus, being physically located in Switzerland, then the courts would enforce the donor's demand against the donee to establish the usufruct? A. The court—not enforce.

Q. Pardon me, not thereafter enforce any right. A. They would not enforce that because waivers and assignments are both verfuegungen, as discussed this morning, and come under the same rule.

Q. Let us assume, Doctor, that in fact in this case a usufruct had been validly established in Switzerland in connection with these shares of stock, and then thereafter the parties agreed to waive under German law, and the waiver being valid under German law. A. Being valid under German law?

Q. Being valid under German law, German private law, but invalid under the foreign currency regulations; would the Swiss Supreme Court recognize the foreign currency regulations in that instance? A. They would not recognize the foreign currency regulations as they have cited in this case, in a case before, and in a case later. In a later case they make reference even to an American case.

Q. So I understand your testimony to be that whether or not a usufruct has been created, or whether it has not been created, that if the parties waived whatever rights they had, and the waiver being valid under German private law, that the Swiss courts would not recognize any foreign currency regulation of Germany which declared such a waiver void, is that right? A. That is exact.

Q. So that under such an assumption that the waiver has taken place, that the donors of that gift agreement would no longer have any claim recognizable in Switzerland either against the corpus of the gift, is that right that they would have no claim after having waived, they would have no claim or interest in the corpus of the gift located in Switzerland? A. That is exact,

1651 yes.

Would they have any interests in or claim against any rights of the donee to the gift agreement? A. They would have?

Q. Any? A. Rights in?

Mr. Boland: Will you read the question.

(The pending question was read by the reporter.)

The Witness: They would have no rights more against the donee.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. So that assuming the donee in this hypothetical case is Fritz von Opel, and assuming the donors are his mother and father, your testimony is that after they had waived, that under Swiss law the father and mother would have no claim whatsoever against the son, is that right? A. Undoubtedly.

Q. And assuming that the corpus of the gift consists of shares of stock in Overseas Finance Corporation, the plaintiff in this case, that after such a waiver the donors, the mother and father, would have no claims whatsoever against the corpus of the gift, is that right? A. That's right.

Q. So that there could be no element of control whatsoever from the Swiss standpoint. A. That's 1652 correct.

Mr. Burling: Mr. Boland, if you have finished this topic, if you would make a statement as to what other points of Swiss law you would like to make, I might be willing to stipulate with you, in the interest of expediency.

Mr. Boland: The other topics are with respect to the Liechtensteinian citizenship, and just two or three questions on domicile under Swiss law.

Mr. Burling: All right; I guess you had better proceed.

The Court: Mr. Boland, I do not like to interrupt you here, but I want to see if I have the trend of your reasoning not on this point but antecedent to it. Do you maintain that this act on the part of Wilhelm von Opel and his wife in 1935 amounted to a waiver of a right that already existed, or do you maintain that no right in rem existed, and that after investigation they found it did not exist, and therefore took no action? Or do you claim one or the other, I do not know which?

Mr. Boland: I am anticipating the Government's defense, Your Honor.

The Court: Maybe that is why it has confused me.

Mr. Boland: I think it probably is. Our position is that a gift was entered into on October 5, 1931, and at that time it was the intent of the parties merely to have a right to call upon the son to set up a usufruct.

1653 The Court: That is what I thought it was, and that that never occurred.

Mr. Boland: Was never called upon.

The Court: And therefore no right in rem ever existed.

Mr. Boland: Yes, Your Honor, and that in 1935 the parties decided to waive whatever rights they had under the gift agreement, even this right to call upon the son to set it up in the future. That is what Dr. Gros was testifying to. And the waiver being valid under German law—

The Court: But they could waive that without any consideration by an oral agreement in 1935, and that is what they did.

Mr. Boland: Yes, Your Honor. Dr. Kronstein testified that an oral waiver in such an instance was valid under private law.

The Court: I follow you now. But the point is, your point then is that no right in rem existed, and in addition to that the right to claim a usufruct in the future was waived, is that right?

Mr. Boland: That is right, Your Honor.

The Court: So that in 1935 every vestige of a legal claim ended.

Mr. Boland: Ended. The confusing element was on behalf, when I said whether the usufruct was created or was not created, the Government, I took from the 1654 cross examination of Dr. Gros is maintaining the position that a usufruct had in fact been created.

The Court: Yes, I know that.

Mr. Boland: And I was just bringing out for the Court that even if one had been created, that the waiver would be effective in respect of the created niessbrauch, which would have dissolved it and put you in the same position, there were no enforceable rights.

Mr. Burling: There is an additional element of confusion, if Your Honor please, because the splitting, the fragmentation of the German law which my friend is engaged in between private law and all law; Dr. Kronstein did testify, but he did also testify that under German law a license in his opinion would be required, and since it was required and not received, it would be void.

Mr. Boland: If a usufruct had in fact been established.

Mr. Burling: Either way, I believe.

Mr. Boland: I don't believe that is true.

The Court: I just wanted to get Mr. Boland's position. I think I have it now.

Mr. Boland: The main point being brought out through this witness is that the Swiss courts do not pay any attention to this.

The Court: I got that point clearly.

Mr. Boland: Which position, I might add, Your 1655 Honor, we will establish at a later date, is consistent with the American position.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Doctor, I show you now Exhibit 104-A and 103. A. I think you have to show me another one.

Mr. Burling: I object to any testimony being elicited from this gentleman as an expert, because there is no showing that he is any kind of an expert.

Mr. Boland: I am going to qualify him right now. Will you hold your objection until I finish the questions, please.

Mr. Burling: Surely.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Doctor, are you familiar with the citizenship laws of Liechtenstein? A. I am familiar with it.

Q. Are you familiar with the citizenship laws of Switzerland? A. I am familiar with it.

Q. Have you had during your practice an opportunity to study the Liechtenstein laws in respect to citizenship? A. We had to do with Liechtenstein law in the law office of my father, and there I became first acquainted with Liechtenstein law.

Q. And are the Liechtenstein laws in general the same and similar to Swiss citizenship laws? A. The Liech-1656 tenstein citizenship law is similar to the state law of different states of Switzerland.

Mr. Burling: I move to strike that on the ground that this man is not an expert on Liechtenstein law. I too have had occasion to study the law of Liechtenstein with reference to nationality, and I assert that I am—if I were as much an expert on that law as this gentleman, it clearly would not be for me to testify. The coincidence, or accident that Liechtenstein is contiguous to Switzerland does not mean that he can testify as to the laws.

The Court: I think you may be right, but I do not know how far he is going to go.

Mr. Boland: Your Honor, I would like to make just one statement. The Government has called a person by the name of Mr. Pere in New York as an expert in connection with this matter—not in this case but in several instances—and I think that the qualifications of Dr. Kaufman are much better than his.

The Court: You have not finished the qualifications, have you?

Mr. Boland: No, I have not.

The Court: I will take whatever statements he makes, Mr. Burling, subject to objection and motion to strike.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Doctor, are you familiar with the manner in 1657 which citizenship is granted in Switzerland? A. I am familiar with it.

Q. And are you familiar in detail with the manner in which it is acquired? A. I am familiar with it.

Q. Are you familiar with the manner in which citizenship is acquired in Liechtenstein? A. Yes, I am.

Q. Are you familiar in detail? A. I know it from the law and from what we had in the office of my father.

Q. Have you had any experience with this law? A. As to citizenship?

Q. Yes. A. Liechtenstein, I myself never had a case in Liechtenstein about citizenship, but I know about Liechtenstein citizenship law for the simple fact that most of the lawyers of St. Gallen, where I am living now, are dealing in St. Gallen and in Liechtenstein at the same time, and we discuss Liechtenstein matters as we discuss our own matters of the state of St. Gallen.

Q. Have you made a study of the laws of Liechtenstein in respect of citizenship? A. I made a study of the law of citizenship of Liechtenstein.

1658 Q. Do you have a copy of the laws of Liechtenstein in respect of citizenship here with you today? A. I have it here with me.

Mr. Boland: The testimony which he is going to give, Your Honor, is to bring out to the Court the manner which is set out by statute in which a person becomes a citizen, and the purpose of this testimony is to counteract the inference which has been given to this court by the Government to the effect that Fritz von Opel bought a citizenship with some cloak around the fact that he paid money for it.

It is a fact that under the statute of Liechtenstein that sets up a citizenship a payment is required.

Mr. Burling: I don't think Mr. Boland can testify as an expert, Your Honor.

The Court: I suppose if you want me to judicially notice the laws of the principality, there is some way to bring those to my attention.

Mr. Burling: We have them in a volume, if Your Honor please, why don't we stipulate certain sections of the Liechtenstein code?

The Court: I do not believe we have qualified him as an expert, as I understand it. I have read some of the laws of Maryland, myself—that isn't a good illustration. I have read some of them over in Virginia myself, but I do not believe I could qualify on it.

1659 I do not think that is the way to do it, I mean, if you are going to ask him anything as to his opinion on a certain state of facts, or some hypothetical question.

Mr. Boland: I will be glad to ask him on the hypothetical—

The Court: I say that is the part that is objectionable.

Mr. Burling: I offer to stipulate any section of the Liechtensteinian nationality code, or whatever the law is called. I do not think we have any dispute.

The Court: I can judicially notice that, I suppose.

Mr. Boland: If we get that in the record, that is the main thing.

Mr. Burling: If you will tell us what sections.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Read the sections, Doctor; just the section numbers. A. The main sections are section 6, 7, and 10.

Q. Of what statute? A. Of the Liechtensteinisches Landes-Gesetzblatt of January 10, 1934.

Mr. Burling: I do not think the witness is qualified to state that, but since he has, I will offer to stipulate the text of the Liechtenstein code in the sections named by the witness, if you have the text of the code available.

Mr. Boland: I did not get your question, Mr. Burling.

The Court: I will tell you what to do; between 1660 now and the next meeting, you two see if you cannot stipulate on the Liechtenstein code and any pertinent matters as to which I can take judicial notice.

Mr. Burling: I am sure we can, Your Honor.

The Court: If you cannot do that, you had better get some expert.

Mr. Boland: From Liechtenstein?

The Court: I don't know what to tell you to do, but the point of it is I think our rules on expert testimony are right strict, and I do not believe I could accept him as that. I could on Swiss law.

Mr. Boland: I have some questions on Swiss law which might be related, Your Honor.

Mr. Burling: I object to anything on the Swiss citizenship law, because there is no testimony, whatever, here that in any way—

The Court: Is there any claim that he is a citizen of Switzerland?

Mr. Boland: No. There is, however, it seems to me this that is important to get before the Court: Here is a man who had a permanent residence in Switzerland for quite a period of time. And he ended up by being a Liechtenstein citizen rather than a Swiss citizen.

Through this witness, I think, when he explains what the law is, and the requirements for Swiss citizenship—1661 that is, a six-year continuous permanent residence is a very difficult thing to acquire.

Mr. Burling: We can save time. I will stipulate that it would have been impossible in 1939 for Fritz von Opel to have become nationalized in Switzerland.

Mr. Boland: Because of the strict residence requirements. We will stipulate what the law is.

Mr. Burling: I think it is enough. The only point of Swiss citizenship, as I understand it, is that he did not become a Swiss national, and I am willing to concede that he could not have under applicable Swiss law. I do not see that we need go any further than that.

The Court: I think that is all you need.

Mr. Boland: There is another phase to this, and I want to say to this Court that with respect to acquiring citizenship in Switzerland a payment is made for the acquisition of citizenship, and that first of all you have to be approved by the community before you are admitted into citizenship of the state of Switzerland, and that the payment of money in respect of acquisition to citizenship is not unusual.

We in America would look with abhorrence upon such a thing, and I think that is the very inference that the Government is trying to create in connection with Fritz von Opel's acquisition of citizenship, that he paid 32,000 Swiss francs.

The Court: That would be admissible as to Liech-1662 tenstein, but I do not know about Switzerland. We are not concerned with his troubles in Switzerland, are we, about becoming a citizen? I don't understand.

Of course, I do not know what the Government is going to do. You do these a little out of turn. I do not suppose the Government is going to criticize him for not taking up a membership in Switzerland. If he did, I should think it would be going pretty far afield from this case.

Mr. Burling: I certainly am not, Your Honor. I concede he was ineligible for Swiss citizenship under Swiss law; that being so, the issue of Swiss rationality drops out.

Mr. Boland: Will you stipulate, also, that the payments made in connection with the acquisition of citizenship were normal?

Mr. Burling: Certainly not. I think it highly irregular, and I do not believe for a minute in Switzerland they do things like this, but I do not think it is relevant.

The Court: Mr. Burling, you are not going to offer that he made any large payments in Switzerland, are you?

Mr. Burling: No, Your Honor, I am not going to bring up any point that he did in Switzerland with reference to citizenship.

The Court (To Mr. Boland): He said now, and assured me, he is not going to bring up anything whatever so far as Mr. von Opel is concerned in connection with his 1663 activities in Switzerland in trying to become a citizen of Switzerland.

Mr. Boland: Yes, but he is going to bring up the fact that Mr. von Opel made payments in the acquisition of citizenship in Liechtenstein, and by this witness I can show that in Switzerland it is normal to make such payments, and also that being one of the states adjacent thereto, that it would not be unusual to have payments made there.

The Court: I think that is non sequitur.

Mr. Gallagher: I think we have enough in the record, Your Honor. We have already introduced Dr. Henggeler's testimony, which was stipulated.

The Court: As I understand it, you are offering it to prove that by reason of the fact that it is not wrongful in Switzerland to pay certain monies in order to get citizenship there, why, I could draw the conclusion that that may be the same situation in Liechtenstein, is that right?

Mr. Boland: Yes. I think that, coupled with the statute, would give you a good insight that the inference drawn by the Government is incorrect.

The Court: I do not believe I can permit that. In fact, these are separate countries, are they not? There is no doubt on earth about that.

Mr. Boland: They are, except that Liechtenstein is under the foreign protection of Switzerland.

The Court: Protection, but it does not have any 1664 other connection; it is not a part of it?

Mr. Boland: No; it is an independent principality.

The Court: That is what I thought.

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, I think we could probably drop it here, but I would further like to point out to the Court at this time that we submit that neither this Court nor can the Government contend that any court in this country can look behind the act of any sovereign with respect to the granting of citizenship.

The Court: That is another point, later on. I did not understand from the opening statement that his point was that. But I think we get a little bit off of it now. You are trying to establish, as I understand it, by reason of the fact that in an entirely separate country it is all right to pay money, to try to get a citizenship, that I could draw the conclusion that that same situation would obtain in a neighboring country which is a different one. I do not think that is logical.

Mr. Boland: We are ready to have the witness cross examined.

The Court: I will sustain the objection, if that is all you want.

1665 Mr. Burling: May I cross examine him now?

Mr. Boland: Yes.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did I correctly understand you to say that in connection with the creation of a usufruct in Switzerland, if shares which are the object of the usufruct, if the shares are placed in a box and the key to the box delivered to a third party who is the agent of the usufructuary, and he agrees to hold the key as agent for the usufructuary, that that is valid delivery and brings the usufruct into immediate existence? A. That is it exactly.

Q. Thank you. Now will you explain what you mean by "German private law?" A. When I used the term of "German private law," I referred to the German Code, and to the provisions contained therein.

Q. I see. Now, German law, the concept of German law, would include all the law that was applicable to a situation, would it not, and not just law in a particular book? A. Once more, please.

Q. I say, if you speak of what the German law is—

A. Yes.

1666 Q. —in a given situation— A. Yes.

Q. —would you not have to look to what all the law in Germany is, and not just the law contained in a particular book? A. Oh, sure. The whole law consists of all the law, yes.

Q. Now, first, aside from the consideration of Swiss public policy, which you stated— A. Yes.

Q. If two Germans make a usufructuary transaction in Germany, which later relates to shares situated in Switzerland, is it not true that normally the Swiss court would determine the validity or non-validity of the usufruct by looking to the German law which is applicable? A. You speak about the agreement?

Q. Yes. A. The agreement is governed by German law, yes.

Q. And the construction of the instrument is governed by German law, is it not? A. It is.

Q. And without reference to questions of foreign exchange law, supposing there was a dispute in a Swiss court as to whether a usufructuary had or had not waived his interest, and the waiver agreement took place 1667 in Germany. Then again the Swiss court would look to the German law in determining the meaning of that transaction? Is that not correct? A. Yes.

Q. Is it not the fact that if you have two Germans inside of Germany, and one of them is a usufructuary and the other has naked legal title, which is the literal translation of the word you said was used in Switzerland for the title holder, isn't it? A. Yes; but I wouldn't like to say it is also the same, although I gave it as the term we use, which as you say, is a literal translation.

Q. At any rate, I ask you to assume two Germans are sitting in Germany— A. Yes.

Q. —and one is the usufructuary of shares situated in Zurich, and the other is the title holder— A. Yes.

Q. —and they engage in a transaction which, under German law, is totally void. A. Yes.

Q. Is it your testimony that the Swiss court might nevertheless attach legal significance to it? A. It depends upon why it is void.

Q. I see. But there are circumstances, you say, 1668 in which a transaction which took place in Germany and was totally void under German law, would nevertheless be given legal effect in Switzerland? A. Only in this case, if it is void because of the foreign currency regulations. In all cases, if it is void under the German law, it won't be held void in a Swiss court.

Q. So you will agree, will you not, that the doctrine you are speaking of is a very remarkable exception to the Swiss law? A. The rule that a court will apply this public order is a very basic rule of Swiss law. But I agree with you that it is an exception to the general rule that you may apply foreign law in a court.

Q. At any rate, it is absolutely exceptional, is it not, the doctrine of the case you cited, which is the decision of the Swiss Federal Supreme Court, First Civil Bench, of October 8, 1935? A. I will say so, that every year there are many, many cases where the doctrine of public order—as you say in this country, of public policy—comes up in the court, and there are many, many cases where the court decided to apply Swiss law instead of foreign law, based upon the doctrine of public policy.

Q. But in respect of agreements entered into, or transactions, within Germany, the common rule, you have 1669 said, is that the Swiss court will apply German law? A. Sure.

Q. And the doctrine in this case is the exception to the general rule? A. To the general rule.

Q. And that is based upon Swiss public policy, is it not? A. Yes.

Q. And what is the Swiss public policy? Will you state that again? A. The Swiss public policy, or the doctrine of Swiss public order, is that no Swiss court will ever apply a foreign law that hurts so deeply the feeling of the Judge that he thinks this law is arbitrary and cannot be applied.

Q. Didn't you state the public policy a little differently before? A. I think you can state it in different terms.

Q. Well, I want to know the particular public policy that governs in this situation, that is, the situation dealt with in the opinion of October 8, 1935. A. Yes. I would like to state it in the words of the Swiss Supreme Court, as stated in the following case, where the problem of non-application of the German foreign currency regulation came up:

"Although it is difficult to describe in a general
1670 and different way the essence of public order, it is possible to show the function of this doctrine. The doctrine of public order shall hinder the application of foreign law and guarantee the application of the national law in cases where the country would violate definitely the national legal standards. That is the basis of the whole practice of the Swiss Supreme Court, whatever may be the definition of public order in individual cases."

Q. But I want to know what the public order is in this individual case. A. The public policy in this individual case is not to apply the Germany foreign currency regulation.

Q. But you are giving me the conclusion, Professor. What I want to know is the policy leading to that conclusion. A. The policy leading to that conclusion, as stated to Your Honor beforehand, it was the general feeling in Switzerland that the German foreign currency regulations interfere with Swiss creditors in an arbitrary way; and, for this reason, this kind of law should be disregarded by the Swiss courts.

Q. Thank you. Now, in the opinion of October 8, 1935, who were the parties to the agreement that was given effect? A. The plaintiff is a Swiss corporation, and the debtor—

Q. Where does the Swiss corporation reside? Do
1671 you know? A. In Zurich.

Q. And who was the debtor? A. The debtor is Rheinische Handelsgesellschaft.

Q. That is a German corporation? A. That must be a German corporation, yes.

Q. And where did the transaction take place? A. The assignment?

Q. Yes, please. A. The facts as stated in this case, as I showed you, do not show if the transaction has been made inside or outside, because the court had not investigated it, because it said in all events the Swiss courts have to disregard the foreign currency regulations.

Q. I am just trying to find out what the facts are, and the facts you do not know from reading the opinion? A. From reading the opinion, you do not know.

Q. Thank you. And the policy of the court is not to interfere with the rights of Swiss creditors. In other words, not to permit German creditors to say they cannot pay—

I am sorry; I misspoke myself.

The policy is not to permit German debtors to say to their Swiss creditors, "We can't pay you, because we are blocked from paying you by the German foreign exchange law." Isn't that right? A. I would state it so.

1072 Q. Well, do you agree with me? A. Yes.

Q. Fine. And that policy has nothing to do, does it, with a transaction in which both parties are Germans, and where there is no Swiss creditor in any way involved? A. That is right; there is a difference.

Q. The public policy you have just stated has no possible bearing on a situation where there isn't any Swiss creditor in any way involved? Isn't that true? A. No, that is not true, because the Swiss Supreme Court said Swiss courts have to disregard the German foreign currency regulations.

Q. I am talking about policy. A. And for all events, and for this reason the policy has to be strict.

Q. Where do you find that here?—that the policy has to be strict, and not investigate the facts? A. No; the dictum in the case says that this follows, from the fact that there is in this German foreign currency regulation an interference with credit rights in general; that from this it follows that the German foreign currency regulation cannot be taken into consideration as directly or indirectly. The dictum is broader than just to apply to this individual case.

Q. You agree, do you not, that what you are read-
1673 ing is pure dicta, and the facts in this case having nothing to do with the facts in the case at bar, or the hypothesis put to you by Mr. Boland? A. No, I cannot agree with this statement.

Q. All right; thank you. Didn't you state a moment ago that the policy which dictated this exception to the general Swiss rule was the policy of not having the German foreign exchange regulations interfere with the rights of Swiss creditors? A. It is the policy to protect Swiss creditors, yes.

Q. Thank you. And this case is one in which a Swiss creditor was protected by the exception to the general Swiss law? Isn't that true? A. In this case it is true—

Q. Thank you. And in the hypothesis which Mr. Boland put, and which is in fact a problem in the case at bar, there is no Swiss creditor; so the policy has no application.

Won't you agree with that? A. The policy has still application.

Q. How does the policy of protecting Swiss creditors have application to a case in which there is no Swiss creditor? A. Because, as in 90 per cent of the cases, the German foreign currency regulation may interfere with the Swiss creditor rights, the Supreme Court tells all Swiss courts never to regard it.

1674 Q. Where does it say that? Point out the words where it says that, even where there is no Swiss creditor, pay no attention to the German foreign currency regulations.

Does it say it in this case? A. In this case they made just the statement I read to you, but that cannot be taken into consideration by a Swiss court, either directly or indirectly.

Q. Yes; but that is in a case where there is a Swiss creditor. A. I agree with you.

Q. And the policy is one of protecting Swiss creditors. I do not understand where you see any authority in this particular case relating to a problem where there is no Swiss creditor.

Mr. Boland: Just a minute, please. Your Honor, I think the stipulation should be read into this record. It is in the record, as I understand—

"It is further stipulated between the parties that Dr. Henggeler would testify that he knows that Mr. Fritz von Opel maintained a residence and home at St. Moritz, Switzerland, since about 1933;

"It is further stipulated between the parties that Dr. Henggeler would testify that he concluded many years ago that Fritz von Opel had established his residence and domicile in Switzerland;

1675 "It is further stipulated that Dr. Henggeler would testify that in his negotiations with the Swiss Tax Office he was advised by that Department of the Swiss Government that it had concluded that Fritz von Opel was a domiciliary of Switzerland subject to the tax imposed by Switzerland and that he knows of his own knowledge that Mr. Fritz von Opel has paid the assessed tax for many years."

In addition to which, the plaintiff in this case is a Swiss corporation; and as to the donee, I believe it has been stipulated that he was a Devisen Auslander. I think the facts establish that this plaintiff, Fritz von Opel, that Fritz von Opel was certainly a citizen of Liechtenstein.

Mr. Burling: In 1935, Mr. Boland?

Mr. Boland: At that time he was a resident of Switzerland.

Mr. Burling: But the question is whether this waiver in 1935 had effect. At that time he wasn't a domiciliary of Switzerland, in my opinion, and there was no stipulation on that.

The Court: I think I will let him have some latitude in establishing what the law of Switzerland is—he has testified on direct—and then let him say what it is, and you can argue the applicability later.

Mr. Burling: What was my question, please?

1676 The Court: I think you both agreed that this didn't agree with this situation specifically, and I think you asked if there were any other decisions.

Mr. Burling: I will ask him that.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Do you have a decision with you which relates to—Well, first I will ask you the narrow question—do you have a decision with you which relates to the waiver of either a valid usufruct or a claim to have a usufruct created when the waiver takes place between two German nationals, and the agreement takes place in Germany? A. I have no such case.

Q. Do you have any commentary which deals with such a case? A. There is no commentary which deals with a waiver between two German nationals, non-residents in Switzerland, about the waiver inside Switzerland.

Q. Now I ask you the broader question.

What authorities do you have with relation to any transaction between two Germans, which transaction takes place in Germany, which affects rights to securities in Zurich or in Switzerland? A. Between Germans?

Q. Yes, two Germans. A. That they are both in-1677 side Germany, and brought the case before a Swiss court, you say?

Q. Yes. A. And where it has been held invalid?

Q. What is right.

Mr. Gallagher: Does that question include in it the premise that they are residents of Germany?

Mr. Burling: It includes the words I put in it, if it is desired to ask on redirect.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Do you understand my question? A. Once more, please.

Q. I ask you if you have any authority in which the Swiss courts refused to give effect to German law where there is a transaction carried on between two Germans, the transaction taking place in Germany, but affects rights to securities physically located in Zurich, or anywhere in Switzerland? A. In all the cases I went through, where German foreign currency regulations then applied, the Swiss court never investigated what was the nationality of the parties. So I cannot from my own memory tell you if in all these cases where the German foreign currency regulations were applied, there was a difference on that, because Swiss courts never investigated about that.

Q. If you cannot tell from reading the opinion, whether Swiss courts investigated it, how do you know that 1678 they investigated it or not? A. No; I can positively tell you that they did not investigate.

Q. How? A. Because if that would be material, they would investigate.

Q. If there is no case in which they did investigate, there are two possible hypotheses, are there not? A. Yes.

Q. One, that such a case never came before them; and, two, that they didn't pay any attention to it. A. Yes.

Q. How do you know which hypothesis is correct? A. I think both hypotheses are possible.

Q. And how do you know which one is right? A. I think the second must be right, in so far as if this problem would have come up, the Swiss court would have settled it.

Q. If my name were Jones, then my name is Jones, but do you know? A. I think in every case you have first to read the whole case; and if no case can have any distinction drawn as to the nationality of the parties, in three big cases, then you may say nationality is without any importance.

Q. You can tell in this case, can you not, that the 1679 creditor is Swiss? A. In this case I can tell that the creditor is Swiss.

Q. Who is the creditor in the other two cases? A. For that I had really to bring in these two cases. I can tell you that. I have here a decision of the Swiss Supreme Court, First Civil Bench, February 1, 1938—

"In re (1) Allgemeine Elektrizitatsgesellschaft, Berlin"—

So that will be a German corporation—

"(2) Siemens & Halske Aktiengesellschaft, Berlin, gegen, Journaliag A. G., Glarus"—

So that in that case I agree it was a Swiss corporation who was probably plaintiff.

Q. So that we have now two of the three cases governing this subject, where it was a Swiss national— A. Yes.

Q. —who was the creditor being protected. And you don't know about the third case? Is that right? A. Let me think it over. I could not tell offhand the nationality.

Q. Then how do you know that there ever was a case which arose, analogous to the hypothesis, or the case at bar, where the Swiss courts were called on to decide between two German nationals, concerning a transaction carried out within Germany, whether or not to apply 1680 the German law? A. I can just state the Swiss court never investigated about nationality.

Q. How do you know it never investigated, sir, if the problem never came up? A. In these cases they never investigated.

Q. But in these cases, Professor, it is clear from the face of the opinion that the court was protecting a Swiss creditor. A. Yes.

Q. How in the world does that tell you that the court would not investigate if in fact there was no Swiss creditor anywhere around? A. I think if, in the whole way of argument, they make no distinction between Swiss creditors, but if the Swiss court has discussed the law completely, it shows the court doesn't make a distinction.

Q. In a case involving a Swiss creditor? A. Sure, I agree with you.

Q. You wouldn't expect them to talk about cases where there wasn't a Swiss creditor, if in fact in the case before the court there was a Swiss creditor, would you? A. Can we put it this way?

The Court: I think I understand what each one of you is talking about. He says the language is general, and you say it is not.

1681 Mr. Burling: And I think I bought through this witness Your Honor, that there is no authority, except where there are Swiss creditors.

The Court: I understood that.

Mr. Burling: Then no further questions, Your Honor.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Assuming the hypothesis of a gift agreement in 1931, and a waiver valid under private law in the year 1935, then in the year 1941 the mother and father, after having made that waiver, come to Switzerland and sue the donee of the gift, who is at that time a resident of Switzerland, and sue him in connection with the rights which they had already waived, is there any question under Swiss law as to whether or not the Court would enforce such rights which had already been waived? A. There is no doubt about it, that the Swiss courts would follow the dicta of the three precedents about the non-application of the German foreign currency provision as stated in these three cases. So that no right whatever of the parents could be enforced in the Swiss courts.

Mr. Boland: That is all, Doctor.
The Court: All right.

(The witness left the stand.)

Mr. Boland: At this time, Your Honor, we would 1682 like to recall Dr. Kronstein.

Mr. Burling: Mr. Boland, if your purpose is to identify the German nationality law, I will stipulate again as to the text of that law.

Mr. Boland: Would you show me what you are willing to stipulate?

Mr. Burling: Any paragraph or provision of the law. I am not aware there is any room for opinion here. I think it is just a question of what the statute provides.

The Court: Is this testimony lengthy?

Mr. Boland: No, it is not, Your Honor.

The Court: Maybe you can tell Mr. Burling what you want to prove by him in regard to the German nationality law.

Mr. Boland: The testimony is particularly in connection with the laws on German citizenship, Your Honor, and in in that connection we would go into what is meant by "domicile" under German law.

The Court: Just tell him what you expect to prove, and see if you can stipulate it.

Mr. Boland: Well, we expect to prove that Fritz von Opel did not in fact maintain a permanent residence in Germany, and that if he did not in fact maintain a permanent residence in Germany, that he could not have had a domicile in Germany, that being one of the essential requirements.

Secondarily, we intend to establish that the nation-
1683 ality law of Germany requires an application of the German Government to retain citizenship, and if such an application is not made, that the citizenship is lost upon the acquisition of another citizenship.

Mr. Burling: We can't stipulate that this witness could testify to anything concerned where Fritz von Opel lived.

The Court: Oh, no.

Mr. Boland: No.

Mr. Burling: I will stipulate that the German law relating to loss of nationality is as you have stated; that it required an application; that if you became naturalized in another country, you lost your citizenship in Germany unless you applied for and received permission to retain German citizenship.

The Court: Is the time limit fixed?

Mr. Burling: The incident which makes it relevant took place in 1939.

Mr. Boland: The time is upon the acquisition of the new citizenship, Your Honor. That is the relevant time.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Boland: Which citizenship has been stipulated.

Mr. Burling: And the permission would have to be received prior to the acquisition of the new citizenship.

Mr. Boland: Yes.

1684 The Court: All right. That covers that phase of it.

Mr. Boland: And on domicile, you will stipulate that permanent residence is an essential element of domicile in Germany, will you?

Mr. Burling: I don't know. What is the relevance of German domicile, if you please? If your purpose is to establish ultimately, Mr. Boland, that Fritz von Opel did not have domicile or permanent residence in Germany in the year 1939, I will make that concession.

Mr. Boland: Yes.

Mr. Burling: That he did not, in the year 1939.

Mr. Gallagher: And prior to the time of his Liechtensteinean citizenship, he had neither domicile nor permanent residence in Germany.

Mr. Burling: That is correct.

Mr. Boland: And prior to 1939?

Mr. Burling: I won't go back further. It isn't relevant.

Mr. Boland: If it becomes relevant as to the amount of time he spent every year in Germany.

The Court: Perhaps you had better go ahead with the testimony, if you can't straighten it out.

Mr. Burling: Your Honor, I stipulated all this witness could possibly know with relation to the law, that is, that what I have previously said about laws of citizenship
1685 applied only if you had neither domicile nor permanent residence in Germany; and I do stipulate that at that time, that is, at the moment of acquisition of Liechtensteinean citizenship, Fritz von Opel did not have domicile and did not have permanent residence in Germany.

Mr. Boland: That is not enough, Your Honor. We intend to establish in this case that at no time from 1929 on did Fritz von Opel have domicile in Germany. We don't intend to establish that, as a matter of fact, through this witness, but through the law he will testify to, and applying that to the facts.

The Court: I suppose if it is the law that he did not have it at that time, it would also be the law that he did not have it continuously for ten years before; so that it wouldn't make any difference, would it?

Mr. Burling: No, Your Honor. That is why I say it irrelevant.

The Court: I understand your point. But they want to say, as a matter of law, that if he didn't have it for ten years up to 1939, or for 1939, the law is the same.

Mr. Burling: My point is that the only relevance in this case to either permanent residence or domicile is what the situation was in 1939. And I am willing to concede that, both on the law and on the facts.

The Court: I should think that is true. I should 1686 certainly think that is true.

(To counsel for plaintiff): But I don't know what you are talking about.

Mr. Gallagher: We want the stipulation to go back, Your Honor, to 1929 at least, because under the German law Dr. Kronstein would testify it requires at least six months.

Mr. Burling: But that is totally irrelevant, if Your Honor please, as long as the ultimate result is stipulated to.

The Court: Well, I am trying to get you together. You can either agree or not.

Mr. Burling: I object to any testimony concerning this, after I have made the concession, on the ground that it is irrelevant.

The Court (to counsel for plaintiff): What is it you want to prove?

Mr. Boland: We are willing to take the stipulation offered, Your Honor, but in addition we want to show through this witness that the law as stated in Germany as applied to domicile applied to our situation, and that it cannot be stated this man had a domicile in Germany from 1929 to the present time.

Mr. Burling: But that is irrelevant, except as to nationality. There is no contention either way as to his domicile, it is immaterial. We also concede that he was a 1687 Devisen Auslander at all relevant times.

Mr. Boland: We think the facts will also establish affirmatively that he was a resident of Switzerland and we want to use that in connection with Dr. Kaufmann's expert testimony on the Swiss law. We think in the final argument mention can be made by the defendants of the lack of having this evidence in, if they are in the position to state this man was not domiciled outside of Germany. We want it clearly shown that he was domiciled outside of Germany.

The Court: What you want to ask him is not the matter of fact?

Mr. Boland: Oh, no, Your Honor—"What is the law of domicile in Germany?"—that is what I want to ask him.

The Court: I will take it over the objection, and subject to being stricken later.

Whereupon, DR. HEINRICH KRONSTEIN was recalled as a witness on behalf of the plaintiff and, having been previously duly sworn, was examined and testified further as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Doctor, are you familiar with the citizenship laws of Germany? A. Yes, I am.

1688 Q. And do you know what citizenship law was in effect in 1929? A. The Federal Statute of July, 1913, relating to the acquisition and loss of federal and state citizenship.

Q. Was this statute ever amended, Doctor? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Are you familiar with the amendments? A. Yes.

Mr. Boland: (To counsel for defendant): You are going to stipulate on the loss of citizenship? And also that under Section 25 it is automatic?

The Court: He stated it, but just read in there what he stipulated, so that there won't by any mistake.

Mr. Boland: All right, sir—

It is stipulated by and between the parties that the statute of July 22, 1913, as amended, and particularly sections 24 and 25 of this act, pertain to the loss and acquisition of citizenship in Germany.

It is agreed that under section 25 a German citizen having a domicile or permanent residence outside of Germany automatically loses German citizenship by acquisition of a foreign citizenship, unless he has been given a license by the German executive agency having jurisdiction, that is, the executive agency having jurisdiction over his last German residence, for the retention of German 1689 citizenship, notwithstanding the acquisition of a foreign citizenship.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Burling: I would like to add a sentence, Your Honor—

In case the German has received such permission from the authority having jurisdiction in the matter, then he does not automatically lose his German citizenship.

Mr. Boland: Yes, I will put that in.

By Mr. Boland:

Q. Doctor, are you familiar with the concept of domicile in German law? A. Yes.

Q. Could you describe briefly what it means? A. German law has two different concepts of domicile, one for infants and wives, and the other for men, for independent persons.

An independent person has his domicile if, first, he has a permanent place to stay, he settles down on a place to stay; and, second, if he has the intention to stay in this place for good, and too, run his life from this place.

Q. You are familiar with the American concept of domicile, are you, Doctor? A. Yes.

Q. Will you distinguish the two, please? A. The German concept of domicile is much closer to the Amer-1690 ican concept of residence, than it is to the American concept of domicile.

Under German law you cannot have a domicile without having residence, with the exception I gave before, wives or infants; and under German law, furthermore, you can have two or three domiciles, while under American law you can have only one domicile.

Q. Is this word "domicile" defined under German law? A. Yes. The Civil Code, in Section 7, states what "domicile" is, and the courts have, since now 50 years, interpreted the fifth paragraph continuously.

Q. And is the definition in the Civil Code applied to citizenship laws? A. Yes. The domicile concept of the Civil Code of the B.G.B. is applicable to Section 24 and Section 25 of the German citizenship law. That is the decision of many courts in regard to the citizenship law.

Q. May a person have two domiciles under German law? A. Yes.

Q. Under what circumstances? A. If he has two residences, and if he runs his life partly from the one and partly from the other.

For instance, if I live from January to June in the south, and from June to January in the north, and I have a place of residence, and I run my life from the north and 1691 from the south, respectively, I have two domiciles.

Q. So that the main concept in domicile under German law is the permanent residence, number one, that you actually, physically have a house in which to live? A. There is there an objective element of domicile and a subjective element. Both have to come together: One, the objective element is that you have a place to live, and the second is that you have an intention to stay at this place and run your life from this place.

Q. So that without this place there, regardless of what your intent is, you cannot have a domicile under German law? A. No.

Q. And, vice versa, even though you had a place and didn't have the intent to run your life from that place, you cannot have a domicile. A. No.

Mr. Boland: That is all we have of this witness, Your Honor.

Mr. Burling: No questions.

The Court: All right; you are excused.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. Gallagher: As I recollect Your Honor's expression at the noon recess, the plaintiff's case is permitted to be kept open until after the holidays?

1692 The Court: You have only one more witness, your think?

Mr. Gallagher: Yes, Your Honor; and in view of the very, very technical nature of this case we would like to have an opportunity to review this record.

The Court: Oh, yes.

Mr. Burling: I would like to call Mr. Calvin Houghland, so that he won't have to come back.

Mr. Gallagher: We have no objection.

The Court (to counsel for defendant): He is a very short witness?

Mr. Burling: Yes, Your Honor.

The Court: Very well.

Accordingly, CALVIN HOUGHLAND, called as a witness on behalf of the defendant, and being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Baum:

Q. What is your full name, Mr. Houghland? A. Calvin Houghland.

Q. And where do you reside? A. Brentwood, Tennessee.

Q. How old are you, Mr. Houghland? A. Thirty-two.

Q. Are you a graduate of any university? A. I

1693 am not a graduate. I attended the University of Vanderbilt and the University of Virginia.

Q. What is your present occupation? A. I run the Direct Oil Company.

Q. And where is that located? A. We operate in five southern states.

Q. And its headquarters? A. In Nashville, Tennessee.

Q. How long have you been engaged in the gasoline business? A. Well, in one connection or another, since I was 14. I have operated this company, the Direct Oil Company, since 1937.

Q. And have you been associated with any other company in the oil business? A. Yes, sir. I was president and general manager of the Winn Oil Company.

Q. And how long were you associated with the Winn Oil Company? A. I started in 1938, and continued until I entered the United States Navy, in 1942.

Q. And upon separation from the United States Navy, you went where? A. I returned back to Tennessee, but I did not continue my activities with the Winn Oil Company.

1694 Q. And do I understand you to say you resumed your activities with the Direct Oil Company? A. That is correct.

Q. Is that company in any way connected with the Spur Distributing Company? A. It is not.

Q. Have you ever met Mr. Fritz von Opel, Mr. Houghland? A. Yes, I have.

Q. Do you see him sitting in this courtroom? A. Yes, I do.

Q. Where is he sitting? A. Right there (indicating), writing.

Q. About when did you first meet him? A. In the winter or spring of 1935, the first time.

Q. Did you have occasion to meet Mr. von Opel in the year 1940? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Can you tell us approximately when and where? A. It was near Nashville, at the home of my father and mother, and it was in the early summer of 1940.

Q. By "early summer", what month do you have in mind? A. I am not completely sure as to the month, except it was either the latter part of May or the first part of July. I know it was not June, because I got married on June 1st and was gone the entire month of June.

1695 Q. And you recall it was around the time of your marriage? A. Yes, it was.

Q. Now, can you relate to us briefly the events of that occasion at your father's home in Tennessee? A. Yes I can.

Q. Will you do so, telling us who was present and under what circumstances? A. I was having dinner with my family, and Fritz von Opel was also there visiting in the house. And after dinner we adjourned to an upstairs sitting room and had a general discussion, mostly being taken up with Mr. von Opel telling us of his exploits and of his inventions.

Particularly I remember he said he was the inventor of the rocket, which impressed me very greatly. I also remember that we heard a newscast, and at that time the war situation looked very desperate and black; and I remember it so.

And Mr. von Opel spoke up and said—I remember I remarked that the war would take a very long time to get over with, and might even involve the United States—and Mr. von Opel corrected me at once and said, "It will not take a long time. By using rockets and secret weapons, we will finish up this war in no time at all."

Q. Who was present during this conversation? You referred to your family. Will you specify the individuals? A. My mother was there, and I don't remember whether it was my wife or my wife to be. But I do remember she was there. And my father was there also.

Q. Did your father hear this conversation? A. I am not sure. The conversation was over several hours, and I recall that particular night that he stretched out on the day bed and went to sleep, and I am not sure that he heard this part of the conversation or not.

Q. At the time of this conversation, did Mr. von Opel make any reference to military events at that time? A. Yes; he was very positive and showing pleasure at the progress that the Germans were making in France and in the low countries; and was quite pleased, because he stated that some of his inventions were playing a particular part in it.

Q. When was the next time you saw Fritz von Opel? A. I think I saw him, I think the next time—I am sure that the next time I saw him was in 1941, February 4.

Q. Where did you see him at that occasion? A. At Palm Beach.

Q. How is it that you happen to be able to remember the date? A. I took it from my diary before I came up here.

Q. What were you doing in Palm Beach? A. My wife and I were visiting in Miami and we called up Mr.
1697 and Mrs. von Opel and they invited us to come up and spend the day; and we went sailing with them in the afternoon and stayed for dinner at night.

Q. At their home? A. At a home, as I remember, that they had rented.

Q. In which they lived? A. Yes, in which they lived.

Q. Is there any particular event during the course of that dinner which fixed itself upon your mind? A. Yes, there was.

Q. Will you please tell us what it was? A. Just as we were sitting down to dinner, which Mrs. von Opel had prepared, the phone rang and she answered it and called Fritz von Opel to the phone. And he said it was long distance, and he jumped up from the table and went into the hall, which was the adjoining room, and talked for some 25 or 30 minutes in German. And when he returned, he apologized for having been gone so long, and said he was talking to business associates in Hungary.

Q. How do you happen to recall this incident? A. Well, I before or since have never been around an overseas call, and I was very impressed with the cost that it must have involved, with such a call. And my wife and I talked about it in driving back to Miami that night.

Q. Did Mr. von Opel tell you at this time what was 1698 the subject of his conversation on the telephone? A. No; I don't recall that he did.

Mr. Baum: That is all.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Mr. Houghland, would you say it would be a fair statement to say that you and your father, with regard to one another, occupy the customary devotion which exists between father and son? A. I certainly would.

Q. And your employment at the present time is president of the Direct Oil Company? Is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. How long have you had that job? A. I founded the company in 1937.

Q. And before that you were with the Winn Oil Company? Is that correct? A. That is not correct.

Q. Didn't you say you were with the Winn Oil Company at one time? A. I was. I took over the operations of the Winn Oil Company in 1938.

Q. And the Winn Oil Company, prior to—let me see if I get this—

Winn Oil Company remained a part of the Spur 1099 system, did it not? A. Yes, it always has been and still is.

Q. Wholly owned by Spur? A. That is my knowledge, yes.

Q. And where did you get the money to set up the oil business that you finally set up? A. I borrowed it from the American National Bank in Nashville.

Q. Is that Mr. Davis' bank? A. Mr. Davis is, I assume, a stockholder of the bank and works there. He is employed there, yes.

Q. In what position is he employed? A. I think he is chairman of the board now. He was president of the bank at the time I made this loan.

Q. And he is chairman of the board now? A. That is my recollection.

Q. And how much money did you borrow? A. Four thousand dollars.

Q. And who put up the collateral for that loan? A. I put up the collateral, in the filling station which I built myself. I signed over the filling station and all its property and equipment, to the bank as collateral.

Q. Did you put any of your own money into it? A. I had no money.

Q. Then you really started this business with no
1700 money at all? Is that correct? A. Four thousand dollars borrowed capital.

Q. Did your father sign a note on that? A. Yes, he did.

Q. So it was put up on his security? Is that correct? A. No, it wasn't put up totally on his security. I put up the security. He signed the note.

Q. And how large a business is that today? A. How do you mean that, sir?

Q. Total volume, dollar sales? A. I think it will do just short of a million dollars this year.

Q. You will do about a million dollars business a year, you say? A. I think we will reach that this year.

Q. And where do you operate—just in Tennessee? A. In five southern states.

Q. You said you didn't finish college, did I understand you to say? A. That is correct.

Q. How far did you go in college? A. Two years.

Q. I want to ask you this:

Did you discuss with your father the testimony which you gave today, before you gave your testimony?
1701 A. Yes. Yes, I have.

Q. Did you tell him what you were going to say? A. Yes, I in general discussed it.

Q. You have told him that many times, haven't you? A. Not many times, no.

Q. You have discussed this case with him many times, haven't you? A. I certainly have.

Q. And you have discussed it with representatives of the Government, haven't you? A. Yes, I have—Mr. Burling and Mr. Baum.

Q. When was the first time you gave any statement to the Government in connection with this case? A. Oh, I think I talked my first time with Mr. Burling last spring or summer. I am not too clear on that.

Q. Last spring or summer was the first time you talked to Mr. Burling? A. I think so, yes.

Q. You talked to Mr. Burling about this case last spring or summer? A. I am not sure about it.

Q. Can you tell me when is the first time you talked to Mr. Burling about the case? A. I can't fix the date. I am nervous, and I don't remember. Let me see. I am 1702 sure I talked to him this summer, yes—this past summer.

Q. You are sure you talked to Mr. Burling this past summer? A. Yes.

Q. Would I refresh your recollection any if I told you Mr. Burling didn't come into this case until about eight weeks ago? A. I do remember that now, and you are correct. Eight weeks ago. This is December. That would be late summer, wouldn't it?

Q. That would be early November, wouldn't it, or late October? A. Eight weeks, two months, and this is December—late October, possibly.

Q. When was the first time you talked to any representative of the Government about Fritz von Opel? A. Just eight weeks ago, when I talked to Mr. Burling, is the first time I remember talking to the Government.

Q. Are you sure about that? A. No. I am wrong. I talked to Mr. Baum. That is the summer visit I had in mind. That was last summer. I talked to Mr. Baum.

Q. Prior to that, did you talk to anybody in the Government about Fritz von Opel? A. I don't remember 1703 discussing it with anybody in the Government, and knowing that they were in the Government.

Q. When was the first time you told anyone about the statements which you have attributed to Mr. von Opel? A. Well, I have discussed them with members of my family, and perhaps to some intimate friends, since that happened.

Q. But the first time you ever talked to anyone connected with the Government about Fritz von Opel, to your knowledge was last summer or early fall? A. Yes; that is all that I know of to my knowledge at this time.

Q. Do you recall ever talking to an FBI agent in connection with this case? A. No, I have never talked to an FBI agent.

Q. You are sure about that? A. I am sure about that.

Q. Now, I want to direct your attention to the statement in 1940, which you attribute to Mr. von Opel, in which he said they would finish the war, or "We will finish the war in no time at all, with rockets and secret weapons."

Did you have a discussion with him about what secret weapons he was talking about? A. I don't recall any secret weapon, other than his discussion of the rocket, and him saying he was the inventor of the rocket.

1704 Q. And you didn't discuss the point any further?

A. About other secret weapons?

Q. Yes. A. Is that the question?

Q. Yes, that is my question. A. Oh, he just made inference to other secret weapons. There were no other ones mentioned specifically.

Q. And I want to talk to you about this date of February 4, 1942. Did you give that date—

Mr. Gallagher: 1941.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Did you give that date, February 4, 1941? A. Yes, I did.

Q. At that time you were about 24 or 25 years old? Right? A. Well, I am 32 now. I will have to figure it out.

Q. All right. Let us figure it out. You were about 24, weren't you? A. Well, let me see. Forty-one from forty-eight is seven—about 25.

Q. And you were having dinner at Mr. von Opel's place in Florida that night? A. That is correct.

Q. As a matter of fact, you were down there on your honeymoon at that time, were you not? A. That is incorrect.

1705 Q. You were not? A. No.

Q. And the reason that you remember this so distinctly is because you put it in your diary? Is that correct? A. It isn't a diary. It is a little calendar which I have kept for many years, that I keep in my desk and I always keep up with the places I have been, in order that I can prepare expense accounts which I turn over to my company. And I have that now, and I have kept them for many, many years.

Q. Then all that that would establish would be the fact that you had been at Mr. von Opel's for dinner, wouldn't it? A. The diary?

Q. Yes. A. All the diary said—and I can repeat it verbatim—is Palm Beach, February 4, 1941. That is all there was on that page.

Q. And from that you state that as the date when you were at Mr. von Opel's for dinner? A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. So that when you were attributing to him the statement that he came back to the table and said he had been talking to business associates in Hungary, you are 1706 relying entirely on your memory? Is that correct.

Q. And if the statement had been that he had talked to business associates from Hungary, you would then be in error, wouldn't you? A. From Hungary?

Q. Yes. A. No; I remember distinctly he said "to Hungary", because I don't recall the conversation, but there was some reference even at the dinner table about the expense involved in a call of that nature. I have tried to recollect the exact conversation, but can't.

Q. You don't recall he said business associates to Hungary? A. He talked to Hungary to business associates.

Q. You stated that before, the first time you stated it, as stating he had talked to business associates in Hungary. Isn't that correct? A. In essence it is the same, isn't it?

Q. In words, it is a great deal of difference.

Did you bring that diary with you? A. No, I did not.

Q. Let me ask you this: While the war was going on, you never thought it important to report any of these conversations to the FBI? A. No, I didn't think it was 1707 important that I report those conversations to the FBI.

Q. Did you think it was important that someone report them? A. I was under the impression that perhaps—

Q. Just a minute.

Mr. Burling: I submit he should be allowed to answer that question.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Will you read it back, please?

The Reporter (reading): "Question: Did you think it was important that someone report them?"

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. All right. Can you answer that? You can answer that yes or no, can't you?

Mr. Burling: I submit plaintiff's haven't produced a witness yet who has answered yes or no.

The Court: (To the witness): Can't you say yes or no, and then following it up with whatever else you want to say?

The Witness: Will you restate the question to me?

The Court: He said he wanted to know if you thought it was important that somebody reported those circumstances.

The Witness: I certainly feel it was important and feel it is important now, that that information should be given to the Government.

(To Mr. Ingoldsby): Does that answer your question?

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

1708 Q. No, that does not answer my question. My question is, did you think it was important, while the war was going on, that the Government have the information you have just given here? A. Yes.

Q. You did think it was important? A. Yes.

Q. And you didn't give it to them at that time? A. I did not.

Q. Yet you were the only one who knew it, were you not? A. Absolutely not. It appeared in the newspapers at that time.

Q. What appeared in the newspapers?—the conversation that happened in your father's house in Nashville? That didn't appear in the newspapers, did it? A. What information, specifically, do you want me to give you?

Q. You have only testified concerning two things—one, the conversation in your father's house, and the other the statement made in Florida. My question is, did either of those things appear in the newspapers? A. Certainly the conversation in Florida did not, no.

Q. Well, did the conversation in your father's house appear in the newspapers? A. Not as conversation, no.

1709 Q. So that the fact is that the only time you considered this information important was at the time of this case? Isn't that correct? A. No; that is incorrect.

Q. Or the only time you considered it sufficiently important to give the information to the Government was at the time of this case? Isn't that correct? A. For me personally to give the information to the Government?

Q. For the Government to get the information. A. Will you restate that question in whole?

Q. My question is this: The only time you considered the information which you have just given, of sufficient importance for you to— A. Me personally?

Q. You personally—to turn the information over to the Government, was at the time of this case? A. That is correct.

Mr. Ingoldsby: That is all.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Baum:

Q. Mr. Houghland, I believe you testified in answer to Mr. Ingoldsby's questions that you told other members of your family about the conversation which you have 1710 testified to today. Is that correct? A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. And do I assume correctly that by "members of your family", you included your father? A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. And did you tell your father about these conversations at or about the time they took place?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object.

Mr. Burling: That is entirely admissible, if Your Honor please, because Mr. Baum is endeavoring to reply to an inference that this witness' information did not reach the FBI, and we are trying to establish that it did reach the FBI, and therefore it is relevant to rebut the inference which was created. We want to show he told his father and he knew his father told the FBI.

The Court: I think he can bring out, Mr. Ingoldsby, he felt it was his duty to do it, and if he didn't do it, if he has an explanation, he ought to be permitted to give it.

Mr. Ingoldsby: All right, Your Honor.

Mr. Baum: May I have the question re-read?

The Court: You asked if he told his father.

The Witness: Yes, I told him.

By Mr. Baum:

Q. And you know, do you not—

Mr. Ingoldsby: If Your Honor please—

Mr. Baum: Mr. Ingoldsby, I think you might learn 1711 a simple rule of courtesy.

The Court: Address your remarks to me, gentlemen.

Go ahead.

By Mr. Baum:

Q. Do you know whether your father was interviewed by the FBI during this past war? A. Oh, I know it positively, sir.

Q. Did he tell you he was interviewed by the FBI?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object, if Your Honor please.

Mr. Baum: I will withdraw it, Your Honor.

That is all.

The Court (to Mr. Ingoldsby): What is your objection?

Mr. Ingoldsby: The witness is telling what his father told him.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object on the ground of hearsay.

The Court: He testified in answer to your question that he personally didn't tell them. If his father told him that he told them then I think he is entitled to bring that out, that is, if you are drawing any inference from the fact that he didn't tell them.

I will permit it; go ahead.

Mr. Baum: I have no further questions, Your Honor.

The Court: Don't you want the answer?

Mr. Burling: I want the answer, Your Honor.
1712 The Court: All right; go ahead and ask him.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did your father tell you he passed this information on to the FBI? A. That is correct.

Mr. Burling: That is all.
The Court: Is there any recross examination?
Mr. Ingoldsby: No, Your Honor.
The Court: Well, January 3rd, gentlemen, at 10 o'clock —and my best wishes to all of you for the holidays.

(Accordingly, at 4:15 p.m., the trial was adjourned until Monday morning, January 3, 1949, at 10 o'clock a.m.)

1715 PROCEEDINGS

Mr. Gallagher: Your Honor, at this time I offer in evidence Plaintiff's Exhibits 105 through 159, inclusive, which are covered by a stipulation entered into between counsel for the defendant and the plaintiff, identified as Plaintiff's Exhibit 160, the said stipulation reading as follows:

"It is hereby stipulated by and between the parties that if Adolph Gaeng were called as a witness for the plaintiff, he would testify that the list of books and records attached hereto and made a part of this stipulation are books and records kept in the regular course of business of Frima, Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, A. G., and Fritz von Opel through the year 1942; and it was the regular course of business to keep such books and records.

"It is further stipulated that all of the books and records described in the attached list had been made available to the defendant.

"Dated: January 3, 1949."

It is signed by counsel for the plaintiff and the defendant.

I now offer those exhibits and Plaintiff's Exhibit 160."

(Accordingly, the exhibits referred to in Plaintiff's Exhibit 160 were received in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibits 105 through 159, inclusive.)

1716 (The stipulation just read was marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 160 and received in evidence.)

Mr. Gallagher: At this time I should like to recall Mr. von Opel for just a few minutes with respect to two of the exhibits which we left off at the time we were having trouble identifying them.

Thereupon, FRITZ VON OPEL was recalled as a witness and, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. To refresh your recollection, Mr. von Opel, before we recessed we had been discussing Plaintiff's Exhibits 84 and 85, pages of which Mr. Burling had shown you, which reflected certain figures with respect to a Consortium O. As I recollect, you had stated that those showed different financial transactions that had taken place at that time.

I now show you what is identified as Plaintiff's Exhibit 153, a book of the Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, and direct your attention to pages 70, 71, and 72, page 70 being headed, "Fritz von Opel," page 71 being headed "Consortium O," and page 72 being headed "Frima Trust Fund," and I will ask you if you can explain what those pages reflect. A.

They reflect corresponding pages of my own books or 1717 of Frima's books.

Q. Would it be correct to say, Mr. von Opel, that the first of the accounts was "Fritz von Opel?" A. Yes, sir; that is correct.

Q. And that that is the way you testified with respect to the balance sheet? A. Yes.

Q. Then it became "Consortium O?" A. Yes, prior to the formation of Frima, it was called Consortium O.

Q. Then it became— A. In 1934 it became Frima Trust Fund.

Q. Mr Burling also showed you two exhibits which were taken from a book now in evidence as Plaintiff's Exhibit 152, headed, "Inventorum Book," a book of the Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, commencing 1937, pages 24 to 29, which pertain to the years 1940 and 1941, and reflect the investment by Uebersee in Transdanubia.

Mr. Burling addressed your attention to a figure 102.360 in 1940. Can you state what that amount reflects? A. That is a total amounts shown on konto korrent—accounts receivable.

Q. As of the end of 1940? A. As of the end of 1940.

Q. Then, I direct your attention to page 29 of 1718 this exhibit, the figure 109.918. Is that konto korrent— A. Pardon me; correct the figure; 109.91850 Swiss francs.

Q. That is the figure as of the end of 1941? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the figure showing an increase in the investment of 7558.50 Swiss francs; is that correct? A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 154, a page headed, "Transdanubia Bauxite, A.G., konto korrent," and direct your attention to the last line, March 3, 1941, 10,000 pengos, or 7558.50. Can you state what that figure reflects? A. That reflects payment to the lawyer, Dr. Gyula Salushinscy, of 10,000 pengos or, in Swiss francs, 7,558.50 Swiss francs; and this payment was made on March 10, 1941.

Q. Does this translation reflect what is on that page, Mr. von Opel? A. Yes; it is the last entry on this page.

Mr. Gallagher: I will offer this translation.

(The translation referred to was marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 162 and received in evidence.)

Mr. Gallagher: I have no further questions of Mr. von Opel, Mr. Burling. Oh, I am sorry; I have one other. I did not see this.

1719

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. Mr. Burling also introduced in evidence several documents with respect to collateral which was posted on behalf of Uebersee with the Union Bank of Switzerland with respect to a loan made by Transdanubia from the Hungarian Escompte Wechslerbank. I now show you Plaintiff's Exhibit 161, which consists of a number of pages from an exhibit of the plaintiff here, a copy of which has been given to the defendant, and ask you whether or not—

Mr. Burling: If the Court please, I think there is some confusion. I gave it to you earlier. 161 is a single sheet. May I inquire if 161, which is one single exhibit—

Mr. Gallagher: One single exhibit for the purpose of ease in not putting all in.

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I ask you if you can state what those pages reflect, Mr. von Opel. A. They reflect guaranty put up by Uebersee Finanz-Korporation through the Adler Bank with another Swiss bank for the purpose of a loan which Transdanubia had obtained from the Hungarian bank.

Q. Will you state when the guaranty first commenced? A. The guaranty was first given on October 7, 1939.

Q. In what amount? A. It was in amount of 1720 5,000 Swiss francs.

Q. Was that amount increased? A. This amount was then increased to 20,000 Swiss francs.

Q. On what date? A. On December 23, 1939; and it was then increased to 32,000 francs and remained at this figure on April 16, 1940.

Q. Now, I notice there are several other pages included in this exhibit, Mr. von Opel. Would you explain what the other pages reflect? A. This guaranty had to be renewed quarterly, and we had to pay quarterly commission on renewal of this guaranty.

Q. Was this a transaction by Uebersee with the Swiss bank? A. With the Swiss bank, yes.

Q. If I understand you correctly, a commission was paid by you to the Swiss bank? A. To the Swiss bank to renew its guaranty.

Q. As evidenced from the exhibits which the defendant has heretofore introduced, that collateral was subsequently returned on November 17, 1942; is that correct? A. Yes, that is correct.

Mr. Gallagher: That is all.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Burling:

1721 Q. You never saw any of these books, did you, until you saw them in your lawyer's office in Washington? A. I didn't see those slips, but I gave the orders.

Q. I say, you didn't see the books? A. Not the books, no.

Q. So what you have testified to it what you were told by your lawyers and Professor Kaufman about the books; is that right? A. Yes.

Q. You don't have any personal knowledge about this at all? A. They reflect my orders.

Q. You don't have any personal knowledge about what is in the books, do you? A. I have personal knowledge that I gave orders, and apparently it had to be in the books.

Mr. Burling: All right. Thank you.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gallagher:

Q. I understand by that, Mr. von Opel, that you gave orders with respect to the giving of the collateral originally and the increases in it? A. Yes. The increase—I think the last was April, if I remember correctly, April, 1940.

Mr. Gallagher: That is all.

1722 (The witness left the stand.)

EVIDENCE ON BEHALF OF THE DEFENDANT

Thereupon—

JOHN MASON HOUGHLAND was called as a witness and, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Please state your name. A. John Mason Houghland.

Q. Where were you born? A. I was born in Spencer County, Indiana.

Q. Will you state briefly what your education has been?

A. I am a graduate of the University of Chicago and was educated as a geologist.

Q. What has your business been since you were graduated from the University of Chicago? A. I have been in the oil business.

Q Directing your attention to the year 1928, did you found any business in that year? A. I founded the Spur Distributing Company, yes.

Q. Will you state briefly what Spur Distributing Company was? A. I had conceived the idea that I 1734 might improve the system of retail marketing which had been in effect and was in effect throughout the United States.

Q. Retailing marketing of what? A. Of gasoline and oil.

Q. Filling stations? A. Filling stations, yes, sir.

Q. What was the idea that you had? A. My idea was that by putting large storage tanks in the filling stations themselves, I might by-pass bulk stations, or the wholesale activity and expense, and reduce the handling cost of the material.

Q. Did the word "Spur" mean anything in your business? A. It means a railroad spur. I mean the stations were located on railroad spurs, so I could ship in to those stations in tank cars.

Q. Are you presently associated with the Spur Distributing Corporation? A. I am, yes, sir.

Q In what capacity? A. As president and general manager.

Q. How many stations does Spur have today? A. 254.

Q. Roughly speaking, where are they located? A. They are located east of the Mississippi River, except a few stations: One station in Missouri and a few sta-
1735 tions in Arkansas; and there are no stations in the north, in New England or Michigan and Minnesota, and that area.

Q. Have you been consistently, throughout the period from 1928 to date, president of the board? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, directing your attention to the year 1930, did you have any problem of financing in that year? A. I did, yes.

Q. Will you state briefly what took place? A. Well, I felt that we had pretty well established—I started this Spur with very small capital, and we had pretty well established that the basic principle—new principle—of marketing was a sound one and that by getting more capital we could expand it, and so I went to New York and found a firm by the name of Burden Cole & Company, who were investment bankers, and they undertook an underwriting of the stock to raise more money for this expansion.

Q. Was a new issue of stock arranged at this time? A. Yes.

Q Was there any special provision or unusual arrangement made in connection with the shares? A. Yes, there was. With each share there were warrants, and these warrants stepped up in price according to the time interval that had elapsed before they were exercised. That 1736 was in order to enable investors to have an opportunity to improve their holdings after they were satisfied that it was a profitable investment.

Q. Now, prior to the floating of this stock in 1930, who had control of the corporation? A. I did—that is, I together with one relative and one close friend.

Q. In other words, a group of your friends? A. That is right.

Q. At the time this stock was issued, did you make any arrangements or retain any rights with respect to control? A. We did. We made arrangements so that by the exercise of the warrants available to us, we could remain in control in case these other warrants were exercised.

Q. That is, you kept warrants yourself? A. That is right; kept enough warrants to remain in control if we exercised them.

Q. Did there come a time when you learned that a large block of Spur stock had come into the hands of foreign investors? A. Yes, sir.

Q When was that? When did you learn that? A. Well, when I learned that it was foreign investors was in July of 1932.

Q. Will you state how you learned that a large block of the Spur stock had been acquired by foreign investors? A. I received a letter from Theodore Hoffacker.

1737 Q. What did he say to you in that letter? A. He announced that he represented a group which had obtained control of our company; and then his statement was confirmed by the transfer agent in New York in a telephone call.

Q. By the way, have you at my request looked for this letter in your files? A. I have.

Q. Were you able to find it? A. I was unable to find it.

Q. Did Mr. Hoffacker request anything of you? A. He requested that a directors' meeting be called at once.

Q. Did he state the place at which he wished the meeting to be called? A. He said he wished it to be called in New York.

Q. Did you meet anywhere in respect to this request? A. I went to New York, yes, sir.

Q. With whom did you go? A. I went with Henry Hines, vice president of the company.

Q. Did you go with anybody else? A. I met there Joseph B. Thomas, who had been associated with me in the company.

Q. Where in New York did you meet? A. We 1738 met at the office of our company attorney, whose name was Allan Fox. His office was on Trinity Place.

Q. Did you meet Mr. Hoffacker there? A. Yes, he came to the meeting.

Q. At that time did you have a conversation with Mr. Hoffacker about the Spur Distributing Company? A. I did, yes, immediately—either at the end of the meeting or immediately thereafter; I am not sure which time.

Q. Will you state in substance what that conversation was?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I think I will have to object to this, Your Honor.

Mr. Burling: May I ask the ground of objection, if Your Honor please?

Mr. Ingoldsby: It sounds to me like it is hearsay.

Mr. Burling: Fritz von Opel has testified that he made Hoffacker agent of the plaintiff corporation. He was managing agent of it and manager its investments Anything said by Hoffacker is an admission by the plaintiff corporation through its agent.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I do not recall that that was the testimony.

Mr. Burling: Could I have a moment to look at the record, Your Honor?

The Court: I will take the testimony subject to 1739 its being connected up later. You can move to strike it if it is not connected.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you state what Mr. Hoffacker said to you? A. I asked him whom he represented, and he said, "I represent the von Opel family."

I said, "Who are the von Opel family."

He said, "They are the Fords of Germany, and they are people of immense wealth and can be very useful to you and to the Spur Company."

That is the general substance of it.

Q. Did Hoffacker say anything to you as to your future relationship to Spur? A. Yes. He said that he wanted me to remain in the management of Spur.

Q. Did he say anything about directors? A. Yes. He asked that two new directors be appointed, and they were appointed on that occasion.

Q. Who were they? A. They were Theodore Hoffacker and the Baron Werner C. von Kle..m.

Q. Baron von Klemm? A. Baron von Klemm, yes.

Q. When did you first hear the name Uebersee
1740 Finanz-Korporation? A. I cannot recall the exact time I heard the name, but it was at some time later, and the only definite knowledge I have of that time was some time in November of the following year.

Q. Did Hoffacker at any time tell you anything about Uebersee Finanz-Korporation? A. I can't recall his having said anything about Uebersee. He may have, but I can't recall it.

Q. Now, after Hoffacker told you that the von Opel family had acquired control of Spur, did you have any negotiations with anyone concerning the warrants which you had retained yourself? A. Yes.

Q. Will you state what those negotiations were and with whom they were carried on? A. Well, they were carried on with Hoffacker, and we had a voting trust on the original stock, which he wanted dissolved, and he wanted me to surrender my rights on these stock warrants, and I very naturally didn't want to do so.

There was a good deal of negotiation that went on through this period, and that finally resulted in contractual relations later.

Q. The contractual relations—

Mr. Ingoldsby: May it be made clear that my objection to all the testimony relating to Mr. Hoffacker stands 1741 on the same ground on which it was previously made?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, having in mind Your Honor's remark that he did not wish to leave rulings open, may I point to page 1021 of the record:

"Question: And did you arrange that the proceeds of the Opel shares were to be invested and managed by Hoffacker & Company?

"Answer: Yes, I had a contract with him of this kind. I don't remember the details. I think he operated this account."

This is Mr. von Opel testifying.

"Question: And he bought and sold securities for Uebersee?

"Answer: Yes.

"Question: In 1932 and 1933? Right?

"Answer: Yes, it is possible.

"Question: And in the spring of 1932 you authorized Hoffacker to acquire the majority interest in an American corporation called Spur Distributing Corporation, didn't you?

"Answer: In the spring of 1932?

"Question: Yes; wasn't that when it took place?

"Answer: Yes, it is possible.

"Question: I am not asking you whether it is possible, I am asking you if that is not when it happened.

1742 "Answer: I think prior to this time I had already acquired about five or ten thousand shares. And later on I acquired the majority. That is correct."

Then, skipping to the bottom of the page:

"Question: And did you then cause Uebersee to give Hoffacker proxies so he could vote the Spur stock?

"Answer: Yes."

Mr. Ingoldsby: Then, I would say that undoubtedly with respect to the authority given to Mr. Hoffacker, Mr. von Opel would be bound by those statements provided they commenced in the spring of 1932. As I understand it, the first date—

Mr. Burling: The witness is now testifying to what took place in November, 1932, as I understand it.

Mr. Ingoldsby: All right.

The Court: All right. Then I will definitely rule it in evidence.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. What was the outcome of the negotiations between you, Uebersee, and Spur with relation to your warrants? A. Well, the outcome was that I gave up my warrants and signed a contract with Uebersee which gave me a call on their Spur stock in the event that they should ever sell it, a call at the price—a 30-day call at the price that they decided to sell it.

1743 Q. That is to say, if Uebersee wished to sell and had an offer from a third party, they must have offered it to you, first, at that price, and you had 30 days in which to take up the offer? A. Correct.

Q. Did you receive anything else besides this contract? A. Yes. I then entered into—Upon their arrangement, as their stockholder, I entered into a management contract with a profit participation with the Spur Company, and in consideration of my surrender of my warrants, the money for which was not needed at that time, an arrangement was made whereby I was to receive over a period of years, on an additional profit participation basis, after certain payments had been made to the stockholders, a sum of money which would total $200,000 when it was paid—when it was finally paid or accumulated.

Q. Now, at the time you entered into this contract, had you ever seen Mr. Fritz von Opel? A. No.

Q. You recognize him here in court, do you? A. Yes.

Q. When and where did you see him for the first time? A. The first time I saw him was in the late summer of 1934 in Paris.

Q. Will you state how you happened to be in 1744 Paris? A. I was in Paris with Mrs. Houghland on a tour.

Q. A pleasure trip? A. A pleasure trip.

Q. How did it come to pass that you saw Mr. von Opel there? A. Mr. Hoffacker arranged for me to meet Mr. von Opel.

Q. Will you describe your meeting with Mr von Opel in Paris? A. Were staying at the Prince of Wales Hotel. Mr. von Opel came there and took us out to some very famous restaurant for dinner and then took us to a musical show called the Follies that night.

Q. Was that the Follies Bergere? A. I think so.

Q. What business discussion did you have with Mr. von Opel on this occasion? A. Well, there wasn't very much business discussed. I don't recall any specific business conversation.

Q. What did you discuss? A. Well, we discussed sport, I think, largely. Mr. von Opel told me some very interesting, diverting stories of his experiences as a balloon racer, motorboat racer, bicycle racer, and so forth. That general social conversation was the main occupation.

1745 Q. After the evening at the Follies Bergere did you see Mr. von Opel again during this trip to Europe? A. No.

Q. When did you see him next? A. I think it was the following year.

Q. 1935? A. Yes.

Q. And where did this meeting take place? A. It took place at my home, near Nashville.

Q. That is at Brentwood, Tennessee? A. Yes.

Q. Was anyone with Mr. von Opel? A. Mr. Hoffacker was.

Q. Did Mr. von Opel tell you where he had just been? A. Yes. Mr. Hoffacker had already wired me. He was enroute from Texas to New York.

Q. Do you remember how Mr. von Opel came from Texas to Nashville? A. I remember it very vividly, because—

Q. What is it that fixes it in your mind? A. Well, he was driving a Mercedes car. I didn't remember having seen a Mercedes before that—quite a brilliant-colored car—and it was fixed in my mind because Mr. von Opel told us of some very remarkable speed that he had made on the trip.

1746 Q. How long did Mr. von Opel stay with you in Brentwood? A. I am not sure whether he spent the night or did not. In any event, it was a very short time; not over a night.

Q. Did he visit the office of Spur in Nashville? A. I don't recall his visiting the office of Spur.

Q. At any rate, you did not have any particular business discussion with him? A. I had some discussion with him about something that might be related to business—was related to business. That was a hose nozzle—a gas hose nozzle.

Q. Will you state what the conversation was about a hose nozzle? A. Well, we were having a lot of difficulty in the gasoline business by gasoline overflowing when it was put in tanks, and there was a lot of gasoline lost on that account; and in the course of our conversation with Mr. von Opel, I found out that he was very active in an inventive capacity and had a considerable setup in Berlin, I believe, to develop different inventions; and I explained to him this problem; and he said that it would be an easy one to solve, and he liked the idea very much, and thought it would be good—and proved to have been after it became very popular four or five years later—and that he would work on it.

1747 Q. After this visit did you receive any message from him concerning the hose nozzle problem? A. Yes, I did.

Mr. Burling: Mark this the next defendant's exhibit number.

(Telegram was marked Defendant's Exhibit 110 for identification.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q I show you Defendant's Exhibit 110 and ask you if that is the telegram which you received from Fritz von Opel (handing a document to the witness). A. Yes, sir, it is.

Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence.
Mr. Ingoldsby: No objection.
What is the number on that?
The Deputy Clerk: 110.

(Defendant's Exhibit 110 for identification was received in evidence.)

Mr. Burling: May I hand it to Your Honor?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, Mr. Houghland, when did you next see Mr. Fritz von Opel, if you can recall? A. If I may refer to my notes on it.

Mr. Ingoldsby: What are the notes on? Maybe we can agree. Do you mind telling me what the notes are of?
1748 Mr. Burling: It is a chronology, I believe.
Mr. Ingoldsby: That is perfectly all right.

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Have you gone through your files at my request and made notes as to when various meetings took place? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When, according to your present best recollection, did you next see Fritz von Opel? A. I next saw him in Montreal, in Canada, in 1936.

Q. Can you fix the approximate date of this meeting in Montreal? A. I think it was immediately before the 15th of June.

Q. Where did you meet Mr. von Opel in Montreal? A. At the Windsor Hotel.

Q. And who else was present? A. Mr. Hoffacker.

Q. Was anyone else present? A. I believe there were some other people there, but I did not know them.

Q. What discussion did you have with Mr. von Opel at that time? A. I can't recall any specific discussion at that time. I recall some explanation of our meeting there.

Q. What did Mr. von Opel say to you about what he was doing in Montreal? A. Well, he said that a 1749 lawsuit had been filed against him in the United states and that he was in Montreal in order to escape service on this suit, and that is why they had asked me to come to Montreal.

Q. How long did you stay there? A. Part of a day and night.

Q. And then you went back to Nashville? A. Yes.

Q. Did you receive a letter from Mr. von Opel later in that year? A. Yes, I did.

Mr. Burling: Mark that, please.

(Letter dated April 14, 1936, was marked Defendant's Exhibit 111 for identification.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 111 and ask you if that is the letter which you received from Fritz von Opel in 1936 (handing a document to the witness). A. Yes, it is

Q. Now, I address your attention to the last paragraph, the words:

"The reason I write you about this is 1. because I think it may be of some interest to you, 2. because I meditate about buying these patents for a German factory we control," and I ask you if Fritz von Opel ever told you what factory he had in mind or who the word antecedent of the pronoun "we" is? A. No, I don't recall any discussion on that.

1750

Mr. Burling: I offer 111 in evidence.

(Defendant's Exhibit 111 for identification was offered in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you see Fritz von Opel in the year 1936? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Where and at what time? A. He came again to Nashville and stayed at my house, and I think it was in December.

Q. What business discussion did you have at that time? A. I can't recall any specific discussion.

Q. In the year 1937 did you leave the United States? A. I did.

Q. Where did you go? A. I went to Europe.

Q. Was it a pleasure trip or business trip? A. Pleasure trip.

Q. You went with your wife? A. And family, yes.

Q. On that occasion did you receive any communication from Fritz von Opel? I will show you Defendant's Exhibit

59 and ask you if that is the cable which you re-
1751 ceived from Fritz von Opel (handing a document to the witness). A. Yes, that is.

Q. And you handed it to me at my request, is that correct? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: Your Honor, this reads, addressed to Mason Houghland, American Express, London.

"Hope to arrange seeing you somewhere on your way back. Please mail me probable route you take. Regards. (Signed) Fritz von Opel, Kampen Sylt."

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 60 and ask you if that is also a wire which you received from Fritz von Opel (handing a document to the witness). A. Yes, it is.

Mr. Burling: And that reads:

"Would your plans permit seeing me in or near Hamburg any date after August 25. Beaucoup de plaisir. Regards. Opel, Zurich. Dolder Hotel."

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 61 and ask you if that is a letter which you received from Fritz von Opel (handing a document to the witness). A. Yes, it is.

Q. That also has to do with your meeting in 1752 Europe? A. Yes.

Q. And I show you Defendant's 62 and ask you if that is a wire which you received from him (handing a document to the witness). A. Yes, it is.

Mr. Burling: And this reads:

"Pleased meeting you morning September. Vierzehn Hotel, Vier Jahreszeiten, Hamburg. Frankenberg not present in Zurich. Regards, Opel."

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Had you met a man named Frankenberg at this time? A. I had not, sir.

Q. What did you understand by that when you received the message, "Frankenberg not present in Zurich"? A. Well, I understood that for some reason I was to meet Frankenberg. I can't recall the exact thing. This was an explanation that I could not see him in Switzerland, where I was going and did go.

Q. Did you meet Fritz von Opel in Hamburg in 1937? A. I did, yes, sir.

Q. Where? A. I met him at a hotel. I can't recall the name of the hotel.

Q. Did you have a discussion with him at that time? A. I did, yes.

1753 Q. Will you state what the discussion was? A. He discussed with me the synthetic tire and its development, which was something new in my knowledge, and he told me that he was interested in the development of synthetic tires.

Q. Did he say something further about it, or what the nature of his interest was? A. He did not tell me anything as to the nature of his interest, but he discussed it quite a lot, and I was interested in it, I mean as a subject, and he asked me if I thought synthetic tires could be sold in America and if we could sell them through the Spur filling stations.

Q. Did he take you anywhere in Hamburg? A. Yes. He took me to some automotive place which I judged to be a garage.

Q. Can you recall anything about where the place was? A. Yes. I can recall that it faced on a very small park; that's all. I could not recall any street.

Q. And what did he say to you about why he wanted you to go to this place? A. He wanted to show me synthetic tires that were being used.

Q. Were they mounted on a vehicle? A. Yes; they were mounted on a truck.

Q. What did you say to him about synthetic rub-
1754 ber tires? A. Well, I told him, in response to his inquiry as to whether or not they could be profitably sold in America—I told him that America was having a deluge of natural rubber tires, and they seemed to be below the cost of production. It wasn't very profitable for anybody; and I doubted, unless these could be sold at an astoundingly low figure and would be productive of unusual results, that it would be profitable.

Q. Did you have any further discussion with him about business? A. I am sure I must have, but I can't recall any particular discussion. I mean, there must have been some question as to how Spur was getting along, and so forth.

Q. Did you leave von Opel in Hamburg or did you go somewhere else with him? A. I left him in Hamburg.

Q. Did he tell you where he was going next? A. Yes; he was going from there on a trip through Berlin and Wiesbaden and Budapest.

Q. Now, coming to another subject, will you state whether or not you ever developed an idea relating to subsidiary corporations which should be formed by Spur? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Will you state what that idea was and when 1755 you developed it? A. Well, I developed the idea probably around the latter part of 1934 and put it into execution in 1935. The idea was to use a much simpler outlay, a much lower cost operation, with must simpler buildings and equipment, and go into small towns with the spur type of station, but on a different basis and with separate corporations, wholly owned corporations.

Q. Did Spur set up a wholly owned subsidiary? A. Yes.

Q. What is the name of that? A. Winn Oil Company.

Q. When was that set up? A. In 1935.

Q. Now, did you ever have a discussion with Fritz von Opel concerning the idea of setting up a series of small subsidiaries? A. Yes.

Q. When did that take place? A. It took place in October, 1937.

Q. Where? A. In New York.

Q. Now, will you state first where in New York in October, 1937, you first met Fritz von Opel? A. At the hotel where I was staying.

1756 Q. What is that hotel? A. Barclay.

Q. And Fritz von Opel came to your hotel, did he? A. Yes.

Q. Did you go anywhere then? A. Yes.

Q. With him? A. Yes.

Q. How? On foot, in a taxi, or how? A. On foot.

Q. While you were walking with Fritz von Opel did you have any discussion with him? A. Yes.

Q. Will you state what the discussion was? A. We discussed the results that we had gotten from the Winn Oil Corporation, and I discussed with him the possibility of our starting more companies of the kind. I hoped to start as many as ten companies, which would require a considerable amount of money. Since we had probably an investment in the original company that was small—it was only $25,000—a number of them would have cost a great deal, and I discussed that general situation with him.

1757 Q. Did he say anything to you as to where you were going in this walk? A. Yes. He had before we started.

Q. What did he say to you? A. He said that Dr. Frankenberg was in this country and that he wanted me to meet him and to present the proposal to Dr. Frankenberg, and at that time he told me very clearly who Dr. Frankenberg was.

Q. What did he say to you as to who Dr. Frankenberg was? A. He said that Dr. Frankenberg was his father's agent.

Q. Did he say anything to you as to why he wanted you to meet Frankenberg? A. Yes. He said that Dr. Frankenberg would have to pass on anything of this magnitude and that I would have to present it to Dr. Frankenberg.

Q. Where did you go? Where was the end of your walk? A. The Plaza Hotel.

Q. In New York? A. In New York, yes.

Q. When you got to the Plaza what did Fritz von Opel do? A. He called Dr. Frankenberg's room and asked Dr. Frankenberg to come down and meet us.

1758 Q. And did he do so? A. Yes.

Q. That was the first time you had met Dr. Frankenberg? A. Yes.

Q. Where did you go then? A. We went into a lounge in the front part of the hotel and sat there and talked.

Q. And what was the conversation between you and Frankenberg and von Opel? A. It largely consisted of my outlining the proposal I had in mind about the subsidiary companies and of interrogation on the part of Dr. Frankenberg as to this plan.

Q. And what did Dr. Frankenberg say about the plan? A. Dr. Frankenberg asked a number of very intelligent questions about it, went into it rather thoroughly, and finally reached the conclusion that he did not think it advisable to enter into it at this time.

Q. What did he say to you? Do you remember his words? A. I don't remember his exact words, no. He said, "I don't think it is advisable to undertake it at this time."

Q. And while you were with Frankenberg did Fritz von Opel say anything? A. I am sure he did, yes. The general conversation was an exposition of the plan by me and answering questions by Dr. Frankenberg.

1759 Q. In other words, he just sat by; you were interrogated by Frankenberg; is that correct? A. That is right.

Q. Did you leave alone or did you leave with Fritz von Opel? A. I left with Fritz von Opel.

Q. Again, did you go on foot or were you in a taxi? A. We walked.

Q. Did you have any conversation after you left the Plaza Hotel? A. I did.

Q. Will you state what that conversation was? A.

Well, he said he was sorry that Dr. Frankenberg did not approve the idea; that he himself did approve the idea and he thought it was a wise one, which, incidentally, it certainly turned out to be, but that Dr. Frankenberg was his father's financial representative; that there was nothing that could be done upon a decision of this sort after Dr. Frankenberg did not approve.

Q. Did he say as to whether he, Fritz von Opel, would set aside Frankenberg's opinion? A. There was no comment of that kind.

Q. When did you next see Fritz von Opel? A. When did I next see him? Let me refresh—It was the following year.

1760 Q. That is 1938? A. Yes.

Q. And where did the meeting take place? A. It took place in Nashville, at my house.

Q. Can you fix the approximate time—that is, the month? A. I am not too sure of it, but I think it was around October.

Q. How long did Fritz von Opel remain with you near Nashville on this occasion? A. On this occasion for several days.

Q. Was he working in the Spur offices during the day? A. No.

Q. He was just staying with you as a social visit; is that correct? A. That is right.

Q. Did you have any conversation concerning business or finances on this occasion? A. I am sure we must have had some. I am sure I must have answered some inquiries. There was no detailed conversation about finances.

Q. Did you have any conversation concerning the Opel Motor Works on this occasion? A. Yes. On this occasion he told me—the first time that I had heard the story—that is, from him—of the sale of the Opel Motor 1761 Works stock to General Motors.

Q. Did he say anything else about this topic? A. Yes; he said a good deal about it.

Q. Will you tell us what you can recall of that, please?

A. Well, I don't recall a great deal about it. I do recall the substance of the conversation. He told me briefly that he got into this question of taxes and of tax avoidance as related to both himself and to me.

Q. Did he say anything about the sale of the Opel Works in relation to taxes? A. Yes. He said that under the method of the sale, they had been able to avoid a great deal of tax.

Q. Did he say anything about how Uebersee Finanz-Korporation was held at this time? A. Yes. He told me that as part of the tax avoidance—he told me that they had sold the shares of Uebersee Finanz-Korporation to some Swiss nationals.

Q. Did he say why they had done this? A. Yes; he said to avoid some tax.

Q. Did he tell you who the Swiss nationals were? A. I asked him who the Swiss nationals were, and he laughed and said, I don't know them.

Q. Did he say anything about how the certificates of Uebersee were held at that time? A. He said that they were endorsed in blank and returned to the posses-1762 sion of the Opels.

Q. Did he discuss with you any problem involving your own personal tax situation? A. Yes, he did.

Q. Will you state what that conversation was? A. Well, he pointed out to me that I was paying quite a lot higher income tax than he was as a foreigner and that I might have formed a foreign holding company and relieved myself of a lot of taxation, but that a recent regulation, or something of the sort, made that a more doubtful proposition, but that by taking Swiss citizenship and then using a holding company, I could have a much lower tax rate.

Q. What did you say to him about that? A. Well, I did not know whether he was in jest or in earnest, and I was flabbergasted about citizenship. I didn't know anything about it, so I guess that was just laughed off.

Q. Now, that was the fall of 1938.

Coming now to 1939, did you have any further communication in that year with Fritz von Opel? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Will you state what that was, please. A. Well, the communications that I recall were some wires, and I believe a letter, relating to my meeting him some place in Europe.

Q. Where were you at the time? A. In the United 1763 States.

Q. But you planned to go to Europe in the summer of 1939? A. I planned to go to England and that I might go to Europe.

Q. At any rate, you planned to cross the Atlantic? A. Yes.

Q. Now, I show you Defendant's Exhibit 63, and ask you if that is a wire which you sent to Fritz von Opel (handing a document to the witness). A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor pleases, this reads, addressed to Opel, Chalet Kulm, St. Moritz, Switzerland:

"Coming abroad. When can I meet you for one or two days, preferably during first half of August?

(Signed) Houghland."

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 64 and ask you if that is a reply which you received from Opel (handing a document to the witness). A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Burling: And that reads:

"Would meet you any time Hamburg, but would like both of you to come to our estate near Cologne after August 18. Regards, Opel. Kampen Sylt."

1764 By Mr. Burling:

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 65 and ask you if that is a wire which you sent to Fritz von Opel (handing a document to the witness). A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Burling: This reads:

"Opel, Kampen Sylt. Delighted to accept invitation. Suggest about August 25 if convenient to you. Address American Express, London."

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Now, did you come to London in the month of August, 1939? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you staying? A. At the Carlton Hotel.

Q. Will you state whether or not you received any message from Fritz von Opel? A. Yes, I did.

Q. How was that? A. I received a telephone call from him.

Q. Where did he say he was? A. The call was from or through Cologne.

Q. Through Cologne? A. Cologne is the name I got.

Q. And were you in London? A. Yes, sir

1765 Q. Will you state what the conversation was?

A. Well, he was renewing his invitation for Mrs. Hougland and myself to come to their estate in Germany and visit.

Q. Will you state what you said and what he said on the telephone on this occasion? A. Well, England was under great tensity at the time and war looked imminent, and I was very much alarmed, and I told him that I was and that I felt there was going to be a war and that I did not think it was advisable for me to come.

Q. What did he say in reply to that? A. And he said, "There isn't going to be much of a war. The English won't fight. All we are going to do is take off a little slice of Poland."

Q. You did not understand that Liechtenstein was going to declare war on Poland, did you? A. No, sir.

Q. Did he say anything else on this occasion? A. He continued to urge me to come into Germany.

Q. What did you say to him as a result? What was the outcome of this particular conversation? A. I told him that I did not feel that it would be safe to make the trip, but that I would call him back the next day.

1766 Q. And did you call him the next day? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state what the conversation was on this occasion? A. Well, upon the next day I told him that I definitely made up my mind that it would not be wise to make the trip.

And he said to me, "Well, I think you are wrong. I think you ought to make the trip. I would like very much for you to meet my father, and for my father to meet you." He said, "After all, you work for my father and it is rather important that you know him."

And I said that, "I appreciate that and would like very much to meet him," but I was afraid to cross the channel.

Q. And did you cross the channel? A. No, sir.

Q. What did you do? A. I scurried around and got me a boat home within a day or two and came to America.

Q. Do you remember the name of the boat? A. Yes, sir, The Normandie.

Q. That was the last time The Normandie crossed the Atlantic; is that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember the date? A. I could not fix the date absolutely, except that it was the latter part of August, and I remember that after we got home it was 1767 only a day or two before war was declared.

Q. When did you next hear form Fritz von Opel? A. I think it was in September of that year.

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 105 and ask you if that is a wire which you received from him (handing a document to the witness)? A. Yes, sir, that is.

Mr. Burling: Your Honor, this is a cable reading:

"Mason Houghland, care of Spur Distributing Company. Overseas investors intend selling participation to meet other obligations what I personally deeply regret. Please communicate Ulrich, Shreveport, who is informed accordingly. Intend to sail soon. Regards, Fritz. Doldegrand, Zurich."

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you take any action after you received this wire? A. Yes, sir. A few days thereafter, two or three days thereafter, I sent cables to Adler and Company, Dr. Frankenberg and Mr. Gaeng, and to Uebersee, calling to their attention the contract I had which gave me a call on the stock.

Q. And I show you now Defendant's Exhibit 112 and ask you if that is a copy of the wire which you sent (handing a document to the witness). A. Yes, sir.

1768 Mr. Burling: I offer it in evidence.

(Defendant's Exhibit 112 for identification was offered in evidence.)

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Did you also make any telephone call in connection with this message in September, 1939? A. Yes, sir.

Q. To whom did you call and where was the call placed? A. I called Fritz von Opel in Zurich, Switzerland.

Q. From where? A. From Nashville.

Q. Have you ever before or since made a transatlantic telephone call? A. No, sir.

Q. So it is clearly fixed in your mind; is that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state what the conversation was on the telephone? A. I told Fritz that I was greatly surprised that they were going to sell the Spur stock, that I thought that he regarded it very highly and that its future was bright, and he told me that he did so regard it highly, but that his father had determined to have the stock sold and had issued orders to Dr. Frankenberg to sell it, and although it was greatly against his wishes, there was nothing he 1769 could do about it.

Q. That is, he, Fritz? A. That is right.

Q. Did you have any further talk with him on the phone? A. Yes, sir. I asked him to see if he could get me an option on the stock for a reasonable price and for a reasonable length of time which might enable me to attempt to place the stock in hands that would be friendly to me.

Q. And what did he say he would do about that request? A. He said that he would try very urgently to do it and would promptly communicate with me.

Q. Did he say he would talk with anybody about your request? A. Yes.

Q. With whom? A. He said he would talk with Dr. Frankenberg and he would talk to his father.

Q. And did you receive a message thereafter from Fritz von Opel regarding this offer? A. No. I received a communication through Mr. Ulrich from him.

Q. What was the substance of that? A. The substance was that they could not arrange the option?

Q. Now, did the Opels ever sell the Spur stock?

1770 A. No, sir.

Q. Were you advised as to why they changed their minds? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, when did you next see Fritz von Opel in person? A. In the following year, 1940.

Q. What season of the year, if you recall? A. Early summer.

Q. And where was it? A. At my house.

Q. At Brentwood? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did von Opel stay with you on this occasion? A. He stayed several days.

Q. Did you have any discussions with him at this time? A. Yes, sir; a number of them.

Q. Did you have any discussion with him when your son, Calvin Houghland, was present? A. Only part of one.

Q. Were you present here when Calvin Hougland testified? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall the conversation which he testified to which he said took place in your upstairs sitting room?

A. I recall the commencement of it. I was very tired
1771 and, as I recall it, went to sleep.

Q. Now, will you state what you can recall of your discussions with Fritz von Opel in the spring of 1940 at Brentwood, Tennessee? A. Yes. I recall very vividly his quite thrilling experience—the recital of his thrilling experience in being captured by the British at Gibraltar.

Q. Will you state what he said about that experience? A. Well, he said that the British took him off this ship and put him in a prison cell in the fortress at Gibraltar and that it looked like it was going to be a very difficult time for him, but that he succeeded in fooling them about his Liechtensteinean passport; and I remember very clearly he said, "You know how stupid the British are," and he said, "I made an acquaintance with a young English guard officer who liked to play chess, and we played chess every evening, and I finally convinced him that I should be released, that I was a fugitive from the Nazi system, and anti-German, and that the English did release me."

Q. Did he say anything about a passport? A. Yes, sir. I just mentioned that. He said that he fooled the English with the Liechtensteinean passport.

Q. Did he say how he had acquired this passport? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say about that? A. He said that 1772 he bought it for the equivalent of ten thousand American dollars.

Q. During the course of this visit did you have any particular discussion concerning the Spur business? A. I am sure that he asked he how the Spur was doing, but I don't recall any—there was no detailed examination of anything about that.

Q. He did not give you any orders? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, later on in the summer of 1940 did you see him again anywhere? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was that? A. I saw him on Nantucket Island, where he was in residence at the time.

Q. How did you happen to be there? A. Our daughter was visiting a schoolmate on Martha's Vineyard, and her mother and I went up to Martha's Vineyard for a few days, and Fritz had written me a postal card telling me he was on Nantucket, asking me to come over, and I went over and paid a social visit to him on Nantucket.

Q. Did you have any business discussion with him on this occasion? A. I am sure there must have been some inquiry, but there was no serious business discussion.

1773 Q. He did not give any orders concerning Spur at this time? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, did you thereafter see him anywhere? A. Yes. I think that it was along about the month of December that he and his wife came to our house and visited.

Q. This is December 1940? A. Yes.

Q. Did you have any business discussion with him at this time? A. I can't recall any.

Q. When did you see him for the last time before you saw him here in court? A. I think it was in New York in probably July or August in 1941.

Q. Now, before that did you see him in Georgia? A. Yes, sir; I saw him in Savannah, Georgia.

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 106 and ask you if this is a copy of a letter which you wrote to Fritz von Opel (handing a document to the witness). A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Defendant's Exhibit 107 and ask you if that is a note which you received from Fritz von Opel in Savannah, Georgia (handing a document to the witness).

A. Yes, sir.

1774 Q. Now, did you have a conversation with Fritz von Opel in Savannah? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the De Soto Hotel; is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state what the conversation was? A. I endeavored to persuade Fritz to sell his Spur stock, because I felt that if we did go to war with Germany, which might happen, that it would be very detrimental to the Spur Company to have a German ownership, and I endeavored to convince Fritz that the thing to do was to sell or cause to be sold this Uebersee's stock.

Q. Can you remember any more about what you said about that topic? A. I mean Spur stock held by Uebersee.

Q. Yes. A. Yes. I told him that after the last war—or during the last war—that a great many German holdings in America were seized and confiscated, and that if we went to war this one would be, doubtless, and it certainly seemed to me to be wise to sell it, and he explained to me in great detail how he had safeguarded the stock.

Q. And what did he say about that? A. He said, "We Germans and my father and I have all thought this out, of American holdings," and he said if, in the unlikely 1775 event that America should go to war, these holdings would be found in the hands of Swiss nationals.

And I said, "Well, Fritz, it is perfectly possible that Switzerland might get involved in the war."

And he said, "It is improbable, but if it should come to happen, they will be found in the holdings of a holding company in a neutral Latin-American country."

Q. Did he mention the Sociedad Commercial Montefranco? A. No, sir.

Q. He did not specify what Latin-American holding company he was talking about? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you refer to the fact that in 1939 it had been proposed to sell the Spur shares held by Uebersee? A. I did. I recalled at the time that his father had wanted to see the stock in 1939 and that he might be very receptive to the idea of selling it now; and he said that his father would not be, that he was sure his father thought very highly of it.

Q. In other words, Fritz von Opel did not listen to your advice about what would happen to the Spur shares; is that correct? A. That is right.

Q. And it turned out that your advice was correct;
1776 is that right? A. In that case.

Q. Did you have any discussion with him in the De Soto Hotel in Savannah? A. I am sure I did, but I don't recall any specific discussion.

Q. Perhaps I can refresh your recollection. Did he say anything to you about a yacht? A. Yes, sir. He told me that he had either bought or had contracted for a yacht.

Q. Did you have any discussion with him at that time about the yacht? A. Yes. He showed me a lot of maritime maps of the coast, and I said, "Fritz, you ought not to carry those around, because, after all, you are a German, and if we should get in war and you are in possession of a lot of coast maps, it might embarrass you."

Q. When you said to Fritz von Opel, "After all, you are a German," what did he say to you? A. He did not say anything; he just laughed.

Q. He did not say, "No. I am not a German. I am a Liechtensteinean," did he? A. No, sir.

Q. By the way, did you ever have occasion to tell any representative of the United States Government 1777 about this incident? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did that take place and under what circumstances? A. It took place when I was being interrogated by F. B. I. agents at my home in Nashville.

Q. Now, will you state how you came to be talking to an F. B. I. agent? A. Yes, sir. I can state that—

Mr. Ingoldsby: Will you fix the time of that, please?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. Will you fix the time and then describe the circumstances of how you happened to be talking to an F. B. I. agent? A. Well, I can't fix the time with accuracy, but my memory of it is that it was in January, 1942.

Q. Will you state where the interview took place and under what circumstances, and particularly fix the time of day, please? A. It was at night, about, perhaps, 10, 10:30 at night, at my home in the country near Brentwood, and the bell rang, and there were knocks on the door, and I had gone to bed, and I went down and opened the door, and two strange men were standing at the door. We lived quite far in the country and about a mile back from the road, and I did not know what was afoot, but I admitted them, and they came in and sat down in 1778 the library and commenced to ask me questions; and I didn't know what it was all about, and I declined to answer their questions, and then they showed me their badges, that they were agents of the F. B. I.

Q. And then you told them of your acquaintance with Fritz von Opel: is that correct? A. I answered as truthfully as I could every question that they asked me; yes, sir.

Q. And they were questioning you about von Opel; is that right? A. Yes, sir; and about my German ownership of Spur Company and any other German that might be connected with it.

Q. Had you previously requested these gentlemen to call upon you? A. No, sir.

Q. Did they think you were a United States citizen at that time? A. No, sir; they suspected me of being a German.

Q. But you were not? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever discuss with Fritz von Opel the question of nobility or title? A. No. On one occasion when I was at Nantucket the Boston papers were carrying great columns of publicity about the Baron Fritz von Opel, 1779 and he mentioned on that occasion that his lawyer, Mr. Isadore Kressel had suggested to him that he leave the title off in the United States.

Mr. Burling: You may inquire, Mr. Ingoldsby.

The Court: I suppose you cannot complete this in the next three or four minutes?

Mr. Burling: I said I was through, Your Honor.

The Court: Yes. I was speaking to them.

2 o'clock.

(At 12:21 p. m. a recess was taken until 2 p. m.)

1780 AFTERNOON SESSION

(The trial was resumed at 2 p. m., upon the expiration of the recess.)

Thereupon—

JOHN MASON HOUGHLAND resumed the stand and, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Cross Examination

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Mr. Houghland, I wanted to ask you, first, to again state the first time that you ever met Mr. von Opel. A. The first time I ever met Mr. von Opel was in Paris, in 1934.

Q. You are quite certain of that? A. Yes.

Q. How do you establish that date in your recollection? A. It was the first time I ever met him.

Q. The second time that you ever met him was in 1935 in Nashville, Tennessee; is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that the occasion when Mr. von Opel came there in his Mercedes car? A. Yes.

Q. Let me see if I can refresh your recollection on that. You saw that car, a yellow Mercedes, with red 1781 leather upholstery? A. It had red leather upholstery, yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall at the time you had that meeting with Mr. von Opel that he told you about participating in the Gordon Bennett balloon races in Chicago as a co-pilot? A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. You don't recall that? A. No.

Q. Do you recall whether or not anyone was with him when he arrived in Nashville in that Mercedes car? A. Yes; Mr. Theodore Hoffacker.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection any if I told you that Mr. von Opel came from Europe in the summer of 1933, that he spent about 14 days in New York, and went to Chicago, where he participated in the Gordon Bennett balloon races, and that at that time he brought with him his Mercedes car; and that he then went to Miami, Florida, and then went to Shreveport, Louisiana, where he contacted Mr. Hoffacker, and that he then went to Nashville, Tennessee, and met you? A. No, that would not refresh my recollection; my recollection is as I stated.

Q. You are quite certain it was the summer of 1935? A. Yes, sir.

Q. There wasn't any other occasion than the one to which you have testified when Mr. von Opel came to visit 1782 you in the Mercedes car; is that correct? A. I don't know whether it is correct or not. That is the first time I recall.

Q. Wouldn't you remember if he came to visit you in a yellow Mercedes? A. I don't know whether it was yellow or not.

Q. Did he ever again at any time, to the best of your recollection, come to visit you in a Mercedes car? A. I don't recall; he may have done so.

Q. If the customs office shows that that car was brought here in 1933 and returned to Europe the same summer or sold in the United States, would you then agree that you were in error as to the first time you met Mr. von Opel? A. No.

Q. You would not agree, then? A. No.

Q. All right. Mr. Houghland, I want to ask you to think carefully before you answer this question. Take as much time as you want. But will you give me the names of all the individuals in Washington with whom you have discussed this case or with whom you have discussed the acquisition of the stock of the Spur Distributing Company? A. I couldn't do that.

Q. Give me whatever names you remember. A. Well, I discussed the acquisition of the stock with Mr. Leo 1783 Crowley, Alien Property Custodian; with a number of his assistants in the Alien Property office, including Mr. Rubens; Mr. W. D. Bradford—he was not his assistant; he was Mr. Markham's assistant—with Senator McKellar; with Mr. Cordell Hull; with Mr. De Orsey. That is all I can recall.

Q. That is all you recall offhand? A. Offhand recall. I am sure there were many over in the Alien Property Custodian's office, but I don't offhand just recall them by name.

Q. How many times have you discussed the acquisition of the Spur stock with Senator McKellar? A. Twice.

Q. Will you tell the Court the nature of those discussions and when they were? A. I think that they were in the—I know that one of them was in 1944.

Q. Will you give us the approximate date in 1944? A. I don't recall the approximate date. They may have both been in 1944. It is possible that one of them was in 1943, but I wouldn't attempt to state.

Q. Will you tell us what those conversations were about? A. Yes, sir. I was attempting to get— You are talking about Senator McKellar, now?

1784 Q. Yes. A. I was attempting to get Senator McKellar to intercede in my behalf to get the Alien Property Custodian to sell the stock.

Q. Both of those discussions were about that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What, if anything, did Senator McKellar do about that? A. He called Mr. Markham, Alien Property Custodian, on the telephone and talked to him.

Q. Did you employ Mr. De Orsey? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is an attorney in Washington? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the purpose of his employment? A. The purpose of his employment was to keep me advised of what was going on in Washington. My own attorney was ill with a heart attack, and I had no legal representative of any kind.

Q. Was part of Mr. De Orsey's employment to call upon Mr. Connor? A. No, sir.

Q. It was not? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know he had called upon Mr. Connor?
1785 A. Yes, sir.

Q. He advised you of that fact? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was in connection with your acquisition of the Spur stock? A. No, sir.

Q. It was not? A. No, sir.

Q. In what regard was it? A. I don't recall what it was; something to do with this impending trial, I think. I did not authorize Mr. De Orsey to call upon Mr. Connor, if that is the question.

Q. Those are the only people you recall, offhand, speaking to in Washington; is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state at this time to the Court the financial interest which you have in the outcome of this case? A. Well, that would be a very difficult thing to state, but I can state the direct financial interest I would have.

Q. State that in any way you want. A. All right. I am employed by the Spur Company as its president and general manager and have a salary of $18,000 a year from that source. I do not now actually have profit participation, but I have had in the past, and I am sure, if Mr.
von Opel were to win this case, that I would no 1786 longer be employed in that capacity.

Q. Do you have any other interest in the outcome of the case? A. I am a stockholder in the company, and I— Do you wish me to express my opinion about the stock?

Q. I would like you to express how much stock you own. A. I own 28,000 shares.

Q. Percentagewise, what percentage is that of the total shares of the company? A. I can ask you to figure it, if you don't mind. There are 139,000 shares outstanding.

Q. You own 28,000 of that. About 12 per cent, roughly. Now, will you state to the Court whether you have appeared here voluntarily as a witness for the Government or whether you have been subpoenaed? A. I appeared voluntarily.

Q. Are you acquainted with Mr. H. D. Hines? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state to the Court, please, who he is? A. Mr. H. D. Hines is vice president of Spur Distributing Company.

Q. Is he related to you? A. We married sisters.

Q. How long has Mr. Hines been with the Spur Company? A. Since the Spur Company was four months old.

1787 Q. Is he also a stockholder? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know the extent of his participation? A. Not accurately, but generally speaking.

Q. Approximately what is it? A. About 7,000 shares, I think. I may be wrong in that; maybe a little more than that.

Q. Are you familiar with the compensation which Mr. Hines receives? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you tell the Court, please, what that is? A. Twelve thousand dollars a year.

Q. Does he have a bonus arrangement, or did he have a bonus arrangement, prior to the time the Custodian seized this property? A. No, sir.

Q. So all he ever received was the $12,000? A. Except that bonuses to employees, other than to myself, he has been included in.

Q. Did you forbid Mr. Hines' appearance here? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you discuss with him his appearance? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you tell us the nature of that discussion,
1788 please? A. Well, it was very brief. I told him to go down and see the lawyer, consult with him, and have him advise him on the matter; that I didn't know.

Q. You didn't know what? A. I didn't know whether he should appear or should not appear—what the circumstances were. As far as the subpoena was concerned, I assumed he had to appear.

Q. You told him to go and see what lawyers? A. To see—

Mr. Burling: May the record show, if the Court please, that the subpoena under discussion was a totally void subpoena?

Mr. Ingoldsby: We make no point of that.

Mr. Burling: We said it was totally void and that a simple reading of the Rules of Civil Procedure would have told you so.

Mr. Ingoldsby: We knew that when it was sent.

Mr. Burling: Thank you.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Is that all the conversation you had with Mr. Hines about his appearance here? A. No. He came back from the lawyer's office and told me that he was not required to appear, that the lawyers said there was a rule that a witness living 100 miles from the District of Columbia 1789 could have his deposition taken instead of appearing.

Q. What did you do? A. I don't recall what I said; I probably said, "That's fine."

Q. So you didn't tell him not to come? A. No, I didn't tell him not to come at all.

Q. Did you have any conversations with any representatives of the Government concerning this subpoena? A. No, sir.

Q. You did not? A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Houghland, you were one of the founders of the Spur Company, were you not? A. I was the founder, yes, sir.

Q. Who else was with you in that business at the time that the company was founded? A. Very early in it there was a man by the name of Joseph E. Thomas.

Q. Anyone else? A. No, sir.

Q. Were there just the two of you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much capital was invested in this business originally? A. At the very beginning, $15,000.

1790 Q. How much was invested in the company at the time that Mr. von Opel first became a stockholder?

A. I can't be absolutely sure of that without checking it, but I will be glad to tell you, approximately, what I think.

Q. Approximately. A. I think it was probably three hundred or three hundred fifty thousand dollars.

Q. How much stock did you own in this company at the time Mr. von Opel purchased into the company? A. I don't recall.

Q. Can you recall approximately? A. No, I don't believe I can.

Q. Didn't you own in the neighborhood of fourteen to sixteen thousand shares in 1931? A. I can't honestly answer that question, but that would be a fair kind of guess, if I were guessing at it.

Q. That would be a fair estimate, you think? A. Yes, I think so.

Q. Were those shares paid for in 1931? A. No, sir.

Q. What was the arrangement between you and the company with respect to those shares? A. I owed $30,000 on the shares, and I had a time period to pay them off in.

1791 Q. What collateral was given for the payment? A. The shares.

Q. The shares were pledged with the company; is that correct? A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Did Mr. von Opel disturb this arrangement when he came with the company? A. No, sir.

Q. Over the period of years, did you ultimately pay off those shares? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In addition, you acquired some few thousand additional shares; is that correct; since 1931 or 1932? A. Yes, quite a few.

Q. I believe you testified on direct examination that you received an employment contract when Mr. von Opel purchased into this company; is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you explain briefly how you happened to obtain that contract and what the contract was all about? A.

Well, there was a rather unhappy period of adjustment between Mr. Hoffacker and myself, and we carried on negotiations for almost a year, in which I, in order to protect myself from being badly handled, I thought, was working to try to raise money to exercise my options 1792 and return—that is, with my group—to the controlling position in the company.

Q. Then what happened? A. In the course of those negotiations, why, we compromised on my having an employment contract and a call on their stock in case they sold.

Q. That was a contract for how long a period of time? A. It was for eight years but retroactive through 1933, so it was really, I think, only seven years ahead of that date.

Q. Did that contract contain any provision regarding your engaging in any business in competition with Spur? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did it say about that? A. It said that I would not engage in any business or in competition with Spur.

Q. Would you say that you resented Mr. von Opel's purchase into the Spur Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In 1932? A. I resented the purchase. I didn't know Mr. von Opel, but I resented the purchase and the method of it.

Q. Would you say that you have ever gotten over that resentment? A. No, I don't think I have.

1793 Q. What income were you receiving from Spur just prior to the time you entered into this contract? A. Eighteen thousand dollars, the same that I receive now.

Q. Under the seven-year contract which you had with Mr. von Opel, did you receive merely $18,000 under that contract? A. I received this payment for waiving the right to exercise my options on additional stock. I received a management contract with a profit participation in it.

Q. What was the extent of your participation in profits under this contract? A. It was 5 per cent of net earnings after 12-1/2 per cent had been earned for stockholders on capital and surplus.

Q. What is the largest amount that you ever received in any one year under this contract? A. Thirty-eight thousand dollars.

Q. When did that contract terminate? A. January 1.

Q. Of what year? A. This year—of 1949—or December 31, 1948; I don't recall which.

Q. Didn't you receive two contracts? A. Yes. I just told you I did.

Q. When you said that the largest amount you
1794 ever received under the contract was— A. Was under the management contract, which I understood you to ask me about.

Q. My question is, Was there one management contract or two management contracts? A. There was one management contract.

Q. And that ran from 1933 to when? A. To January 1, 1949. That was a renewal in 1940.

Q. Then, that same contract was renewed? A. Yes.

Q. That only operated for how long—two years?—before the Government took over? A. Well, it was renewed in 1940, and the Government took over in 1942. Yes; two years approximately.

Q. Did they discontinue the contract? A. No, sir.

Q. You are still entitled to participate in profits if earned, then? A. I was paid until termination of the contract.

Q. I believe that your son testified the other day that he was the owner of the Direct Oil Company; is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you able to tell us, please, who was the owner of the Economy Oil Company? A. I am not absolutely sure, but I think the Economy Oil Company—I am 1795 not absolutely sure about the name, but I imagine I know what you are inquiring about—I think the Economy Oil Company was a group of four or five small stations owned by Mr. Henry Hines after—

Q. That is the same Henry Hines who was with your company? A. That is right.

Q. Is that company still in business? A. I believe it has one filling station at Russellville, Kentucky.

Q. That is all they operate at the present time? A. Yes.

Q. How many stations does your son operate? A. I believe he operates fifteen.

Q. They are located in five southern states; is that correct? A. I believe it is.

Q. The last year that the company operated prior to the time when the Custodian took over the interest of Mr. von Opel was 1941; is that correct?

Mr. Burling: Will you state what company you are talking about?

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. I should clarify that. The Spur Company. A. Yes; they took it over in 1942.

1796 Q. So the last year of operation was 1941; is that correct? That was the last year of operation prior to the time the Government took over? A. I believe it was, yes.

Q. Will you tell the Court what Spur earned in that year? A. In 1941?

Q. In 1941. A. As I recall—I couldn't tell you exactly, but I can tell you very closely—I think it earned approximately four hundred seventy some thousand dollars net.

Q. That is how much per share? A. I think it is close to $3.50.

Q. Will you describe for the Court what the capital stock, what the capital structure of the company was at the time the Custodian took over the interests of Mr. von Opel? A. It had 400,000 shares of stock, of which 139,000 were issued.

Q. That is the entire structure? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you describe also the arrangement on the board of directors of the Spur Company at that time? A. In 1941?

Q. Yes. A. You mean after the Government took over or before?

1797 Q. Immediately before—on January 1, 1942, say.

A. I couldn't be quite sure of the date about it, but if you will ask the question perhaps a little differently I could give you the information you want. I mean I couldn't be quite sure as to who were on the directorate in 1941 and who were changed on the directorate in 1942.

Q. Well, go ahead and give the explanation you want to give. A. But I know who were on the directorate definitely in April, 1942, and I believe that is the information you may want.

Q. Well, who was there in April, 1942? A. Well, in April, 1942, there was myself, Mr. Henry Hines, Mr. Cecil Sims, Mr. Paul M. Davis, and I believe Mr. W. D. Bradford representing the Government. I won't trust that to be accurate.

Q. That is April, 1942? A. I imagine that is it; I couldn't be absolutely sure.

Q. Are you quite certain that Mr. Bradford was on the board of directors at that time? A. No, I am not. I am not that certain.

Q. You don't have any independent recollection of when he came to your board of directors? A. I can't right certain about it. I don't believe he was. I believe somebody else was, but I couldn't recall. Somebody from the 1798 Alien Property Custodian's office.

Q. Do you recall when Fritz von Opel was interned? A. No, I can't recall.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection if I told you that it was February, 1942? A. No, I just don't know when he was interned.

Q. Do you recall that it was in the early part of 1942? A. No, I don't. I recall that he was interned some time in that general period after war was declared, but I can't recall the date. I don't know that I ever knew it.

Q. Would you say that it was a matter of no interest? A. No, it was a matter of interest to me.

Q. I beg your pardon? A. I say no, it was a matter of interest to me.

Q. But you never found out or made any particular effort to find out when he was interned? A. The date, no.

Q. Is it a fact that prior to Mr. von Opel's internment your board of directors was composed of yourself and Mr. von Opel and a man named Ulrich and Mr. Thomas? A. Yes, that is right.

Q. How long did that situation exist? A. Mr. Ulrich was removed when the Custodian took over.

Q. My question is this: How long prior to January 1, 1942 had that situation been in existence? A. That 1799 board of directors?

Q. Yes. A. I can't recall. I don't recall Mr. von Opel ever having been on the board of directors prior to that time. I remember he was on the board of directors at one time, but I don't recall his ever having been prior to that time.

Q. Well, you know that Mr. von Opel could not have been on the board of directors after January 1, 1942? A. That is right. Before the time, you mean? I don't recall his having been a director but one time. I don't, frankly, know just what the time was.

Q. Would you say that Mr. von Opel was not a member of the board of directors in 1941? A. I wouldn't say, because I just don't recall. The directors had a lot of shifts and changes in them through the years. I don't recall.

Q. During the period from, say, 1938 through 1941 you had only four members of the board, didn't you? A. I don't recall, now. We were supposed to have five, I think.

Q. Didn't you pass a resolution some time in 1936 which authorized five members, but by agreement there were only four members: you and Mr. Thomas, who was, let us say, friendly to you, and Mr. von Opel and Mr. Ulrich, who was friendly to Mr. von Opel? A. I don't recall 1800 that.

Q. You don't recall that? A. No.

Q. Would you say that that was not the case? A. No, I would not.

Mr. Ingoldsby: What is our next number, Mr. Clerk?

The Deputy Clerk: Number 163 coming up.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Will you mark this as 163 and this letter as 164?

(Letter of October 25, 1943, from Spur Distributing Company to Alien Property Custodian, was marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 163 for identification.)

(Copy of letter of May 31, 1943, from S. J. Crowley to J. Mason Houghland, was marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 164 for identification.)

Mr. Ingoldsby: Plaintiff's Exhibits 163 and 164, I wish to state for the record, come from the Department of Justice files and were provided us by the Department. I might say that the same thing applies to all other documents which I shall offer until further notice.

I offer Plaintiff's Exhibits 163 and 164.

Mr. Burling: May I see them? I do not doubt you, but I just have not seen them.

(Mr. Ingoldsby handed papers to Mr. Burling.)

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

1801 Q. Mr. Houghland, before I show you these two exhibits, I want to ask you, What was the financial condition of Spur in the year 1943? Will you describe it briefly? A. I would like you to explain that question a little to me.

Q. All right. Were you making money, or were you losing money? A. 1943?

Q. Yes. A. I don't recall the net return of 1943, but I do recall that gasoline controls set in in 1942. We were limited, first, to a 72-hour week, and the controls of amount sold then set in and were in existence at that time, so I would think, offhand, that our situation was badly worsened.

Q. Do you have any definite and independent recollection of whether or not the company made or lost money in the year 1943? A. No, I don't.

Q. You don't know? A. No.

Q. Do you recall whether the company made or lost money in the year 1944? A. Yes, it lost money, I think, in 1944.

Q. Do you recall whether you made or lost money
1802 in the year 1945? A. No, I don't recall.

Q. You do definitely recall, though, that the company in 1941 made better than $400,000 net? A. Yes.

Q. You do recall that? A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Houghland, do you recall that all during the war years, 1942, 1943, 1944, and 1945, the company lost money? A. Well, I recall that we were in a lot of trouble and lost money in some of those years, but I can't recall which years it was.

Q. Do you recall if you lost money every year? A. Well, I know it was very tough. I think—I don't recall just exactly the financial detail of it.

Q. Is it your testimony at the present time that you don't recall whether the company made money in the years 1942, 1943, 1944, and 1945? A. No; I don't recall just exactly how the financial sheet turned out in those years. I don't remember. It was very tough.

Q. What do you mean by saying, "it was very tough"? A. Well, I mean we were under great restrictions on gasoline sales.

Q. Did you pay any dividends during those years? A. I don't believe we did in 1943, 1944, or 1945. I don't 1803 believe we did. In 1942 we may have paid a dividend—I am sure we did—on 1941 business.

Q. In 1942 you paid a dividend based on 1941 business? A. Yes.

Q. But you don't recall whether you paid a dividend in 1943 based upon 1942 business? A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you recall whether or not you received any bonus under your management contract in the years 1942, 1943, 1944, or 1945? A. I received one in 1942 for 1941 business. I recall that.

Q. That is the last one you received until after the war, isn't it? A. I don't know.

Q. Don't recall? A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you have any income from your company—that is, the Spur Company—other than your salary and your dividends? A. What do you mean: "income other than".

Q. Do you receive anything else from Spur? A. I receive rental on property in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Q. I am not asking about your other income; I am asking about your other income from Spur; and by "other income" I mean income other than your salary or your bonus 1804 arrangement. A. I receive a rental check on the property at Cincinnati, Ohio, from Spur.

Q. That is something which you personally own in Cincinnati? A. That is right.

Q. How much do you receive for that? A. Ninety-nine dollars, I think it is, a month.

Q. That is the only income which you receive from Spur— A. Other than this I have described.

Q. Other than this which you have described? A. Yes.

Q. Yet it is your testimony that you do not recall whether or not you received any bonus under your management contract because of profits during the years 1942, 1943, 1944, or 1945? A. I received a bonus, in 1942; I recall that.

Q. You have explained that? A. I have explained that. I don't recall 1943, 1944, or 1945.

Q. I will ask you to look at Plaintiff's Exhibit 163. Will you read that? A. Do you wish me to read it aloud?

Q. No; read it to yourself. A. (After examining 1805 paper:) Yes, sir.

Q. Now will you read Plaintiff's Exhibit 164? A. (After examining paper:) Yes, sir.

Mr. Ingoldsby: The pertinent portions of Plaintiff's Exhibit 163 I should like to read into the record. This is a letter to Mr. James Markham, Assistant Alien Property Custodian, from Mason Houghland, president, Spur Distributing Company, Inc., dated October 25, 1943. The pertinent portion says—

Mr. Burling: I object to the characterization as "pertinent."

Mr. Ingoldsby: The portion which I wish to read at the present time, which I consider pertinent, is as follows:

"The indicated military demand, or anything near it, will certainly eliminate 'A' and 'B' coupons. It will incidently close down the Spur Company. If we are to protect ourselves by arranging credits, action must be taken at once. I don't see how it could be done later.

"The conversion of the A. B. C. stock into first mortgage bonds would certainly strengthen your condition and would enable the American stockholders to save themselves.

"We will be grateful if a decision can be arrived at upon this matter."

Plaintiff's Exhibit 164 is a letter to Mr. Houghland from S. J. Crowley, Chief, Division of Business Opera-1806 tions, in which he states:

"Dear Mr. Houghland:

"I am in receipt of your offer of May 28, 1943—"

I beg your pardon.

Will you mark this, please, Mr. Clerk, as Plaintiff's Exhibit 165? I will strike the reading of Exhibit 164; it was an inadvertence.

(Copy of telegram from James E. Markham to Mason Houghland, October 30, 1943, was marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 165 for identification.)

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Will you read that, please? Just read it to yourself (handing Plaintiff's Exhibit 165 to the witness). A. (After examining paper:) Yes, sir.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I guess we had better put these in as exhibits. You know what these are, don't you?

Mr. Burling: Yes.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I should like to offer at this time Plaintiff's Exhibits 165, 166, and 167.

(Annual report for 1944 and annual report for 1945 were marked as Plaintiff's Exhibits 166 and 167, respectively, and offered in evidence.)

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Mr. Houghland, I will ask you to look over Plaintiff's Exhibit 166, which purports to be the annual report 1807 of the Spur Distributing Company for the year 1944; and then will you look at Plaintiff's Exhibit 167, which is the annual report of the Spur Distributing Company for the year 1945? Will you look please, at the balance sheet and the financial statement and then please explain to the Court whether or not those documents refresh your recollection as to whether the Spur Company made or lost money in the years 1943, 1944, and 1945. A. In the year 1944, which is the one that I have in my hand, it lost money, as I believe I told you. I recall that in 1944 it lost money.

Q. How much was that? A. Ninety thousand dollars.

Q. That was a $90,000 loss after a tax adjustment of $74,000; is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the tax adjustment, of course, was for money which had been earned in prior years? A. That is correct.

Q. So without the adjustment you would have lost $90,000 plus $74,000? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, will you look at the next one? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you tell the Court, please, what it is you
1808 have in your hands there? A. It is the annual report of the Spur Distributing Company for the year 1945.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection regarding the operation of the company in a profit or loss condition? A. Yes, sir.

Q. For that year? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you tell the Court what the company did in that year? A. It lost $94,000.

Q. Was that after a tax adjustment also? A. No, sir.

Q. There was no tax adjustment in the year 1945? A. No, sir.

Q. I will ask you, again, to look at Plaintiff's Exhibit 166, and I will ask you particularly to look at the balance sheet dated December 31, 1944. I will ask you if you see there a comparison with the year 1943. A. Yes, sir.

Q. From that comparative balance sheet are you able to state whether the company made or lost money in 1943? A. No, I am not.

Q. You are not able to state from that? A. No.

1809 Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, I appreciate the wide latitude Your Honor has granted me in cross examination, and I do not mean to object, but I do think I may properly object on the ground of relevancy here. I don't know whether the interrogation is with regard to the years after the Government took over the majority stock—

The Court: Have you any further questions along this line?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Not a great many, Your Honor, but I wanted to show the bias and the interest of the witness. I do not say that there is—

The Court: Do you mean that he has lost money after the war?

Mr. Ingoldsby: No; I intend to show that this witness made every effort within his power to acquire the stock of the Spur Distributing Company.

Mr. Burling: I suggest we get to that point.

Mr. Ingoldsby: We are getting there just as quickly as we can.

The Court: Do you mean that he deliberately caused losses; is that it?

Mr. Ingoldsby: No, Your Honor. I will make an offer of proof at this time.

The Court: I do not want to lead you.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I shall be delighted to make it. I

1810 want to show, first of all, that in 1943, at the time the company was losing money, Mr. Houghland endeavored to establish a bond issue for the purpose of eliminating the stock vested by the Alien Property Custodian which belonged to Mr. von Opel. Needless to say, if that had been done, if 73,000 shares of stock were taken out of existence, it would certainly change the position of this witness and a group friendly to him who also owned stock.

Mr. Burling: It would save a great deal of time if counsel would directly ask Mr. Houghland if that is a fact.

Mr. Gallagher: I think Mr. Burling's remarks come a little bit untoward. It will take Mr. Ingoldsby another five or ten minutes before he reaches that point. We have sat this out for many a day.

The Court: All right.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Mr. Houghland, I refer again to Plaintiff's Exhibit 166. This does not have any page number, but it is the figure on the right-hand side under the column "1943," "Loss before tax adjustment $196,000." You agree that that figure is there? A. $196,344, yes.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection as to whether or not the company made or lost money in 1943? A. Well, we had a tax adjustment of $210,000 in that year, so it shows a $13,000 profit reported.

1811

Q. When you get a tax adjustment for a prior year, do you take that into account in determining whether or not you made or lost money for the current year? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do. Didn't you determine that for that the current year you lost $196,000 and that you received a tax adjustment from prior years? A. I leave that to the auditors.

Q. I was asking you how you considered it. A. I am not much of an auditor.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I wish to read into the record at this time Plaintiff's Exhibit 165, which is a telegram to Mason Houghland, Spur Distributing Company, Inc., from James E. Markham, Deputy Alien Property Custodian, dated October 30, 1943. The wire reads as follows:

"It appears that it is not appropriate at this time to give approval to the proposal to convert stock into bonds in view of the fact that the question of disposition of property belonging to an internee is under consideration by the Attorney General. We are satisfied that if we attempted to conform to this proposal injunction proceedings might be brought against us by internee's attorneys. The Attorney General's opinion when received may change this situation. If so we will advise you."

1812 By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. The question I want to ask you, Mr. Houghland is, will you explain to the Court your purpose in retiring the stock held by the Custodian for bonds during the period when the company was losing money? A. Yes, sir. I hoped to free the company from German ownership.

Q. Was that your reason? A. Yes.

Q. Was that your only reason? A. No. I felt we were going to continue in a period of bad operations and that we perhaps would strengthen ourselves greatly if we had this arrangement made; that we would do a better job; that it was not very popular to have German ownership in a retail organization in the United States when we were at war with Germany.

Q. You have stated that. Will you explain, please, how you intended to strengthen the company by incurring a bonded indebtedness? A. There would have been no strengthening of the company.

Q. Did I understand you to say that you expected to strengthen the company by doing this? A. I expected to strengthen the company by relieving it of German ownership.

1813 Q. Then, that was your only reason for doing this; is that correct? A. Doubtless.

Q. Isn't it a fact that the reason you attempted to do this was so that von Opel would not longer have control of the majority stock of the company? A. My reason was that German interests would not longer have control or the controlling stock of the company.

Q. Weren't you at the same time interested in getting control of the stock of the company for yourself or for your group? A. Yes; I would like to have had control of the stock. I don't believe I could have had it for myself, but I would like to have had control in American hands.

Q. And particularly your hands? A. I daresay. I would have been very grateful if it had been in my hands.

Q. So that was an additional reason for your efforts to transfer the von Opel stock to bonds? A. Yes.

Q. If the Government had accepted your proposal, it would have cost the company about $50,000 a year, wouldn't it? A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you recall—wasn't your proposal to give 1814 the Government bonds based upon the book value of the stock? A. I don't recall the details of the proposal now.

Q. Who worked out the details? A. I don't recall that.

Q. You don't recall who did that? A. No.

Q. Didn't you consider that as a matter of major importance? A. I imagine the details were worked out by Mr. Sims, the lawyer, but I don't recall the details of it.

Q. Mr. Sims is connected with the firm of Bass, Berry, and Sims, who are your attorneys in Nashville? A. That is correct.

Q Is that the same firm that are attorneys for the American National Bank in Nashville? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that the name of the bank? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You think, now, that Mr. Sims was the one who worked out the details of that plan? A. I think so.

Q. Under that plan, had it gone through, wouldn't the stock which you owned double in yield if and when the company made money? A. When they paid off the bonds, it would.

1815 Q. Well, whether they paid off the bonds or not, based upon the earnings of Spur for 1946 and 1947, if you had a 5 per cent debenture to meet, the remaining stockholders would be better off than they would have been if the common stock had remained outstanding, wouldn't they? A. Whenever this had been paid off, they would have been, yes.

Q. Do I understand your testimony to be, then, that had this plan gone through, the remaining stockholders would not have made any additional money from dividends until the bonds had been retired? A. Not if I had been president of the company—they would not.

Q. Oh, you mean you would have retired the bonds before you would have paid out dividends? A. That is right.

Q. Which would have had the effect of increasing the equity of the remaining stockholders rather than paying out profits; isn't that correct? A. When you discharged the indebtedness, they would have been.

Q. Would you say that this was unusual procedure to have taken during a period when the company was losing money? A. I haven't had wide enough experience with corporate practice to know whether it is unusual or not.

1816 Mr. Ingoldsby: I offer in evidence Plaintiff's Exhibit 168, which also came from your files.

Mr. Burling: No objection.

(Minutes of special meeting, board of directors, Spur Distributing Company, Inc., November 9, 1944, was marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 168 and offered in evidence.)

Mr. Ingoldsby: Plaintiff's Exhibit 168 purports to be a letter to Mr. W. D. Bradford, Assistant, Office of Alien Property Custodian, Washington, D. C., signed by H. D. Hines, of the Spur Distributing Company, and the letter includes or has attached thereto a copy of the Minutes of Special Meeting of the Board of Directors of Spur Distributing Company held on November 9, 1944.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Mr. Houghland, do you at this time have any independent recollection of a meeting of the board of directors on November 9, 1944? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do remember that? A. Yes.

Q. Then, do you recall—Let me put it this way: What particular significance does that meeting of the board of directors have for you? I will change the question: How is it you remember that particular meeting? A. Well, it involved a tremendous amount of activity and 1817 controversy thereafter.

Q. Do you mean that the reason you recall that particular meeting of the board of directors was that that was the first time that the problem was taken up with the board of directors of increasing the stock of Spur? A. No.

Q. What do you mean? A. Why, I mean it was a very momentous occasion. It involved me and the company and a very considerable controversy with the Alien Property Custodian.

Q. When was the last time that you read the minutes of this meeting? A. I don't recall; not too long ago.

Q. Give us your best recollection of how long ago. A. Two weeks.

Q. You read that in preparation for your testimony here, did you? A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall reading there a statement to the effect—and I quote:

"He pointed out that by careful and painstaking investigation the Alien Property Custodian had finally established beyond the question of a doubt that Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, A. G., while a Swiss corporation, held the 1818 stock for the beneficial ownership of the von Opel family, all of whom were German nationals and most of whom reside in Germany and have actively aided the German war efforts in the production of aircraft, tanks, and rockets, it being commonly understood that the von Opels were the real inventors of the rocket principles for military use."

Do you recall reading that statement? A. Yes.

Q. Having read that, do you recall having made it? A. No, I don't recall having made it, but I am sure it is so.

Q. You accept this as so? A. Yes.

Mr. Burling: We stipulate that this is correct.

Mr. Gallagher: That is, that he made it?

Mr. Burling: No.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. My question is, Who told you that it had been "established beyond the question of a doubt that Uebersee Finanz-Korporation, A. G., while a Swiss corporation, held the stock for the beneficial ownership of the von Opel family"? A. Mr. Cecil Sims.

Q. Mr. Sims? A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Sims is your lawyer? A. Yes, sir.

1819 Q. Did he tell you where he got the information? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did he get it? A. He got it from a case in which the von Opels were involved, called the Gold Case in 1935, a Federal case in New York.

Q. Did you have a lengthy conversation with Mr. Sims about this? A. Yes.

Q. I understand that your statement says:

"He"—meaning you—"pointed out that by careful and painstaking investigation the Alien Property Custodian had finally established beyond the question of a doubt."

You did make that statement, did you? A. I imagine so; it is there.

Q. Then, who in the Alien Property Custodian's office did Mr. Sims attribute the statement to? A. I don't know.

Q. Well, your best authority for that statement at the present time, you mean, is Mr. Sims, your own lawyer; is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. You never talked to anyone in the Alien Property Custodian's office prior to the time you made that 1820 statement, did you? A. I talked to everybody in the Alien Property Custodian's office, I think.

Q. Well, I assume you did. My question should have been, You did not receive any information from anyone in the office of the Alien Property Custodian— A. Yes, I did.

Q. (Continuing) from anyone who stated that they, after a careful and painstaking investigation, had established these facts beyond any doubt? A. Yes.

Q. That is my question: Who gave you that information? A. I attended a meeting in Mr. Martin's office. He called over a man from the Department of Justice, whose name I don't recall, and called in a lawyer from the Alien Property office, and there was a general discussion at that time, and that was the purport of the discussion Mr. Sims had with me at the time.

Q. You really got your information, not from Mr. Sims' reading of the Gold case, but you got it from the Department of Justice itself; is that correct? A. Well, they were introduced to me as two lawyers from the Department of Justice. As far as getting the information is concerned, I got the information from Mr. Sims. You asked me did I ever talk to anybody in the Department of Justice about it. I told you I did, and who, and 1821 everybody, I think.

Q. Did you talk to them about this statement before you made the statement? A. About that statement?

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. I see. It was on Mr. Sims' statement, then, that you made the statement? A. No, I wouldn't say so—on his say so.

Q. On whose say so? A. I don't understand exactly what you mean by "say so."

Q. On the information provided by Mr. Sims? A. I would say that was largely true, yes.

Q. You knew at the time you made this statement that it was incorrect, didn't you? A. No.

Q. You didn't know that? A. No.

Q. Contained in the statement is the following: that "the Alien Property Custodian had finally established beyond the question of a doubt that Uebersee Finanz-Korporation A. G., while a Swiss corporation, held the stock for the beneficial ownership of the von Opel family, all of whom were German nationals and most of whom 1822 reside in Germany and have actively aided the German war efforts in the production of aircraft, tanks and rockets, it being commonly understood that the von Opels were the real inventors of the rocket principle for military use."

A. Do you wish me to tell where I got that information?

Q. No; I won't ask that question. You knew that that statement was incorrect, didn't you? A. No.

Mr. Burling: I object to that statement. It is correct. You have not gone into it. It is proved beyond shadow of a doubt that the Opel plants produced tanks for Germany.

The Court: He answered "No."

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Didn't you testify this morning that you learned that the Opel plant had been sold to General Motors? A. Yes.

Q. You knew that after 1931 the Opels did not own the old Opel Works, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. You knew that General Motors did own it? A. Yes.

Q. So if there was any production from this plant, it was the old Opel plant and not the plant now owned by the Opels?

1823 Mr. Burling: I object on the ground that the testimony has been clear that Wilhelm von Opel was chairman of the board of Adam Opel—

The Court: What are you trying to prove?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I am trying to prove that the statements were false and that the witness knew that they were false.

Mr. Burling: It is not false. It is what Fritz von Opel has stated and what Wilhelm von Opel has stated by deposition.

The Court: I do not think I am trying that issue here. Are you trying to prove that he made a false statement?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Yes.

The Court: In connection with what?

Mr. Ingoldsby: This, Your Honor, is all prefatory to the stock increase plan which the board of directors put through shortly after this. I think that surely the opportunity for argument should be afforded to show that as a result of some of these statements a stock plan was put through to increase the stock, so as to disturb the control which was formerly held by Mr. von Opel.

The Court: Suppose you establish that. Then what?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Then, I think I have established a very substantial interest on the part of this witness.

The Court: He had admitted that, hasn't he? Hasn't he admitted it?

1824 Mr. Ingoldsby: He has admitted that he would like to have acquired the stock.

The Court: I think he admitted that he took steps to acquire it; or did he?

Mr. Burling: I think I have tried to concede it. I tried twenty minutes ago by my watch. Mr. Gallagher said it would take five more minutes. I still offer to concede that this witness tried to get the Custodian to sell the shares which were vested, taken away from the von Opels.

Mr. Ingoldsby: That is all fine and dandy for stipulation; but our contention is that the witness went so far—we wish to show the extent to which the witness went in attempting to acquire interests which were held by von Opel. That being the situation, I think his testimony must of necessity be colored.

The Court: I will permit you to go ahead. I am not going to rule on whether I think you are bound by his answer or not. It may be that this is collateral and that you are bound by the answer, but I am going to permit him to answer within reasonable bounds. He said it was not true. So I will let it stand and rule later.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Your Honor, I do not want to appear argumentative; I simply want to point out that I do not intend to pursue the matter much further, but I do want to show that the lengths to which the witness went 1825 in the attempted acquisition of this stock were such that they were ultimately designated as illegal activity. That is what I am leading up to.

The Court: I doubt whether that would be material matter.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Designated by the Custodian.

The Court: You can show anything that tends to show bias or untimely or undue interest to gain control of the company.

Mr. Burling: I think if there is to be any showing of designation of illegality, it should be by proof and not by counsel's characterization.

The Court: I have already said I will not draw that conclusion. I will permit this. The only thing I do not want to do is to get off on some collateral issue here. You understand what I mean.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I understand what you mean.

The Court: I do not know whether Mr. von Opel's father, as chairman of the board of the von Opel Works, was furnishing tanks or rockets or planes. I do not think I can try that issue here.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I do not intend to pursue that matter any further.

Would you mark these next three documents, please, Mr. Clerk?

1826 (Minutes of special meeting of board of directors, Spur Distributing Company, November 6, 1944, were marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 169.)

(Copy of letter December 29, 1944 from James E. Markham to J. M. Houghland was marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 170.)

(Copy of letter December 20, 1944 from James E. Markham to Equitable Securities Corporation was marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 171.)

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. I want to ask you what you finally did—what the company did—as a result of that meeting of the board of directors in November, 1944. A. The company sold 20,000 shares of Spur stock to the Equitable Securities Company and gave them an option on 50,000 more.

Q. That was done by resolution of your board of directors, was it? A. That is right.

Q. Who was on the board of directors at that time? A. Mr. Sims, Mr. Paul M. Davis, Mr. Henry Duncan Hines, myself, and the representative of the Alien Property Custodian, but his name escapes me, as they changed rapidly.

Q. Was it Mr. Bradford? A. No, I don't believe it was; I am not sure.

1827 Q. At the time you increased the stock, as you just testified, who constituted the board of directors? A. The men I have named there.

Q. The men you have named? A. I failed to name one, but I can't recall that one.

Q. Mr. Sims was your lawyer; is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. Who was Mr. Davis? A. What do you mean by "who"?

Q. What was his position? A. He is president of the American National Bank in Nashville.

Q. He is a very close personal friend of yours, is he not? A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Hines was a member of the board? A. Yes.

Q. He is your brother-in-law? A. Yes. We married sisters.

Q. You were there yourself? A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall whether or not at this meeting of the board a representative—and by "this meeting" I mean the one of November, 1944—was a representative of the Office of the Alien Property Custodian pres-
1828 ent? A. No.

Q. Who owns the Equitable Securities Corporation? A. I don't know the entire ownership or any substantial number. I couldn't make a statement of that sort. I can tell you who heads it.

Q. Who heads it? A. Mr. Brownlee Currey, I believe it is.

Q. Does Mr. Davis have anything to do with Equitable Securities Corporation? A. That I don't know; not that I know of.

Q. Do you have anything to do with it? A. No.

Q. Did you have any arrangement at the time of this increase with the Equitable Securities Corporation for the purchase of that stock? A. No.

Q. What was the consideration which was paid for this increased stock? A. Book value?

Q. Book value at that time was how much? A. $13.31, I believe, or $13.37; I don't recall which.

Q. Per share? A. Per share, yes.

Q. What finally came of the increased stock? A. It was issued in the—Mr. Markham, Alien Property 1829 Custodian, ordered it returned and the deal nullified, but we maintained that we had a legal right to issue stock, and we finally compromised, and our legal rights were left in doubt, but restitution by exchanging money and stock was made, and the company was put in status quo.

Q. If this proposed transaction had gone through, that would have changed Mr. von Opel's position from that of majority stockholder to that of minority stockholder, wouldn't it?

Mr. Burling: I object, Your Honor. Mr. von Opel did not have any position then, in Uebersee, in 1942. The Custodian vested the stock. Title was in the Custodian.

Mr. Ingoldsby: There is a great deal of question about that, particularly when he has the title of Custodian.

The Court: You can handle that on redirect.

Mr. Ingoldsby: What was the question, please?

The Reporter (reading): "Question: If this proposed transaction had gone through, that would have changed Mr. von Opel's position from that of majority stockholder to that of minitory stockholders, wouldn't it?"

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. That was an end which you desired; isn't that correct? A. Yes.

1830 Mr. Ingoldsby: At this time I offer in evidence Plaintiff's Exhibits 169, 170, 171, and 172.

(Plaintiff's Exhibit 169, 170, 171, and 172, were offered in evidence.)

Mr. Ingoldsby: Plaintiff's Exhibit 169 purports to be letter dated November 6, 1944, to Mr. Bradford, signed by Mr. Hines, and includes minutes of the meeting of the board of directors held on December 2, 1944. For the purpose of further identification, these are the minutes of the meeting at which the increase took place, at which the increase in the stock was voted.

1831 I next wish to offer Plaintiff's Exhibit 172, which is a wire addressed to Spur, at Nashville, Tennessee, signed by Francis J. McNamara, Deputy Alien Property Custodian, which reads:

"Please be advised that the Alien Property Custodian has today taken supervision of the Spur Distributing Company by supervisory order No. 251 which is being forwarded to you today. Hereafter any transactions by the company and particularly the issuance of any additional stock by the company will require the authorization of the Custodian or his duly authorized representative."

(Plaintiff's Exhibit 172 for identification was offered in evidence.)

Mr. Ingoldsby: I offer Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 171, which is a copy of a telegram to the Equitable Securities Corporation, Nashville, Tennessee, signed by James E. Markham, Alien Property Custodian, dated December 20, 1944, which reads:

"Re action of Spur Distributing Co., Inc. in purportedly entering into a contract with you dated December 2, 1944, concerning the issuance of certain stock and other matters, you are advised that such purported action was contrary to the order and instruction of the Alien Property 1832 Custodian and consequently in violation of applicable provisions of law and subject to the penalties therein provided."

(Plaintiff's Exhibit 171 for identification was offered in evidence.)

Mr. Ingoldsby: I now wish to offer Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 170, which is a copy of, I assume, a telegram. I can't tell definitely whether it is a telegram or letter. It is a letter to J. M. Houghland and Alver E. Peterson, Secretary, Spur Distributing Company, Inc., Franklin Road, Nashville, Tennessee, from James E. Markham, Alien Property Custodian, dated December 29, 1944, which reads:

"In view of requested postponement of meeting"—this is a wire—originally scheduled for December 27, 1944 to January 13, 1945, I wish again to make it clear that action taken on or about December 2, 1944 in issuing to Equitable Securities Corporation shares of common stock of Spur and granting an option to purchase further shares, was contrary to my orders and instructions and illegal and void. You are directed to make no disposition of any of the proceeds received by Spur from Equitable nor shall any such funds be in any way committed. Any expenditure or commitment of these funds for the acquisition of real or personal property or otherwise would be illegal and will subject parties to penalties provided by law and other action."

1833 (Plaintiff's Exhibit 170 for identification was offered in evidence.)

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Now, with reference to the 20,000 shares which were immediately issued, were they actually paid for? A. Yes.

Q. And the money was received by the treasury of Spur? A. That is right.

Q. And as a result of the action taken by the Alien Property Custodian, this money was returned to the Equitable Securities Corporation; is that correct? A. That is right.

Q. And the additional 50,000 shares which had been issued were canceled? A. That is right, or were returned to the company.

Q. Returned; all right.

Now, this morning you testified, did you not, that in 1938 you had a conference with Mr. von Opel and Mr. Frankenberg in New York; is that correct? A. No, sir.

Q. You did not say that? A. No, sir.

Q. When did you say you did have a conference with Mr. von Opel and Mr. Frankenberg in New York? A. I believe I said that I had a conference with them in 1937.

1834 Q. That was in 1937, you say? A. That is my recollection of it.

Q. And then I believe that you stated that you had a telephone conversation with Mr. von Opel in 1939, when you were in London and he was in Cologne, Germany; is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you had a telephone conversation, transatlantic, with Mr. von Opel in September, 1939, when you were in Nashville and Mr. von Opel was in Zurich, Switzerland; is that correct? A. That is right.

Q. Then you testified about a meeting with Mr. von Opel in Savannah, Georgia, in January, 1941; is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. With reference to each one of these meeting or conversations, you have provided the representatives of the Government with memoranda, have you not? A. No, sir.

Q. You have not? A. No, sir.

Q. You did not make any written statement to the Government about this? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you sure about that? A. I am positive.

1835 Q. Do you recall executing an affidavit on the 24th day of May, 1944, before a Mary E. Woodall, a notary public? A. I would like to qualify my answer to your statement.

Q. All right. A. I thought you meant the lawyers in this case.

Q. No. I am talking about any representative of the Government. A. Oh, yes.

Q. Well, then, you did give them statements relating to each of the— A. I can state it broadly. I have told the representatives of the United States Government everything I knew and any bit of contact I have had at any time with any Germans.

Q. I assume that they were told at least that much. Now, what I wanted to ask you about was with regard to the meetings or conferences or conversations which I have just described. I wanted to ask you when you first made these statements to the Department of Justice. A. I don't recall.

Q. Could you give us any idea? A. No. I have had so many conferences, I could not.

Mr. Burling: Since counsel for both sides have been associated with the Department of Justice, I suggest 1836 that you clear whether counsel is referring to the F. B. I. as being with the Department. Sometimes the F. B. I. refers to the Department, meaning the lawyers in the Department. It is ambiguous.

Mr. Gallagher: You know they are not separate units.

Mr. Ingoldsby: If Mr. Burling can tell me, it will be all right with me. I am talking about some statements which have been provided us by Mr. Burling. All I want to know is when he made those statements.

Mr. Burling: The ambiguity is between F. B. I. agents and the Department of Justice lawyers, that is all.

Mr. Ingoldsby: That is all right. I can clear that up.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. You do have a recollection of telling someone in either the F. B. I. or in the Department of Justice about the telephone conversations or conferences which I have just enumerated, do you not? A. I don't have a specific recollection of telling anybody about those except the lawyers in this case, but it is quite possible that I did. I told them everything I knew.

Q. You say you have no recollection of giving— A. No specific recollection of who or where or when.

Q. Will you agree with me that you did tell somebody in either the F. B. I. or the Department of Justice about the incidents which I have just referred to? A. I 1837 think probably—I could not make an absolute statement to that effect, but I think probably.

Q. Now, my question is, did you get that statement from any prepared memorandum which you had made at the time of the conversations or was it based entirely upon your recollection of the facts? A. I don't even recall when I made the statement. The only thing I can say to you is that I probably did. I told them everything that I knew, which they asked me or that I could recall.

Q. But you have no particular recollection at this time of making any statements regarding the matters which I have just alluded to? A. No. I could not separate a definite statement and a definite time.

Q. Do you recall whether or not you had any records with you at the time that you made any of these statements to the Department? A. No.

Q. How many times would you say you talked to representatives of the F. B. I. or the Department of Justice since January 1, 1942? A. I would be unable to make an estimate.

Q. I want to ask you particularly about the statement which you made this morning. I do not purport to 1838 quote you exactly, but you correct me if I am in error.

Did you say that in the latter part of August, 1939, you were staying at the Carlton Hotel in London and upon your arrival in London you received a telephone call from von Opel from Cologne, Germany, asking you to come and visit him upon the family estate near that city? A. Yes.

Q. That is about it. Now, at that time that was the latter part of August, 1939. Can you establish the date any more definitely than that? A. I could if I had the information here and you could obtain it or I could obtain it for you. I sailed on the last trip of THE NORMANDIE, and this was immediately preceding that trip, which landed here just a few days before war was declared. The war, I believe, was declared between England and Germany on the 3rd of September, so it was very close to the end of August.

If I were to attempt to say the exact date, I would doubtless be in error.

Q. Very close to the end, in any event? A. Yes.

Q. Now, will you relate the circumstances under which you made that call? Where were you and who placed the call, and just give us any information that you can remember about the placing of that call. A. The first call 1839 was from Fritz von Opel to me, not from me to Fritz von Opel.

Q. All right. With regard to the first call, where did that call come from? A. It came from Cologne, Germany.

Q. And how do you know that? A. Well, that is what the operator said.

Q. You recall definitely that the operator said that it was Cologne, Germany, calling? A. Yes, I do.

Q. What fixes that so vividly in your recollection at this time? A. This is a very unusual circumstance for me.

Q. How do you mean that? A. The world was about to plunge into war and I was over on the other side.

Q. And so it impressed you very definitely that this was a call from Germany and that Germany was about to go to war, and that is what fixed that date? A. Yes. The whole circumstances are quite vivid.

Q. And as a result of that call you later called Fritz von Opel; is that correct? A. The following day, yes, sir.

Q. So at that point we are pretty close to the very end of August, 1939; isn't that right? A. Not very close 1840 to the very end of August, no, but you are getting in the latter quarter of 1939.

Q. All right. It would definitely, then, be some time after August 20, 1939; correct? A. I won't make a definite statement on that, but it must have been in that neighborhood.

Q. Now, will you tell us about your making that call to Mr. von Opel? A. I answered the next day, as I told him I would, and called him back.

Q. And where did you call him? A. Called him through the same exchange, Cologne. He gave me the number to call. I have long since forgotten that.

Q. Do you recall whether it was a hotel or where it was you called him? A. No, I don't. I called a number and an exchange through Cologne, is all I know.

Q. Do you have your hotel bills at the present time from that trip? A. I imagine I have, yes.

Q. Do you have them with you? A. No.

Q. Have you at any time turned them over to the Government? A. No.

1841 Q. That call was definitely made from your hotel, wasn't it? A. Yes.

Q. You are sure about that? A. Very sure.

Q. And your bill would so reflect, I take it, would it? A. I think so.

Q. That was the occasion when Fritz von Opel stated that he was very insistent that you come, and he said that he wanted you to meet and become acquainted with his father, and he pointed out that, after all, you worked for his father and it would be to your interest, as well as to his father's, that the two of you become acquainted? Is that about the gist of the conversation? A. That is about the gist of it; yes, sir.

Q. You had been in Germany before that, in 1934, hadn't you? A. Yes.

Q. Didn't you go to Wiesbaden in 1934? A. No, sir.

Q. How close did you come to Wiesbaden? A. I don't know just exactly where Wiesbaden is, as a matter of fact. It is somewhere in the Rhine country, I know, in the lower Rhine country, but I don't know where.

Q. You were quite close to it, however, were you 1842 not? A. No.

Q. You were not? A. No. I went through France and Southern Germany and into Switzerland.

Q. In any event, you did not meet Mr. von Opel's father in 1934 when you were in Germany, did you? A. No.

Q. Now, you were in Germany again in 1937, were you not? A. Yes.

Q. Now, who prepared your itinerary at that time? I should change that and say, who prepared your itinerary for that trip? A. I did.

Q. Did Fritz von Opel assist you? A. He wrote me a letter giving me suggestions about places to visit, yes.

Q. Did you visit those places? A. No, not all of them; some of them. I could not answer the question. I can't even recall the series of places. I think he recommended that I visit the Tyrol, and I did visit the Tyrol, and he told me a number of places to visit.

Q. In 1937 did you go to Wiesbaden? A. No. I have never been to Wiesbaden.

Q. You have not been there? A. No.

1843 Q. Do you recall a suggestion from Fritz von Opel that you go to Wiesbaden and view the Wilhelm von Opel swimming pool, which was supposed to be quite a show place in Wiesbaden? A. No.

Q. You do not remember that? A. No.

Q. You do not say it did not happen, do you? A. No, I would not say it did not happen, but I would certainly say very positively I don't recall it.

Q. Have you ever been in Heidelberg? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how far Heidelberg is from Wiesbaden? A. I don't know where Wiesbaden is.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that Heidelberg is quite close to Wiesbaden? A. No, I don't.

Q. But, in any event, neither in 1934 nor in 1937 did you visit Mr. Wilhelm von Opel? A. No.

Q. And such a suggestion was never made by Fritz von Opel? A. Not that I recall.

Q. Now, I want to ask you about the telephone conversation which you have testified about this morning. I will ask you if you stated that on September 18, 1939, you received a cable from Fritz von Opel from Zurich, Switzerland, and on September 21, 1939, you cabled the Uebersee Korporation and that afterwards—that is, after September 21, 1939—you called Fritz von Opel in Zurich upon the transatlantic telephone and talked to him concerning the proposed sale? Is that correct? A. It is nearly correct.

Q. Will you tell me where it is wrong? A. Well, I couldn't tell you where it is wrong, because I have some thought that I called on the same day that I sent the wires that I put in the telephone call, but if I did not, it was very close.

Q. You mean that you think that you called him on the same day that you sent the cable? A. That I sent the cable to Adler and Company and Frankenberg.

Q. Do you recall that that was on September 21, 1939? A. I think it was, yes.

Q. And how do you fix that day? A. I think I have copies in my files of those wires.

Q. I am reading from a document given us by the Department of Justice. These are not my own ideas.

The occasion when you sent that cable, that was sent to Mr. Gaeng and not to Mr. von Opel, was it?

1845

A. I sent a cable to Adler and Company, to Frankenberg and Gaeng, and to Uebersee—separate cables.

Q. All in September? A. Calling attention—on the same day, and calling attention to the fact of my rights which I had under the contract with Uebersee.

Q. Whether it was before or after or on the same day, the cable was sent. You did have this transatlantic talk with Fritz von Opel; is that correct? A. I did, yes.

Q. Did you say that he, meaning Fritz von Opel, replied that the proposed sale was greatly against his wishes, that he had done everything he could to prevent it, but could not change his father's mind upon the subject, and that his father insisted that the sale go forward? A. Yes.

Q. And did you also state that "he", meaning Fritz von Opel, "explained to me, as he had done many times before, that while the management of these affairs was to a large degree in his hands, the real control and ownership remained in his father's hands and that his father had directed Mr. Frankenberg to proceed with the sale of the stock." Did you state that or substantially that? A. I think substantially that, yes.

1846 Q. So it is your testimony at the present time that in the latter part of September, 1939, and in the latter part of August, apparently a week or two before Germany and England went to war, Fritz von Opel told you, over transatlantic telephone, that this was his father's property and not his own? A. Yes.

Q. That is your testimony? A. I testified that over transatlantic telephone from Zurich, that in September I was told that. I did not testify that I was told that in August.

Q. You did not testify to that? A. No, sir. All I was told was Fritz' remark that, "After all, you work for my father." There was nothing said about property ownerships in August.

Q. I see. So when you were told over the telephone from Germany to England, or vice versa, that, after all, you worked for his father, you were in effect being told that Spur was his father's property, weren't you? A. I think so, yes.

Q. It is your testimony that you were so told about two weeks before Germany and England went to war? A. That is right.

Q. Are you aware of the difficulty which Wilhelm von Opel had with the German Government as a result 1847 of this gift? A. Yes.

Q. And you had known of it for some time?

Mr. Burling: Will you fix the date as to when he knew it?

Mr. Ingoldsby: All right.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. When did you first learn it? A. Of the German Government?

Q. When did you first learn about the difficulty which Wilhelm von Opel had had with the German Government as a result of the gift which he made to his son Fritz? A. I couldn't state that definitely. I couldn't answer that definitely.

Q. Could you give me the year? A. No, I could not. I had had snatches of information about it, but I could not place the year.

Q. Did you ever talk to Fritz about it? A. About the difficulties?

Q. Yes. A. No. I don't recall a conversation—I recall a conversation with Mr. Hoffacker on the subject.

Q. And it is your best recollection at the present time that you never talked to Fritz about this? A. About the difficulties?

Q. About the difficulties which his father had.
1848 A. No. I don't recall having talked to him about his difficulties.

Q. I want to ask you about when you first learned about Fritz von Opel becoming a Liechtenstein citizen. A. I first learned it, I believe, from the newspapers in 1940. If I were hazarding a guess, which is what it would be, it would be either in May or June of 1940, when Fritz was interviewed in New York upon his arrival in this country.

Q. And that was the first time that you learned about the Liechtenstein citizenship? A. In that period, certainly. At the time of his arrival at my house was the first time. I could not place it just exactly.

Q. And from then on did you consider him to be a Liechtenstein subject? A. No, sir.

Q. You did not? A. No, sir.

Q. I want to ask you about something else.

Do you have in your possession any correspondence with Fritz von Opel, whether they be telegrams, letters, or anything else, in which he ever told you in writing that which you say he told you over the transatlantic telephone? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you examined your files carefully to see 1849 whether or not you have any such document? A. Not with that intent, but I have examined my file.

Q. And you are satisfied that you never received any such written document from Fritz von Opel? A. Yes.

Q. I want to ask you about the occasion when you first learned that Wilhelm von Opel was in any way involved in the ownership of the Spur stock. When did you first learn it? A. At the first directors' meeting at which the German interest appeared, through Mr. Theodore Hoffacker.

Q. What year was that? A. That was in 1932.

Q. And it is your testimony that on various occasions since that date Mr. von Opel repeatedly told you that his father was the real owner of the Spur stock; is that correct? A. No.

Q. That is not correct? A. I did not make such a statement.

Q. You did not? A. No.

Q. Did you make a statement to the Justice Department to the effect that he, meaning Fritz von Opel—and I am talking about the Zurich telephone conversation—"explained to me as he had done many times before, that while the management of these affairs was to a large de-1850 gree in his hands, the real control and ownership remained in his father's hands." Do you recall? A. I don't recall, but if the F. B. I. said it, it must be correct.

Q. Well, does that refresh your recollection any as to whether or not Mr. von Opel had told you many times? A. No, I don't recall.

Q. What is your testimony at the present time? Did he—or did he not tell you on many occasions that his father was the true owner? A. I would change "many occasions"—I would modify "many occasions."

Q. What modification would you make? A. I don't know that he ever used the exact expression that his father was the true owner, but he had made affidavit as to the ownership, as to the true ownership. I had had a great deal of information on the subject from Mr. Theodore Hoffacker, his representative.

Q. No. I am talking about what Mr. von Opel said. You wanted to modify the statement that he had on many times made a statement pertaining to ownership. You are talking about "he," Fritz von Opel? A. Yes.

Q. My question is, if you want to modify that statement, what modification do you want to make? A. Well, 1851 I would say upon several times.

Q. On several occasions, then; and the occasions to which you refer are all the occasions which you have stated this morning; is that correct? A. I don't know if that is correct, no.

Q. Now, you just stated a moment ago that Fritz von Opel never definitely said that his father was the owner, but he inferred as much; is that correct? A. No; I don't recall having just stated that.

Q. You do not recall saying that? A. No.

Q. Well, did he or did he not tell you in so many words that his father was the owner? A. When?

Q. Any time. A. Yes.

Q. And on how many occasions did he tell you that? A. I can't recall how many occasions. There was no secret about the matter at the time. He had made affidavit about it.

Q. I know about the affidavit. I know all about it. Have you read that affidavit? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that the authority for your statement that his father was the owner? A. No.

1852 Q. It is the word of Fritz von Opel himself, isn't that correct? A. That is right.

Q. And that is your testimony; isn't that correct? A. Authority for which statement? The statement I am making right at this moment?

Q. Yes. A. Yes. As regards the Zurich telephone call?

Q. Well, the Zurich telephone call and the others which you attribute to Mr. von Opel.

Now, I want to ask you this. The first time that you knew about Mr. von Opel's father being interested as an owner was in 1932, you stated; is that correct? A. That is right.

Q. And at that time you were president of the Spur Company, were you not? A. I was yes.

Q. And on many occasions since 1932 you have followed the instructions of Mr. Fritz von Opel, have you not? A. Very, very few occasions. I can't recall any instructions from Mr. Fritz von Opel, although it is perfectly possible that there were. I followed the instructions of Mr. Theodore Hoffacker.

Q. Did you ever follow any instructions given you 1853 by Mr. Fritz von Opel? A. I never recall one time —I never recall his ever having given me any instructions.

Q. So it is that you do not recall his giving you any; it is not that he gave you any and you ignored them? A. No.

Q. And you on various occasions discussed the company's business with Fritz von Opel, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. And you considered him in effect as your boss, did you not? A. I certainly considered him as a very important part of it, yes.

Q. Now, did you ever have any written instructions from anyone to the effect that Fritz von Opel was acting as the agent for his father? A. I don't recall any such instructions.

Q. Well, then, is it your testimony that you as president of Spur accepted Fritz as the agent of his father, despite the fact that you previously knew that his father was the true owner and that Frankenberg was the financial adviser; is that correct? A. No. I accepted men—first, Theodore Hoffacker, and, next, Mr. Ulrich, who were representatives of whatever interests controlled Uebersee. Mr. von 1854 Opel never interfered in the business.

Q. No. He gave you a completely free hand, didn't he? A. Somebody did, after some period of turmoil. After the company was shown to be profitable and, I hope, well managed, why, there wasn't much interference in later years, particularly after Mr. Hoffacker got out. Mr. Hoffacker occupied a very dominant position as a man giving me instructions.

Q. That is correct in the early days, isn't it? A. That is exactly correct, yes, sir.

Q. Now, did I understand you to state that you did not consider Mr. Fritz von Opel a citizen of Liechtenstein? A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall making a report to the Treasury Department on October 20, 1941—

Mr. Burling: May I see the document you are reading?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I am just asking him if he recalls.

Mr. Burling: Before you read anything into the record, may I see the document?

(A document was handed to Mr. Burling.)

Mr. Burling: Since the document shows on its face that the witness did not make the report, I suggest it is improper to ask him if he recalls making it.

Mr. Ingoldsby: It is made by his agent.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please—

1855 The Court: You will have to prove some knowledge on his part.

Mr. Ingoldsby: It shows on its face that it was made by the executive vice president.

The Court: I will have to hear the question before I rule upon it.

Mr. Ingoldsby: The question is whether or not he knows that on the 20th of October, 1941, Mr. H. D. Hines, the executive vice-president of Spur, stated to the Treasury Department, in connection with an application for a license to engage in foreign exchange transactions, that 73,039 shares of Spur stock are owned by Fritz von Opel and are outstanding in the name of Houvis and Company, Nashville, nominee. Pay the proceeds of the dividend due Mr. von Opel to a blocked account in his name, as a national of Liechtenstein, in the American National Bank of Nashville, Tennessee. The company was incorporated in Delaware in 1928. The company does business only in the United States. About 51 percent of the stock of the company is controlled by Fritz von Opel, who is a national of Liechtenstein.

Mr. Burling: I object to the question. The question is, Does this witness know that X, a person who is not a witness here and not a party to the suit, filed a report?

The Court: I will overrule the objection, subject to being connected up.

1856 Mr. Ingoldsby: I can't get it all in in one jump.

The Court: Let him answer yes or no.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Did you hear what I have just read from this document? A. I heard what you read, if you will repeat the question.

Q. Do you want to read it? A. No, I don't want to read it.

Q. Do you want to see the document? A. No. I ask you if you will be kind enough to repeat the question.

Mr. Burling: May I have the right to move later to strike?

The Court: Certainly.

Mr. Burling: If he fails to connect it.

Mr. Ingoldsby: My question is—

By the Court:

Q. Do you know if Mr. Hines made that statement? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew he made it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you authorize it? A. No, sir.

Mr. Burling: Then, I move to strike it.

1857 The Court: Do you want to ask him any further questions?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Yes.

The Court: Let us wait until he gets through that line.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. You did not authorize the making of it by Mr. Hines? A. No, sir.

Q. But you stated you did know it was made by Hines? A. That is right.

Q. Did you take any action by way of advising the Treasury Department that that information was incorrect? A. No.

Q. You let the Information stay, even though you did not authorize it? A. that is right. I do not say that I did not authorize it. I did not authorize it in the beginning. I approved it.

Q. But you did approve it? A. I approved it in conversation with Mr. Hines. I was out of town at the time it was made, but when I returned and he told me what had been done, it met with my approval.

Q. Well, do you find that in any way in conflict with your statement that you did not consider Mr. von Opel a citizen or a national of Liechtenstein? A. No, I did not make the report. I was not even here.

1858 Q. I am not asking you if you made the report; I am asking you if you find anything inconsistent between your approval of that report and your previous statement that you did not consider Mr. von Opel a citizen or a national of Liechtenstein. A. No, I do not find that in any way inconsistent.

Q. You do not see anything inconsistent in the two? A. No.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Your Honor, I am almost through. I wonder if we might have a 5-minute recess.

The Court: A 5-minute recess.

(A short recess was had.)

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Now, Mr. Houghland, I wanted to ask you about your testimony this morning regarding your meeting with the F. B. I. in January, 1942, when two F. B. I. agents came to your house. Am I correct in stating that— A. Yes, sir.

Q. —occasion as being January, 1942? A. That is my recollection of it, yes.

Q. And is that the first occasion that you made any statement to the F. B. I. regarding Fritz von Opel? A. I don't recall. There were people there when the freezing order took place. Whether they were F. B. I. people or not, I don't recall.

1859 Q. You do not recall expressly making any statement to the F. B. I. agents about Fritz von Opel prior to January, 1942; is that correct? A. That is the first time I recall it, that is right.

Q. Do you recall at this time the names of the agents that you talked to in 1942? A. No, sir.

Q. And you did not make any memorandum of that meeting at all, did you? A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you recall making any memorandum concerning that meeting? A. No.

Q. Your answer is no? A. No.

Q. Now, is it correct that the way the F. B. I. agents came to your house was to knock on the door late at night, and you invited them into the library? Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. And they questioned you at some considerable length before they identified themselves? A. No. They shortly identified themselves. They questioned me, and I was reluctant to answer their questions, and then they produced their credentials.

Q. But you did let them into the house and take 1860 them into the library before you knew that they were F. B. I. agents? A. Yes.

Q. How did they get into the house? What did they say or do to get in? A. They pretty near put their foot in the door and came in.

Q. And then you sat and talked with them in the library for some time before you discovered they were F. B. I. agents; is that correct? A. For a short time.

Q. Was it during that meeting that you told the F. B. I. about your version of an incident relating to a falcon and Mrs. von Opel? A. To a what?

Q. A falcon, a bird. A. I don't recall anything of that, no.

Q. You do not recall any such statement made by you? A. No.

Q. Do you remember having a conversation with Fritz von Opel regarding a falcon? A. No.

Q. Would you say that you did or did not have any such conversation? A. I would be very much surprised 1861 if I had that conversation about a falcon.

Q. Do you recall showing Mr. von Opel a picture of Mrs. von Opel which was taken from the society page of a newspaper, in which picture she had a falcon on her arm? A. No.

Q. You do not recall such a conversation? A. No.

Q. Do you recall saying, during that conversation, that it was dangerous for Mrs. von Opel to appear in a picture with a falcon, because Goering was so well known for his falcon hunting? A. No.

Q. You do not recall any such conversation? A. No.

Q. In 1941 you do not recall any such conversation? A. No.

Q. Was it during this conversation with the F. B. I. in January, 1942, that you first told them about the stock of Uebersee being owned by a South American corporation? A. I don't recall the details of the conversation.

Q. Do you recall at any time making a statement to the F. B. I. about the South American ownership of Uebersee stock? A. I don't recall it specifically, but I dare say I did.

1862 Q. Well, will you tell us, to the best of your ability at this time, what it was you told those two F. B. I. agents in January, 1942? A. I don't recall specifically what I told them. I explained the first interval, proving that I myself was not a German.

Q. Anything else? A. They asked me many questions. I don't recall the details of the questions.

Q. So you are unable to elaborate upon that conference in any way? A. That is right.

Q. Do you have any recollection of telling the F. B. I. agents anything about Fritz von Opel's connection with rockets? A. I don't recall it on that occasion no.

Q. Do you recall telling them that on any occasion? A. I recall commenting on it, yes.

Q. Commenting on it to whom? A. I couldn't tell you whether it was Alien Property Custodian, or friends, or who, or family.

Q. Do you recall what it was you told them? A. I am sure that I engaged in conversation at one time or another during the course of the war about Mr. Seversky's article on Fritz von Opel as the inventor of the rocket, which was published in the New York Times and was 1863 widely talked about in Nashville.

Q. Do you recall what year that was—the Seversky article? A. I think it was in 1943, but I would not be sure of it.

Q. And wasn't the gist of that article that Mr. von Opel had given Seversky, the Russian designer, all the information which he had about the rocket?

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, I object to testimony concerning what an article says about von Opel. It would have no bearing—

The Court: I suppose you are trying to connect it up with some testimony his son gave. Why don't you ask him that direct question?

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. You heard your son's testimony the other day? A. Yes.

Q. My question is, Did you receive any information from your son about Fritz von Opel and the rockets? A. Yes. He told me the story of this conversation that evening.

Q. You remember that very distinctly? A. That is right.

Q. Is there anything that makes you remember 1864 that so distinctly? A. I don't know what caused me to remember it so distinctly, no.

Q. I want to ask you about your testimony this morning in which you alluded to the year 1938. Will you tell us again just what it was that Fritz von Opel told you about how the Uebersee shares were held by Swiss? A. He told me that the Uebersee's shares were sold to Swiss owners and that the Swiss owners endorsed the stock certificates in blank, and they were returned to the Opels.

Q. Are you sure that he told you that? A. I am positive.

Q. You could not be mistaken about that? A. I could not.

Q. Are you aware of the fact that the Uebersee's shares are bearer shares? A. No.

Q. You did not know that? A. No.

Q. You appreciate, of course, that bearer shares can not be endorsed in blank, isn't that correct, or endorsed at all? A. I don't know about the Swiss laws.

Q. Now, will you tell us again what it was that Mr. von Opel said about your acquiring Swiss citizenship?

A. He pointed out to me the great difference in in- 1865 come tax that I was paying as contrasted with himself, and the rate of difference of many Americans who had formed foreign holding companies and put their stock in those holding companies.

Q. And what was his suggestion to you? A. His suggestion to me— He said that a change had taken place in the regulations in regard to it and that Americans were denied that right or privilege now, but that by acquiring Swiss citizenship I could enjoy those emoluments.

Q. And did you think that he was making a serious suggestion? A. I didn't really know.

Q. Weren't you sure that he was not? A. It certainly was not serious to me—giving up my American citizenship.

Q. Well, weren't you certain that he was not serious if he made such a suggestion? A. No, I was not.

Q. Are you aware of how long it takes to become a Swiss citizen? A. No, sir.

Q. And, of course, the fact is that you would not save any income taxes, anyway, would you? A. I think you would.

Q. Would you? Well, I will leave that open.

I wanted to ask you about your meeting with Mr.

1866 von Opel in Savannah—

The Court: Are you going to be some time on that?

Mr. Ingoldsby: Yes.

The Court: We will go over until 10 in the morning.

(At 4:15 p.m. an adjournment was taken until Tuesday, January 4, 1949, at 10 a.m.)

1869 PROCEEDINGS

Mr. Ingoldsby: May I proceed, Your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Thereupon—JOHN MASON HOUGHLAND resumed the stand and, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (resumed)

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. Mr. Houghland, I believe that when we recessed yesterday I had asked you whether, in view of your statements, you knew or understood that Wilhelm von Opel was the owner of Spur stock, or that you knew or understood that Frankenberg was the father's financial agent. I had asked you the question whether you ever received any authorization to permit Fritz to act, and I believe your answer to that question was that you had not received any written authorization. Is that correct? A. To permit Fritz to act?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, in the case of the contract giving me a call on the stock, I believe we were provided with a power of attorney for Fritz to sign for Uebersee.

Q. I see. And the power of attorney was from the 1870 Uebersee Korporation and not from the father?
A. Yes.

Q. Now, you stated in your testimony yesterday, did you not, that you had given the Government representatives at one or another all of the information which you possessed pertaining to Fritz von Opel? A. I think so; I certainly tried to, at least.

Q. Do you recall whether or not you told them anything about a meeting which you had in New York with Fritz von Opel and some other people in the summer of 1941? A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you recall such a meeting? A. Yes.

Q. What was the purpose of that meeting? A. It was a directors' meeting, I believe.

Q. Did you meet him at any place in New York other than at the directors' meeting in the summer of 1941? A. Yes; he came up to my hotel room at the St. Regis Hotel.

Q. Who was present there? A. The two of us were alone there for most of the period. Mr. Hines finally came and walked through the room but did not stay.

Q. Do you recall meeting with Mr. von Opel on that occasion at all in the offices of Bayer & Clauson?
1871 A. That was where the directors met.

Q. Was that the occasion when Mr. von Opel censured you severely for reporting that he traveled on a Liechtenstein passport and that his family owned extensive holdings in Germany? A. As I recall it, that was the occasion at the hotel, but I think there was some of it at the meeting. But the main, frank discussion between the two of us was, I believe, at the St. Regis Hotel.

Q. You don't deny that at least a substantial portion of that discussion took place in the presence of Mr. Bayer? A. I don't recall Mr. Bayer—it being in his presence.

Q. You don't recall any discussion of it in his presence? A. No.

Q. Did you report that meeting to representatives of the Government? A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you recall whether or not you told Mr. von Opel on that occasion that it was merely an oversight and that Hines was responsible for it, and not you? A. I did not make that statement.

Q. You did not? A. No. I told Mr. von Opel that I would accept responsibility for it.

1872 Q. But you also told him that you had not done it, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. You told him that you didn't know about it? A. I did not tell him that. I didn't know about it. I told him that I had not done it but that I took responsibility.

He said, "I am sure you would not have done it."

I said, "Fritz, I am president of the company. There was nothing wrong in it. We reported what the Government asked us to report. I accept full responsibility for it."

Q. Did you have another meeting with Mr. von Opel in New York that year? A. No.

Q. When did you discuss your second seven-year contract? A. In 1940.

Q. That was when the second seven-year contract came up? A. It wasn't a seven-year contract. Both contracts were eight-year contracts, but the first one was retroactive for the year 1933.

Q. Did you have a discussion of that contract? A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you recall in 1941 having a discussion about a seven-year contract and the excess profits tax that related to it? A. No, I don't recall. As a matter of fact, 1873 the second contract had already been written by that time, as I think it was written preceding 1941 —1940.

Q. Did you talk to Mr. von Opel about a change in that contract? A. I think so.

Q. Do you recall what that discussion related to? A. I don't recall whether I talked to Mr. von Opel or whether I talked to—or Mr. Ulrich; but the auditors talked to me about changing the contract so that my profit participation would—that is, the management contract—that my profit participation would be before tax.

Q. Who was it that wanted the change in the contract? A. I did.

Q. It made quite a substantial difference to you as to whether or not you received that change in the contract? A. It would have made a substantial difference to me, yes.

Q. Would you describe what your profit participation was under that contract? A. It was 5 per cent after 12-1/2 per cent had been earned on capital and surplus combined.

Q. Are you sure that that is correct? A. Well, it is reasonably so; I don't have the contract before me.
1874 Q. Isn't it correct that your contract was that you were to get 5 per cent after 7 per cent was earned on the capital stock? A. I think 7 per cent was on the other contract, on the contract which had payable the $200,000 which was given me in consideration of relinquishing my rights to the stock.

Q. When was the second seven-year contract—or eight-year contract—entered into? A. It was an eight-year contract, and it terminated just eight years ago December 31. I don't remember the date, but it lasted for eight years.

Q. You did not receive the change in contract that you requested, did you? A. No.

Q. Who turned that down? A. I don't know.

Q. Whom did you discuss it with? A. With Bayer & Clauson. They discussed it with me. They originated the idea and brought it to me; that it would not make a substantial difference to the company; that the taxes had greatly increased since I had written the original contract or had signed the original contract; and that they thought, under the circumstances, I should be entitled to a contract which would take that into consideration.

Q. I want to ask you a question about Mr. von 1875 Opel. Will you state the names of all the people that you have talked to concerning Fritz von Opel's deportation? A. I couldn't answer that question completely; I don't know. I doubtless have talked to many people on that subject.

Q. Will you give us the names of any people that you have ever talked to about this? A. Well, I talked to Mr. Jones—I don't know his first name—who is a lawyer in the Department of Justice. I made inquiry of everybody I knew in the Alien Property Custodian's office.

Mr. Burling: His name is Harry Leroy Jones, Mr. Ingoldsby.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. What inquiry do you mean? A. Well, was he going to be deported?

Q. Whom else did you talk to? A. I can't recall whom else; I doubtless have talked to a number of people about it.

Q. Did you talk to Senator McKellar about it? A. No, I don't think—I don't recall having talked to him about deportation.

Q. Are you sure about that? A. I am not sure; I just don't recall it.

Q. Would you say that you took or made active
1876 efforts to effect the deportation of Fritz von Opel?

A. I would say that I would have been glad to have made active efforts, but I know of no way I could have effected it.

Q. The question is, Did you? A. No.

Q. I want to return for a moment to your meeting with Mr. von Opel at Savannah, Georgia, in January, 1941. Do you recall stating that Mr. von Opel had come from New York to attend that meeting? A. No.

Q. You don't recall that? A. No.

Q. Do you recall the circumstances under which that meeting was arranged? A. Yes. I wrote Mr. von Opel, I think, at Palm Beach.

Q. You wrote him? A. I think so.

Q. Or did you call him? A. I think I wrote him.

Q. I believe it was your testimony that at this meeting Mr. von Opel told you that the Germans were foresighted people and that if the United States entered the war against Germany and attempted to seize his or his father's property in the United States, it would be discovered to be 1877 in the names of Swiss owners; and that if the Swiss became involved, it would be found that the owners of the Uebersee stock would be a separate corporation not under your company? A. Yes.

Q. Is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. It is your testimony at present that that is what Mr. von Opel told you, is it? A. Yes.

Q. Are you aware of the fact that in November, 1941, which was just one month before the United States and Germany entered the war, Fritz von Opel transferred the Uebersee stock out of the names of the Swiss and into his own name? A. No.

Q. You never heard that? A. I have heard some comment about it here at this trial, but I didn't know about it.

Q. You didn't know about it before that? A. No.

Mr. Burling: Nor is it a fact, if the Court please.

Mr. Ingoldsby: Do you want to testify, Mr. Burling?

Mr. Burling: I object to counsel's making statements of what the fact is.

The Court: The question has been answered.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

1878 Q. In 1938; Was it 1948 that you went to see Frankenberg in New York? A. 1937.

Q. How many times did you see Frankenberg, all told? A. I have seen him three times: once, the last time, at this trial; once in New York in the summer of 1941; and on the occasion in 1937.

Q. In 1937, when you went to see Frankenberg in New York, I believe it was your testimony that you wanted an increase in capital in order to operate some of these small companies; is that correct? A. Yes; to develop that type of operation.

Q. Mr. Frankenberg, you stated, turned that down; is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. Did you on that occasion make any efforts to take the matter up with Wilhelm von Opel? A. No.

Q. In 1939, when Fritz von Opel advised you that Uebersee's investors were interested in selling, you were very much interested in either their retaining control temporarily or in getting control into hands friendly to you, were you not? A. Yes.

Q. Therefore, at that time you were opposed to 1879 the sale, were you not? A. No.

Q. You were opposed to the sale generally in that you knew where the stock was going to go? A. No; I was apprehensive lest my call on the stock might be ignored.

Q. In connection with the call upon the stock and your apprehension with respect to that, did you contact Frankenberg? A. I cabled him; yes.

Q. You cabled him in Zurich? A. Yes.

Q. You also cabled Gaeng? A. I cabled Gaeng.

Q. Did you cable them as representatives of Uebersee? Is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. Or did you contact them as nominees of the stock?

A. I don't know what. I cabled everybody I thought might be involved.

Q. Did you cable Wilhelm von Opel on that occasion? A. No.

Q. Did you make any efforts to get in touch with him? A. No.

Q. In January, 1941, you urged a change in your contract in order to care for the excess profit feature, 1880 did you not? You just testified to that this morning.

The summer of 1941, not January. A. I don't recall what you are talking about—an excess profit—

Q. I am talking about the change that you requested in your contract as a result of the excess profits tax. A. It had nothing to do with excess profits.

Q. What did it have to do with? A. It had to do with my participation occurring before tax.

Q. What tax? A. Any general tax.

Q. What tax? A. Income tax.

Q. What tax in particular were you concerned with? A. Any tax.

Q. Had the income tax for corporations changed particularly at that time? A. No.

Q. But the excess profits tax had come into effect, hadn't it? A. Well, I am sure the income tax was involved. I mean it was just a case of participation before tax, that is all, rather than after tax.

Q. Wasn't the thing that brought that matter to a 1881 head and required your bringing up the question the fact that the excess profits tax had come into being and had made a substantial difference in the income which you would receive, whether your participation was figured before or after the tax? A. I don't recall the relationship of the excess profits tax. I don't disclaim it; it is perfectly possible and sounds reasonable.

Q. Isn't that a fact: that that is exactly what it was: that the excess profits tax was the one that was the real heavy tax and made the most or the substantial difference to you? A. I should think so, yes.

Q. And it did make a substantial difference to you, didn't it? A. Yes; I should think it would.

Q. You didn't get the change in the contract that you wanted, did you? A. No.

Q. On that occasion, did you take the matter up with Frankenberg or with Wilhelm von Opel? A. No. The matter was handled through Bayer & Clauson. They handled it.

Q. Was there ever any occasion when you did take anything up on your own initiative with Frankenberg 1882 or with Wilhelm von Opel? A. I can't say there was any with Wilhelm von Opel. As to Dr. Frankenberg, I think there was, yes, in the case of directions as to dividends, and general business matters of that sort.

Q. You did receive directions from Frankenberg as to dividends? A. Yes.

Q. Did you receive those in writing? A. I am sure we did; he didn't call me.

Q. Did that follow a general pattern, or was it occasional? Tell us something about it. A. There were several instances when the regular routine of dividend distribution was interrupted on order; and, as I recall it, we received our instructions in those matters from Dr. Frankenberg.

At one time dividends were paid at Adler & Company; and there were several changes where dividends went. One time they were paid to a bank in New York, as I recall, and I think our instructions came from Dr. Frankenberg. I am pretty sure they did.

Q. Are you sure about that? A. No, I wouldn't make oath to it, but that is my recollection.

Q. Do you know whether that was during the 1883 period of time when the stock of Uebersee was held by the Adler Bank? A. I don't know; I couldn't say.

Q. You could not say definitely whether or not you did receive any written instructions from Frankenberg; is that correct? A. I could not say definitely, but I feel sure I did, because we got our instructions from him on the changing of dividend payments.

Q. Did you ever, under any circumstances, receive any instructions from Wilhelm von Opel? A. No.

Q. Mr. Houghland, you consider yourself a reasonable man, don't you? A. Well, I guess we all do, yes.

Q. You are certainly of at least average intelligence, aren't you? A. Thank you.

Q. You agree with that, don't you? A. I think so. I think we all do.

Q. You are aware, are you not, that if Wilhelm von Opel were the true owner of Spur stock in 1939 and had failed to report that fact to the German Government, he would have been subject to very severe penalty? Are you aware of that fact? A. No. I am not familiar with German law.

1884 Q. You are generally familiar with foreign currency regulations, are you not? A. No, I am not—definitely not.

Q. I will ask you to assume that fact. Under those circumstances, would you, if you were in Fritz von Opel's position, or if Wilhelm von Opel were your father, would you have made such statements as you attribute to Fritz von Opel over the trans-Atlantic telephone in 1939? A. He made them under oath in Federal Court in New York.

Q. My question is, Would you? A. Not if I thought it would kill my father; I certainly would not.

Mr. Ingoldsby: That is all.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Burling:

Q. You testified, I believe, on cross examination, Mr. Houghland, that you endeavored to acquire from the Custodian for your interests those interests which the Opels had formerly held; is that correct? A. That is correct. I endeavored to acquire it not personally, but I endeavored to get it out of German hands.

Q. Will you state whether prior to the vesting by the Custodian of the Opel interests you had found it helpful or unhelpful to the Spur business to have German in-1885 terests in the business? A. It was disastrous.

Q. Will you explain that, please? A. Well, when the freezing order took place, the Government said, or the Treasury said—they just blocked our mail box and sealed it with a public notice there; and then they sent a man who sat at our front door at a desk and interrogated everybody that came into the office; and another man who countersigned every check we had. This was after we had received a license to operate and lasted for a period of slightly over a year—thirteen months, as I recall it.

We were constantly under attack from competitors as to being a German-owned company. Even then, before war was declared, the feeling was very tense, and all this regulation and freezing was disastrous for a retail operation largely operating in the South.

Q. Will you state what action, if any, your competitors took with respect to the German interests in your firm? A. They advertised in the newspapers: "Don't trade with German or foreign-owned chain stations" and attacked us vigorously and repeatedly by newspaper ads.

Q. Will you state whether or not you had any personal financial interest in Spur Distributing at the time you are speaking of? A. Yes, I did.

1886 Q. Approximately what was your personal stock in that? A. You mean in money or stock?

Q. In dollars. A. That would be very hard for me to just be sure about it, but I should say, in the condition the company was in, $200,000 perhaps.

Q. Did that represent substantially all of your personal fortune? A. Yes.

Q. In other words, you had yourself invested your entire personal fortune in this corporation; is that correct? A. That is right.

Q. Will you state whether or not you found it helpful or unhelpful to have the stock vested and have it known that the majority of the stock was held by the Alien Property Custodian? A. Unhelpful.

Q. Will you state whether or not you had any motive for desiring to obtain all of that stock and placing it in the hands of American citizens? A. I did, yes, sir.

Q. Will you describe that motive? A. My motive was to free the company from the taint of German ownership, which was a very difficult thing to carry on with the 1887 situation as it was.

Q. That is why you took the steps you described yesterday to obtain all of the stock either for your hands or the hands of fellow American citizens? A. Yes.

Q. You were asked concerning a report which was made by Spur to the United States Treasury.

Mr. Burling: May I have that, please?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I do not believe it was marked (handing a paper to Mr. Burling).

By Mr. Burling:

Q. I believe you were asked about a report which was filed, an application for license which was filed, by Spur Distributing; is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. Will you state whether or not you personally prepared that report? A. I did not.

Q. Did you see it at any time prior to its being filed with the Treasury? A. No.

Q. When did you see it for the first time? A. The first time I ever saw the report was after I had seen Fritz in

New York in 1941, when Fritz was so indignant about the report.

1888 Q. Did he ask you to take any action in connection with any person who had in fact prepared the report? A. Yes. He was very irate about Henry Hines and wanted to have him left off the service of the company.

Q. Will you state why he was angry at Henry Hines? A. On account of Henry's having filed this report.

Q. You had not seen the report before that time? A. No.

Q. But you took responsibility for it; is that correct? A. I did, yes.

Q. Now, you testified yesterday that you did not regard Fritz von Opel as being a bona fide Liechtensteinean citizen; is that correct? A. That is right.

Q. Will you explain to the Court why you did not regard him as such?

Mr. Ingoldsby: I object.

Mr Burling: I am merely asking about a question which my friend brought out on his own cross examination.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I was asking him as to what was stated in a report.

Mr. Burling: No. If Your Honor please, Mr. Ingoldsby also asked him if he did not report Fritz von Opel as a bona fide Liechtensteinean citizen.

The Court: Well, I have an impression he did.

1889 That is my impression. He asked him, and he said he did not.

Mr. Ingoldsby: I believe that is right.

The Court: I suppose his reason might have some bearing on his view. It is not binding on me, of course.

By the Court:

Q. You may answer, Mr. Houghland. A. No. You asked me why I did not regard him as one?

By Mr. Burling:

Q. That is correct. A. He told me a story of his capture at Gibraltar and of how he fooled the English with his Liechtenstein passport; and I actually did not at that time know that when you had a passport, you had citizenship; and Fritz made no reference to Liechtenstein citizenship; and the German arms were quite triumphant at that time, and he seemed to be thoroughly enthusiastic about the German effort. I had no idea of Fritz taking Liechtenstein citizenship sincerely. I didn't know that a passport meant citizenship.

Mr. Burling: That is all.

Recross Examination

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. This particular report, which has not been marked or offered, is not the report which Mr. von Opel became so indignant about, is it? A. I thought it was; I 1890 don't know.

Q. Well, look it over and see if it refreshes your recollection.

Mr. Burling: If Your Honor please, I asked for the document from counsel. I did not see it yesterday.

Mr. Gallagher: It was not here.

By the Court:

Q. Let us find out, if you can tell, whether it is the one he was indignant about. A. I don't believe this report is, no.

By Mr. Ingoldsby:

Q. The report that Mr. von Opel was talking about was filed prior to the summer of 1941, wasn't it? A. I think so. I believe it was in the summer of 1941.

Q. In the summer? A. Yes.

Q. But it was filed prior to the time you and Mr. von Opel met in New York, wasn't it? A. Yes.

Q. That was the report? A. Application for license; just like that.

Q. It was stated in that report that Mr. von Opel traveled on a Liechtenstein passport? A. Yes.

1891 Q. The reason for the difficulty or for the indignance of Mr. von Opel was that he felt the company should have reported that he was a Liechtenstein citizen rather than make the statement that he traveled on a Liechtenstein passport? Wasn't that what the argument was about at the company? A. I never thoroughly did understand what his objection to the matter was.

Q. You did not understand? A. Not thoroughly.
